It would be sadly uncritical, then, to say that his friends desert him in his poverty. With the exception of his servants, who, by the way, are the recipients not of his bounty but of his recompense, he has no friends; by working for what they have received from him they have retained their own self-respect and along with it their respect for their master; the self-respect of all others about him Timon has himself destroyed by his prodigality in giving, and thus incapacitated them for friendship.

I find it difficult to discover, as many critics do, even the elements of nobility in Timon's character. To use his own expression, there is "nothing level" in his nature; all is "oblique." Contrast, for instance, Lear's directness in his challenge to the elements, with the obliquity of Timon's curse on Athens. Lear would have these wild forces of nature "all germens spill at once that make ingrateful man." That's direct; there is no suggestion that in such destruction anything of good will perish; no appeal to Nature to warp, or distort, or transform the good into the evil. Timon's curse, however, reveals a characteristic obliquity in his mind; it assumes the predominant goodness of the city which he would doom for its wickedness. There were no point, for instance, in his bidding matrons to turn incontinent, were they not continent; virginity to convert to general filth, were there not virginity; bankrupts to hold fast, did not bankrupts render back; servants to steal, were not servants honest. This hater of mankind professes to think mankind worthy of his hate; and yet, his very curse testifies to the prevalence of human virtues. Where are we to look for the elements of nobility in a mind like that?

Lear's indictment, broadly speaking, is against society rather than against humanity; and it is therefore especially significant that he makes but one incidental reference to the corrupting power of gold, strong evidence that his own life has escaped it. His experience has been with the deeper things of the heart, and it is with the heart that his imprecations have most to do. "Let them anatomize Regan, see what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts?" To Timon, gold is the chief corrupting influence in the world; strong evidence that it is there that his affections have chiefly centered. The power of human love he has never felt; it would have been not merely incongruous, it would have been impossible for Shakespeare to give him a wife and children. Instead, he gave him gold and taught him its futility as a source of happiness. Had he revealed to him its real source he must have cured him of his misanthropy; and it was evidently in Shakespeare's scheme to show that hatred of mankind is not only impossible, but that even its affectation breeds impotence or destruction and springs not from the world, but from faults within ourselves.

I cannot believe that there is any deep biographical significance in either Timon of Athens or King Lear; that is, that Shakespeare had himself passed through some experience that had shaken his belief in the fundamental soundness of human nature. Lear discovers, even when past eighty, what he had actually known all his life, but what through pride he had failed to acknowledge, that love is after all the one supreme and dominant power of the world. This discovery not even Shakespeare could have made possible for Timon without transforming the character and changing the whole course of Timon's life. He did not cast Timon in the mould of Lear.

Poet, Painter, Jeweller, and Merchant.

An old Athenian.

Servants to Varro and Isidore, two of Timon's Creditors.

Three Strangers.

A Page.

A Fool.

PHRYNIA,
TIMANDRA, } Mistresses to Alcibiades.

Lords, Senators, Officers, Soldiers, Thieves, and Attendants.

Cupid and Amazons in the Masque.

SCENE.—Athens, and the neighbouring Woods.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Athens. A Hall in TIMON'S
House.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Others, at several doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.

Pain. I am glad you 're well.

Poet. I have not seen you long. How goes the world?

Pain. It wears, sir, as it grows.

Poet. Ay, that's well known;

But what particular rarity? what strange,
Which manifold record not matches? See,
Magic of bounty! all these spirits thy power Hath conjur'd to attend. I know the merchant.

Pain. I know them both; th' other's a jeweller.

Mer. O! 't is a worthy lord.

Jew. Nay, that's most fix'd.

Mer. A most incomparable man, breath'd, as it were, <sup>10</sup>

To an untirable and continue goodness:
He passes.

Jew. I have a jewel here—

Mer. O! pray, let's see 't: for the Lord
Timon, sir?

Jew. If he will touch the estimate: but,
for that—

Poet. When we for recompense have prais'd the vile,

It stains the glory in that happy verse

Which aptly sings the good.

Mer. Looking at the jewel. 'T is a good form.

Jew. And rich: here is a water, look ye.

Pain. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication
To the great lord.

Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me.
Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes <sup>21</sup>
From whence 't is nourish'd: the fire i' the flint

Shows not till it be struck; our gentle flame
Provokes itself, and like the current flies
Each bound it chafes. What have you there?

Pain. A picture, sir. When comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment,
sir.

Let's see your piece.

Pain. 'T is a good piece.

Poet. So 't is: this comes off well and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable! How this grace Speaks his own standing! what a mental power <sup>31</sup>

This eye shoots forth! how big imagination Moves in this lip! to the dumbness of the gesture

One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life.

Here is a touch; is 't good?

Poet. I'll say of it,
It tutors nature: artificial strife
Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, who pass over the stage.

Pain. How this lord is followed!

Poet. The senators of Athens: happy man! <sup>40</sup>

Pain. Look, more!

Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.

I have, in this rough work, shaped out a man,
Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug

With amplest entertainment: my free drift
Halts not particularly, but moves itself
In a wide sea of wax: no levell'd malice
Infects one comma in the course I hold;
But flies an eagle flight, bold and forth on,
Leaving no tract behind. 50

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poet. I will unbolt to you.

You see how all conditions, how all minds,
As well of glib and slippery creatures as
Of grave and austere quality, tender down
Their services to Lord Timon: his large fortune,

Upon his good and gracious nature hanging, Subdues and properties to his love and tend-ance

All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-fac'd flatterer

To Apemantus, that few things loves better
Than to abhor himself: even he drops down
The knee before him and returns in peace 61
Most rich in Timon's nod.

Pain. I saw them speak together.

Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill

Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd: the base o'
the mount

Is rank'd with all deserts, all kinds of natures,

That labour on the bosom of this sphere
To propagate their states: amongst them
all,

Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,
One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame, Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts
to her; 70

Whose present grace to present slaves and servants

Translates his rivals.

Pain. 'T is conceiv'd to scope.

This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,

With one man beckon'd from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy mount
To climb his happiness, would be well ex-press'd

In our condition.

Poet. Nay, sir, but hear me on.

All those which were his fellows but of late,
Some better than his value, on the moment Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tend-ance, 80

Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrup, and through
him

Drink the free air.

Pain. Ay, marry, what of these?

Poet. When Fortune in her shift and change of mood

Spurns down her late belov'd, all his dependants

Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top

Even on their knees and hands, let him slip
down,

Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. 'T is common:

A thousand moral paintings I can show 90
That shall demonstrate these quick blows of Fortune's

More pregnantly than words. Yet you do
well

To show Lord Timon that mean eyes have seen

The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound. Enter Lord TIMON, addressing himself courteously to every suitor; a Messenger from VENTIDIUS talking with him. LUCILIUS and other servants following.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?

Mess. Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt,

His means most short, his creditors most strait:

Your honourable letter he desires

To those have shut him up; which failing,
Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius! Well;

I am not of that feather to shake off 100
My friend when he must need me. I do know him

A gentleman that well deserves a help,
Which he shall have: I'll pay the debt and free him.

Mess. Your lordship ever binds him.

Tim. Commend me to him: I will send his ransom;

And being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me.

'T is not enough to help the feeble up,

But to support him after. Fare you well.

Mess. All happiness to your honour!

Exit.

Enter an old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely, good father.

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius. 111

Tim. I have so: what of him?

Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here or no? Lucilius!

Luc. Here, at your lordship's service.

Old Ath. This fellow here, Lord Timon, this thy creature.

By night frequents my house. I am a man That from my first have been inclin'd to thrift,

And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd
Than one which holds a trencher.

Tim. Well; what further?

Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin else, 121

On whom I may confer what I have got:

The maid is fair, o' the youngest for a bride,
And I have bred her at my dearest cost

In qualities of the best. This man of thine

Attempts her love: I prithee, noble lord,
Join with me to forbid him her resort;

Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon:
His honesty rewards him in itself; 130
It must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him?

Old Ath. She is young and apt:
Our own precedent passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.

Tim. To LUCILIUS. Love you the maid?

Luc. Ay, my good lord, and she accepts of it.

Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be missing,

I call the gods to witness, I will choose Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,

And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd
If she be mated with an equal husband? 140

Old Ath. Three talents on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me long:

To build his fortune I will strain a little,
For 't is a bond in men. Give him thy daughter;

What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise,
And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble lord,
Pawn me to this your honour, she is his.

Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship: never may

That state or fortune fall into my keeping 150
Which is not ow'd to you!

Exeunt LUCILIUS and Old Athenian.

Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship!

Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me anon:

Go not away. What have you there, my friend?

Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech

Your lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome.
The painting is almost the natural man;

For since dishonour traffics with man's nature,

He is but outside: these pencill'd figures
are

Even such as they give out. I like your work; 160

And you shall find I like it: wait attendance
Till you hear further from me.

Pain. The gods preserve you!

Tim. Well fare you, gentleman: give me
your hand;

We must needs dine together. Sir, your jewel

Hath suffer'd under praise.

Jew. What, my lord! dispraise!

Tim. A mere satiety of commendations.
If I should pay you for 't as 't is extoll'd,

It would unclew me quite.

Jew. My lord, 't is rated
As those which sell would give: but you well know, 169

Things of like value, differing in the owners,

Are prized by their masters. Believe 't, dear
lord,

You mend the jewel by the wearing it.

Tim. Well mock'd.

Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue,

Which all men speak with him.

Tim. Look, who comes here. Will you be chid?

Enter APEMANTUS.

Jew. We'll bear, with your lordship.

Mer. He'll spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus!

Apem. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good morrow;

When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves honest. 180

Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves?
thou know'st them not.

Apem. Are they not Athenians?

Tim. Yes.

Apem. Then I repent not.

Jew. You know me, Apemantus?

Apem. Thou know'st I do; I call'd thee
by thy name.

Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus.

Apem. Of nothing so much as that I am not like Timon. 190

Tim. Whither art going?

Apem. To knock out an honest Athenian's brains.

Tim. That's a deed thou 'lt die for.

Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by the law.

Tim. How likest thou this picture, Apemantus?

Apem. The best, for the innocence. 199

Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it?

Apem. He wrought better that made the painter; and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

Pain. You're a dog.

Apem. Thy mother's of my generation:
what's she, if I be a dog?

Tim. Wilt dine with me, Apemantus?

Apem. No; I eat not lords.

Tim. An thou should'st, thou 'dst anger ladies.

Apem. O! they eat lords; so they come by great bellies. 210

Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension.

Apem. So thou apprehendest it, take it for thy labour.

Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus?

Apem. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.

Tim. What dost thou think 't is worth?

Apem. Not worth my thinking. How now, poet! 220

Poet. How now, philosopher!

Apem. Thou liest.

Poet. Art not one?

Apem. Yes.

Poet. Then I lie not.

Apem. Art not a poet?

Poet. Yes.

Apem. Then thou best: look in thy last work, where thou hast feigned him a worthy fellow.

Peet. That's not feigned; he is so. 130

Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour; he that loves to be flattered is worthy of the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord!

Tim. What would'st do then, Apemantus?

Apem. Even as Apemantus does now; hate a lord with my heart.

Tim. What, thyself?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore? 240

Apem. That I had no angry wit to be a lord. Art thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay, Apemantus.

Apem. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will not!

Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it.

Apem. Traffic's thy god, and thy god confound thee!

Trumpets sound. Enter a Servant.

Tim. What trumpet's that? 249

Serv. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty horse,

All of companionship.

Tim. Pray, entertain them; give them guide to us. Exeunt some Attendants. You must needs dine with me. Go not you hence

Tim. I have thank'd you; and, when dinner's done,

Show me this piece. I am joyful of your sights.

Enter ALCIBIADES, with his Company.

Most welcome, sir!

Apem. So, so; there!

Adhes contract and starve your supple joints! That there should be small love 'mongst these sweet knaves,

And all this courtesy! The strain of man's bred out

Into baboon and monkey. 250

Alcib. Sir, you have sav'd my longings, and I feed

Most hungrily on your sight.

Tim. Right welcome, sir! Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous

dine

In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in. Exeunt all but APEMANTUS.

Enter two Lords.

First Lord. What time o' day is't, Apemantus?

Apem. Time to be honest.

First Lord. That time serves still.

Apem. The more accursed thou, that still omit'st it.

Second Lord. Thou art going to Lord Timon's feast? 250

Apem. Ay; to see meat fill knaves and wine heat fools.

Second Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well.

Apem. Thou art a fool to bid me farewell twice.

Second Lord. Why, Apemantus?

Apem. Should'st have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none.

First Lord. Hang thyself!

Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding; make thy requests to thy friend.

Second Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog! or I'll spurn thee hence. 251

Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels o' the ass. Exit.

First Lord. He's opposite to humanity.

Come, shall we in

And taste Lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes The very heart of kindness.

Second Lord. He pours it out; Plutus, the god of gold,

Is but his steward; no meed but he repays Sevenfold above itself; no gift to him

But breeds the giver a return exceeding 250 All use of quittance.

First Lord. The noblest mind he carries That ever govern'd man.

Second Lord. Long may he live in fortunes! Shall we in?

First Lord. I'll keep you company.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State in TIMON'S House.

Hautboys playing loud music. A great banquet served in; FLAVIUS and Others attending: then enter Lord TIMON, ALCIBIADES, Lords, Senators, and VENTIDIUS. Then comes, dropping after all, APEMANTUS, discontentedly, like himself.

Ven. Most honour'd Timon,

It hath pleas'd the gods to remember my father's age,

And call him to long peace.

He is gone happy, and has left me rich:

Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound

To your free heart, I do return those talents, Doubled with thanks and service, from whose help

I deriv'd liberty.

Tim. O! by no means,

Honest Ventidius; you mistake my love; I gave it freely ever; and there's none 10

Can truly say he gives, if he receives: If our betters play at that game, we must not dare

To imitate them; faults that are rich are fair.

Ven. A noble spirit!

They all stand ceremoniously looking on TIMON.

Tim. Nay, my lords, ceremony was but devis'd at first

To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,

Recanting goodness, sorry ere't is shown; But where there is true friendship, there needs none.

Pray, sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes

Than my fortunes to me.

They sit. 20

First Lord. My lord, we always have confess'd it.

Apem. Ho, ho! confess'd it; hang'd it, have you not?

Tim. O! Apemantus, you are welcome.

Apem. No;

You shall not make me welcome:

I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.

Tim. Fie! thou'rt a churl; ye've got a humour there

Does not become a man; 't is much to blame.

They say, my lords, Ira furor brevis est,

But yond man is ever angry.

Go, let him have a table by himself,

For he does neither affect company,

Nor is he fit for it, indeed. 31

Apem. Let me stay at thine apperil.
Timon: I come to observe; I give thee warning on 't.

Tim. I take no heed of thee; thou'rt an Athenian; therefore welcome. I myself would have no power; prithee, let my meat make thee silent.

Apem. I scorn thy meat; 't would choke me, for I should Ne'er flatter thee. O you gods! what a number

Of men eat Timon, and he sees 'em not.

It gives me to see so many dip their meat In one man's blood; and all the madness is, He cheers them up too. 43

I wonder men dare trust themselves with men:

Methinks they should invite them without knives;

Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.

There's much example for 't; the fellow that Sits next him now, parts bread with him, and pledges

The bread of him in a divided draught, Is the readiest man to kill him: it has been proved.

If I were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals, 51

Lest they should spy my wind-pipe's dangerous notes:

Great men should drink with harness on their throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart; and let the health go round.

Second Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lord.

Apem. Flow this way! A brave fellow! he keeps his tides well. Those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon.

Here's that which is too weak to be a sinner, Honest water which ne'er left man i' the mire: 55

This and thy food are equals, there's no odds.

Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf;

I pray for no man but myself:

Grant I may never prove so fond,

To trust man on his oath or bond;

Or a harlot for her weeping;

Or a dog that seems a-sleeping;

Or a keeper with my freedom;

Or my friends, if I should need 'em. 70

Amen. So fall to 't:

Rich men sin, and I eat root.

Eats and drinks.

Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantus!

Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now.

Alcib. My heart is ever at your service, my lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies than a dinner of friends. 79

Alcib. So they were bleeding-new, my lord, there's no meat like 'em: I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Apem. Would all those flatterers were thine enemies then, that then thou might'st kill 'em and bid me to 'em.

First Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect. 90

Tim. O! no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you: how had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm you. O you gods! think I, what need we have any friends, if we should ne'er have need of 'em? they were the most needless creatures living should we ne'er have use for 'em, and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why, I have often wished myself poorer that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits; and what better or proper can we call our own than the riches of our friends? O! what a precious comfort 't is, to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes. O joy! e'en made away ere 't can be born. Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks: to forget their faults, I drink to you. 111

Apem. Thou weepest to make them drink, Timon.

Second Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes,

And, at that instant, like a babe, sprung up.

Apem. Ho, ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

Third Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much.

Apem. Much! Tucket sounded.

Tim. What means that trumpet?

Enter a Servant.

How now! 120

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies! What are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter CUPID.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon; and to all

That of his bounties taste! The five best senses

Acknowledge thee their patron; and come freely 130

To gratulate thy plenteous bosom. Th' ear, Taste, touch, and smell, pleas'd from thy table rise;

They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They're welcome all; let 'em have kind admittance:

Music. make their welcome! Exit CUPID.

First Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you're belov'd.

Music. Re-enter CUPID, with a masque of Ladies as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

Apem. Hey-day! what a sweep of vanity comes this way:

They dance! they are mad women. Like madness is the glory of this life,

As this pomp shows to a little oil and root. 140

We make ourselves fools to disport ourselves;

And spend our flatteries to drink those men Upon whose age we void it up again,

With poisonous spite and envy.

Who lives that's not depraved or depraves? Who dies that bears not one spurn to their graves

Of their friends' gift?

I should fear those that dance before me now

Would one day stamp upon me: 't has been done;

Men shut their doors against a setting sun. 150

The Lords rise from table, with much adorning of TIMON; and to show their loves

each singles out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies,

Set a fair fashion on our entertainment, Which was not half so beautiful and kind;

You have added worth unto 't and lustre, And entertain'd me with mine own device;

I am to thank you for 't.

First Lady. My lord, you take us even at the best.

Apem. Faith, for the worst is filthy; and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet 160

Attends you: please you to dispose yourselves.

All Ladies. Most thankfully, my lord.

Exeunt CUPID and Ladies.

Tim. Flavius!

Flav. My lord!

Tim. The little casket bring me hither.

Flav. Yes, my lord. Aside. More jewels yet!

There is no crossing him in 's humour; Else I should tell him, well, i' faith, I should,

When all 's spent, he'd be cross'd then, and he could.

'T is pity bounty had not eyes behind, That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind. Exit. 170

First Lord. Where be our men?

Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.

Second Lord. Our horses!

Re-enter FLAVIUS, with the casket.

Tim. O my friends! I have one word to say to you.

Look you, my good lord,

I must entreat you, honour me so much

As to advance this jewel; accept it and wear it.

Kind my lord.

First Lord. I am so far already in your gifts—

All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate 180

Newly alighted, and come to visit you.

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

Flav. I beseech your honour, Vouchsafe me a word; it does concern you near.

Tim. Near! why, then another time I'll hear thee.

I prithee, let's be provided to show them entertainment.

Flav. Aside. I scarce know how.

Enter another Servant.

Second Serv. May it please your honour, Lord Lucius,

Out of his free love, hath presented to you Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver.

Tim. I shall accept them fairly; let the presents 190

Be worthily entertain'd.

Enter a third Servant.

How now! what news?

Third Serv. Please, you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, Lord Lucullus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him, and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds.

Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be receiv'd,

Not without fair reward.

Flav. Aside. What will this come to? He commands us to provide, and give great gifts,

And all out of an empty coffer: 199

Nor will he know his purse, or yield me this, To show him what a beggar his heart is,

Being of no power to make his wishes good. His promises fly so beyond his state

That what he speaks is all in debt; he owes For every word: he is so kind that he now

Pays interest for 't; his land's put to their books.

Well, would I were gently put out of office
Before I were forc'd out!
Happier is he that has no friend to feed
Than such that do e'en enemies exceed. 210
I bled inwardly for my lord. Exit.

Tim. You do yourselves Much wrong, you bate too much of your own merits:

Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.

Second Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it.

Third Lord. O! he's the very soul of bounty.

Tim. And now I remember, my lord, you gave

Good words the other day of a bay courser
I rode on: it is yours, because you lik'd it.

Third Lord. O! I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word, my lord: I know no man 220

Can justly praise but what he does affect:
I weigh my friend's affection with mine
own;

I'll tell you true. I'll call to you.

All Lords. O! none so welcome.

Tim. I take all and your several visitations
So kind to heart, 't is not enough to give;

Methinks I could deal kingdoms to my friends,

And ne'er be weary. Alcibiades,

Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich;
It comes in charity to thee; for all thy living

Is 'mongst the dead, and all the lands thou hast 230

Lie in a pitch'd field.

Alcib. Ay, defil'd land, my lord.

First Lord. We are so virtuously bound—

Tim. And so

Am I to you.

Second Lord. So infinitely endear'd—

Tim. All to you. Lights, more lights!

First Lord. The best of happiness,
Honour, and fortunes, keep with you, Lord
Timon!

Tim. Ready for his friends.

Exeunt ALCIBIADES, Lords, etc.

Apem. What a coil 's here!

Serving of becks and jutting-out of bums!
I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums

That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs:

Methinks, false hearts should never have sound legs. 240

Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on court'sies.

Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou wert not sullen,

I would be good to thee.

Apem. No, I'll nothing; for if I should be bribed too, there would be none left to rail upon thee, and then thou would'st sin the faster. Thou givest so long, Timon, I fear me thou wilt give away thyself in paper shortly: what need these feasts, pomps, and vain-glories?

Tim. Nay, an you begin to rail on society

once, I am sworn not to give regard to you.
Farewell; and come with better music. Exit.

Apem. So:

Thou wilt not hear me now; thou shalt not
then;

I'll lock thy heaven from thee.

O! that men's ears should be

To counsel deaf, but not to flattery. Exit.

ACT II

SCENE I.—*Athens. A Room in a Senator's
House.*

Enter Senator, with papers in his hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand: to Varro and to Isidore

He owes nine thousand; besides my former sum,

Which makes it five-and-twenty. Still in motion

Of raging waste? It cannot hold; it will not.
If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog

And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold;
If I would sell my horse, and buy twenty
more

Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon,

Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me, straight,
And able horses. No porter at his gate, 10

But rather one that smiles and still invites
All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason

Can sound his state in safety. Caphis, ho!
Caphis, I say!

Enter CAPHIS.

Caph. Here, sir; what is your pleasure?

Sen. Get on your cloak, and haste you to Lord Timon;

Importune him for my moneys; be not ceas'd

With slight denial, nor then silenc'd when—'Commend me to your master'—and the cap

Plays in the right hand, thus; but tell him,
My uses cry to me; I must serve my turn 20

Out of mine own; his days and times are past,

And my reliances on his fracted dates
Have smit my credit: I love and honour
him,

But must not break my back to heal his finger;

Immediate are my needs, and my relief Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in words,

But find supply immediate. Get you gone:
Put on a most importunate aspect,

A visage of demand; for I do fear,
When every feather sticks in his own
wing, 30

Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
Which flashes now a phoenix. Get you
gone.

Caph. I go, sir.

Sen. 'I go, sir!' Take the bonds along with you,

And have the dates in compt.

*Caph.
Sen.*

I will, sir.
Go.
Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter FLAVIUS, with many bills in his hand.

Flav. No care, no stop! so senseless of expense,
That he will neither know how to maintain
it,
Nor cease his flow of riot: takes no account
How things go from him, nor resumes no care
Of what is to continue: never mind
Was to be so unwise, to be so kind.
What shall be done? He will not hear, till feel.

I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting.
Fie, fie, fie, fie!

Enter CAPHIS, and the Servants of ISIDORE and VARRO.

Caph. Good even, Varro. What!
You come for money?
Var. Serv. Is 't not your business too? 10
Caph. It is: and yours too, Isidore?
Isid. Serv. It is so.
Caph. Would we were all discharg'd!
Var. Serv. I fear it.
Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, and Lords, etc.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done we'll forth again,
My Alcibiades. With me? what is your will?

Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues! Whence are you?
Caph. Of Athens here, my lord.
Tim. Go to my steward.

Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off

To the succession of new days this month: 20
My master is awak'd by great occasion
To call upon his own; and humbly prays
you

That with your other noble parts you 'll suit,

In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest friend,
I prithee, but repair to me next morning.

Caph. Nay, good my lord,—

Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.

Var. Serv. One Varro's servant, my good
lord,—

Isid. Serv. From Isidore;

He humbly prays your speedy payment.

Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants,—

Var. Serv. 'T was due on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks 30

And past.

Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my
lord;

And I am sent expressly to your lordship.

Tim. Give me breath.
I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on;
I'll wait upon you instantly,

Exeunt ALCIBIADES and Lords.
To FLAVIUS. Come hither: pray you,
How goes the world, that I am thus encountter'd

With clamorous demands of date-broke bonds,

And the detention of long-since-due debts,
Against my honour?

Flav. Please you, gentlemen,
The time is unagreeable to this business. 41
Your importunacy cease till after dinner,
That I may make his lordship understand
Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so, my friends.
See them well entertained. Exit.

Flav. Pray, draw near. Exit.

Enter APEMANTUS and Fool.

Caph. Stay, stay; here comes the fool with Apemantus: let's ha' some sport with
'em.

Var. Serv. Hang him, he'll abuse us.

Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog! 50

Var. Serv. How dost, fool?

Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.

Apem. No; 't is to thyself. To the Fool.

Come away.

Isid. Serv. There 's the fool hangs on your back already.

Apem. No, thou standest single; thou 'rt not on him yet.

Caph. Where 's the fool now? 59

Apem. He last asked the question. Poor rogues, and usurers' men! bawds between gold and want!

All Serv. What are we, Apemantus?

Apem. Asses.

All Serv. Why?

Apem. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves. Speak to 'em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv. Gramercies, good fool. How does your mistress? 70

Fool. She 's e'en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth!

Apem. Good! gramercy.

Enter Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress' page.

Page. To the Fool. Why, how now, captain! what do you in this wise company?

How dost thou, Apemantus?

Apem. Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably. 80

Page. Prithee, Apemantus, read me the superscription of these letters: I know not which is which.

Apem. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Apem. There will little learning die then that day thou art hanged. This is to Lord

Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou 'lt die a bawd. 89

Page. Thou wast whelped a dog, and thou shalt witness a dog's death. Answer not; I am gone. Exit.

Apem. E'en so thou outrunnest grace. Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon's.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apem. If Timon stay at home. You three serve three usurers?

All Serv. Ay; would they served us!

Apem. So would I, as good a trick as ever hangman served thief. 100

Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think no usurer but has a fool to his servant: my mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly: the reason of this?

Var. Serv. I could render one. 109

Apem. Do it then, that we may account thee a whoremaster and a knave; which notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed.

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?

Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'T is a spirit: sometime 't appears like a lord; sometime like a lawyer; sometime like a philosopher, with two stones more than 's artificial one. He is very often like a knight; and generally in all shapes that man goes up and down in from four-score to thirteen, this spirit walks in. 121

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man; as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest.

Apem. That answer might have become Apemantus.

All Serv. Aside, aside; here comes Lord Timon.

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Apem. Come with me, fool, come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman; sometime the philosopher. Exeunt APEMANTUS and Fool. 131

Flav. Pray you, walk near: I'll speak with you anon. Exeunt Servants.

Tim. You make me marvel: wherefore ere this time

Had you not fully laid my state before me, That I might so have rated my expense As I had leave of means?

Flav. You would not hear me, As many leisures I propos'd.

Tim. Go to: Perchance some single vantages you took, When my indisposition put you back; And that unaptness made your minister 140 Thus to excuse yourself.

Flav. O my good lord! At many times I brought in my accounts, Laid them before you; you would throw them off,

And say you found them in mine honesty. When for some trifling present you have bid me

Return so much, I have shook my head and wept;

Yea, 'gainst the authority of manners, pray'd you

To hold your hand more close: I did endure Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I have Prompted you in the ebb of your estate 150 And your great flow of debts. My loved lord,

Though you hear now, too late, yet now 's a time,

The greatest of your having lacks a half To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my land be sold.

Flav. 'T is all engag'd, some forfeited and gone;

And what remains will hardly stop the mouth

Of present dues; the future comes apace; What shall defend the interim? and at length

How goes our reckoning?

Tim. To Lacedæmon did my land extend.

Flav. O my good lord! the world is but a word; 161

Were it all yours to give it in a breath, How quickly were it gone!

Tim. You tell me true.

Flav. If you suspect my husbandry or falsehood,

Call me before the exactest auditors, And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me,

When all our offices have been oppress'd With riotous feeders, when our vaults have wept

With drunken spilth of wine, when every room

Hath blaz'd with lights and bray'd with minstrelsy, 170

I have retir'd me to a wakeful couch, And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Prithee, no more.

Flav. Heavens! have I said, the bounty of this lord.

How many prodigal bits have slaves and peasants

This night englutted! Who is not Timon's?

What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is Lord Timon's?

Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon!

Ah! when the means are gone that buy this praise,

The breath is gone whereof this praise is made:

Feast-won, fast-lost; one cloud of winter showers, 180

These flies are couch'd.

Tim. Come, sermon me no further:

No villanous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart;

Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given.

Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack,

To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart;

If I would broach the vessels of my love, And try the argument of hearts by borrowing,

Men and men's fortunes could I frankly use
As I can bid thee speak.

Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts!
Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown'd, 190

That I account them blessings; for by these Shall I try friends. You shall perceive how you Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my friends.

Within there! Flaminius! Servilius!

Enter FLAMINIUS, SERVILIUS, and other Servants.

Servants. My lord! my lord!

Tim. I will dispatch you severally: you to Lord Lucius; to Lord Lucullus you; I hunted with his honour to-day; you, to Sempronius. Commend me to their loves; and, I am proud, say, that my occasions have found time to use 'em toward a supply of money: let the request be fifty talents. 202

Flam. As you have said, my lord.

Flav. Aside. Lord Lucius? and Lucullus? hum!

Tim. To another Servant. Go you, sir, to the senators,

Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have

Deserv'd this hearing, bid 'em send o' the instant

A thousand talents to me.

Flav. I have been bold,
For that I knew it the most general way, 209
To them to use your signet and your name;
But they do shake their heads, and I am here
No richer in return.

Tim. Is 't true? can 't be?
Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate voice,

That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot

Do what they would; are sorry; you are honourable;

But yet they could have wish'd; they know
not;

Something hath been amiss; a noble nature
May catch a wrench; would all were well;
't is pity;

And so, intending other serious matters,
After distasteful looks and these hard fractions, 220

With certain half-caps and cold-moving nods
They froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them!
Prithee, man, look cheerly. These old fellows

Have their ingratitude in them hereditary;
Their blood is cak'd, 't is cold, it seldom flows;

'T is lack of kindly warmth they are not
kind;

And nature, as it grows again toward earth,
Is fashion'd for the journey, dull and heavy.
To a Servant. Go to Ventidius. To FLA-
VIUS. Prithee, be not sad,

Thou art true and honest; ingeniously I
speak, 230

No blame belongs to thee. To Servant.
Ventidius lately

Buried his father; by whose death he 's stepp'd

Into a great estate; when he was poor,
Imprison'd and in scarcity of friends,
I clear'd him with five talents; greet him
from me;

Bid him suppose some good necessity Touches his friend, which craves to be remember'd

With those five talents. Exit Servant.

To FLAVIUS. That had, give 't these fellows

To whom 't is instant due. Ne'er speak or think

That Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends can sink.

Flav. I would I could not think it: that thought is bounty's foe; 241

Being free itself, it thinks all others so.
Exeunt.

ACT III

SCENE I.—Athens. A Room in LUCUL-
LUS'S House.

FLAMINIUS waiting. *Enter a Servant to
him.*

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter LUCULLUS.

Serv. Here 's my lord.

Lucul. Aside. One of Lord Timon's men! a gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer to-night.
Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are very respectfully welcome, sir. Fill me some wine. Exit Servant.

And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master? 11

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well, sir. And what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminius?

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir, which, in my lord's behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present assistance therein. 21

Lucul. La, la, la, la! 'nothing doubting,' says he? Alas! good lord; a noble gentleman 't is, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha' dined with him, and told him on 't; and come again to supper to him, of purpose to have him spend less; and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming.
Every man has his fault, and honesty is his;
I ha' told him on 't, but I could ne'er get him from it. 21

Re-enter Servant, with wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucul. Flaminius, I have noted thee always wise.

Here 's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a towardly prompt spirit, give thee thy due, and one that knows what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee. To the Servant. Get you gone, sirrah. 40

Exit Servant.

Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord 's a bountiful gentleman; but thou art wise, and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here 's three solidares for thee; good boy, wink at me, and say thou sawest me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is 't possible the world should so much differ,

And we alive that liv'd? Fly, damned baseness, 50

To him that worships thee!

Lucul. Ha! now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. Exit.

Flam. May these add to the number that may scald thee!

Let molten coin be thy damnation, Thou disease of a friend, and not himself! Has friendship such a faint and milky heart It turns in less than two nights? O you gods! I feel my master's passion. This slave, unto his honour,

Has my lord's meat in him: 60

Why should it thrive and turn to nutriment When he is turn'd to poison?

O! may diseases only work upon 't,

And when he's sick to death, let not that part of nature

Which my lord paid for, be of any power

To expel sickness, but prolong his hour.

Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. A public Place.

Enter LUCIUS, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who? the Lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

First Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours: now Lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fie, no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money. 10

Second Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that, not long ago, one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus to borrow so many talents, nay, urged extremely for 't, and showed what necessity belonged to 't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How!

Second Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that! now, before the gods, I am ashamed on 't. Denied that honourable man! there was very little honour showed in 't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents. 26

Enter SERVILIUS.

Ser. See, by good hap, yonder 's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour. To LUCIUS. My honoured lord!

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well: commend me to thy honourable virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend. 32

Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord; he's ever sending: how shall I thank him, thinkest thou? And what has he sent now?

Ser. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents. 41

Luc. I know his lordship is but merry with me; he cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Ser. But in the meantime he wants less, my lord.

If his occasion were not virtuous, I should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Ser. Upon my soul, 't is true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I to disfigure myself against such a good time, when I might ha' shown myself honourable! how unluckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour! Servilius, now, before the gods, I am not able to do; the more beast, I say; I was sending to use Lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done 't now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship; and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind: and tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far as to use mine own words to him? 65

Ser. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servilius. Exit SERVILIUS.

True as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed; And he that 's once denied will hardly speed. Exit.

First Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

Second Stran. Ay, too well.

First Stran. Why, this is the world's soul; and just of the same piece 71
Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him His friend that dips in the same dish? for, in

My knowing, Timon has been this lord's father,
And kept his credit with his purse,
Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money
Has paid his men their wages: he ne'er drinks

But Timon's silver treads upon his lip;
And yet, O! see the monstrousness of man,
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape,
He does deny him, in respect of his, 81
What charitable men afford to beggars.

Third Stran. Religion groans at it.

First Stran. For mine own part,
I never tasted Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest,
For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue,
And honourable carriage,
Had his necessity made use of me, 89
I would have put my wealth into donation,
And the best half should have return'd to him,

So much I love his heart. But, I perceive,
Men must learn how with pity to dispense;
For policy sits above conscience. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in SEMPRONIUS'S House.

Enter SEMPRONIUS, and a Servant of TIMON'S.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in 't?
Hum! 'bove all others?
He might have tried Lord Lucius, or Lucullus;

And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem'd from prison: all these Owe their estates unto him.

Serv. My lord,
They have all been touch'd and found base metal, for
They have all denied him.

Sem. How! have they denied him?
Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him?
And does he send to me? Three? hum!
It shows but little love or judgment in him: 10
Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians,

Thrice give him over; must I take the cure upon me?

He has much disgrac'd me in 't; I'm angry at him,

That might have known my place. I see no sense for 't,

But his occasions might have woo'd me first;
For, in my conscience, I was the first man
That e'er received gift from him:

And does he think so backwardly of me now,
That I'll requite it last? No:

So it may prove an argument of laughter 20
To the rest, and I 'mongst lords be thought a fool.

I'd rather than the worth of thrice the sum,
He had sent to me first, but for my mind's sake;

I'd such a courage to do him good. But now return,

And with their faint reply this answer join; 25
Who bates mine honour shall not know my coin.
Exit.

Serv. Excellent! Your lordship's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did when he made man politic; he crossed himself by 't: and I cannot think but in the end the villainies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear foul! takes virtuous copies to be wicked, like those that under hot ardent zeal would set whole realms on fire: 34

Of such a nature is his politic love.
This was my lord's best hope; now all are fled

Save the gods only. Now his friends are dead,
Doors, that were ne'er acquainted with their wards

Many a bounteous year, must be employ'd
Now to guard sure their master: 40

And this is all a liberal course allows;
Who cannot keep his wealth must keep his house. Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter two Servants of VARRO, and the Servant of LUCIUS, meeting TITUS, HORTENSIVS, and other Servants to TIMON'S Creditors, waiting his coming out.

First Var. Serv. Well met; good morrow, Titus and Hortensius.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro. Lucius!

Hor. What! do we meet together?

Luc. Serv. Ay, and I think One business does command us all; for mine

Is money. Tit. So is theirs and ours.

Enter PHILOTUS.

Luc. Serv. And Sir Philotus too!

Phi. Good day at once.

Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother.

What do you think the hour?

Phi. Labouring for nine.

Luc. Serv. So much?

Phi. Is not my lord seen yet?

Luc. Serv. Not yet.

Phi. I wonder on 't; he was wont to shine at seven. 10

Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are wax'd shorter with him:

You must consider that a prodigal course Is like the sun's; but not, like his, recoverable.

I fear 'T is deepest winter in Lord Timon's purse;

That is, one may reach deep enough, and yet

Find little. Phi. I am of your fear for that.

Tit. I'll show you how to observe a strange event.

Your lord sends now for money. Hor. Most true, he does.

Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift,

For which I wait for money. 20
Hor. It is against my heart.

Luc. Serv. Mark, how strange it shows, Timon in this should pay more than he owes:

And e'en as if your lord should wear rich
jewels,

And send for money for 'em.

Hor. I'm weary for this charge, the gods can witness:

I know my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth,

And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.

First Var. Serv. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns; what's yours?

Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine.

First Var. Serv. 'T is much deep: and it should seem by the sum,

Your master's confidence was above mine;
Else, surely, his had equal'd.

Enter FLAMINIUS.

Tit. One of Lord Timon's men.

Luc. Serv. Flaminius! Sir, a word. Pray, is my lord ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed, he is not.

Tit. We attend his lordship; pray, signify so much.

Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows you are too diligent. Exit. 40

Enter FLAVIUS in a cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha! is not that his steward muffled so?

He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him.

Tit. Do you hear, sir?

Second Var. Serv. By your leave, sir,—

Flav. What do ye ask of me, my friend?

Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir.

Flav. Ay,

If money were as certain as your waiting,

'T were sure enough.

Why then prefer'd you not your sums and bills

When your false masters eat of my lord's meat?

Then they could smile and fawn upon his debts, 50

And take down the interest into their gluttonous maws.

You do yourselves but wrong to stir me up;

Let me pass quietly:

Believe 't, my lord and I have made an end;

I have no more to reckon, he to spend.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve.

Flav. If 't will not serve, 't is not so base
as you;

For you serve knaves. Exit.

First Var. Serv. How! what does his cashiered worship mutter? 61

Second Var. Serv. No matter what; he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? such may rail against great buildings.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Tit. O! here's Servilius; now we shall know some answer.

Ser. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should derive much from 't; for, take 't on my soul, my lord leans wondrously to discontent. His comfortable temper has forsook him; he's much out of health, and keeps his chamber. 73

Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers are not sick:

An if it be so far beyond his health,
Methinks he should the sooner pay his
debts,

And make a clear way to the gods.

Ser. Good gods!

Tit. We cannot take this for answer, sir.

Flam. Within. Servilius, help! my lord!

my lord!

Enter TIMON, in a rage; FLAMINIUS
following.

Tim. What! are my doors oppos'd against my passage? 80

Have I been ever free, and must my house

Be my retentive enemy, my gaol?

The place which I have feasted, does it now,

Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?

Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus.

Tit. My lord, here is my bill.

Luc. Serv. Here's mine.

Hor. And mine, my lord.

Both Var. Serv. And ours, my lord.

Phi. All our bills. 90

Tim. Knock me down with 'em: cleave me to the girdle.

Luc. Serv. Alas! my lord,—

Tim. Cut my heart in sums.

Tit. Mine, fifty talents.

Tim. Tell out my blood.

Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my

lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops pays that.

What yours? and yours?

First Var. Serv. My lord,—

Second Var. Serv. My lord,—

Tim. Tear me, take me; and the gods

fall upon you! Exit. 100

Hor. Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money: these debts may well be called desperate ones,

for a madman owes 'em. Exeunt.

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me, the slaves:

Creditors! devils!

Flav. My dear lord,—

Tim. What if it should be so?

Flav. My lord,—

Tim. I'll have it so. My steward!

Flav. Here, my lord. 110

Tim. So fitly! Go, bid all my friends

again,

Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius; all:

I'll once more feast the rascals.

Flav. O my lord!

You only speak from your distracted soul;

There is not so much left to furnish out

A moderate table.

Tit. Be 't not in thy care; go,
I charge thee, invite them all: let in the tide
Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. The Senate-house.
The Senate sitting.

First Sen. My lord, you have my voice to it; the fault's
Bloody; 't is necessary he should die;
Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.
Second Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise him.

Enter ALCIBIADES, attended.

Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!
First Sen. Now, captain?
Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues;

For pity is the virtue of the law.
And none but tyrants use it cruelly.
It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy 10
Upon a friend of mine, who, in hot blood, Hath stepp'd into the law, which is past depth

To those that without heed do plunge into 't.
He is a man, setting his fate aside,
Of comely virtues;
Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice,
An honour in him which buys out his fault,
But with a noble fury and fair spirit,
Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,
He did oppose his foe;
And with such sober and unnoted passion
He did behave his anger, ere 't was spent,
As if he had but prov'd an argument.

First Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox,
Striving to make an ugly deed look fair:
Your words have took such pains as if they labour'd

To bring manslaughter into form, and set quarrelling

Upon the head of valour; which indeed
Is valour misbegot, and came into the world
When sects and factions were newly born. 30
He's truly valiant that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breathe, and make his wrongs

His outsides, to wear them like his raiment, carelessly,

And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.

If wrongs be evils and enforce us kill,
What folly 't is to hazard life for ill!

Alcib. My lord,—

First Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear;

To revenge is no valour, but to bear.

Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon me, 40

If I speak like a captain.

Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,

And not endure all threats? sleep upon 't,
And let the foes quietly cut their throats
Without repugnancy? If there be Such valour in the bearing, what make we Abroad? why then, women are more valiant

That stay at home, if bearing carry it,
And the ass more captain than the lion, the felon

Loaden with irons wiser than the judge, 50
If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords!
As you are great, be pitifully good:
Who cannot condemn rashness in cold
blood?

To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust;
But in deference, by mercy, 't is most just.
To be in anger is impiety;
But who is man that is not angry?
Weigh but the crime with this.

Second Sen. You breathe in vain.

Alcib. In vain! his service done
At Lacedæmon and Byzantium 60
Were a sufficient briber for his life.

First Sen. What's that?

Alcib. I say, my lords, he has done fair
service,

And slain in fight many of your enemies.
How full of valour did he bear himself
In the last conflict, and made plenteous wounds!

Second Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em;

He's a sworn rioter; he has a sin that often
Drowns him and takes his valour prisoner;
If there were no foes, that were enough 70
To overcome him; in that beastly fury
He has been known to commit outrages
And cherish factions; 't is infer'd to us,
His days are foul and his drink dangerous.

First Sen. He dies.

Alcib. Hard fate! he might have died in war.

My lords, if not for any parts in him, Though his right arm might purchase his own time,
And be in debt to none, yet, more to move
you,

Take my deserts to his, and join 'em both;
And, for I know your reverend ages love 80
Security, I'll pawn my victories, all
My honour to you, upon his good returns.
If by this crime he owes the law his life,
Why, let the war receive 't in valiant gore;
For law is strict, and war is nothing more.

First Sen. We are for law; he dies: urge it no more,

On height of our displeasure. Friend or brother,

He forfeits his own blood that spills another.

Alcib. Must it be so? it must not be. My lords, 90

I do beseech you, know me.

Second Sen. How!

Alcib. Call me to your remembrances:
Third Sen. What!

Alcib. I cannot think but your age has forgot me;

It could not else be I should prove so base.
To sue, and be denied such common grace.

My wounds ache at you.

First Sen. Do you dare our anger?
'T is in few words, but spacious in effect;

We banish thee for ever.

Alcib. Banish me!
 Banish your dotage; banish usury,
 That makes the senate ugly. 100
First Sen. If, after two days' shine,
 Athens contain thee,
 Attend our weightier judgment. And, not to swell our spirit,
 He shall be executed presently.

Exeunt Senators.
Alcib. Now the gods keep you old enough;
 that you may live
 Only in bone, that none may look on you!
 I'm worse than mad: I have kept back their foes,
 While they have told their money and let out
 Their coin upon large interest; I myself
 Rich only in large hurts. All those for this?
 Is this the balsam that the usuring senate 110
 Pours into captains' wounds? Banishment!
 It comes not ill; I hate not to be banish'd;
 It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
 That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up
 My discontented troops, and lay for hearts.
 'T is honour with most lands to be at odds;
 Soldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods. Exit.

SCENE VI.—The Same. Room of State in TIMON'S House.

Music. Tables set out: Servants attending.
Enter divers Lords, Senators, and Others, at several doors.

First-Lord. The good time of day to you,
 sir.

Second Lord. I also wish it to you. I think this honourable lord did but try us this other day.

First Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring when we encountered: I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends. 7

Second Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting.

First Lord. I should think so: he hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear. 14

Second Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

First Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go. 50

Second Lord. Every man here 's so. What would he have borrowed of you?

First Lord. A thousand pieces.

Second Lord. A thousand pieces!

First Lord. What of you?

Second Lord. He sent to me, sir,—Here he comes.

Enter TIMON and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both;
 and how fare you?

First Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship. 30

Second Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship.

Tim. Aside. Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men. Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay: feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly o' the trumpet's sound; we shall to 't presently.

First Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship that I returned you an empty messenger. 41

Tim. O! sir, let it not trouble you.

Second Lord. My noble lord,—

Tim. Ah! my good friend, what cheer?

Second Lord. My most honourable lord,
 I am e'en sick of shame, that when your lordship this other day sent to me I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on 't, sir.

Second Lord. If you had sent but two hours before,— 51

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance. The banquet brought in.

Come, bring in all together.

Second Lord. All covered dishes!

First Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

Third Lord. Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.

First Lord. How do you do? What's the news?

Third Lord. Alcibiades is banished: hear you of it? 61

First and Second Lord. Alcibiades banished!

Third Lord. 'T is so, be sure of it.

First Lord. How? how?

Second Lord. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

Third Lord. I'll tell you more anon.
 Here's a noble feast toward.

Second Lord. This is the old man still.

Third Lord. Will 't hold? will 't hold? 70

Second Lord. It does; but time will—and so—

Third Lord. I do conceive.

Tim. Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress; your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: sit, sit.
 The gods require our thanks. 80

You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts make yourselves praised: but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another; for were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods.
 Make the meat be beloved more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: if there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be—as they are. The rest of your fees, O gods! the senators of Athens, together with the common lag of people,
 what is amiss in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome. 94

Uncover, dogs, and lap.

The dishes are uncovered and seen to be full of warm water.

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better feast never behold,

You knot of mouth-friends! smoke and luke-warm water

Is your perfection. This is Timon's last; 100
Who, stuck and spangled with your flat-teries,

Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces

Throwing the water in their faces.

Your reeking villany. Live loath'd, and long,
Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites,
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears,

You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's flies,

Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks!

Of man and beast the infinite malady
Crust you quite o'er! What! dost thou go?
Soft! take thy physic first,—thou too,—and thou:— 110

Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.
Throws the dishes at them.

What! all in motion? Henceforth be no feast,

Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest.
Burn, house! sink, Athens! henceforth hated be

Of Timon man and all humanity! Exit.

Re-enter the Lords, Senators, etc.

First Lord. How now, my lords!

Second Lord. Know you the quality of Lord Timon's fury?

Third Lord. Push! did you see my cap?

Fourth Lord. I have lost my gown. 120

Third Lord. He's but a mad lord, and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel th' other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat: did you see my jewel?

Fourth Lord. Did you see my cap?

Second Lord. Here 't is.

Fourth Lord. Here lies my gown.

First Lord. Let's make no stay.

Second Lord. Lord Timon's mad. 129

Third Lord. I feel 't upon my bones.

Fourth Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones. Exeunt.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Without the Walls of Athens.

Enter TIMON.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee. O thou wall,

That girdlest in those wolves, dive in the earth,

And fence not Athens! Matrons, turn in-continent!

Obedience fail in children! Slaves and fools,

Pluck the grave wrinkled senate from the bench,

And minister in their steads! To general filths

Convert, o' the instant, green virginity! Do 't in your parents' eyes! Bankrupts, hold fast;

Rather than render back, out with your knives,

And cut your trusters' throats! Bound servants, steal! 10

Large-handed robbers your grave masters are,

And pill by law. Maid, to thy master's bed; Thy mistress is o' the brothel! Son of sixteen,

Pluck the lin'd crutch from thy old limping sire,

With it beat out his brains! Piety, and fear, Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth,

Domestic awe, night-rest, and neighbour-hood,

Instruction, manners, mysteries, and trades, Degrees, observances, customs, and laws,

Decline to your confounding contraries, 20 And let confusion live! Plagues, incident to men,

Your potent and infectious fevers heap On Athens, ripe for stroke! Thou cold sciatica,

Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt

As lamely as their manners! Lust and liberty

Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth,

That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive,

And drown themselves in riot! Itches, blains,

Sow all the Athenian bosoms, and their crop Be general leprosy! Breath infect breath, 30

That their society, as their friendship, may

Be merely poison! Nothing I'll bear from thee

But nakedness, thou detestable town! Take thou that too, with multiplying bans!

Timon will to the woods; where he shall find

The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind.

The gods confound—hear me, you good gods all—

The Athenians both within and out that wall!

And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow 39

To the whole race of mankind, high and low! Amen. Exit.

SCENE II.—Athens. A Room in TIMON'S House.

Enter FLAVIUS, with two or three Servants.

First Serv. Hear you, master steward! where's our master?

Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining?

Flav. Alack! my fellows, what should I say to you?

Let me be recorded by the righteous gods, I am as poor as you.

First Serv. Such a house broke! So noble a master fall'n! All gone, and not One friend to take his fortune by the arm, And go along with him!

Second Serv. As we do turn our backs From our companion thrown into his grave, So his familiars to his buried fortunes 10 Slink all away, leave their false vows with him,

Like empty purses pick'd; and his poor self, A dedicated beggar to the air, With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty, Walks, like contempts, alone. More of our fellows.

Enter other Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd house.

Third Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's livery,

That see I by our faces; we are fellows still, Serving alike in sorrow. Leak'd is our bark, And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck, 20

Hearing the surges threat: we must all part into this sea of air.

Flav. Good fellows all, The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst you.

Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake Let's yet be fellows; let's shake our heads, and say,

As 't were a knell unto our master's fortunes,

'We have seen better days.' Let each take some; Giving them money.

Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word more:

Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor.

They embrace, and part several ways. O! the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us, 30

Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,

Since riches point to misery and contempt? Who 'd be so mock'd with glory? or so live But in a dream of friendship?

To have his pomp and all that state compounds

But only painted, like his varnish'd friends? Poor honest lord! brought low by his own heart,

Undone by goodness. Strange, unusual blood,

When man's worst sin is he does too much good!

Who then dares to be half so kind again? 40 For bounty, that makes gods, does still mar men.

My dearest lord, bless'd, to be most accurs'd,

Rich, only to be wretched, thy great fortunes

Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas! kind lord;

He's flung in rage from this ingrateful seat Of monstrous friends;

Nor has he with him to supply his life, Or that which can command it.

I'll follow and inquire him out: I'll ever serve his mind with my best will;

Whilst I have gold I'll be his steward still. 50 Exit.

SCENE III.—Woods and Cave, near the Sea-shore.

Enter TIMON from the Cave.

Tim. O blessed breeding sun! draw from the earth

Rotten humidity; below thy sister's orb Infect the air! Twinn'd brothers of one womb,

Whose procreation, residence, and birth, Scarce is dividant, touch them with several fortunes,

The greater scorns the lesser; not nature, To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune,

But by contempt of nature. Raise me this beggar, and deny 't that lord;

The senator shall bear contempt hereditary, 10

The beggar native honour. It is the pasture lards the rother's sides,

The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares,

In purity of manhood stand upright, And say 'This man's a flatterer'? If one be,

So are they all; for every grize of fortune Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate

Ducks to the golden fool: all is oblique; There's nothing level in our curs'd natures

But direct villany. Therefore, be abhorr'd 20 All feasts, societies, and throngs of men!

His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disdains:

Destruction fang mankind! Earth, yield me roots! Digging.

Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate

With thy most operant poison! What is here?

Gold! yellow, glittering, precious gold! No, gods,

I am no idle votarist. Roots, you clear heavens!

Thus much of this will make black white, foul fair,

Wrong right, base noble, old young, coward valiant.

Ha! you gods, why this? What this, you gods? Why, this 30

Will lug your priests and servants from your sides,

Pluck stout men's pillows from below their heads:

This yellow slave Will knit and break religions; bless the accurs'd;

Make the hoar leprosy ador'd; place thieves, And give them title, knee, and approbation

With senators on the bench; this is it
That makes the wappen'd widow wed again;
She, whom the spital-house and ulcerous sores
Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices
To the April day again. Come, damned
earth,

Thou common whore of mankind, that putt'st odds
Among the rout of nations, I will make thee
Do thy right nature. March afar off.
Ha! a drum? Thou 'rt quick,
But yet I'll bury thee: thou 'lt go, strong thief,
When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand:
Nay, stay thou out for earnest.

Keeping some gold.

Enter ALCIBIADES, with drum and fife, in warlike manner; PHRYNIA and TIMAN-DRA.

Alcib. What art thou there? speak.

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart.

For showing me again the eyes of man! 50

Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee

That art thyself a man?

Tim. I am Misanthropos, and hate mankind.

For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog.

That I might love thee something.

Alcib. I know thee well;
But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and
strange.

Tim. I know thee too; and more than that I know thee

I not desire to know. Follow thy drum;
With man's blood paint the ground, gules,
gules;

Religious canons, civil laws are cruel; 60
Then what should war be? This fell whore of thine

Hath in her more destruction than thy sword,
For all her cherubim look.

Phry. Thy lips rot off!

Tim. I will not kiss thee; then the rot returns

To thine own lips again.

Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this change?

Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light to give:

But then renew I could not like the moon;
There were no suns to borrow of.

Alcib. Noble Timon, what friendship may
I do thee?

Tim. None, but to maintain my opinion. 70

Alcib. What is it, Timon?

Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none: if thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for thou art a man! if thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a
man!

Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.

Tim. Thou saw'st them, when I had prosperity.

Alcib. I see them now; then was a blessed time.

Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots.

Timan. Is this the Athenian minion whom the world 80

Voic'd so regardfully?

Tim. Art thou Timandra?

Timan. Yes.

Tim. Be a whore still; they love thee not that use thee;

Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.

Make use of thy salt hours; season the slaves

For tubs and baths; bring down rose-cheeked youth

To the tub-fast and the diet.

Timan. Hang thee, monster!

Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra, for his wits

Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.

I have but little gold of late, brave Timon, 90

The want whereof doth daily make revolt

In my penurious band: I have heard and griev'd

How curs'd Athens, mindless of thy worth, Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,

But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon
them,—

Tim. I prithee, beat thy drum, and get thee gone.

Alcib. I am thy friend, and pity thee,
dear Timon.

Tim. How dost thou pity him whom thou dost trouble?

I had rather be alone.

Alcib. Why, fare thee well:
Here is some gold for thee.

Tim. Keep it, I cannot eat it.

Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap,— 101

Tim. Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens?

Alcib. Ay, Timon, and have cause.

Tim. The gods confound them all in thy conquest; and

Thee after, when thou hast conquer'd!

Alcib. Why me, Timon?

Tim. That by killing of villains thou wast born to conquer

My country.

Put up thy gold: go on,—here 's gold,—go
on;

Be as a planetary plague, when Jove Will o'er some high-vic'd city hang his poison

In the sick air: let not thy sword skip one.
Pity not honour'd age for his white beard; 111

He is an usurer. Strike me the counterfeit matron;

It is her habit only that is honest,
Herself 's a bawd. Let not the virgin's cheek

Make soft thy trenchant sword; for those milk-paps,

That through the window-bars bore at men's
eyes,

Are not within the leaf of pity writ,

But set them down horrible traitors. Spare not the babe,
Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust
their mercy;
Think it a bastard, whom the oracle 120
Hath doubtfully pronounc'd thy throat shall cut,
And mince it sans remorse. Swear against objects;
Put armour on thine ears and on thine eyes,
Whose proof, nor yells of mothers, maids,
nor babes,
Nor sight of priests in holy vestments
bleeding,
Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldiers:
Make large confusion; and, thy fury spent, Confounded be thyself! Speak not, be
gone.
Alcib. Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the gold thou giv'st me,
Not all thy counsel. 130
Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee!
Phr., Timan. Give us some gold, good Timon: hast thou more?
Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear her trade,
And to make whores a bawd. Hold up, you sluts,
Your aprons mountant: you are not oath-able,— Although, I know, you'll swear, terribly swear
Into strong shudders and to heavenly agues
The immortal gods that hear you,—spare your oaths,
I'll trust to your conditions; be whores still;
And he whose pious breath seeks to convert
you, 140
Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him up;
Let your close fire predominate his smoke,
And be no turncoats: yet may your pains,
six months,
Be quite contrary: and thatch your poor thin roofs
With burdens of the dead; some that were hang'd,
No matter; wear them, betray with them:
whore still;
Paint till a horse may mire upon your face:
A pox of wrinkles!
Phr., Timan. Well, more gold. What
then?
Believe't, that we'll do any thing for gold.
Tim. Consumptions sow 151
In hollow bones of man; strike their sharp
shins,
And mar men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's voice,
That he may never more false title plead, Nor sound his quilllets shrilly: hoar the flamen,
That scolds against the quality of flesh,
And not believes himself: down with the nose,
Down with it flat; take the bridge quite
away
Of him that, his particular to forsee,

Smells from the general weal: make curl'd-pate ruffians bald; 150
And let the unscarr'd braggarts of the war
Derive some pain from you: plague all,
That your activity may defeat and quell
The source of all erection. There's more gold;
Do you damn others, and let this damn you,
And ditches grave you all!
Phr., Timan. More counsel with more money, bounteous Timon.
Tim. More whore, more mischief first;
I have given you earnest.
Alcib. Strike up the drum towards Athens! Farewell, Timon:
If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again. 170
Tim. If I hope well, I'll never see thee
more.
Alcib. I never did thee harm.
Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me.
Alcib. Call'st thou that harm?
Tim. Men daily find it. Get thee away, and take Thy beagles with thee.
Alcib. We but offend him. Strike!
Drum beats. Exeunt ALCIBIADES, PHRYNIA, and TIMANDRA.
Tim. That nature, being sick of man's unkindness,
Should yet be hungry! Common mother, thou, Digging.
Whose womb unmeasurable, and infinite
breast,
Teems, and feeds all; whose self-same
mettle,
Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd, 180
Engenders the black toad and adder blue,
The gilded newt and eyeless venom'd worm,
With all the abhorred births below crisp
heaven
Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine;
Yield him, who all thy human sons doth
hate,
From forth thy plenteous bosom, one poor
root!
Ensear thy fertile and conceptionous womb,
Let it no more bring out ingrateful man!
Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and
bears;
Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward face 190
Hath to the marbled mansion all above
Never presented! O! a root; dear thanks:
Dry up thy marrows, vines, and plough-torn leas;
Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish
draughts
And morsels unctuous, greases his pure
mind,
That from it all consideration slips!

Enter APEMANTUS.

More man! Plague! plague!
Apem. I was directed hither: men report
Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use
them.

Tim. 'T is then because thou dost not keep a dog 200
 Whom I would imitate: consumption catch thee!
Apem. This is in thee a nature but infected;
 A poor unmanly melancholy sprung From change of fortune. Why this spade? this place?
 This slave-like habit? and these looks of care?
 Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft,
 Hug their diseas'd perfumes, and have forgot
 That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods
 By putting on the cunning of a carper.
 Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
 By that which has undone thee: hinge thy knee, 211
 And let his very breath, whom thou 'lt observe,
 Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain,
 And call it excellent. Thou wast told thus;
 Thou gay'st thine ears, like tapsters that bid welcome,
 To knaves and all approachers: 't is most just
 That thou turn rascal; hadst thou wealth again,
 Rascals should have 't. Do not assume my likeness.
Tim. Were I like thee I'd throw away myself.
Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself; 220
 A madman so long, now a fool. What! think'st
 That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,
 Will put thy shirt on warm? will these moss'd trees,
 That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels
 And skip when thou point'st out! will the cold brook,
 Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste
 To cure thy o'er-night's surfeit? Call the creatures
 Whose naked natures live in all the spite
 Of wreakful heaven, whose bare unhouised trunks,
 To the conflicting elements expos'd 230
 Answer mere nature; bid them flatter thee;
 O! thou shalt find—
Tim. A fool of thee. Depart.
Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.
Tim. I hate thee worse.
Apem. Why?
Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.
Apem. I flatter not, but say thou art a caittiff.
Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?
Apem. To vex thee.

Tim. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.
 Dost please thyself in 't?
Apem. Ay.
Tim. What! a knave too?
Apem. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit on
 To castigate thy pride, 't were well; but thou 240
 Dost it enforcedly; thou 'dst courtier be again
 Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery
 Outlives incertain pomp, is crown'd before:
 The one is filling still, never complete;
 The other, at high wish: best state, contentless,
 Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
 Worse than the worst, content.
 Thou should'st desire to die, being miserable.
Tim. Not by his breath that is more miserable.
 Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm 250
 With favour never clasp'd, but bred a dog.
 Hadst thou, like us, from our first swath, proceed
 The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
 To such as may the passive drudges of it
 Freely command, thou would'st have plung'd thyself
 In general riot; melted down thy youth
 In different beds of lust; and never learn'd
 The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd
 The sugar'd game before thee. But myself,
 Who had the world as my confectionary, 260
 The mouths, the tongues, the eyes and hearts of men
 At duty, more than I could frame employment,
 That numberless upon me stuck as leaves
 Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush
 Fell from their boughs and left me open, bare
 For every storm that blows; I, to bear this,
 That never knew but better, is some burden:
 Thy nature did commence in sufferance, time
 Hath made thee hard in 't. Why should'st thou hate men?
 They never flatter'd thee: what hast thou given? 270
 If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag,
 Must be thy subject, who in spite put stuff
 To some she beggar and compounded thee
 Poor rogue hereditary. Hence! be gone!
 If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,
 Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer.
Apem. Art thou proud yet?
Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.
Apem. I, that I was No prodigal.
Tim. I, that I am one now;
 Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee,
 I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone. 280
 That the whole life of Athens were in this!
 Thus would I eat it. Eating a root.
Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast.

Tim. First mend my company, take away thyself.

Apem. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.

Tim. 'T is not well mended so, it is but botch'd;

If not, I would it were.

Apem. What would'st thou have to Athens?

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt, 288

Tell them there I have gold; look, so I have.

Apem. Here is no use for gold.

Tim. The best and truest;

For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm.

Apem. Where liest o' nights, Timon?

Tim. Under that's above me.

Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus?

Apem. Where my stomach finds meat:

or, rather, where I eat it.

Tim. Would poison were obedient and knew my mind!

Apem. Where would'st thou send it?

Tim. To sauce thy dishes. 299

Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends. When thou wast in thy gilt and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity; in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee; eat it.

Tim. On what I hate I feed not.

Apem. Dost hate a medlar?

Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.

Apem. An thou hadst hated meddlers sooner, thou should'st have loved thyself better now. What man didst thou ever know unthrift that was beloved after his

means? 312

Tim. Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved?

Apem. Myself.

Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst

some means to keep a dog.

Apem. What things in the world canst

thou nearest compare to thy flatterers? 319

Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What would'st thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?

Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the

men.

Tim. Would'st thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?

Apem. Ay, Timon. 328

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods

grant thee t' attain to. If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee; if thou wert

the lamb, the fox would eat thee; if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee,

when peradventure thou wert accused by the ass; if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee, and still thou livedst

but as a breakfast to the wolf; if thou wert

the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou should'st hazard thy life for thy dinner; wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury; wert thou a bear, thou would'st be killed by the horse; wert thou a horse, thou would'st be seized by the leopard; wert thou a leopard, thou wert german to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life; all thy safety were remotion, and thy defence absence. What beast could'st thou be that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation! 340

Apem. If thou could'st please me with speaking to me, thou might'st have hit upon it here; the commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?

Apem. Yonder comes a poet and a painter: the plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way. When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again. 359

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog than Apemantus.

Apem. Thou art the cap of all the fools alive.

Tim. Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon!

Apem. A plague on thee! thou art too bad to curse.

Tim. All villains that do stand by thee are pure.

Apem. There is no leprosy but what thou speak'st.

Tim. If I name thee.

I'll beat thee, but I should infect my hands.

Apem. I would my tongue could rot them off! 370

Tim. Away, thou issue of a mangy dog! Choler does kill me that thou art alive;

I swoon to see thee.

Apem. Would thou would'st burst!

Tim. Away.

Thou tedious rogue! I am sorry I shall lose

A stone by thee. Throws a stone at him.

Apem. Beast!

Tim. Slave!

Apem. Toad!

Tim. Rogue, rogue, rogue!

I am sick of this false world, and will love nought

But even the mere necessities upon 't.

Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave;

Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat

Thy grave-stone daily: make thine epitaph, 380

That death in me at others' lives may laugh.

Looking on the gold. O thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce

'Twixt natural son and sire! thou bright

defiler

Of Hymen's purest bed! thou valiant Mars!

Thou ever young, fresh, lov'd, and delicate wooer,

Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated

snow

That lies on Dian's lap! thou visible god,

That sould'er'st close impossibilities,
And mak'st them kiss! that speak'st with every tongue, 389
To every purpose! O thou touch of hearts!
Think, thy slave man rebels, and by thy virtue
Set them into confounding odds, that beasts
May have the world in empire.

Apem. Would 't were so;
But not till I am dead: I'll say thou'st gold:
Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly.

Tim. Throng'd to?
Apem. Ay.

Tim. Thy back, I prithee.

Apem. Live, and love thy misery!

Tim. Long live so, and so die!

Exit APEMANTUS.

I am quit.

More things like men! Eat, Timon, and abhor them.

Enter Thieves.

First Thief. Where should he have this gold! It is some fragment, some slender ort of his remainder. The mere want of gold, and the falling-from of his friends, drove him into this melancholy.

Second Thief. It is noised he hath a mass of treasure. 405

Third Thief. Let us make the assay upon him; if he care not for 't, he will supply us easily; if he covetously reserve it, how shall 's get it?

Second Thief. True; for he bears it not about him. 't is hid.

First Thief. Is not this he? 410

All. Where?

Second Thief. 'T is his description.

Third Thief. He; I know him.

All. Save thee, Timon.

Tim. Now, thieves?

All. Soldiers, not thieves.

Tim. Both too; and women's sons.

All. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of men.

Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots: 420

Within this mile break forth a hundred springs;

The oaks bear mast, the briers scarlet hips;

The bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush

Lays her full mess before you. Want! why want?

First Thief. We cannot live on grass, on berries, water,

As beasts and birds and fishes.

Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds and fishes;

You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con

That you are thieves profess'd, that you work not

In holier shapes; for there is boundless theft 430

In limited professions. Rascal thieves,

Here's gold. Go, suck the subtle blood o'
the grape,
Till the high fever seethe your blood to froth,

And so 'scape hanging: trust not the physician;

His antidotes are poison, and he slays
More than you rob: take wealth and lives
together;

Do villany, do, since you protest to do 't,
Like workmen. I'll example you with thievery:

The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction

Robs the vast sea; the moon's an arrant
thief, 440

And her pale fire she snatches from the sun:
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves

The moon into salt tears; the earth's a thief,

That feeds and breeds by a composture
stolen

From general excrement; each thing's a
thief;

The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough
power

Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves; away!

Rob one another. There's more gold: cut throats;

All that you meet are thieves. To Athens go.
Break open shops; nothing can you steal 450

But thieves do lose it: steal no less for this I give you; and gold confound you how-soe'er!

Amen.

Third Thief. He has almost charmed me from my profession, by persuading me to it.

First Thief. 'T is in the malice of mankind that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery.

Second Thief. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade. 460

First Thief. Let us first see peace in Athens; there is no time so miserable but a man may be true. Exeunt Thieves.

Enter FLAVIUS.

Flav. O you gods!

Is yond despis'd and ruinous man my lord?
Full of decay and failing? O monument

And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd!
What an alteration of honour

Has desperate want made! 469
What viler thing upon the earth than friends
Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends!

How rarely does it meet with this time's guise,

When man was wish'd to love his enemies!
Grant I may ever love, and rather woo

Those that would mischief me than those that do!

Has caught me in his eye: I will present
My honest grief unto him; and, as my
lord,

Still serve him with my life. My dearest master!

TIMON comes forward.

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, sir?

Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men; 480

Then, if thou grant'st thou'rt a man, I have forgot thee.

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not:
I never had honest man about me; ay, all I kept were knaves, to serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness,
Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief
For his undone lord than mine eyes for
you.

Tim. What! dost thou weep? Come nearer. Then I love thee, Because thou art a woman, and dis-claim'st 490

Flinty mankind, whose eyes do never give,
But thorough lust and laughter. Pity's sleeping;

Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my
lord,

To accept my grief and whilst this poor wealth lasts

To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim. Had I a steward
So true, so just, and now so comfortable?
It almost turns my dangerous nature mild.
Let me behold thy face. Surely, this man
Was born of woman. 501

Forgive my general and exceptless rashness,
You perpetual-sober gods! I do proclaim One honest man, mistake me not, but
one;

No more, I pray, and he's a steward.
How fain would I have hated all mankind!
And thou redeem'st thyself: but all, save
thee,

I fell with curses.

Methinks thou art more honest now than wise;

For, by oppressing and betraying me 510
Thou might'st have sooner got another
service:

For many so arrive at second masters Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me
true,

For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure,
Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,

If not a usuring kindness, and, as rich men
deal gifts,

Expecting in return twenty for one?

Flav. No, my most worthy master; in whose breast

Doubt and suspect, alas! are plac'd too late.

You should have fear'd false times when you did feast; 520

Suspect still comes where an estate is least.

That which I show, heaven knows, is merely
love,

Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind,
Care of your food and living; and, believe it,
My most honoured lord,

For any benefit that points to me,

Either in hope, or present, I'd exchange
For this one wish, that you had power and wealth

To require me by making rich yourself.

Tim. Look thee, 'tis so. Thou singly honest man, 530

Here take: the gods out of my misery
Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich and happy;

But thus condition'd: thou shalt build from
men;

Hate all, curse all, show charity to none,
But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,

Ere thou relieve the beggar: give to dogs
What thou deny'st to men; let prisons swallow 'em,

Debts wither 'em to nothing; be men like blasted woods,

And may diseases lick up their false bloods!
And so farewell and thrive.

Flav. O! let me stay 540
And comfort you, my master.

Tim. If thou hatest Curses, stay not; fly, whilst thou art bless'd and free:

Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee. Exeunt severally.

ACT V

SCENE I.—The Woods. Before TIMON'S Cave.

Enter Poet and Painter.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him? Does the rumour hold for true that he's so full of gold?

Pain. Certain: Alcibiades reports it; Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him:
he likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity. 'Tis said he gave unto his steward a mighty sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends. 11

Pain. Nothing else; you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore, 'tis not amiss we tender our loves to him, in this supposed distress of his: it will show honestly in us, and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travel for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to present unto
him?

Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation; only I will promise him an excellent piece. 21

Poet. I must serve him so too; tell him of an intent that's coming toward him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air o' the time; it opens the eyes of expectation; performance is ever the duller for his act; and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying is quite out of use. To promise is most courtly and fashionable; performance is a kind of will or testament which argues a great sickness in his judgment that makes it.

Enter TIMON, from his cave.

Tim. Aside. Excellent workman! thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself.

Poet. I am thinking what I shall say I have provided for him: it must be a personating of himself; a satire against the softness of prosperity, with a discovery of the infinite flatteries that follow youth and opulency.

Tim. Aside. Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for thee.

Poet. Nay, let's seek him;
Then do we sin against our own estate,
When we may profit meet, and come too late.

Pain. True;
When the day serves, before black-corner'd night,
Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.

Come.

Tim. Aside. I'll meet you at the turn.
What a god's gold,
That he is worship'd in a baser temple
Than where swine feed!
'T is thou that rigg'st the bark and plough'st the foam,
Settlest admired reverence in a slave:
To thee be worship; and thy saints for aye
Be crown'd with plagues that thee alone obey.

Fit I meet them.

Poet. Hail, worthy Timon!

Pain. Our late noble master!

Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest men?

Poet. Sir,
Having often of your open bounty tasted,
Hearing you were retir'd, your friends fall'n off,

Whose thankless natures—O abhorred spirits!

Not all the whips of heaven are large enough—

What! to you,
Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence

To their whole being! I am rapt, and cannot cover

The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude
With any size of words.

Tim. Let it go naked, men may see't the better;

You that are honest, by being what you are,
Make them best seen and known.

Pain. He and myself
Have travell'd in the great shower of your gifts,

And sweetly felt it.

Tim. Ay, you are honest men.
Pain. We are hither come to offer you our service.

Tim. Most honest men! Why, how shall I requite you?

Can you eat roots and drink cold water?

Both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you service.

Tim. Ye're honest men. Ye've heard that I have gold;

I am sure you have: speak truth; ye're honest men.

Pain. So it is said, my noble lord; but therefore

Came not my friend nor I.

Tim. Good honest men! Thou draw'st a counterfeit

Best in all Athens: thou 'rt, indeed, the best;

Thou counterfeit'st most lively.

Pain. So, so, my lord.

Tim. E'en so, sir, as I say. And, for thy fiction,

Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth

That thou art even natural in thine art.

But, for all this, my honest-natur'd friends,
I must needs say you have a little fault:

Marry, 't is not monstrous in you, neither wish I

You take much pains to mend.

Both. Beseech your honour
To make it known to us.

Tim. You'll take it ill.

Both. Most thankfully, my lord.

Tim. Will you indeed?

Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord.

Tim. There's never a one of you but trusts a knave,

That mightily deceives you.

Both. Do we, my lord?

Tim. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him dissemble.

Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him,

Keep in your bosom; yet remain assur'd 100
That he's a made-up villain.

Pain. I know none such, my lord.

Poet. Nor I.

Tim. Look you, I love you well; I'll give you gold,

Rid me these villains from your companies:
Hang them or stab them, drown them in a draught,

Confound them by some course, and come to me,

I'll give you gold enough.

Both. Name them, my lord; let's know them.

Tim. You that way and you this, but two in company;

Each man apart, all single and alone, 110
Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.

If, where thou art two villains shall not be,
Come not near him. If thou would'st not reside

But where one villain is, then him abandon.
Hence! pack! there's gold; you came for gold, ye slaves:

You have work'd for me, there's payment: hence!

You are an alchemist, make gold of that.
Out, rascal dogs! Beats them out and then retires to his cave.

Enter FLAVIUS and two Senators.

Flav. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon;

For he is set so only to himself, 120
That nothing but himself, which looks like
man,

Is friendly with him.

First Sen. Bring us to his cave:
It is our part and promise to the Athenians
To speak with Timon.

Second Sen. At all times alike Men are not still the same: 't was time and griefs

That fram'd him thus: time, with his fairer
hand,

Offering the fortunes of his former days,
The former man may make him. Bring us
to him,

And chance it as it may.

Flav. Here is his cave.
Peace and content be here! Lord Timon!
Timon! 130

Look out, and speak to friends. The Athenians,

By two of their most reverend senate, greet
thee:

Speak to them, noble Timon.

Re-enter TIMON from his cave.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn!
Speak, and be hang'd:

For each true word, a blister! and each false
Be as a cauterizing to the root o' the tongue,
Consuming it with speaking!

First Sen. Worthy Timon,— Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.

Second Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.

Tim. I thank them; and would send them back the plague, 140

Could I but catch it for them.

First Sen. O! forget
What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.
The senators with one consent of love Entreat thee back to Athens; who have thought

On special dignities, which vacant lie
For thy best use and wearing.

Second Sen. They confess Toward thee forgetfulness too general, gross;
Which now the public body, which doth seldom

Play the recanter, feeling in itself
A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal 150
Of its own fail, restraining aid to Timon;
And send forth us, to make their sorrow'd render,

Together with a recompense more fruitful Than their offence can weigh down by the dram;

Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth

As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs,

And write in thee the figures of their love,
Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it;
Surprise me to the very brink of tears: 159
Lend me a fool's heart and a woman's eyes,
And I'll beweepe these comforts, worthy senators.

First Sen. Therefore so please thee to return with us,

And of our Athens, thine and ours, to take The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,

Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good
name

Live with authority: so soon we shall drive back

Of Alcibiades the approaches wild;

Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up
His country's peace.

Second Sen. And shakes his threat'ning
sword

Against the walls of Athens.

First Sen. Therefore, Timon—
Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will,
sir, thus: 171

If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,

Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,

That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair
Athens,

And take our goodly aged men by the beards,
Giving our holy virgins to the stain
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war,
Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks it,

In pity of our aged and our youth 179
I cannot choose but tell him, that I care
not,

And let him take't at worst; for their knives care not

While you have throats to answer: for myself,

There's not a whittle in the unruly camp

But I do prize it at my love before

The reverend'st throat in Athens. So I leave
you

To the protection of the prosperous gods,
As thieves to keepers.

Flav. Stay not; all's in vain.
Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph;
It will be seen to-morrow. My long sickness

Of health and living now begins to mend, 190
And nothing brings me all things. Go; live still:

Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,

And last so long enough!

First Sen. We speak in vain.
Tim. But yet I love my country, and am
not

One that rejoices in the common wreck,
As common bruit doth put it.

First Sen. That's well spoke.
Tim. Commend me to my loving country-
men,—

First Sen. These words become your lips as they pass through them.

Second Sen. And enter in our ears like great triumphers 199

In their applauding gates,

Tim. Commend me to them;
And tell them that, to ease them of their
griefs,
Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches,
losses,
Their pangs of love, with other incident
throes

That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do them:

I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades' wrath.

Second Sen. I like this well, he will return again.

Tim. I have a tree which grows here in my close,

That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it; tell my friends,
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree, 211
From high to low throughout, that whoso
please

To stop affliction, let him take his haste,
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe,
And hang himself. I pray you, do my greet-
ing.

Flav. Trouble him no further; thus you still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again; but say to Athens,

Timon hath made his everlasting mansion
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood;
Who once a day with his embossed froth 220
The turbulent surge shall cover: thither
come,

And let my grave-stone be your oracle.
Lips, let sour words go by and language end:
What is amiss plague and infection mend!
Graves only be men's works and death their gain!

Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath done his reign. Exit.

First Sen. His discontents are unre-moveably
Coupled to nature.

Second Sen. Our hope in him is dead:
let us return,

And strain what other means is left unto us
in our dear peril. 231

First Sen. It requires swift foot. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Enter two Senators and a Messenger.

First Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd: are his files

As full as thy report?

Mess. I have spoke the least;
Besides, his expedition promises
Present approach.

Second Sen. We stand much hazard if they bring not Timon.

Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient
friend,

Whom, though in general part we were oppos'd,

Yet our old love made a particular force,
And made us speak like friends: this man was riding

From Alcibiades to Timon's cave, 10
With letters of entreaty, which imported
His fellowship i' the cause against your city.
In part for his sake mov'd.

Enter the Senators from TIMON.

First Sen. Here come our brothers.
Third Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect.

The enemy's drum is heard, and fearful scouring

Doth choke the air with dust. In, and prepare:

Ours is the fall, I fear; our foes the snare.
Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Woods. TIMON'S Cave, and a rude tomb seen.

Enter a Soldier, seeking TIMON.

Sold. By all description this should be the place.

Who's here? speak, ho! No answer!
what is this?

Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span:

Some beast rear'd this; here does not live
a man.

Dead, sure; and this his grave. What's on this tomb

I cannot read; the character I'll take with wax:

Our captain hath in every figure skill;
An ag'd interpreter, though young in days.
Before proud Athens he's set down by this,
Whose fall the mark of his ambition is.

Exit.

SCENE IV.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter ALCIBIADES with his Powers.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town

Our terrible approach. A parley sounded.

Enter Senators on the walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the
time

With all licentious measure, making your wills

The scope of justice; till now myself and such

As slept within the shadow of your power
Have wander'd with our traver's'd arms, and breath'd

Our sufferance vainly. Now the time is flush,

When crouching marrow, in the bearer
strong,

Cries of itself, 'No more': now breathless
wrong 10

Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease,

And pury insolence shall break his wind
With fear and horrid flight.

First Sen. Noble and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,

Ere thou hadst power or we had cause of fear,

We sent to thee, to give thy rages balm,
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.

Second Sen. So did we woo Transformed Timon to our city's love
By humble message and by promis'd means:
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve 21
The common stroke of war.

First Sen. These walls of ours Were not erected by their hands from whom

You have receiv'd your grief; nor are they such

That these great towers, trophies, and schools should fall

For private faults in them.

Second Sen. Nor are they living
Who were the motives that you first went out;

Shame that they wanted cunning in excess
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread: 30
By decimation, and a tithed death,
If thy revenges hunger for that food
Which nature loathes, take thou the destin'd tenth.

And by the hazard of the spotted die
Let die the spotted.

First Sen. All have not offended;
For those that were, it is not square to take On those that are, revenges: crimes, like lands,

Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman, Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy
rage:

Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin 40
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall
With those that have offended: like a shepherd,

Approach the fold and cull the infected forth,
But kill not all together.

Second Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile
Than hew to 't with thy sword.

First Sen. Set but thy foot Against our rampir'd gates, and they shall ope,

So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say thou 'lt enter friendly.

Second Sen. Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else, 50

That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress
And not as our confusion, all thy powers Shall make their harbour in our town, till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports:
Those enemies of Timon's, and mine own,
Whom you yourself shall set out for reproof,
Fall, and no more; and, to atone your fears

With my more noble meaning, not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds, 61
But shall be render'd to your public laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'T is most nobly spoken.

Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.

The Senators descend, and open the gates.

Enter a Soldier.

Sold. My noble general, Timon is dead;
Entomb'd upon the very hem o' the sea:
And on his grave-stone this insculpture,
which

With wax I brought away, whose soft impression
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcib. Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft: 70
Seek not my name: a plague consume you wicked caitiffs left!

Here lie I, Timon; who, alive, all living men did hate:

Pass by and curse thy fill; but pass and stay not here thy gait.

These well express in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhorr'dst in us our human
griefs,

Scorn'dst our brain's flow and those our droplets which

From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye

On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon; of whose memory 80

Hereafter more. Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword;

Make war breed peace; make peace stint war; make each

Prescribe to other as each other's leech.

Let our drums strike. Exeunt.

JULIUS CÆSAR

WHATEVER Shakespeare might have thought of the people's judgment, he never loses sight of the fact that public opinion is "a sovereign mistress of effects." In his tragedy of Julius Cæsar the ultimate failure of the conspiracy is foreshadowed in the opening scene when the people "make holiday to see Cæsar, and to rejoice in his triumph." It is as a safeguard against the possible wrath of the people that Cassius seeks the leadership of Brutus, who "sits high in all the people's hearts" and whose "countenance" will turn to "virtue and to worthiness" what otherwise would appear "offence in us." Cassius protests against Antony's speaking in Cæsar's funeral lest he may move the people; and when after Antony's speech, Brutus and Cassius ride "like madmen through the gates of Rome" Antony observes: "Belike they had some notice of the people, how I had moved them." This tragedy involves no mere individual or group of individuals, but the state, the ultimate power of which lies in the people; and the problem with which Shakespeare grapples in this play is a problem affecting primarily the state and the people—the problem of political leadership. Failure to recognize this problem as the unifying thought of the play has been largely responsible for the confusion of opinions which has attended its discussion. The tendency has been to estimate the principal characters in the tragedy on the basis of private rather than public virtues, but all such attempts are idle. Cæsar was the embodiment of the state, and living or dead his spirit inspired it. The tragedy is therefore rightly named for him. Shakespeare has but slightly sketched him and has disposed of him early in the play to pit his spirit against the political leadership of the living Brutus. Shakespeare's interest in Brutus as a man is subordinated throughout to his interest in Brutus as a political leader. To analyze the character of Brutus from this point of view is to analyze the play.

It is easy to see why Brutus sits high in the people's hearts. His popularity rests, so far as is revealed in the play, not upon any meritorious public service, but rather upon his eminent respectability, his acknowledged morality and his manifest virtues in private and domestic life. To the people it seemed antecedently probable that such a man would lend himself to no enterprise that could not be morally justified. The moral soundness of the people leads them to take such men to their hearts. But with respect to Brutus' fitness for leadership their judgment is superficial. By making it possible that ours need not be, Shakespeare has performed an eternal service to the cause of democracy. He has revealed the fact that without the capacity for intellectual honesty private morality becomes in public life a public menace. In the simple affairs of private and domestic life one may, even without that capacity, luxuriate in morality without great risk of serious consequences; but in the complex affairs of public life the man who drives his moral sense with a free rein in the dim light of a dull intellect drives to ruin. Witness Brutus' insistence upon sparing Antony lest their course should "seem too bloody." Mere intellectual honesty demanded that Brutus, having once determined that he must kill Caesar for the "general good," should make every provision that "the redress [should] follow." By sparing Antony he jeopardizes the general good for no other purpose than to satisfy his private moral sense. Granted that he is engaged in an honorable and unselfish enterprise for "the good of Rome," the highest morality demands that he shall pursue it to the end with pitiless honesty. But of such honesty Brutus is incapable.

It would almost seem that it is his very incapacity for pitiless intellectual honesty that has led so many readers and critics to regard Brutus as "one of the most admirable of the poet's creations" and one for whom Shakespeare felt a "peculiar paternal affection." To accept such a view is to wrong both ourselves and Shakespeare—ourselves, because with that view we shall continue to imperil democracy by our sentimentality in choosing and judging political leaders; Shakespeare, by assuming that he failed to recognize the full significance of a character to the portrayal of which he summoned his highest powers. The very fact that Brutus has been so widely accepted as noble and honorable; that "the one great error of his life" has been extenuated on the ground that it was inspired by the "highest patriotism," testifies to the difficulty of the task which Shakespeare set himself in drawing the character as well as to the importance of the task itself. If wise men and scholars, with the character of Brutus under their eye for microscopic examination, can be deceived by it, how much more danger that the people will continue to take such "moral fools" to their hearts and to entrust them with the perilous task of political leadership. If we are to profit by a study of this play we shall see to it that men like Brutus shall "play the fool nowhere but in their own house."

Antony's eulogy pronounced over the dead body of Brutus, doubtful compliment though it is, must not be accepted as voicing Shakespeare's own opinion of the man. Shakespeare wastes no sympathy on men who "love the name of honor" and who then, acting "only in a general honest thought," join in a conspiracy against the life of their "best lover"; he is not deceived into admiration for a man who, when put to the test, abandons his philosophy because "he bears too great a mind" to live and die by it; he is not an apologist for well-intentioned assassins whose morality is vitiated by their stupidity. With respect to such men it seems clear that his judgment coincides in one instance at least with that of the people:

"They were traitors! Honorable men!"

ACT I

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter FLAVIUS, MARULLUS, and certain Commoners.

Flav. Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home:

Is this a holiday? What! know you not, Being mechanical, you ought not walk Upon a labouring day without the sign Of your profession? Speak, what trade art thou?

First Com. Why, sir, a carpenter.

Mar. Where is thy leather apron, and thy rule?

What dost thou with thy best apparel on? You, sir, what trade are you?

Second Com. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

Mar. But what trade art thou? Answer me directly.

Second Com. A trade, sir, that I hope I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.

Mar. What trade, thou knave? thou naughty knave, what trade?

Second Com. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What meanest thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow!

Second Com. Why, sir, cobble you.

Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

Second Com. Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl: I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but withal I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neat's-leather have gone upon my handiwork.

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop today?

Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

Second Com. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But, indeed, sir, we make holiday to see Cæsar and to rejoice in his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home?

What tributaries follow him to Rome To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels?

You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!

O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome, Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft

Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,

To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops,

Your infants in your arms, and there have sat

The livelong day, with patient expectation, To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome:

And when you saw his chariot but appear, Have you not made an universal shout,

That Tiber trembled underneath her banks, To hear the replication of your sounds

Made in her concave shores?

And do you now put on your best attire? And do you now cull out a holiday?

And do you now strew flowers in his way,
That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood?
Be gone!

Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the gods to intermit the plague
That needs must light on this ingratitude. 60
Flav. Go, go, good countrymen, and for this fault

Assemble all the poor men of your sort;
Draw them to Tiber banks, and weep your tears

Into the channel, till the lowest stream
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.

Exeunt all the Commoners.
See whe'r their basest metal be not mov'd;
They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.
Go you down that way towards the Capitol;
This way will I. Disrobe the images
If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies.

Mar. May we do so? 71
You know it is the feast of Lupercal.

Flav. It is no matter; let no images
Be hung with Cæsar's trophies. I'll about
And drive away the vulgar from the streets:
So do you too where you perceive them
thick.

These growing feathers pluck'd from Cæsar's wing
Will make him fly an ordinary pitch,
Who else would soar above the view of
men

And keep us all in servile fearfulness. 80
Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A public Place.

*Enter, in procession, with music, CÆSAR;
ANTONY, for the course; CALPURNIA,
PORTIA, DECIVS, CICERO, BRUTUS, CAS-SIUS, and CASCA; a great crowd following, among them a Soothsayer.*

Cæs. Calpurnia!
Casca. Peace, ho! Cæsar speaks.

Cæs. Calpurnia!
Cal. Here, my lord.

Cæs. Stand you directly in Antonius' way
When he doth run his course. Antonius!
Ant. Cæsar, my lord.

Cæs. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calpurnia; for our elders say,
The barren, touched in this holy chase,
Shake off their sterile curse.

Ant. I shall remember:
When Cæsar says 'Do this,' it is perform'd. 10
Cæs. Set on; and leave no ceremony out.

Sooth. Cæsar!
Cæs. Ha! Who calls?

Casca. Bid every noise be still: peace
yet again! Music ceases.

Cæs. Who is it in the press that calls on
me?

I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music, Cry 'Cæsar!' Speak; Cæsar is turn'd to hear.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.
Cæs. What man is that?
Bru. A soothsayer bids you beware the ides of March.

Cæs. Set him before me; let me see his face. 20

Cas. Fellow, come from the throng; look upon Cæsar.

Cæs. What say'st thou to me now? Speak once again.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Cæs. He is a dreamer; let us leave him:
pass. Sennet.

Exeunt all but BRUTUS and CASSIUS.

Cas. Will you go see the order of the course?

Bru. Not I.

Cas. I pray you, do.

Bru. I am not gamesome: I do lack some part

Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.
Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires; 30
I'll leave you.

Cas. Brutus, I do observe you now of late;
I have not from your eyes that gentleness
And show of love as I was wont to have:
You bear too stubborn and too strange a
hand

Over your friend that loves you.

Bru. Cassius,
Be not deceiv'd: if I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vexed I am
Of late with passions of some difference, 40
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil perhaps to my behaviours:

But let not therefore my good friends be
griev'd,

Among which number, Cassius, be you one,
Nor construe any further my neglect,
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
Forgets the shows of love to other men.

Cas. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion;
By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried 49

Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?

Bru. No, Cassius; for the eye sees not itself.

But by reflection, by some other things.

Cas. 'T is just:

And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye, That you might see your shadow. I have heard,

Where many of the best respect in Rome,
Except immortal Cæsar, speaking of Bru-
tus, 60

And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

Bru. Into what dangers would you lead me, Cassius,

That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me?

Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to hear;

And since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass,

Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself which you yet know not of.

And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus: 71
Were I a common laughèr, or did use
To stale with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protester; if you know
That I do fawn on men and hug them hard,
And after scandal them; or if you know
That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

Flourish and shout.

Bru. What means this shouting? I do fear the people 79
Choose Cæsar for their king.

Cas. Ay, do you fear it?
Then must I think you would not have it so.

Bru. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him
well.

But wherefore do you hold me here so
long?

What is it that you would impart to me?
If it be aught toward the general good,
Set honour in one eye and death i' the other,
And I will look on both indifferently;
For let the gods so speed me as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Bru-
tus, 90

As well as I do know your outward favour.
Well, honour is the subject of my story.
I cannot tell what you and other men
Think of this life; but for my single self,
I had as lief not be as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself.

I was born free as Cæsar; so were you:
We both have fed as well, and we can both Endure the winter's cold as well as he:
For once, upon a raw and gusty day, 100
The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores, Cæsar said to me, 'Dar'st thou, Cassius,
now

Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point?' Upon the word,

Accounted as I was, I plunged in
And bade him follow; so indeed he did.
The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it
With lusty sinews, throwing it aside
And stemming it with hearts of controversy;

But ere we could arrive the point propos'd,
Cæsar cried 'Help me, Cassius, or I sink.' 111
I, as Æneas, our great ancestor, Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder

The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tiber

Did I the tired Cæsar. And this man
Is now become a god, and Cassius is
A wretched creature and must bend his body
If Cæsar carelessly but nod on him.
He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And when the fit was on him, I did mark 120
How he did shake; 't is true, this god did shake;

His coward lips did from their colour fly,
And that same eye whose bend doth awe the
world

Did lose his lustre; I did hear him groan;
Ay, and that tongue of his that bade the Romans

Mark him and write his speeches in their books,

Alas! it cried 'Give me some drink, Titinius,'

As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the majestic world, 130
And bear the palm alone. Shout. Flourish.

Bru. Another general shout!
I do believe that these applauses are
For some new honours that are heap'd on Cæsar.

Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world

Like a Colossus; and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
Men at some time are masters of their fates:
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings. 141
Brutus and Cæsar: what should be in that
'Cæsar'?

Why should that name be sounded more than yours?

Write them together, yours is as fair a name;
Sound them, it doth become the mouth as
well;

Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with
'em,

'Brutus' will start a spirit as soon as 'Cæsar.'
Now, in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed,
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd! 150

Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!

When wert there by an age, since the great flood,

But it was fam'd with more than with one
man?

When could they say, till now, that talk'd of Rome,

That her wide walks encompass'd but one
man?

Now is it Rome indeed and room enough,
When there is in it but one only man.

O! you and I have heard our fathers say,
There was a Brutus once that would have brook'd

The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome,
As easily as a king. 161

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;

What you would work me to, I have some aim;

How I have thought of this and of these times,

I shall recount hereafter; for this present,
I would not, so with love I might entreat you,
Be any further mov'd. What you have said
I will consider; what you have to say
I will with patience hear, and find a time
Both meet to hear and answer such high things. 170

Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this:
Brutus had rather be a villager

Than to repute himself a son of Rome
Under these hard conditions as this time
Is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad That my weak words have struck but thus much show
Of fire from Brutus.

Bru. The games are done and Cæsar is returning.

Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve,
And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you
What hath proceeded worthy note to-day. 181

Re-enter CÆSAR and his Train.

Bru. I will do so. But, look you, Cassius,
The angry spot doth glow on Cæsar's brow,
And all the rest look like a chidden train:
Calpurnia's cheek is pale, and Cicero
Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes
As we have seen him in the Capitol,
Being cross'd in conference by some senators.

Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is.

Cæs. Antonius! 190
Ant. Cæsar.

Cæs. Let me have men about me that are fat;

Sleek-headed men and such as sleep o'
nights.

Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.

Ant. Fear him not, Cæsar, he's not dangerous;

He is a noble Roman, and well given.

Cæs. Would he were fatter! But I fear him not:

Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid 200
So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much;

He is a great observer, and he looks Quite through the deeds of men; he loves no plays,

As thou dost, Anthony; he hears no music;
Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort
As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit

That could be mov'd to smile at any thing.
Such men as he be never at heart's ease
Whiles they behold a greater than themselves,

And therefore are they very dangerous. 210
I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd

Than what I fear, for always I am Cæsar.
Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
And tell me truly what thou think'st of him.

Sennet. Exeunt CÆSAR and his Train.

CASCA stays behind.

Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak; would you speak with me?

Bru. Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanced to-day,

That Cæsar looks so sad.

Casca. Why, you were with him, were you
not?

Bru. I should not then ask Casca what had chanced. 219

Casca. Why, there was a crown offered him; and, being offered him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus; and then the people fell a-shouting.

Bru. What was the second noise for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Cas. They shouted thrice: what was the last cry for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Bru. Was the crown offered him thrice?

Casca. Ay, marry, was 't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other; and at every putting-by mine honest neighbours shouted. 231

Cas. Who offered him the crown?

Casca. Why, Antony.

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle
Casca.

Casca. I can as well be hanged as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery; I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown; yet 't was not a crown neither, 't was one of these coronets; and, as I told you, he put it by once; but, for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it.
Then he offered it to him again; then he put it by again; but, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the third time; he put it the third time by; and still as he refused it, the rabblement shouted, and clapped their chopped hands, and threw up their sweaty nightcaps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Cæsar refused the crown, that it had almost choked Cæsar; for he swounded and fell down at it. And for mine own part, I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips and receiving the bad air. 252

Cas. But soft, I pray you: what! did Cæsar swoond?

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foamed at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'T is very like: he hath the fallingsickness.

Cas. No, Cæsar hath it not; but you, and I,
And honest Casca, we have the falling-sickness. 258

Casca. I know not what you mean by that; but I am sure Cæsar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap him and hiss him, according as he pleased and displeased them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man.

Bru. What said he when he came unto himself? 264

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceived the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he plucked me ope his doublet and offered them his throat to cut.
An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues.
And so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done or said any thing amiss, he desired their worshipps to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried 'Alas! good soul,' and forgave him with all their hearts;
but there 's no heed to be taken of them: if Cæsar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done no less.

Bru. And after that, he came, thus sad,
away?

Casca. Ay. 280

Cas. Did Cicero say any thing?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect?

Casca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i' the face again; but those that understood him smiled at one another and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too; Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Cæsar's images, are put to silence.
Fare you well. There was more foolery yet,
if I could remember it. 291

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night,
Casca?

Casca. No, I am promised forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating.

Cas. Good; I will expect you.

Casca. Do so. Farewell, both. Exit.

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be!

He was quick mettle when he went to school.

Cas. So is he now in execution 301
Of any bold or noble enterprise,
However he puts on this tardy form.
This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomach to digest his words

With better appetite.

Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave you:

To-morrow, if you please to speak with me,
I will come home to you; or, if you will,
Come home to me, and I will wait for you. 310

Cas. I will do so: till then, think of the world. Exit BRUTUS.

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see,
Thy honourable metal may be wrought
From that it is dispos'd: therefore 't is meet
That noble minds keep ever with their likes;
For who so firm that cannot be seduc'd?
Cæsar doth bear me hard; but he loves
Brutus:

If I were Brutus now and he were Cassius,
He should not humour me. I will this night,
In several hands, in at his windows throw, 320
As if they came from several citizens,
Writings all tending to the great opinion
That Rome holds of his name; wherein ob-scurely

Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at:
And after this let Cæsar seat him sure;
For we will shake him, or worse days endure. Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Thunder and lightning. Enter, from opposite sides, CASCA, with his sword drawn, and CICERO.

Cic. Good even, Casca: brought you
Cæsar home?

Why are you breathless? and why stare
you so?

Casca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth

Shakes like a thing unfirm? O Cicero!
I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds

Have riv'd the knotty oaks; and I have seen
The ambitious ocean swell and rage and foam,

To be exalted with the threat'ning clouds:
But never till to-night, never till now,
Did I go through a tempest dropping fire. 10
Either there is a civil strife in heaven,
Or else the world, too saucy with the gods,
Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you anything more wonderful?

Casca. A common slave, you know him
well by sight,
Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn

Like twenty torches join'd; and yet his
hand,

Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.
Besides, I have not since put up my sword,
Against the Capitol I met a lion, 20

Who glar'd upon me, and went surly by,
Without annoying me; and there were drawn

Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women, Transformed with their fear, who swore they saw

Men all in fire walk up and down the streets.
And yesterday the bird of night did sit,
Even at noon-day, upon the market-place,
Hooting and shrieking. When these prodig-ies

Do so conjointly meet, let not men say
'These are their reasons, they are natural'; 30

For, I believe, they are portentous things
Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed
time:

But men may construe things after their fashion,

Clean from the purpose of the things themselves.

Comes Cæsar to the Capitol to-morrow?

Casca. He doth; for he did bid Antonius
Send word to you he would be there to-morrow.

Cic. Good night then, Casca: this disturbed sky

Is not to walk in.

Casca. Farewell, Cicero. 40
Exit CICERO.

Enter CASSIUS.

Cas. Who's there?

Casca. A Roman.

Cas. Casca, by your voice.

Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this?

Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.

Casca. Whoever knew the heavens menace so?

Cas. Those that have known the earth so full of faults.

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,

Submitting me unto the perilous night,
And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see,
Have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-stone;
And when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open 50

The breast of heaven, I did present myself
Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble
When the most mighty gods by tokens send Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

Cas. You are dull, Casca, and those sparks of life

That should be in a Roman you do want,
Or else you use not. You look pale, and gaze,

And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder, 60

To see the strange impatience of the heavens;

But if you would consider the true cause
Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,

Why birds and beasts, from quality and
kind;

Why old men fool, and children calculate;
Why all these things change from their ordinance,

Their natures, and preformed faculties,
To monstrous quality, why, you shall find That heaven hath infus'd them with these spirits

To make them instruments of fear and warning 70

Unto some monstrous state.
Now could I, Casca, name to thee a man

Most like this dreadful night,
That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars

As doth the lion in the Capitol,
A man no mightier than thyself or me
In personal action, yet prodigious grown
And fearful as these strange eruptions are.

Casca. 'T is Cæsar that you mean; is it not, Cassius?

Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans
now 80

Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors;

But, woe the while! our fathers' minds are
dead,

And we are govern'd with our mothers'
spirits;

Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish.
Casca. Indeed, they say the senators tomorrow

Mean to establish Cæsar as a king;
And he shall wear his crown by sea and land,

In every place, save here in Italy.
Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger
then;

Cassius from bondage will deliver Cas-
sius: 90

Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most
strong;

Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat:
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,

Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny that I do bear
I can shake off at pleasure. Thunder still.
Casca. So can I: 100

So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.

Cas. And why should Cæsar be a tyrant
then?

Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep;
He were no lion were not Romans hinds.

Those that with haste will make a mighty
fire

Begin it with weak straws; what trash is
Rome,

What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves
For the base matter to illuminate 110

So vile a thing as Cæsar! But, O grief!
Where hast thou led me? I perhaps speak
this

Before a willing bondman; then I know
My answer must be made: but I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Casca. You speak to Casca, and to such
a man

That is no fleeing tell-tale. Hold, my hand:
Be factious for redress of all these griefs,
And I will set this foot of mine as far 119

As who goes furthest.

Cas. There's a bargain made.
Now know you, Casca, I have mov'd already
Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans
To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honourable-dangerous consequence;
And I do know, by this they stay for me
In Pompey's porch: for now, this fearful
night,

There is no stir or walking in the streets;
And the complexion of the element
In favour's like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible. 130

Casca. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.

Cas. 'T is Cinna; I do know him by his gait:

He is a friend.

Enter CINNA.

Cinna, where haste you so?

Cin. To find out you. Who's that? Metellus Cimber?

Cas. No, it is Casca; one incorporate
To our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?

Cin. I am glad on't. What a fearful night is this!

There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.

Cas. Am I not stay'd for? Tell me.

Cin. Yes, you are.
O Cassius! if you could 140

But win the noble Brutus to our party—
Cas. Be you content. Good Cinna, take this paper,

And look you lay it in the prætor's chair,
Where Brutus may but find it; and throw
this

In at his window; set this up with wax
Upon old Brutus' statue: all this done, Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.

Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there? 148
Cin. All but Metellus Cimber, and he's
gone

To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie,
And so bestow these papers as you bade me.

Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre.
Exit CINNA.

Come, Casca, you and I will yet ere day
See Brutus at his house: three parts of him
Is our already, and the man entire
Upon the next encounter yields him ours.

Casca. O! he sits high in all the people's hearts:

And that which would appear offence in us,
His countenance, like richest alchemy,
Will change to virtue and to worthiness. 160

Cas. Him and his worth and our great need of him

You have right well conceited. Let us go,
For it is after midnight; and ere day
We will awake him and be sure of him.

Exeunt.

ACT II

SCENE I.—Rome. BRUTUS'S Orchard.

Enter BRUTUS.

Bru. What, Lucius! ho!
I cannot, by the progress of the stars,
Give guess how near to day. Lucius, I say!
I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly.
When, Lucius, when! Awake, I say! What,
Lucius!

Enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Call'd you, my lord?

Bru. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius:
When it is lighted, come and call me here.

Luc. I will, my lord. Exit.

Bru. It must be by his death: and for my part, 10

I know no personal cause to spurn at him,
But for the general. He would be crown'd:
How that might change his nature, there's the question.

It is the bright day that brings forth the adder;

And that craves wary walking. Crown him?
that!

And then, I grant, we put a sting in him,
That at his will he may do danger with.
The abuse of greatness is when it disjoins
Remorse from power; and, to speak truth of Cæsar, 19

I have not known when his affections sway'd
More than his reason. But 't is a common proof,

That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base de-greess

By which he did ascend. So Cæsar may:
Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel

Will bear no colour for the thing he is, 29
Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented,
Would run to these and these extremities;
And therefore think him as a serpent's egg
Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischievous,
And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir.
Searching the window for a flint, I found
This paper, thus seal'd up; and I am sure
It did not lie there when I went to bed.

Gives him a letter.

Bru. Get you to bed again; it is not day.
Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March? 40

Luc. I know not, sir.

Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me
word.

Luc. I will, sir.

Exit.

Bru. The exhalations whizzing in the air
Give so much light that I may read by them.
Opens the letter.

*Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake, and see thy-
self.*

Shall Rome, etc. Speak, strike, redress!

'Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake!
Such instigations have been often dropp'd
Where I have took them up. 50
'Shall Rome, etc.' Thus must I piece it out:
Shall Rome stand under one man's awe?
What! Rome?

My ancestors did from the streets of Rome
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king.

'Speak, strike, redress!' Am I entreated
To speak and strike? O Rome! I make thee promise;

If the redress will follow, thou receiv'st
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fifteen days.

Knocking within.

Bru. 'T is good. Go to the gate; somebody knocks. Exit LUCIUS. 60

Since Cassius first did whet me against
Cæsar,

I have not slept.

Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream;
The genius and the mortal instruments
Are then in council; and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, 't is your brother Cassius at the door, 70
Who doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone?

Luc. No sir, there are moe with him,

Bru. Do you know them?

Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears,

And half their faces buried in their cloaks,
That by no means I may discover them
By any mark of favour.

Bru. Let 'em enter. Exit LUCIUS.
They are the faction. O conspiracy!
Sham'st thou to show thy dangerous brow
by night.

When evils are most free? O! then by day
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough
To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy; 81

Hide it in smiles and affability:
For if thou path thy native semblance on,
Not Erebus itself were dim enough
To hide thee from prevention.

Enter the Conspirators, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, CINNA, METELLUS CIMBER, and TREBONIUS.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest:

Good morrow, Brutus; do we trouble you?
Bru. I have been up this hour, awake all
night.

Know I these men that come along with you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man here 93

But honour you; and every one doth wish
You had but that opinion of yourself
Which every noble Roman bears of you.
This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome hither.

Cas. This, Decius Brutus.

Bru. He is welcome too.

Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna; and this, Metellus Cimber.

Bru. They are all welcome.

What watchful cares do interpose themselves

Betwixt your eyes and night?
Cas. Shall I entreat a word? 100

BRUTUS and CASSIUS whisper.
Dec. Here lies the east: doth not the day break here?

Casca. No.

Cin. O! pardon, sir, it doth; and yon grey lines

That fret the clouds are messengers of day.

Casca. You shall confess that you are both deceiv'd.

Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises,
Which is a great way growing on the south,
Weighing the youthful season of the year.
Some two months hence up higher toward the north

He first presents his fire; and the high east
Stands, as the Capitol, directly here. 111

Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by
one.

Cas. And let us swear our resolution.
Bru. No, not an oath: if not the face of
men,

The sufferance of our souls, the time's
abuse,

If these be motives weak, break off betimes,
And every man hence to his idle bed;

So let high-sighted tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,

As I am sure they do, bear fire enough 120

To kindle cowards and to steel with valour
The melting spirits of women, then, country-
men,

What need we any spur but our own cause
To prick us to redress? what other bond Than secret Romans, that have spoke the
word

And will not palter? and what other oath
Than honesty to honesty engag'd,
That this shall be, or we will fall for it?

Swear priests and cowards and men cautelous, 129

Old feeble carrions and such suffering souls
That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes

swear

Such creatures as men doubt; but do not stain

The even virtue of our enterprise,
Nor the insuppressive mettle of our spirits,

To think that or our cause or our performance

Did need an oath; when every drop of blood
That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,

Is guilty of a several bastardy,
If he do break the smallest particle

Of any promise that hath pass'd from
him. 140

Cas. But what of Cicero? Shall we sound
him?

I think he will stand very strong with us.

Casca. Let us not leave him out.

Cin. No, by no means.

Met. O! let us have him, for his silver hairs

Will purchase us a good opinion
And buy men's voices to commend our deeds:

It shall be said his judgment rul'd our hands;

Our youths and wildness shall no whit appear,

But all be buried in his gravity.

Bru. O! name him not; let us not break with him; 150

For he will never follow any thing
That other men begin.

Cas. Then leave him out.

Casca. Indeed he is not fit.

Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd but only Cæsar?

Cas. Decius, well urg'd. I think it is not meet,

Mark Antony, so well lov'd of Cæsar,
Should outlive Cæsar: we shall find of him

A shrewd contriver; and, you know, his
means,

If he improve them, may well stretch so far
As to annoy us all; which to prevent, 160

Let Antony and Cæsar fall together.

Bru. Our course will seem too bloody,
Caius Cassius,

To cut the head off and then hack the limbs,
Like wrath in death and envy afterwards;

For Antony is but a limb of Cæsar.

Let us be sacrificers, but not butchers,
Caius.

We all stand up against the spirit of
Cæsar;

And in the spirit of men there is no blood:

O! that we then could come by Cæsar's spirit,
And not dismember Cæsar. But, alas! 170
Cæsar must bleed for it. And, gentle friends,

Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully;
Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,
Not hew him as a carcass fit for hounds:
And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,
Stir up their servants to an act of rage,
And after seem to chide 'em. This shall make

Our purpose necessary and not envious;
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers. 190

And for Mark Antony, think not of him;
For he can do no more than Cæsar's arm
When Cæsar's head is off.

Cas. Yet I fear him;
For in the ingrafted love he bears to Cæsar—
Bru. Alas! good Cassius, do not think of him:

If he love Cæsar, all that he can do
Is to himself, take thought and die for Cæsar:

And that were much he should; for he is given

To sports, to wildness, and much company.
Treb. There is no fear in him; let him not die; 190

For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.
Clock strikes.

Bru. Peace! count the clock.

Cas. The clock hath stricken three.

Treb. 'Tis time to part.

Cas. But it is doubtful yet
Whether Cæsar will come forth to-day or no;
For he is superstitious grown of late,
Quite from the main opinion he held once
Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies.
It may be, these apparent prodigies,
The unaccustom'd terror of this night,
And the persuasion of his augurers, 200
May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

Dec. Never fear that: if he be so resolv'd,

I can o'ersway him; for he loves to hear
That unicorns may be betray'd with trees,
And bears with glasses, elephants with holes,

Lions with toils, and men with flatterers;
But when I tell him he hates flatterers,
He says he does, being then most flattered.
Let me work;

For I can give his humour the true bent, 210
And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.

Bru. By the eighth hour: is that the uttermost?

Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.

Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hard,

Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey:
I wonder none of you have thought of him.

Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by him:

He loves me well, and I have given him reasons; 219

Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him.

Cas. The morning comes upon 's: we'll leave you, Brutus.

And, friends, disperse yourselves; but all remember

What you have said, and show yourselves true Romans.

Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily;

Let not our looks put on our purposes,
But bear it as our Roman actors do,

With untir'd spirits and formal constancy:
And so good morrow to you every one.

Exeunt all but BRUTUS.

Boy! Lucius! Fast asleep? It is no matter;
Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber: 230

Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies
Which busy care draws in the brains of men;

Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter PORTIA.

Por. Brutus, my lord!

Bru. Portia, what mean you? Wherefore rise you now?

It is not for your health thus to commit
Your weak condition to the raw cold morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. You've ungently, Brutus,

Stole from my bed; and yesternight at supper

You suddenly arose, and walk'd about, 239
Musing and sighing, with your arms across,

And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You star'd upon me with ungentle looks.

I urg'd you further; then you scratch'd your head,

And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot;
Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not,

But with an angry wafure of your hand,
Gave sign for me to leave you. So I did,

Fearing to strengthen that impatience
Which seem'd too much enkindled, and

withal

Hoping it was but an effect of humour, 250
Which sometime hath his hour with every man.

It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep,
And could it work so much upon your shape

As it hath much prevail'd on your condition,
I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord,

Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.

Por. Brutus is wise, and, were he not in health,

He would embrace the means to come by it.

Bru. Why, so I do. Good Portia, go to bed. 260

Por. Is Brutus sick, and is it physical
To walk unbraced and suck up the humours

Of the dank morning? What! is Brutus sick,

And will he steal out of his wholesome bed

To dare the vile contagion of the night,
And tempt the rheumy and unpurged air
To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus;
You have some sick offence within your
mind,

Which, by the right and virtue of my place,
I ought to know of; and, upon my knees, 270
I charm you, by my once-commended beauty,

By all your vows of love, and that great vow
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, your self, your half,
Why you are heavy, and what men to-night
Have had resort to you; for here have been

Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.

Bru. Kneel not, gentle Portia.

Por. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.

Within the bonds of marriage, tell me, Brutus, 283

Is it excepted I should know no secrets
That appertain to you? Am I yourself
But, as it were, in sort or limitation,
To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs

Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

Bru. You are my true and honourable
wife,

As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart. 290

Por. If this were true then should I know this secret.

I grant I am a woman, but withal
A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife;
I grant I am a woman, but withal
A woman well-reputed, Cato's daughter.
Think you I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so father'd and so husbanded?
Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose
'em.

I have made strong proof of my constancy,
Giving myself a voluntary wound 300
Here, in the thigh: can I bear that with patience,

And not my husband's secrets?

Bru. O ye gods!
Render me worthy of this noble wife.

Knocking within.
Hark, hark! one knocks. Portia, go in awhile;

And by and by thy bosom shall partake
The secrets of my heart.

All my engagements I will construe to thee,
All the charactery of my sad brows.
Leave me with haste. Exit PORTIA.

Lucius, who's that knocks?

Re-enter LUCIUS with LIGARIUS.

Luc. Here is a sick man that would speak
with you. 310

Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of.

Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius! how?

Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble
tongue.

Bru. O! what a time have you chose out,
brave Caius,

To wear a kerchief. Would you were not sick!

Lig. I am not sick if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of honour.

Bru. Such an exploit have I in hand, Ligarius,

Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow
before, 320

I here discard my sickness. Soul of Rome!
Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins!

Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up
My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,

And I will strive with things impossible;
Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.

Lig. But are not some whole that we must make sick?

Bru. That must we also. What it is, my Caius,

I shall unfold to thee as we are going 330
To whom it must be done.

Lig. Set on your foot,
And with a heart new-fir'd I follow you,

To do I know not what; but it sufficeth
That Brutus leads me on.

Bru. Follow me then. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same: CÆSAR'S House.

Thunder and lightning. Enter CÆSAR, in his night-gown.

Cæs. Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace to-night:

Thrice hath Calpurnia in her sleep cried out,
'Help, ho! they murder Cæsar!' Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord!

Cæs. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,

And bring me their opinions of success.

Serv. I will, my lord. Exit.

Enter CALPURNIA.

Cal. What mean you, Cæsar? Think you to walk forth?

You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

Cæs. Cæsar shall forth: the things that threaten'd me 10

Ne'er look'd but on my back; when they shall see

The face of Cæsar, they are vanished.

Cal. Cæsar, I never stood on ceremonies, Yet now they fright me. There is one within,

Besides the things that we have heard and
seen,

Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.

A lioness hath whelped in the streets;
And graves have yawn'd and yielded up their dead;

Fierce fiery warriors fought upon the clouds,
In ranks and squadrons and right form of
war, 20

Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol;
The noise of battle hurtled in the air,
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan,
And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.

O Cæsar! these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

Cæs. What can be avoided
Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods?
Yet Cæsar shall go forth; for these predictions

Are to the world in general as to Cæsar.

Cal. When beggars die there are no
comets seen; 30

The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

Cæs. Cowards die many times before their deaths;

The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should
fear;

Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come.

Re-enter Servant.

What say the augurers?
Serv. They would not have you to stir forth to-day.

Plucking the entrails of an offering forth, 39
They could not find a heart within the beast.

Cæs. The gods do this in shame of cowardice:

Cæsar should be a beast without a heart
If he should stay at home to-day for fear.
No, Cæsar shall not; Danger knows full well
That Cæsar is more dangerous than he:
We are two lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible;
And Cæsar shall go forth.

Cal. Alas! my lord.
Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence.
Do not go forth to-day: call it my fear 50
That keeps you in the house, and not your own.

We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-
house,

And he shall say you are not well to-day:
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.

Cæs. Mark Antony shall say I am not
well;

And, for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter DECIVS.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Dec. Cæsar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy Cæsar:

I come to fetch you to the senate-house.

Cæs. And you are come in very happy
time 61

To bear my greeting to the senators,
And tell them that I will not come to-day:
Cannot, is false, and that I dare not, false;
I will not come to-day: tell them so, Decius.

Cal. Say he is sick.

Cæs. Shall Cæsar send a lie?
Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far

To be afraid to tell greybeards the truth?
Decius, go tell them Cæsar will not come.

Dec. Most mighty Cæsar, let me know some cause,

Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so. 70
Cæs. The cause is in my will: I will not
come;

That is enough to satisfy the senate:
But for your private satisfaction,

Because I love you, I will let you know:
Calpurnia here, my wife, stays me at home:

She dream'd to-night she saw my statua,
Which, like a fountain with an hundred spouts,

Did run pure blood; and many lusty Romans

Came smiling, and did bathe their hands
in it.

And these does she apply for warnings and portents, 80

And evils imminent; and on her knee
Hath begg'd that I will stay at home to-day.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted;
It was a vision fair and fortunate:

Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,

Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck

Reviving blood, and that great men shall press

For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance.
This by Calpurnia's dream is signified. 90

Cæs. And this way have you well expounded it.

Dec. I have, when you have heard what
I can say:

And know it now: the senate have concluded

To give this day a crown to mighty Cæsar.
If you shall send them word you will not
come,

Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock

Apt to be render'd, for some one to say
'Break up the senate till another time,

When Cæsar's wife shall meet with better dreams.'

If Cæsar hide himself, shall they not whisper
'Lo! Cæsar is afraid?' 101

Pardon me, Cæsar: for my dear dear love
To your proceeding bids me tell you this,

And reason to my love is liable.
Cæs. How foolish do your fears seem now, Calpurnia!

I am ashamed I did yield to them.
Give me my robe, for I will go:

Enter PUBLIUS, BRUTUS, LIGARIUS, ME-TELLUS, CASCA, TREBONIUS, and CINNA.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me.
Pub. Good morrow, Cæsar.

Cæs. Welcome, Publius.

What! Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too?
Good morrow, Casca. Caius Ligarius, 111

Cæsar was ne'er so much your enemy
As that same ague which hath made you lean.

What is 't o'clock?

Br. Cæsar, 't is stricken eight.

Cæs. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter ANTONY.

See! Antony, that revels long o' nights,
Is notwithstanding up. Good morrow, Antony.

Ant. So to most noble Cæsar.

Cæs. Bid them prepare within:
I am to blame to be thus waited for.

Now, Cinna; now, Metellus; what, Trebonius! 120

I have an hour's talk in store for you;

Remember that you call on me to-day:

Be near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Cæsar, I will.—Aside. And so near will I be,

That your best friends shall wish I had been further.

Cæs. Good friends, go in, and taste some wine with me;

And we, like friends, will straightway go together.

Bru. Aside. That every like is not the same, O Cæsar!

The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street near the Capitol.

Enter ARTEMIDORUS, reading a paper.

Cæsar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Cæsar. If thou be'st not immortal, look about you: security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover, ARTEMIDORUS.

Here will I stand till Cæsar pass along, 11
And as a suitor will I give him this.

My heart laments that virtue cannot live
Out of the teeth of emulation.

If thou read this, O Cæsar! thou may'st live;

If not, the Fates with traitors do contrive. Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same. Another Part of the same Street, before the House of BRUTUS.

Enter PORTIA and LUCIUS.

Por. I prithee, boy, run to the senate-house;

Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone.
Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.

Por. I would have had thee there, and here again,

Ere I can tell thee what thou should'st do there.

O constancy! be strong upon my side;

Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and tongue;

I have a man's mind, but a woman's might.
How hard it is for women to keep counsel!
Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do?
Run to the Capitol, and nothing else? 11

And so return to you, and nothing else?

Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well,

For he went sickly forth; and take good note

What Cæsar doth, what suitors press to him.
Hark, boy! what noise is that?

Luc. I hear none, madam.

Por. Prithee, listen well;
I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray,

And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing. 20

Enter the Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither, fellow: which way hast thou been?

Sooth. At mine own house, good lady.

Por. What is 't o'clock?

Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.

Por. Is Cæsar yet gone to the Capitol?

Sooth. Madam, not yet: I go to take my stand.

To see him pass on to the Capitol.

Por. Thou hast some suit to Cæsar, hast thou not?

Sooth. That I have, lady: if it will please Cæsar

To be so good to Cæsar as to hear me,

I shall beseech him to befriend himself. 30

Por. Why, know'st thou any harm's intended towards him?

Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance.

Good morrow to you. Here the street is narrow:

The throng that follows Cæsar at the heels,
Of senators, of prætors, common suitors,

Will crowd a feeble man almost to death:

I'll get me to a place more void, and there
Speak to great Cæsar as he comes along. Exit.

Por. I must go in. Ay me! how weak a thing

The heart of woman is. O Brutus! 40

The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise.
Sure, the boy heard me: Brutus hath a suit

That Cæsar will not grant. O! I grow faint.
Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord;

Say I am merry: come to me again,
And bring me word what he doth say to thee.

Exeunt severally.

ACT III

SCENE I.—Rome. Before the Capitol; the Senate sitting above.

A crowd of People; among them ARTEMIDORUS and the Soothsayer. Flourish.

Enter CÆSAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIVS, METELLUS, TREBONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POPILIUS, PUBLIUS, and Others.

Cæs. To the Soothsayer. The ides of March are come.

Sooth. Ay, Cæsar; but not gone.
Art. Hail, Cæsar! Read this schedule.
Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read.

At your best leisure, this his humble suit.

Art. O Cæsar! read mine first; for mine's a suit

That touches Cæsar nearer. Read it, great Cæsar.

Cæs. What touches us ourself shall be last serv'd.

Art. Delay not, Cæsar; read it instantly.

Cæs. What! is the fellow mad?

Pub. Sirrah, give place.

Cæs. What! urge you your petitions in the street? 11

Come to the Capitol.

CÆSAR goes up to the Senate-House, the rest following. All the Senators rise.

Pop. I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive.

Cæs. What enterprise, Popilius?

Pop. Fare you well.

Advances to CÆSAR.

Bru. What said Popilius Lena?

Cæs. He wish'd to-day our enterprise might thrive.

I fear our purpose is discovered.

Bru. Look, how he makes to Cæsar: mark him.

Cæs. Casca, be sudden, for we fear prevention.

Brutus, what shall be done? If this be known, 20

Cassius or Cæsar never shall turn back,

For I will slay myself.

Bru. Cassius, be constant: Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes;

For, look, he smiles, and Cæsar doth not change.

Cæs. Trebonius knows his time; for, look you, Brutus,

He draws Mark Antony out of the way.

Exeunt ANTONY and TREBONIUS.

CÆSAR and the Senators take their seats.

Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him go,

And presently prefer his suit to Cæsar.

Bru. He is address'd; press near and second him.

Cin. Casca, you are the first that rears your hand.

Cæs. Are we all ready? What is now miss 30

That Cæsar and his senate must redress?

Met. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Cæsar,

Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat

An humble heart,— Kneeling.

Cæs. I must prevent thee, Cimber. These couchings and these lowly courtesies,

Might fire the blood of ordinary men,

And turn pre-ordinance and first decree

Into the law of children. Be not fond,

To think that Cæsar bears such rebel blood 40

That will be thaw'd from the true quality

With that which melteth fools; I mean sweet words,

Low-crook'd court'sies, and base spaniel fawning.

Thy brother by decree is banished:

If thou dost bend and pray and fawn for him,

I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.

Know, Cæsar doth not wrong, nor without cause

Will he be satisfied.

Met. Is there no voice more worthy than my own

To sound more sweetly in great Cæsar's ear 50

For the repealing of my banish'd brother?

Bru. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery Cæsar;

Desiring thee that Publius Cimber may Have an immediate freedom of repeal.

Cæs. What, Brutus!

Cæs. Pardon, Cæsar; Cæsar, pardon: As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,

To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.

Cæs. I could be well mov'd if I were as you:

If I could pray to move, prayers would move me;

But I am constant as the northern star, 60

Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality

There is no follow in the firmament.

The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks,

They are all fire and every one doth shine, But there's but one in all doth hold his place:

So in the world; 'tis furnish'd well with men,

And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive;

Yet in the number I do know but one That unassailable holds on his rank,

Unshak'd of motion: and that I am he, 70

Let me a little show it, even in this, That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd,

And constant do remain to keep him so.

Cin. O Cæsar,—

Cæs. Hence! Wilt thou lift up Olympus?

Dec. Great Cæsar,—

Cæs. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel? Casca. Speak, hands, for me!

They stab CÆSAR.

Cæs. Et tu, Brute! Then fall, Cæsar! Dies.

Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!

Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.

Cæs. Some to the common pulpits, and cry out 80

'Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!'

Bru. People and senators, be not affrighted;

Fly not; stand still; ambition's debt is paid. Casca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

Dec. And Cassius too.

Bru. Where's Publius?

Cin. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.

Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cæsar's
Should chance—

Bru. Talk not of standing. Publius, good cheer;

There is no harm intended to your person, 90
Nor to no Roman else; so tell them, Pub-lius.

Cas. And leave us, Publius; lest that the people,
Rushing on us, should do your age some mischief.

Bru. Do so; and let no man abide this deed
But we the doers.

Re-enter TREBONIUS.

Cas. Where's Antony?

Tre. Fled to his house amaz'd.
Men, wives and children stare, cry out and run
As it were doomsday.

Bru. Fates, we will know your pleasures.
That we shall die, we know; 'tis but the
time

And drawing days out, that men stand upon.
Cas. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life 101

Cuts off so many years of fearing death.
Bru. Grant that, and then is death a benefit:

So are we Cæsar's friends, that have abridg'd
His time of fearing death. Stoop, Romans, stoop,

And let us bathe our hands in Cæsar's blood
Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords:
Then walk we forth, even to the market-
place;

And, waving our red weapons o'er our heads,
Let's all cry 'Peace, freedom, and liberty!'

Cas. Stoop then, and wash. How many ages hence 111

Shall this our lofty scene be acted over,
In states unborn and accents yet unknown!

Bru. How many times shall Cæsar bleed
in sport,

That now on Pompey's basis lies along
No worthier than the dust!

Cas. So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of us be call'd

The men that gave their country liberty.
Dec. What! shall we forth?

Cas. Ay, every man away:
Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels 123

With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Bru. Soft! who comes here? A friend of Antony's.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me
kneel;

Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down;
And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say:
Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;
Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving:
Say I love Brutus, and I honour him;

Say I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him, and lov'd
him.

If Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony 130
May safely come to him, and be resolv'd

How Cæsar hath deserv'd to lie in death,
Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead

So well as Brutus living; but will follow
The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus

Thorough the hazards of this untrod state,
With all true faith. So says my master

Antony.
Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman;

I never thought him worse.
Tell him, so please him come unto this
place, 140

He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour,
Depart untouch'd.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently. Exit.
Bru. I know that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas. I wish we may: but yet have I a
mind

That fears him much; and my misgiving
still

Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Bru. But here comes Antony. Welcome,
Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lie so low?

Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs,
spoils,

Shrunk to this little measure? Fare thee
well. 150

I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank:

If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Cæsar's death's hour, nor no instrument

Of half that worth as those your swords, made rich

With the most noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,

Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,

Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,

I shall not find myself so apt to die: 160
No place will please me so, no mean of
death,

As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off,
The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us.
Though now we must appear bloody and
cruel,

As, by our hands and this our present act,
You see we do, yet see you but our hands

And this the bleeding business they have done:

Our hearts you see not; they are pitiful;
And pity to the general wrong of Rome, 170

As fire drives out fire, so pity pity, Hath done this deed on Cæsar. For your
part,

To you our swords have leaden points,
Mark Antony:

Our arms, in strength of malice, and our hearts
Of brothers' temper, do receive you in
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's
In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient till we have appeas'd
The multitude, beside themselves with fear,
And then we will deliver you the cause. 181
Why I, that did love Cæsar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom.
Let each man render me his bloody hand:
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you;
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;
Now, Decius Brutus, yours; now yours,
Metellus;

Yours, Cinna; and, my valiant Casca,
yours;
Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebolius.

Gentlemen all,—alas! what shall I say? 190
My credit now stands on such slippery
ground,

That one of two bad ways you must conceit
me,
Either a coward or a flatterer.

That I did love thee, Cæsar, O! 't is true:
If then thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy
death,

To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy corse?
Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds, 200 Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy
blood,

It would become me better than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me, Julius! Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart;

Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters
stand,

Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy lethe.

O world! thou wast the forest to this hart;
And this, indeed, O world! the heart of thee.
How like a deer, stricken by many princes,
Dost thou here lie! 210

Cas. Mark Antony,—
Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius:

The enemies of Cæsar shall say this;
Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.

Cas. I blame you not for praising Cæsar
so;

But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prick'd in number of our friends,
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I took your hands, but was indeed

Sway'd from the point by looking down on
Cæsar.

Friends am I with you all, and love you all,
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons 221

Why and wherein Cæsar was dangerous.

Bru. Or else were this a savage spectacle.
Our reasons are so full of good regard
That were you, Antony, the son of Cæsar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seek:
And am moreover suitor that I may Produce his body to the market-place;
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral. 233

Bru. You shall, Mark Antony.
Cas. Brutus, a word with you.
Aside to BRUTUS. You know not what you do; do not consent

That Antony speak in his funeral:
Know you how much the people may be mov'd

By that which he will utter?
Bru. By your pardon:

I will myself into the pulpit first,
And show the reason of our Cæsar's death:
What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave and by permission,
And that we are contented Cæsar shall 240
Have all true rites and lawful ceremonies.
It shall advantage more than do us wrong.

Cas. I know not what may fall; I like it
not.

Bru. Mark Antony, here, take you Cæsar's
body.

You shall not in your funeral speech blame
us,

But speak all good you can devise of Cæsar,
And say you do 't by our permission;
Else shall you not have any hand at all
About his funeral; and you shall speak
In the same pulpit whereto I am going, 250
After my speech is ended.

Ant. Be it so;
I do desire no more.

Bru. Prepare the body then, and follow us. Exeunt all but ANTONY.

Ant. O! pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth,

That I am meek and gentle with these butchers;

Thou art the ruins of the noblest man
That ever lived in the tide of times.

Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood!
Over thy wounds now do I prophesy,

Which like dumb mouths do ope their ruby
lips, 260

To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue,

A curse shall light upon the limbs of men;
Domestic fury and fierce civil strife

Shall cumber all the parts of Italy;
Blood and destruction shall be so in use,

And dreadful objects so familiar,
That mothers shall but smile when they behold

Their infants quarter'd with the hands of
war;

All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds:
And Cæsar's spirit, ranging for revenge, 270

With Ate by his side come hot from hell, Shall in these confines with a monarch's
voice

Cry 'Havoc!' and let slip the dogs of
war;

That this foul deed shall smell above the
earth

With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.

You serve Octavius Cæsar, do you not?

Serv. I do Mark Antony.

Ant. Cæsar did write for him to come to Rome.

Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming; 280

And bid me say to you by word of mouth—
O Cæsar!— Seeing the body.

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep.

Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes,
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Is thy master coming?

Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.

Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chanc'd;

Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,

No Rome of safety for Octavius yet; 289
Hie hence and tell him so. Yet stay awhile;
Thou shalt not back till I have borne this corpse

Into the market-place; there shall I try,
In my oration, how the people take

The cruel issue of these bloody men;
According to the which thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things.

Lend me your hand.

Exeunt, with CÆSAR'S body.

SCENE II.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS, and a throng of Citizens.

Citizens. We will be satisfied: let us be satisfied.

Bru. Then follow me, and give me audience, friends.

Cassius, go you into the other street,
And part the numbers.

Those that will hear me speak, let 'em stay here:

Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;
And public reasons shall be rendered

Of Cæsar's death.

First Cit. I will hear Brutus speak.

Second Cit. I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons,

When severally we hear them rendered. 10
Exit CASSIUS, with some of the Citizens.

BRUTUS goes into the pulpit.

Third Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended: silence!

Bru. Be patient till the last.

Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear: believe me for mine honour, and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe: censure me in your wisdom, and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cæsar's, to him I say that Brutus' love to Cæsar was no less than his.

if then that friend demand why Brutus rose against Cæsar, this is my answer: Not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all slaves, than that Cæsar were dead, to live all free men? As Cæsar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it: as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears for his love; joy for his fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition. Who is here so base, that would be a bondman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile, that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply. 37

Citizens. None, Brutus, none.

Bru. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Cæsar than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy, nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death. 44

Enter ANTONY and Others, with CÆSAR'S body.

Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony, who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; as which of you shall not? With this I depart; that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death. 52

Citizens. Live, Brutus! live! live!

First Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

Second Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors.

Third Cit. Let him be Cæsar.

Fourth Cit. Cæsar's better parts shall now be crown'd in Brutus.

First Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Bru. My countrymen,—

Second Cit. Peace! silence! Brutus speaks.

First Cit. Peace, ho!

Bru. Good countrymen, let me depart alone, 60

And, for my sake, stay here with Antony. Do grace to Cæsar's corpse, and grace his speech

Tending to Cæsar's glories, which Mark Antony,

By our permission, is allow'd to make. I do entreat you, not a man depart.

Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. Exit.

First Cit. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony.

Third Cit. Let him go up into the public chair;

We'll hear him. Noble Antony, go up.
Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am beholding to you. 70

Fourth Cit. What does he say of Brutus?
Third Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake,
 He finds himself beholding to us all.

Fourth Cit. 'T were best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

First Cit. This Cæsar was a tyrant.

Third Cit. Nay, that's certain:
 We are bless'd that Rome is rid of him.

Second Cit. Peace! let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans,—

Citizens. Peace, ho! let us hear him.

Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;

I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him.

The evil that men do lives after them, 80

The good is oft interred with their bones;

So let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus

Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious;

If it were so, it was a grievous fault,

And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it.

Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest,

For Brutus is an honourable man;

So are they all, all honourable men;

Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral.

He was my friend, faithful and just to me:

But Brutus says he was ambitious; 91

And Brutus is an honourable man.

He hath brought many captives home to
 Rome,

Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill:
 Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious?

When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept;

Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:

Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;

And Brutus is an honourable man.

You all did see that on the Lupercal 100

I thrice presented him a kingly crown,

Which he did thrice refuse: was this ambition?

Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;

And, sure, he is an honourable man.

I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
 But here I am to speak what I do know.

You all did love him once, not without
 cause:

What cause withholds you then to mourn for
 him?

O judgment! thou art fled to brutish beasts,
 And men have lost their reason. Bear with
 me; 110

My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar,

And I must pause till it come back to me.

First Cit. Methinks there is much reason in his sayings.

Second Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter,

Cæsar has had great wrong.

Third Cit. Has he, masters?

I fear there will a worse come in his place.

Fourth Cit. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown;

Therefore, 'tis certain, he was not ambitious.

First Cit. If it be found so, some will dear abide it.

Second Cit. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping. 120

Third Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.

Fourth Cit. Now mark him; he begins again to speak.

Ant. But yesterday the word of Cæsar might

Have stood against the world; now lies he
 there,

And none so poor to do him reverence.

O masters! if I were dispos'd to stir

Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,

I should do Brutus wrong and Cassius
 wrong,

Who, you all know, are honourable men. 125

I will not do them wrong; I rather choose To wrong the dead, to wrong myself, and

you,

Than I will wrong such honourable men.

But here's a parchment with the seal of
 Cæsar;

I found it in his closet, 't is his will.

Let but the commons hear this testament,

Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read,

And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's
 wounds,

And dip their napkins in his sacred blood,

Yea, beg a hair of him for memory,

And, dying, mention it within their wills, 140

Bequeathing it as a rich legacy
 Unto their issue.

Fourth Cit. We'll hear the will: read it,
 Mark Antony.

Citizens. The will, the will! we will hear Cæsar's will.

Ant. Have patience, gentle friends; I must not read it:

It is not meet you know how Cæsar lov'd
 you.

You are not wood, you are not stones, but
 men;

And, being men, hearing the will of Cæsar,
 It will inflame you, it will make you mad.

'T is good you know not that you are his heirs; 150

For if you should, O! what would come of it.

Fourth Cit. Read the will! we'll hear it,
 Antony:

You shall read us the will, Cæsar's will.

Ant. Will you be patient? will you stay awhile?

I have o'er-shot myself to tell you of it.

I fear I wrong the honourable men

Whose daggers have stabb'd Cæsar; I do fear it.

Fourth Cit. They were traitors: honourable men!

Citizens. The will! the testament!

Second Cit. They were villains, murderers.

The will! read the will! 160

Ant. You will compel me then to read the
 will?

Then make a ring about the corpse of
 Cæsar,

And let me show you him that made the will.
 Shall I descend? and will you give me leave?

Citizens. Come down.

Second Cit. Descend.

ANTONY comes down.

Third Cit. You shall have leave.

Fourth Cit. A ring; stand round.

First Cit. Stand from the hearse; stand from the body. 170

Second Cit. Room for Antony; most noble Antony.

Ant. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far off.

Citizens. Stand back! room! bear back!

Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.

You all do know this mantle; I remember
The first time ever Cæsar put it on;
'T was on a summer's evening, in his tent,
That day he overcame the Nervii.
Look! in this place ran Cassius' dagger
through:

See what a rent the envious Casca made;
Through this the well-beloved Brutus
stab'd; 180

And as he pluck'd his cursed steel away
Mark how the blood of Cæsar follow'd it,
As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd
If Brutus so unkindly knock'd or no;
For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's
angel;

Judge, O you gods! how dearly Cæsar
lov'd him.

This was the most unkindest cut of all;
For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab,
Ingratitude more strong than traitor's arms, Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his mighty heart; 190

And, in his mantle muffling up his face,
Even at the base of Pompey's statua,
Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell.

O! what a fall was there, my countrymen;
Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,
Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us.
O! now you weep, and I perceive you feel
The dint of pity; these are gracious drops.
Kind souls, what! weep you when you but
behold

Our Cæsar's vesture wounded? Look you
here, 200

Here is himself, marr'd, as you see, with traitors.

First Cit. O piteous spectacle!

Second Cit. O noble Cæsar!

Third Cit. O woeful day!

Fourth Cit. O traitors! villains!

First Cit. O most bloody sight!

Second Cit. We will be revenged.

Citizens. Revenge!—About!—Seek!— Burn!—Fire!—Kill!—Slay!—Let not a traitor
live.

Ant. Stay, countrymen. 210

First Cit. Peace there! Hear the noble
Antony.

Second Cit. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him.

Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up

To such a sudden flood of mutiny.
They that have done this deed are honourable:

What private griefs they have, alas! I know
not,

That made them do it; they are wise and honourable,

And will, no doubt, with reasons answer
you.

I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts: 220

I am no orator, as Brutus is;
But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man,
That love my friend; and that they know full well

That gave me public leave to speak of him.
For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth, Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech

To stir men's blood: I only speak right on;
I tell you that which you yourselves do
know,

Show you sweet Cæsar's wounds, poor poor
dumb mouths,

And bid them speak for me: but were I
Brutus, 230

And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a
tongue

In every wound of Cæsar, that should move
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

Citizens. We'll mutiny.

First Cit. We'll burn the house of Brutus.

Third Cit. Away then! come, seek the conspirators.

Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear me speak.

Citizens. Peace, ho!—Hear Antony—
Most noble Antony.

Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know
not what. 240

Wherein hath Cæsar thus deserv'd your loves?

Alas! you know not: I must tell you then.
You have forgot the will I told you of.

Citizens. Most true. The will! Let's stay and hear the will.

Ant. Here is the will, and under Cæsar's seal.

To every Roman citizen he gives,

To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.

Second Cit. Most noble Cæsar! We'll revenge his death.

Third Cit. O royal Cæsar!

Ant. Hear me with patience. 250

Citizens. Peace, ho!

Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks,

His private arbours, and new-planted
orchards,

On this side Tiber; he hath left them you,
And to your heirs for ever; common pleasures,

To walk abroad, and recreate yourselves.
Here was a Cæsar! when comes such another?

First Cit. Never, never! Come, away,
away!

We'll burn his body in the holy place,
And with the brands fire the traitors' houses. 260

Take up the body.

Second Cit. Go, fetch fire.

Third Cit. Pluck down benches.

Fourth Cit. Pluck down forms, windows, any thing.

Exeunt Citizens, with the body.

Ant. Now let it work. Mischief, thou art afoot,

Take thou what course thou wilt!

Enter a Servant.

How now, fellow!

Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant. Where is he?

Serv. He and Lepidus are at Cæsar's house.

Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him. 270

He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry, And in this mood will give us any thing.

Serv. I heard him say Brutus and Cassius Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.

Ant. Belike they had some notice of the people,

How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street

Enter CINNA, the Poet.

Cin. I dreamt to-night that I did feast with Cæsar,

And things unlucky charge my fantasy: I have no will to wander forth of doors, Yet something leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.

First Cit. What is your name?

Second Cit. Whither are you going?

Third Cit. Where do you dwell?

Fourth Cit. Are you a married man or a bachelor?

Second Cit. Answer every man directly. 10

First Cit. Ay, and briefly.

Fourth Cit. Ay, and wisely.

Third Cit. Ay, and truly, you were best.

Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man or a bachelor? Then, to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly; wisely I say, I am a bachelor.

Second Cit. That's as much as to say they are fools that marry; you'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed; directly. 21

Cin. Directly, I am going to Cæsar's funeral.

First Cit. As a friend or an enemy?

Cin. As a friend.

Second Cit. That matter is answered directly.

Fourth Cit. For your dwelling, briefly.

Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.

Third Cit. Your name, sir, truly.

Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna.

First Cit. Tear him to pieces; he's a conspirator. 31

Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.

Fourth Cit. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.

Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator.

Second Cit. It is no matter, his name's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going. 39

Third Cit. Tear him, tear him! Come, brands, ho! firebrands! To Brutus, to Cassius; burn all. Some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius'. Away! go! Exeunt.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Rome. A Room in ANTONY'S House.

ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, and LEPIDUS, seated at a table.

Ant. These many then shall die; their names are prick'd.

Oct. Your brother too must die; consent you, Lepidus?

Lep. I do consent.

Oct. Prick him down, Antony.

Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live,

Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony.

Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.

But, Lepidus, go you to Cæsar's house; Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine

How to cut off some charge in legacies.

Lep. What! shall I find you here? 10

Oct. Or here or at the Capitol.

Exit LEPIDUS.

Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man, Meet to be sent on errands; is it fit, The three-fold world divided, he should stand

One of the three to share it?

Oct. So you thought him; And took his voice who should be prick'd to die,

In our black sentence and proscription.

Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than you:

And though we lay these honours on this man,

To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads, 20

He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,

To groan and sweat under the business, Either led or driven, as we point the way;

And having brought our treasure where we will,

Then take we down his load, and turn him off,

Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears, And graze in commons.

Oct. You may do your will; But he's a tried and valiant soldier.

Ant. So is my horse, Octavius: and for that I do appoint him store of provender. 30

It is a creature that I teach to fight, To wind, to stop, to run directly on,

His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit.

And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so;
He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth;

A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds
On objects, arts, and imitations,
Which, out of use and stal'd by other men,
Begin his fashion: do not talk of him
But as a property. And now, Octavius, 40
Listen great things: Brutus and Cassius Are levying powers; we must straight make
head;

Therefore let our alliance be combin'd,
Our best friends made, and our best means stretch'd out;

And let us presently go sit in council,
How covert matters may be best disclos'd,
And open perils surest answered.

Oct. Let us do so; for we are at the stake,
And bay'd about with many enemies;
And some that smile have in their hearts,
I fear, 50
Millions of mischiefs. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Camp near Sardis. Before BRUTUS'S Tent.

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, LUCILIUS, LUCIUS, and Soldiers; TITINIUS and PINDARUS meet them.

Bru. Stand, ho!

Lucil. Give the word, ho! and stand.

Bru. What now, Lucilius! is Cassius
near?

Lucil. He is at hand; and Pindarus is
come

To do you salutation from his master.

Bru. He greets me well. Your master
Pindarus,

In his own change, or by ill officers,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done undone; but, if he be at hand,
I shall be satisfied.

Pin. I do not doubt 10

But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard and honour.

Bru. He is not doubted. A word, Lucilius;

How he receiv'd you, let me be resolv'd.

Lucil. With courtesy and with respect enough;

But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly conference,
As he hath us'd of old.

Bru. Thou hast describ'd

A hot friend cooling. Ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sicken and decay, 20
It useth an enforced ceremony.

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith;

But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their
mettle;

But when they should endure the bloody spur,

They fall their crests, and, like deceitful
jades,

Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

Lucil. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd;

The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius. Low march within.

Bru. Hark! he is arriv'd.

March gently on to meet him. 31

Enter CASSIUS and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho!

Bru. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.

First Sold. Stand!

Second Sold. Stand!

Third Sold. Stand!

Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.

Bru. Judge me, you gods! wrong I mine enemies?

And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs; 40

And when you do them—

Bru. Cassius, be content;

Speak your griefs softly: I do know you
well.

Before the eyes of both our armies here,
Which should perceive nothing but love
from us,

Let us not wrangle: bid them move away;
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your
griefs,

And I will give you audience.

Cas.

Pindarus,

Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground.

Bru. Lucilius, do you the like; and let no
man 50

Come to our tent till we have done our conference.

Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Within the Tent of BRUTUS.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this:

You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Bru. You wrong'd yourself to write in such a case.

Cas. In such a time as this it is not meet That every nice offence should bear his comment.

Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself

Are much condemned to have an itching palm; 10

To sell and mart your offices for gold

To undeservers.

Cas. I an itching palm!

You know that you are Brutus that speak
this,

Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last.

Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption,

And chastisement doth therefore hide his
head.

Cas. Chastisement!

Bru. Remember March, the ides of March remember:

Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake?
What villain touch'd his body, that did stab, 20

And not for justice? What! shall one of us,
That struck the foremost man of all this world

But for supporting robbers, shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes,
And sell the mighty space of our large honours

For so much trash as may be grasped thus?
I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Cas. Brutus, bay not me;
I'll not endure it: you forget yourself,
To hedge me in. I am a soldier, I, 30
Older in practice, abler than yourself
To make conditions.

Bru. Go to; you are not, Cassius.
Cas. I am.

Bru. I say you are not.

Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself;

Have mind upon your health; tempt me no further.

Bru. Away, slight man!

Cas. Is't possible?

Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.
Must I give way and room to your rash choler?

Shall I be frighted when a madman stares?

Cas. O ye gods! ye gods! Must I endure all this? 41

Bru. All this! ay, more: fret till your proud heart break;

Go show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge?

Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch

Under your testy humour? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you; for from this day forth

I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,

When you are waspish.

Cas. Is it come to this?

Bru. You say you are a better soldier: 51
Let it appear so: make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well. For mine own part,

I shall be glad to learn of noble men.

Cas. You wrong me every way: you wrong me, Brutus;

I said, an elder soldier, not a better:

Did I say 'better'?

Bru. If you did, I care not.

Cas. When Cæsar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd me.

Bru. Peace, peace! you durst not so have tempted him.

Cas. I durst not!

Bru. No.

Cas. What! durst not tempt him!

Bru. For your life you durst not.

Cas. Do not presume too much upon my love;

I may do that I shall be sorry for.

Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for.

There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats,
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty
That they pass by me as the idle wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you denied me; 70

For I can raise no money by vile means:
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring

From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash

By any indirection. I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions,
Which you denied me: was that done like Cassius?

Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,

To lock such rascal counters from his friends, 80

Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts;
Dash him to pieces!

Cas. I denied you not.

Bru. You did.

Cas. I did not; he was but a fool
That brought my answer back. Brutus hath riv'd my heart:

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your faults.

Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults. 90

Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do appear

As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius, come,

Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is weary of the world;

Hated by one he loves; brav'd by his brother;

Check'd like a bondman; all his faults observ'd,

Set in a note-book, learn'd, and conn'd by rote,

To cast into my teeth. O! I could weep
My spirit from mine eyes. There is my dagger, 100

And here my naked breast; within, a heart
Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold:

If that thou be'st a Roman, take it forth;
I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart:

Strike, as thou didst at Cæsar; for, I know,
When thou didst hate him worst, thou

lov'dst him better

Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius.

Bru. Sheathe your dagger:

Be angry when you will, it shall have scope;
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.

O Cassius! you are yoked with a lamb 110

That carries anger as the flint bears fire,
Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd
To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
When grief and blood ill-temper'd vexeth
him?

Bru. When I spoke that I was ill-temper'd too.

Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me
your hand.

Bru. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus!

Bru. What's the matter?

Cas. Have you not love enough to bear
with me,
When that rash humour which my mother gave me

Makes me forgetful?

Bru. Yes, Cassius; and from henceforth
When you are over-earnest with your Brutus,

He'll think your mother chides, and leave
you so.

Poet. Within. Let me go in to see the generals;

There is some grudge between em, 't is not meet

They be alone.

Lucil. Within. You shall not come to
them.

Poet. Within. Nothing but death shall stay me.

Enter Poet, followed by LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, and LUCIUS.

Cas. How now! What's the matter?

Poet. For shame, you generals! What do you mean?

Love, and be friends, as two such men
should be;

For I have seen more years, I'm sure, than
ye.

Cas. Ha, ha! how vilely doth this cynic
rime!

Bru. Get you hence, sirrah; saucy fellow,
hence!

Cas. Bear with him, Brutus; 'tis his fashion.

Bru. I'll know his humour, when he knows his time;

What should the wars do with these jiggling
fools?

Companion, hence!

Cas. Away, away! be gone. Exit Poet.

Bru. Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders

Prepare to lodge their companies to-night.

Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Messala with you

Immediately to us.

Exeunt LUCILIUS and TITINIUS.

Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine.

Exit LUCIUS.
Cas. I did not think you could have been so angry.

Bru. O Cassius! I am sick of many griefs.

Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use
If you give place to accidental evils.

Bru. No man bears sorrow better: Portia is dead.

Cas. Ha! Portia!

Bru. She is dead.

Cas. How 'scap'd I killing when I cross'd
you so?

O insupportable and touching loss!

Upon what sickness?

Bru. Impatient of my absence,
And grief that young Octavius with Mark

Antony

Have made themselves so strong; for with her death

That tidings came; with this she fell distract,

And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.

Cas. And died so?

Bru. Even so.

Cas. O ye immortal gods!

Re-enter LUCIUS, with wine and tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her. Give me a bowl of wine:

In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius.

Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge.

Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup;
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love.

Bru. Come in, Titinius. Exit LUCIUS.

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Welcome, good Messala.
Now sit we close about this taper here,

And call in question our necessities.

Cas. Portia, art thou gone?

Bru. No more, I pray you.
Messala, I have here received letters,

That young Octavius and Mark Antony
Come down upon us with a mighty power,

Bending their expedition toward Philippi.

Mes. Myself have letters of the self-same tenour.

Bru. With what addition?

Mes. That by proscription and bills of outlawry,

Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus

Have put to death an hundred senators.

Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree;
Mine speak of seventy senators that died

By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cas. Cicero one!

Mes. Cicero is dead,
And by that order of proscription.

Bru. No, Messala.
Mes. Nor nothing in your letters writ of
her?

Bru. Nothing, Messala.

Mes. That, methinks, is strange.
Bru. Why ask you? Hear you aught of her in yours?

Mes. No, my lord.

Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me
true.

Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth
I tell:

For certain she is dead, and by strange manner,

Bru. Why, farewell, Portia. We must die, Messala: 190

With meditating that she must die once, I have the patience to endure it now.

Mess. Even so great men great losses should endure.

Cas. I have as much of this in art as you. But yet my nature could not bear it so.

Bru. Well, to our work alive. What do you think

Of marching to Philippi presently?

Cas. I do not think it good.

Bru. Your reason? This it is:

'T is better that the enemy seek us: So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers, 200

Doing himself offence; whilst we, lying still, Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.

Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.

The people 'twixt Philippi and this ground Do stand but in a forc'd affection;

For they have grudg'd us contribution:

The enemy, marching along by them, By them shall make a fuller number up,

Come on refresh'd, new-added, and encouraged;

From which advantage shall we cut him off, If at Philippi we do face him there, 211

These people at our back.

Cas. Hear me, good brother. Bru. Under your pardon. You must note beside,

That we have tried the utmost of our friends, Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:

The enemy increaseth every day;

We, at the height, are ready to decline.

There is a tide in the affairs of men,

Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;

Omitted, all the voyage of their life 220

Is bound in shallows and in miseries.

On such a full sea are we now afloat;

And we must take the current when it serves,

Or lose our ventures.

Cas. Then, with your will, go on;

We'll along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi.

Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our talk,

And nature must obey necessity,

Which we will niggard with a little rest.

There is no more to say?

Cas. No more. Good night:

Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence. 230

Bru. Lucius! Re-enter LUCIUS.

My gown. Exit LUCIUS.

Farewell, good Messala:

Good night, Titinius. Noble, noble Cassius,

Good night, and good repose.

Cas. O my dear brother!

This was an ill beginning of the night:

Never come such division 'tween our souls!

Let it not, Brutus.

Bru. Every thing is well.

Cas. Good night, my lord.

Bru. Good night, good brother.

Tit., Mes. Good night, Lord Brutus.

Bru. Farewell, every one.

Exeunt CASSIUS, TITINIUS, and MESSALA.

Re-enter LUCIUS, with the gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.

Bru. What! thou speak'st drowsily?

Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'erwatch'd. 241

Call Claudius and some other of my men;

I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro! and Claudius!

Enter VARRO and CLAUDIUS.

Var. Calls my lord?

Bru. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent and sleep:

It may be I shall raise you by and by

On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you, we will stand and watch your pleasure.

Bru. I will not have it so; lie down, good sirs; 250

It may be I shall otherwise bethink me.

Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so;

I put it in the pocket of my gown.

VARRO and CLAUDIUS lie down.

Luc. I was sure your lordship did not give it me.

Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful.

Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile, And touch thy instrument a strain or two?

Luc. Ay, my lord, an't please you.

Bru. It does, my boy.

I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty, sir. 260

Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might;

I know young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.

Bru. It was well done, and thou shalt sleep again;

I will not hold thee long: if I do live,

I will be good to thee. Music, and a Song.

This is a sleepy tune: O murderous slumber!

Lay'st thou thy leaden mace upon my boy,

That plays thee music? Gentle knave,

good night;

I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee. 270

If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument;

I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good night.

Let me see, let me see; is not the leaf turn'd down

Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

Enter the Ghost of CÆSAR.

How ill this taper burns! Ha! who comes here?

I think it is the weakness of mine eyes

That shapes this monstrous apparition.

It comes upon me. Art thou any thing?
Art thou some god, some angel, or some
devil,

That mak'st my blood cold and my hair to stare? 280

Speak to me what thou art.

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Bru. Why com'st thou?

Ghost. To tell thee thou shalt see me at Philippi.

Bru. Well; then I shall see thee again?

Ghost. Ay, at Philippi.

Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi then.

Ghost vanishes.

Now I have taken heart thou vanishest:
Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.
Boy! Lucius! Varro! Claudius! Sirs, awake!
Claudius! 291

Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.

Bru. He thinks he still is at his instrument.

Lucius, awake!

Luc. My lord!

Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criedst out?

Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.

Bru. Yes, that thou didst. Didst thou see any thing?

Luc. Nothing, my lord.

Bru. Sleep again, Lucius. Sirrah, Claudius! 300

To VARRO. Fellow thou! awake!

Var. My lord!

Clau. My lord!

Bru. Why did you so cry out, sirs, in your sleep?

Var., Clau. Did we, my lord?

Bru. Ay: saw you any thing?

Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.

Clau. Nor I, my lord.

Bru. Go and commend me to my brother
Cassius;

Bid him set on his powers betimes before,

And we will follow.

Var., Clau. It shall be done, my lord.
Exeunt.

ACT V

SCENE I.—The Plains of Philippi.

Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered:

You said the enemy would not come down,
But keep the hills and upper regions;
It proves not so; their battles are at hand;
They mean to warn us at Philippi here,
Answering before we do demand of them.

Ant. Tut! I am in their bosoms, and I
know

Wherefore they do it: they could be content
To visit other places; and come down 9
With fearful bravery, thinking by this face
To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage;

But 't is not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess.

Prepare you, generals:

The enemy comes on in gallant show;

Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,

And something to be done immediately.

Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on,

Upon the left hand of the even field.

Oct. Upon the right hand I; keep thou the left.

Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?

Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so. March. 20

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and their Army; LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, MESSALA, and Others.

Bru. They stand, and would have parley.

Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: we must out and talk.

Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?

Ant. No, Cæsar, we will answer on their charge.

Make forth; the generals would have some words.

Oct. Stir not until the signal.

Bru. Words before blows: is it so, countrymen?

Oct. Not that we love words better, as you do.

Bru. Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.

Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words: 30

Witness the hole you made in Cæsar's heart,
'Crying 'Long live! hail, Cæsar!'

Cas. Antony,

The posture of your blows are yet unknown:
But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,

And leave them honeyless.

Ant. Not stingless too.

Bru. O! yes, and soundless too;

For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,

And very wisely threat before you sting.

Ant. Villains! you did not so when your vile daggers

Hack'd one another in the sides of Cæsar: 40
You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd
like hounds,

And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Cæsar's
feet;

Whilst damned Casca, like a cur, behind,
Struck Cæsar on the neck. O you flatterers!

Cas. Flatterers! Now, Brutus, thank yourself;

This tongue had not offended so to-day,
If Cassius might have rul'd.

Oct. Come, come, the cause: if arguing make us sweat,

The proof of it will turn to redder drops.
Look; 50

I draw a sword against conspirators;
When think you that the sword goes up
again?

Never, till Cæsar's three-and-thirty wounds
Be well aveng'd; or till another Cæsar

Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors.

Bru. Cæsar, thou canst not die by traitors' hands,

Unless thou bring'st them with thee.

Oct. So I hope; I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

Bru. O! if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,

Young man, thou could'st not die more honourable.

Cas. A peevish school-boy, worthless of such honour,

Join'd with a masker and a reveller.

Ant. Old Cassius still!

Oct. Come, Antony; away! Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth.

If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;

If not, when you have stomachs.

Exeunt OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.

Cas. Why now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!

The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.

Bru. Ho!

Lucilius, hark, a word with you.

Lucil. My lord! BRUTUS and LUCILIUS talk apart.

Cas. Messala!

Mes. What says my general? 70

Cas. Messala, This is my birth-day; as this very day

Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala:

Be thou my witness that against my will,

As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set

Upon one battle all our liberties.

You know that I held Epicurus strong,

And his opinion; now I change my mind,

And partly credit things that do presage.

Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign 80

Two mighty eagles fell, and there they perch'd,

Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands;

Who to Philippi here consorted us:

This morning are they fled away and gone,

And in their steads do ravens, crows, and kites

Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,

As we were sickly prey: their shadows seem

A canopy most fatal, under which

Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.

Mes. Believe not so.

Cas. I but believe it partly, For I am fresh of spirit and resolv'd 91

To meet all perils very constantly.

Bru. Even so, Lucilius.

Cas. Now, most noble Brutus, The gods to-day stand friendly, that we may,

Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!

But since the affairs of men rest still uncertain,

Let's reason with the worst that may befall. If we do lose this battle, then is this

The very last time we shall speak together: What are you then determined to do? 100

Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy By which I did blame Cato for the death

Which he did give himself; I know not how, But I do find it cowardly and vile,

For fear of what might fall, so to prevent

The time of life: arming myself with patience,

To stay the providence of some high powers That govern us below.

Cas. Then, if we lose this battle, You are contented to be led in triumph

Thorough the streets of Rome? 110

Bru. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou noble Roman,

That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome; He bears too great a mind: but this same day Must end that work the ides of March begun;

And whether we shall meet again I know not.

Therefore our everlasting farewell take: For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius!

If we do meet again, why, we shall smile; If not, why then, this parting was well made.

Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus! 120

If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed; If not, 't is true this parting was well made.

Bru. Why then, lead on. O! that a man might know

The end of this day's business ere it come; But it sufficeth that the day will end,

And then the end is known. Come, ho! away!

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. The Field of Battle.

Alarum. Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA.

Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills

Unto the legions on the other side. Loud alarum.

Let them set on at once, for I perceive But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing,

And sudden push gives them the overthrow. Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter CASSIUS and TITINIUS.

Cas. O! look, Titinius, look, the villains fly:

Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy; This ensign here of mine was turning back;

I slew the coward, and did take it from him. Tit. O Cassius! Brutus gave the word too early;

Who, having some advantage on Octavius, Took it too eagerly: his soldiers fell to spoil,

Whilst we by Antony are all enclos'd.

Enter PINDARUS.

Pin. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off;

Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord! 10 Fly, therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.

Cas. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius!

Are those my tents where I perceive the fire?

Tit. They are, my lord.

Cas. Titinius, if thou lov'st me,
Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs
in him,
Till he have brought thee up to yonder
troops

And here again; that I may rest assur'd
Whether yond troops are friend or enemy.

Tit. I will be here again, even with a thought. Exit.

Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill;
My sight was ever thick; regard Titinius, 21
And tell me what thou not'st about the field.

PINDARUS ascends the hill.

This day I breathed first; time is come round,

And where I did begin, there shall I end;
My life is run his compass. Sirrah, what news?

Pin. Above. O my lord!

Cas. What news?

Pin. Titinius is enclosed round about With horsemen, that make to him on the
spur;

Yet he spurs on: now they are almost on
him. 30

Now, Titinius! now some light: O! he lights too:

He's ta'en! Shout.

And, hark! they shout for joy.

Cas. Come down; behold no more.

O! coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend ta'en before my face.

PINDARUS descends.

Come hither, sirrah.

In Parthia did I take thee prisoner;

And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,

That whatsoever I did bid thee do,

Thou should'st attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath; 40

Now be a freeman; and with this good
sword,

That ran through Cæsar's bowels, search this bosom.

Stand not to answer; here, take thou the hilt;

And, when my face is cover'd, as 't is now,
Guide thou the sword. Cæsar, thou art
reveng'd,

Even with the sword that kill'd thee. Dies.

Pin. So, I am free; yet would not so have been

Durst I have done my will. O Cassius!
Far from this country Pindarus shall run,

Where never Roman shall take note of him. Exit. 50

Re-enter TITINIUS with MESSALA.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius

Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power,
As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cas-sius.

Mes. Where did you leave him?

Tit. All disconsolate

With Pindarus his bondman, on this hill.

Mes. Is not that he that lies upon the ground?

Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart!

Mes. Is not that he?

Tit. No, this was he, Messala,
But Cassius is no more. O setting sun! 60
As in thy red rays thou dost sink to-night,
So in his red blood Cassius' day is set;
The sun of Rome is set. Our day is gone;
Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done.

Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.

Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done
this deed.

O hateful error, melancholy's child!

Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of
men

The things that are not? O error! soon
conceiv'd,

Thou never com'st unto a happy birth, 70

But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee.

Tit. What, Pindarus! Where art thou,
Pindarus?

Mes. Seek him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet

The noble Brutus, thrusting this report into his ears; I may say, thrusting it;

For piercing steel and darts envenomed

Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus

As tidings of this sight.

Tit. Hie you, Messala,

And I will seek for Pindarus the while.

Exit MESSALA.

Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cas-
sius? 80

Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory,

And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?

Alas! thou hast misconstrued every thing.

But hold thee, take this garland on thy
brow;

Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I

Will do his bidding. Brutus, come apace,

And see how I regarded Caius Cassius.

By your leave, gods: this is a Roman's

part:

Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart. Kills himself.

Alarum. Re-enter MESSALA, with BRU-TUS, CATO, STRATO, VOLUMNIUS, and LUCILIUS.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie? 91

Mes. Lo, yonder; and Titinius mourning it.

Bru. Titinius' face is upward.

Cato. He is slain.

Bru. O Julius Cæsar! thou art mighty
yet:

Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords

In our own proper entrails. Low alarums.

Cato. Brave Titinius!

Look! whe'r he have not crown'd dead

Cassius.

Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these?

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!

It is impossible that ever Rome Should breed thy fellow. Friends, I owe more tears
To this dead man than you shall see me
pay.
I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.
Come, therefore, and to Thassos send his
body:
His funerals shall not be in our camp,
Lest it discomfort us. Lucilius, come;
And come, young Cato; let us to the field.
Labeo and Flavius, set our battles on:
'T is three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere
night
We shall try fortune in a second fight. 110
Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter fighting, Soldiers of both Armies; then BRUTUS, CATO, LUCILIUS, and Others.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, O! yet hold up your heads.

Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go with me?

I will proclaim my name about the field:

I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend;

I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

Bru. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I: Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus. Exit.

Lucil. O young and noble Cato! art thou
down?

Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius, 10
And may'st be honour'd, being Cato's son.

First Sold. Yield, or thou diest.

Lucil.

Only I yield to die:

There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight. Offering money.

Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.

First Sold. We must not. A noble prisoner!

Second Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en.

First Sold. I'll tell the news. Here comes the general.

Enter ANTONY.

Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Ant. Where is he?

Lucil. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe
enough. 20

I dare assure thee that no enemy
Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus;
The gods defend him from so great a shame!
When you do find him, or alive or dead,
He will be found like Brutus, like himself.

Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you,

A prize no less in worth. Keep this man safe;

Give him all kindness; I had rather have Such men my friends than enemies. Go on,
And see whe'r Brutus be alive or dead; 30
And bring us word unto Octavius' tent
How every thing is chanc'd. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter BRUTUS, DARDANIUS, CLITUS, STRATO, and VOLUMNIUS.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Cl. Statilius show'd the torch-light, but,
my lord,

He came not back; he is or ta'en or slain.

Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus: slaying is the
word;

It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus.
Whispers.

Cl. What I, my lord? No, not for all the world.

Bru. Peace then! no words.

Cl. I'll rather kill myself.

Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius. Whispers.

Cl. Shall I do such a deed?

Cl. O Dardanius!

Dar. O Clitus! 10

Cl. What ill request did Brutus make to
thee?

Dar. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates.

Cii. Now is that noble vessel full of grief,
That it runs over even at his eyes.

Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius: list a word.

Vol. What says my lord?

Bru. Why, this, Volumnius:

The ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me
Two several times by night; at Sardis once,

And, this last night, here in Philippi fields.

I know my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord.

Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius. 21

Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it
goes;

Our enemies have beat us to the pit:
Low alarums.

It is more worthy to leap in ourselves
Than tarry till they push us. Good Volum-nius,

Thou know'st that we two went to school
together;

Even for that our love of old, I prithee, Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on
it.

Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord. Alarum still.

Cl. Fly, fly, my lord! there is no tarrying
here. 30

Bru. Farewell to you; and you; and you, Volumnius.

Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep;
Farewell to thee too, Strato. Countrymen,

My heart doth joy that yet in all my life
I found no man but he was true to me.

I shall have glory by this losing day,
More than Octavius and Mark Antony

By this vile conquest shall attain unto.
So fare you well at once; for Brutus'

tongue
Hath almost ended his life's history. 40

Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would rest,

That have but labour'd to attain this hour.

Alarum. Cry within, 'Fly, fly, fly!'

Cl. Fly, my lord, fly!

Bru. Hence! I will follow.

Exeunt CLITUS, DARDANIUS, and VOLUMNIUS.

I prithee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord.

Thou art a fellow of a good respect;

Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it:

Hold then my sword, and turn away thy face,

While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato?

Stra. Give me your hand first: fare you well, my lord.

Bru. Farewell, good Strato. Cæsar, now be still: 50

I kill'd not thee with half so good a will.

He runs on his sword, and dies.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, MESSALA, LUCILIUS, and their Army.

Oct. What man is that?

Mes. My master's man. Strato, where is thy master?

Stra. Free from the bondage you are in, Messala;

The conquerors can but make a fire of him;

For Brutus only overcame himself,

And no man else hath honour by his death.

Lucil. So Brutus should be found. I thank thee, Brutus,

That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true.

Oct. All that serv'd Brutus, I will entertain them. 60

Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?

Stra. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.

Oct. Do so, good Messala.

Mes. How died my master, Strato?

Stra. I held the sword, and he did run on it.

Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,

That did the latest service to my master.

Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them all:

All the conspirators save only he Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar; 70

He, only in a general honest thought

And common good to all, made one of them.

His life was gentle, and the elements

So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up

And say to all the world, 'This was a man!'

Oct. According to his virtue let us use

him,

With all respect and rites of burial.

Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,

Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.

So call the field to rest; and let's away, 80

To part the glories of this happy day.

Exeunt.

THE TRAGEDY OF MACBETH

NOWHERE is Shakespeare at greater pains not to be misunderstood than in the opening scenes of his greatest plays. And yet, it is just here that most misconceptions arise, even in the minds of scholars and critics. To grasp the full significance of the exposition in the tragedy of Macbeth, it may be helpful to consider how completely the entire structure of the play would collapse had Macbeth suffered defeat in the battle referred to in Scenes I and II. As a defeated man he never would have been sought out by the Witches, never would have heard their suggestion of "King hereafter," never would have yielded to the thought of murder. As a defeated man he might have lived the "lease of nature," paid his breath to "time and mortal custom," and preserved undimmed his "eternal jewel." The tragedy centers in the fact that the Witches met him in "the day of success."

The Witches, or as they are otherwise called, the "weird sisters," clearly suggest, if they do not actually represent, Fate. In their parting words in the first scene they sound the keynote of the tragedy—"Fair is foul, and foul is fair." These words are so important, and apply so clearly to their proposed meeting with Macbeth, that Shakespeare makes Macbeth echo them in the first words we hear him utter, "So foul and fair a day I have not seen." Macbeth is, of course, wholly unconscious of any relation with these supernatural agents of evil. He means merely that this day of foulest weather is at the same time the day of his greatest victory. The audience, however, which in Shakespeare's plays is always omniscient so far as Shakespeare can make them so, is already in the secret. It knows that the charm is wound up, and that the Witches are ready for the meeting; and it recalls instantly their words, "Fair is foul." It now grasps instantly their meaning. Experience has ever taught that to good men the day of greatest achievement proves too often the day of fate; that few natures can withstand the evil promptings to greater glory which come in the day of success. This truth is almost too commonplace to require statement, and yet it is one of which humanity needs constantly to be reminded. Shakespeare has put it here in so white a light that it has blinded many scholars and critics and sent them groping afield in an attempt at metaphysical explanations of what Shakespeare meant to be obvious to the groundlings.

It has been urged, for instance, that Macbeth was not an innocent man prior to his meeting with the Witches; that he had already dallied with the thought of murdering Duncan, if indeed he had not actually sworn to do it; and that the Witches merely bring to the surface what was already submerged in Macbeth's soul. There can be no harm in such explanation if we choose to read the play as metaphysics rather than as drama. Much depends on what is meant by "innocent." We could all, with Hamlet, accuse us of such things that it had been better our mother had not borne us. We all pray that we be led not into temptation. The thought of murder sprang not alone from Macbeth's mind, not alone from the prophecy of the Witches, but from a combination of the two with the fatal moment of success. The temptation, as always, springs from the fatal combination of character and circumstance, from which no man, however good, is immune. The story of Macbeth as drama involves clearly a fall in the character of the hero, and the fall is almost negligible if we conceive of Macbeth as any other than a "good" man at the opening of the play. To conceive him otherwise is to make the Witches superfluous, for Shakespeare could not have been so unskillful as to introduce supernatural forces of evil to insure the destruction of a soul already committed to their purposes.

One strongly contributing element in Macbeth's fall is his poetic nature. The effect of the Witches' prophecy upon him is strikingly in contrast with its effect upon Banquo chiefly because of the different temperaments of the two men. Macbeth's imagination leaps instantly into the future and strives to make it the present. It seems probable that here is the source of the thought of murder that so shakes him. Murder is the one way of hastening the "hereafter." His imagination becomes, then, a contributing factor in his fate. Yet in the struggle which follows it almost saves him. It foresees the consequences of the deed. "If it were done when 't is done," he cries, "then 't were well it were done quickly." But in these cases judgment follows, even in this life. In contrast with Macbeth's poetic and imaginative nature stands the prosaic and practical nature of his wife. She admits no consequences that she cannot defeat. In her philosophy "What 's done is done." To agonize over voices crying "Sleep no more" is to her to think brainsickly. But there is something in human nature that is at enmity with her philosophy. Human nature involves not only the conscious, but also the unconscious, self. The ravelled sleeve of care must be knit up. Nature orders a death of each day's life. Sleep, sleep is chief nourisher in life's feast. In sleep at last her unconscious self testifies to the falseness of her "What 's done is done." The spot is still upon her hand; again she hears the strokes of the little bell with which she signalled to Macbeth that all was ready for the murder; the smell of blood persists beyond the power of all the perfumes of Arabia; again she hears the knocking at the gate. "Come, come, come, come," she cries, "give me your hand. What 's done cannot be undone."

Consequences are inevitable. Macbeth, who jumped the life to come, is the only one of Shakespeare's great heroes for whose future felicity at death we have no hope. His story is that of the damnation of a great soul.

First Witch. Where the place?
Second Witch. Upon the heath.
Third Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.
First Witch. I come, Graymalkin!
Second Witch. Paddock calls.
Third Witch. Anon.
All. Fair is foul, and foul is fair:
 Hover through the fog and filthy air.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Camp near Forres.

Alarum within. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Sergeant.

Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report,
 As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
 The newest state.
Mal. This is the sergeant
 Who like a good and hardy soldier fought
 'Gainst my captivity. Hail, brave friend!

Say to the king the knowledge of the broil
 As thou didst leave it.
Ser. Doubtful it stood;
 As two spent swimmers, that do cling together
 And choke their art. The merciless Macdonwald, Worthy to be a rebel, for to that
 The multiplying villanies of nature
 Do swarm upon him, from the western isles
 Of kerns and gallowglasses is supplied;
 And fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling,
 Show'd like a rebel's whore: but all's too weak;
 For brave Macbeth, well he deserves that name,
 Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel,
 Which smok'd with bloody execution,
 Like valour's minion carv'd out his passage
 Till he fac'd the slave;
 Which ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to him,
 Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the chaps,
 And fix'd his head upon our battlements.
Dun. O valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!
Ser. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection
 Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break,
 So from that spring whence comfort seem'd
 To come
 Discomfort swells. Mark, King of Scotland, mark:
 No sooner justice had with valour arm'd

Compell'd these skipping kerns to trust their heels,<sup>30</sup>
 But the Norweyan lord surveying vantage, With furbish'd arms and new supplies of
 men
 Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this
 Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?

Ser. Yes;
 As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion.
 If I say sooth, I must report they were
 As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks;
 So they
 Doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
 Except they meant to bathe in reeking
 wounds,

Or memorize another Golgotha,<sup>40</sup>
 I cannot tell—
 But I am faint, my gashes cry for help.

Dun. So well thy words become thee as thy wounds;
 They smack of honour both. Go get him surgeons. Exit Sergeant, attended.

Enter Ross.

Who comes here?

Mal. The worthy Thane of Ross.
Len. What a haste looks through his eyes!
 So should he look
 That seems to speak things strange.

Ross. God save the king!
Dun. Whence cam'st thou, worthythane?

Ross. From Fife, great king;
 Where the Norwegian banners flout the sky
 And fan our people cold. Norway himself,
 With terrible numbers,<sup>51</sup>
 Assisted by that most disloyal traitor,
 The Thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict;

Till that Bellona's bridegroom, lapp'd in
 proof,
 Confronted him with self-comparisons,
 Point against point rebellious, arm 'gainst arm,

Curbing his lavish spirit: and, to conclude,
 The victory fell on us.

Dun. Great happiness!

Ross. That now
 Sweno, the Norways' king, craves composition;

Nor would we deign him burial of his men<sup>60</sup>
 Till he disbursed at Saint Colme's Inch
 Ten thousand dollars to our general use.

Dun. No more that Thane of Cawdor shall deceive
 Our bosom interest. Go pronounce his present death,

And with his former title greet Macbeth.

Ross. I'll see it done.

Dun. What he hath lost noble Macbeth hath won. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

First Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?

Second Witch. Killing swine.

Third Witch. Sister, where thou?

First Witch. A sailor's wife had chestnuts in her lap,
 And munch'd, and munch'd, and munch'd:
 'Give me,' quoth I:
 'Aroint thee, witch!' the rump-fed ronyon
 cries.

Her husband's to Aleppo gone, master o'
 the Tiger:

But in a sieve I'll thither sail,
 And, like a rat without a tail,
 I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.<sup>10</sup>

Second Witch. I'll give thee a wind.

First Witch. Thou'rt kind.

Third Witch. And I another.

First Witch. I myself have all the other;

And the very ports they blow,
 All the quarters that they know
 I' the shipman's card.

I will drain him dry as hay:
 Sleep shall neither night nor day
 Hang upon his pent-house lid;<sup>20</sup>

He shall live a man forbid.
 Weary se'nights nine times nine
 Shall he dwindle, peak and pine:
 Though his bark cannot be lost,
 Yet it shall be tempest-tost.
 Look what I have.

Second Witch. Show me, show me.

First Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb,
 Wreck'd as homeward he did come.

Drum within.
Third Witch. A drum! a drum!<sup>30</sup>
 Macbeth doth come.

All. The weird sisters, hand in hand,
 Posters of the sea and land,
 Thus do go about, about:
 Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
 And thrice again, to make up nine.
 Peace! the charm's wound up.

Enter MACBETH and BANQUO.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not
 seen.

Ban. How far is 't call'd to Forres? What are these,

So wither'd and so wild in their attire,<sup>40</sup>
 That look not like th' inhabitants o' the
 earth,

And yet are on 't? Live you? or are you aught

That man may question? You seem to understand me,

By each at once her choppy finger laying Upon her skinny lips: you should be women,

And yet your beards forbid me to interpret
 That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can: what are you?

First Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, Thane of Glamis!

Second Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, Thane of Cawdor!

Third Witch. All hail, Macbeth! that shalt be king hereafter.

Ban. Good sir, why do you start, and seem to fear

Things that do sound so fair? I' the name of truth,

Are ye fantastical, or that indeed

Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner
You greet with present grace and great prediction
Of noble having and of royal hope,
That he seems rapt withal: to me you speak not.

If you can look into the seeds of time,
And say which grain will grow and which will not,

Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear
Your favours nor your hate. 61

First Witch. Hail!

Second Witch. Hail!

Third Witch. Hail!

First Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.

Second Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.

Third Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none:

So all hail, Macbeth and Banquo!

First Witch. Banquo and Macbeth, all hail!

Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me more: 70

By Sinel's death I know I am Thane of Glamis;

But how of Cawdor? the Thane of Cawdor lives,

A prosperous gentleman: and to be king
Stands not within the prospect of belief

No more than to be Cawdor. Say from whence

You owe this strange intelligence? or why
Upon this blasted heath you stop our way

With such prophetic greeting? Speak, I charge you. Witches vanish.

Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,

And these are of them. Whither are they vanish'd? 80

Macb. Into the air, and what seem'd corporal melted

As breath into the wind. Would they had stay'd!

Ban. Were such things here as we do speak about?

Or have we eaten on the insane root
That takes the reason prisoner?

Macb. Your children shall be kings.

Ban. You shall be king.

Macb. And Thane of Cawdor too: went it not so?

Ban. To the self-same tune and words. Who's here?

Enter ROSS and ANGUS.

Ross. The king hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth,

The news of thy success; and when he reads 80

Thy personal venture in the rebels' fight,
His wonders and his praises do contend

Which should be thine or his. Silent'd with that,

In viewing o'er the rest o' the self-same day,

He finds thee in the stout Norwegian ranks,

Nothing afraid of what thyself didst make,
Strange images of death. As thick as tale Came post with post, and every one did bear
Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,
And pour'd them down before him.

Ang. We are sent

To give thee from our royal master thanks;
Only to herald thee into his sight, 102

Not pay thee.

Ross. And for an earnest of a greater honour,

He bade me, from him, call thee Thane of Cawdor:

In which addition, hail, most worthy thane!
For it is thine.

Ban. What! can the devil speak true?

Macb. The Thane of Cawdor lives: why do you dress me

In borrow'd robes?

Ang. Who was the thane lives yet; But under heavy judgment bears that life 110

Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was comb'd

With those of Norway, or did line the rebel With hidden help and vantage, or that with both He labour'd in his country's wreck, I know not;

But treasons capital, confess'd and prov'd,
Have overthrown him.

Macb. Aside. Glamis, and Thane of Cawdor:

The greatest is behind. To ROSS and ANGUS. Thanks for your pains.

To BANQUO. Do you not hope your children shall be kings,

When those that gave the Thane of Cawdor to me

Promis'd no less to them?

Ban. That, trusted home, Might yet enkindle you unto the crown, 121

Besides the Thane of Cawdor. But 't is strange:

And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths,

Win us with honest trifles, to betray 's In deepest consequence.

Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Macb. Aside. Two truths are told, As happy prologues to the swelling act

Of the imperial theme. I thank you, gentlemen.

Aside. This supernatural soliciting 150

Cannot be ill, cannot be good; if ill,
Why hath it given me earnest of success,

Commencing in a truth? I am Thane of Cawdor:

If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair

And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature? Present fears

Are less than horrible imaginings;
My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical,

Shakes so my single state of man that function 140

Is smother'd in surmise, and nothing is
But what is not.

Ban. Look, how our partner's rapt.

Macb. Aside. If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me, Without my stir.

Ban. New honours come upon him, Like our strange garments, cleave not to their mould But with the aid of use.

Macb. Aside. Come what come may, Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.

Macb. Give me your favour: my dull brain was wrought With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your pains 150

Are register'd where every day I turn The leaf to read them. Let us toward the king.

Aside to BANQUO. Think upon what hath chanc'd; and at more time, The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak Our free hearts each to other.

Ban. Very gladly.

Macb. Till then, enough. Come, friends. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.
Flourish. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX, and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not Those in commission yet return'd?

Mal. My liege, They are not yet come back; but I have spoke

With one that saw him die; who did report That very frankly he confess'd his treasons, Implor'd your highness' pardon and set forth

A deep repentance. Nothing in his life Became him like the leaving it; he died As one that had been studied in his death To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd 10 As 't were a careless trifle.

Dun. There's no art To find the mind's construction in the face: He was a gentleman on whom I built An absolute trust.

Enter MACBETH, BANQUO, ROSS, and ANGUS.

O worthiest cousin! The sin of my ingratitude even now Was heavy on me. Thou art so far before, That swiftest wing of recompense is slow To overtake thee; would thou hadst less deserv'd, That the proportion both of thanks and payment

Might have been mine! only I have left to say, 20

More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe, In doing it, pays itself. Your highness' part Is to receive our duties; and our duties Are to your throne and state, children and servants;

Which do but what they should, by doing every thing

Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither: I have begun to plant thee, and will labour To make thee full of growing. Noble

Banquo, That hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known 30

No less to have done so, let me infold thee And hold thee to my heart.

Ban. There if I grow, The harvest is your own.

Dun. My plenteous joys, Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves In drops of sorrow. Sons, kinsmen, thanes, And you whose places are the nearest, know We will establish our estate upon Our eldest, Malcolm, whom we name here-after

The Prince of Cumberland; which honour must

Not unaccompanied invest him only, 40 But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine On all deservers. From hence to Inverness, And bind us further to you.

Macb. The rest is labour, which is not us'd for you:

I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful

The hearing of my wife with your approach; So humbly take my leave.

Dun. My worthy Cawdor!

Macb. Aside. The Prince of Cumberland! That is a step

On which I must fall down, or else o'erleap, For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires! Let not light see my black and deep desires; The eye wink at the hand; yet let that be 52 Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see.

Exit.
Dun. True, worthy Banquo; he is full so valiant,

And in his commendations I am fed; It is a banquet to me. Let's after him, Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome:

It is a peerless kinsman. Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Inverness. MACBETH'S Castle.

Enter Lady MACBETH, reading a letter.

They met me in the day of success; and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burned in desire to question them further, they made themselves air, into which they vanished. Whiles I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives from the king, who all-hailed me 'Thane of Cawdor'; by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with 'Hail, king that shalt be!' This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness, that thou mightest not lose the dues of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell. 15

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be What thou art promis'd. Yet do I fear thy nature;
 It is too full o' the milk of human kindness
 To catch the nearest way; thou would'st be great,
 Art not without ambition, but without 20
 The illness should attend it; what thou would'st highly,
 That would'st thou holily; would'st not play
 false,
 And yet would'st wrongly win; thou 'dst
 have, great Glamis,
 That which cries 'Thus thou must do, if thou have it';
 And that which rather thou dost fear to do Than wishest should be undone. Hie thee
 hither;
 That I may pour my spirits in thine ear,
 And chastise with the valour of my tongue
 All that impedes thee from the golden round,
 Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem
 To have thee crown'd withal. 31

Enter a Messenger.

What is your tidings?
Mess. The king comes here to-night.
Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say it.
 Is not thy master with him? who, were 't so,
 Would have inform'd for preparation.

Mess. So please you, it is true: our thane is coming;
 One of my fellows had the speed of him,
 Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely
 more
 Than would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him tending:
 He brings great news. Exit Messenger.

The raven himself is hoarse
 That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan 40
 Under my battlements. Come, you spirits That tend on mortal thoughts! unsex me
 here,

And fill me from the crown to the toe top full
 Of direst cruelty; make thick my blood,
 Stop up the access and passage to remorse,
 That no compunctious visitings of nature Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between

The effect and it! Come to my woman's breasts,
 And take my milk for gall, you murdering ministers,

Wherever in your sightless substances 50
 You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick
 night,

And pall thee in the dunnest smoke of hell,
 That my keen knife see not the wound it makes,

Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark,

To cry 'Hold, hold!'

Enter MACBETH.

Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor!
 Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter!
 Thy letters have transported me beyond
 This ignorant present, and I feel now 55
 The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest love,
 Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes hence?

Macb. To-morrow, as he purposes.

Lady M. O! never Shall sun that morrow see.

Your face, my thane, is as a book where men May read strange matters. To beguile the
 time,

Look like the time; bear welcome in your
 eye,

Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent flower.

But be the serpent under 't. He that's coming

Must be provided for; and you shall put This night's great business into my dispatch;

Which shall to all our nights and days to
 come 70

Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.
Macb. We will speak further.

Lady M. Only look up clear;
 To alter favour ever is to fear.

Leave all the rest to me. Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Same. Before the Castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter DUNCAN,
MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, BANQUO, LEN- NOX, MACDUFF, ROSS, ANGUS, and At- tendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat;
 the air

Nimble and sweetly recommends itself
 Unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer,
 The temple-haunting martlet, does approve
 By his lov'd mansionry that the heaven's breath

Smells wooingly here: no jutty, frieze,
 Buttress, nor coign of vantage, but this bird
 Hath made his pendent bed and procreant

cradle:
 Where they most breed and haunt, I have observ'd 9

The air is delicate.

Enter Lady MACBETH.

Dun. See, see, our honour'd hostess!
 The love that follows us sometime is our trouble,

Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach you

How you shall bid God 'ild us for your pains
 And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service,
 In every point twice done, and then done
 double,

Were poor and single business, to contend Against those honours deep and broad,

wherewith
 Your majesty loads our house: for those of old,

And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
 We rest your hermits.

Dun. Where's the Thane of Cawdor?
 We cours'd him at the heels, and had a purpose 21

To be his purveyor; but he rides well,
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath hold him
To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess,
We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs,
in compt,
To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand;
Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly,
And shall continue our graces towards
him.
By your leave, hostess.

Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The Same. A Room in the Castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter, and pass over the stage, a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes and service. Then enter MACBETH.

Macb. If it were done when 't is done,
then 't were well
It were done quickly; if the assassination Could trammel up the consequence, and catch

With his surcease success; that but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
But here, upon this bank and shoal of time, We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases

We still have judgment here; that we but teach

Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return
To plague the inventor; this even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice

To our own lips. He's here in double trust:
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject, Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,

Who should against his murderer shut the door,

Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan

Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels trumpet-tongued against

The deep damnation of his taking-off; 20
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin,
hors'd

Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind. I have no
spur

To prick the sides of my intent, but only Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself
And falls on the other—

Enter Lady MACBETH.

How now! what news?

Lady M. He has almost supp'd: why have you left the chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M. Know you not he has?
Macb. We will proceed no further in this business:

He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought

Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,

Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M. Was the hope drunk Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept
since,

And wakes it now, to look so green and pale
At what it did so freely? From this time
Such I account thy love. Art thou afeard
To be the same in thine own act and valour
As thou art in desire? Would'st thou have
that

Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem,
Letting 'I dare not' wait upon 'I would,'
Like the poor cat i' the adage?

Macb. Prithee, peace.
I dare do all that may become a man;

Who dares do more is none.

Lady M. What beast was't then
That made you break this enterprise to me?
When you durst do it then you were a man;
And, to be more than what you were, you would

Be so much more the man. Nor time nor
place

Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:

They have made themselves, and that their fitness now

Does unmake you. I have given suck, and
know

How tender 't is to love the babe that milks
me:

I would, while it was smiling in my face,
Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless
gums,

And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn
as you

Have done to this.

Macb. If we should fail,—

Lady M. We fail.
But screw your courage to the sticking-
place,

And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep, Where'to the rather shall his day's hard journey

Soundly invite him, his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassail so convince
That memory, the warder of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbeck only; when in swinish sleep
Their drenched natures lie as in a death,
What cannot you and I perform upon The unguarded Duncan? what not put upon

His spongy officers, who shall bear the guilt
Of our great quell?

Of our great quell?

Of our great quell?

Of our great quell?

Of our great quell?

Of our great quell?

Of our great quell?

Of our great quell?

Macb. Bring forth men-children only;
For thy undaunted mettle should compose
Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd,
When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two

Of his own chamber and us'd their very daggers,

That they have done 't?

Lady M. Who dares receive it other,
As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar

Upon his death?

Macb. I am settled, and bend up
Each corporal agent to this terrible feat. 80
Away, and mock the time with fairest show:
False face must hide what the false heart doth know. Exeunt.

ACT II

SCENE I.—Inverness. Court within the Castle.

Enter BANQUO, and FLEANCE bearing a torch before him.

Ban. How goes the night, boy?

Fle. The moon is down; I have not heard the clock.

Ban. And she goes down at twelve.

Fle. I take 't, 't is later, sir.
Ban. Hold, take my sword. There's husbandry in heaven;

Their candles are all out. Take thee that too.

A heavy summons lies like lead upon me,
And yet I would not sleep: merciful powers!
Restrain in me the cursed thoughts that nature

Gives way to in repose.

Enter MACBETH, and a Servant with a torch.

Give me my sword.

Who's there?

Macb. A friend.

Ban. What, sir! not yet at rest! The king's a-bed:

He hath been in unusual pleasure, and Sent forth great largess to your offices.
This diamond he greets your wife withal,
By the name of most kind hostess; and shut
up

In measureless content.

Macb. Being unprepar'd,
Our will became the servant to defect,
Which else should free have wrought.

Ban. All's well.
I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters: 20

To you they have show'd some truth.

Macb. I think not of them:
Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,
We would spend it in some words upon that
business,

If you would grant the time.

Ban. At your kind'st leisure.
Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent, when 't is,

It shall make honour for you.

Ban. So I lose none
In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchis'd and allegiance clear,
I shall be counsel'd.

Macb. Good repose the while!

Ban. Thanks, sir: the like to you. 30
Exeunt BANQUO and FLEANCE.

Macb. Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready
She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.

Exit Servant.

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:

I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
I see thee yet, in form as palpable 40
As this which now I draw.

Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going;

And such an instrument I was to use.
Mine eyes are made the fools o' the other senses,

Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still;
And on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of
blood,

Which was not so before. There's no such thing:

It is the bloody business which informs Thus to mine eyes. Now c'er the one half-
world

Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams
abuse 50

The curtain'd sleep; witchcraft celebrates
Pale Hecate's offerings; and wither'd murder-

Alarum'd by his sentinel, the wolf, Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,

With Tarquin's ravishing strides, towards his design

Moves like a ghost. Thou sure and firm-set earth,

Hear not my steps, which way they walk,
for fear

Thy very stones prate of my whereabouts,
And take the present horror from the time,
Which now suits with it. Whiles I threat 60
he lives:

Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives. A bell rings.

I go, and it is done; the bell invites me.
Hear it not, Duncan; for it is a knell

That summons thee to heaven or to hell.
Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter Lady MACBETH.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold,
What hath quench'd them hath given me fire. Hark! Peace!

It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bell-
man,

Which gives the stern'st good-night. He is about it:

The doors are open, and the surfeited grooms
Do mock their charge with snores: I have drugg'd their possets,
That death and nature do contend about
them,
Whether they live or die.

Macb. Within. Who's there? what, ho!

Lady M. Alack! I am afraid they have awak'd, 10

And 't is not done; the attempt and not the deed

Confounds us. Hark! I laid their daggers ready;

He could not miss 'em. Had he not resembled

My father as he slept I had done 't. My husband!

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. I have done the deed. Didst thou not hear a noise?

Lady M. I heard the owl scream and the crickets cry.

Did not you speak?

Macb. When?

Lady M. Now.

Macb. As I descended?

Lady M. Ay.

Macb. Hark!

Who lies i' the second chamber?

Lady M. Donalbain.

Macb. Looking on his hands. This is a sorry sight. 21

Lady M. A foolish thought to say a sorry
sight.

Macb. There's one did laugh in 's sleep, and one cried 'Murder!'

That they did wake each other: I stood and heard them;

But they did say their prayers, and address'd
them

Again to sleep.

Lady M. There are two lodg'd together.

Macb. One cried 'God bless us!' and
'Amen,' the other;

As they had seen me with these hangman's
hands,

Listening their fear. I could not say 'Amen'
When they did say 'God bless us!'

Lady M. Consider it not so deeply. 30

Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce 'Amen'?

I had most need of blessing, and 'Amen'
Stuck in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought

After these ways; so, it will make us mad.

Macb. Methought I heard a voice cry
'Sleep no more!

Macbeth does murder sleep,' the innocent
sleep,

Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of
care,

The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,

Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second
course,

Chief nourisher in life's feast,—

Lady M. What do you mean?

Macb. Still it cried 'Sleep no more!' to all the house: 41

'Glamis hath murder'd sleep, and therefore Cawdor

Shall sleep no more, Macbeth shall sleep no
more!'

Lady M. Who was it that thus cried?

Why, worthythane,

You do unbend your noble strength to think So brainsickly of things. Go get some water,

And wash this filthy witness from your hand.
Why did you bring these daggers from the

place?
They must lie there: go carry them, and smear

The sleepy grooms with blood.

Macb. I'll go no more:
I am afraid to think what I have done; 51

Look on 't again I dare not.

Lady M. Infirm of purpose!
Give me the daggers. The sleeping and the dead

Are but as pictures: 't is the eye of childhood

That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed,
I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal;

For it must seem their guilt.

Exit. Knocking within.
Macb. Whence is that knocking?

How is 't with me, when every noise appals
me?

What hands are here? Ha! they pluck out
mine eyes.

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this
blood 60

Clean from my hand? No, this my hand will rather

The multitudinous seas incarnadine,
Making the green one red.

Re-enter Lady MACBETH.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour,
but I shame

To wear a heart so white. Knocking within.
I hear a knocking

At the south entry; retire we to our chamber;

A little water clears us of this deed;
How easy is it then! Your constancy

Hath left you unattended.

Knocking within.
Hark! more knocking.

Get on your night-gown, lest occasion call us,
And show us to be watchers. Be not lost 71

So poorly in your thoughts.

Macb. To know my deed 't were best not know myself. Knocking within.

Wake Duncan with thy knocking! I would thou could'st! Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same.

Knocking within. Enter a Porter.

Porter. Here's a knocking indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate he should have old turning the key. Knocking within.

Knock, knock, knock! Who's there, i' the name of Beelzebub? Here's a farmer that hanged himself on the expectation of plenty:

come in time; have napkins enow about you; here you 'll sweat for 't.

Knocking within.

Knock, knock! Who 's there, i' the other devil's name? Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven: O! come in, equivocator.

Knocking within.

Knock, knock, knock! Who 's there? Faith, here 's an English tailor come hither for stealing out of a French hose: come in, tailor; here you may roast your goose.

Knocking within.

Knock, knock! never at quiet! What are you? But this place is too cold for hell. I 'll devil-porter it no further: I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire.

Knocking within.

Anon, anon! I pray you, remember the porter.

Opens the gate. 23

Enter MACDUFF and LENNOX.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed,

That you do lie so late?

Port. Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock; and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Macd. What three things does drink especially provoke?

Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes; it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore, much drink may be said to be an equivocator with lechery; it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it persuades him, and disheartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to: in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him.

Macd. I believe drink gave thee the lie last night.

Port. That it did, sir, i' the very throat o' me: but I requited him for his lie; and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring?

Enter MACBETH.

Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.

Len. Good morrow, noble sir.

Macb. Good morrow, both.

Macd. Is the king stirring, worthythane?

Macb. Not yet.

Macd. He did command me to call timely on him:

I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macb. I 'll bring you to him.

Macd. I know this is a joyful trouble to you;

But yet 't is one.

Macb. The labour we delight in physics pain.

This is the door.

Macd. I 'll make so bold to call, For 't is my limited service. Exit.

Len. Goes the king hence to-day?

Macb. He does: he did appoint so.

Len. The night has been unruly: where we lay,

Our chimneys were blown down; and, as they say,

Lamentings heard i' the air; strange screams of death,

And prophesying with accents terrible Of dire combustion and confus'd events

New hatch'd to the woeful time. The obscure bird

Clamour'd the livelong night: some say the earth

Was feverous and did shake.

Macb. 'T was a rough night.

Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel

A fellow to it.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. O horror! horror! horror! Tongue nor heart

Cannot conceive nor name thee!

Macb., Len. What 's the matter?

Macd. Confusion now hath made his masterpiece!

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence The life o' the building.

Macb. What is 't you say? the life?

Len. Mean you his majesty?

Macd. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight

With a new Gorgon: do not bid me speak; See, and then speak yourselves.

Exeunt MACBETH and LENNOX.

Awake! awake! Ring the alarum-bell. Murder and treason!

Banquo and Donalbain! Malcolm! awake! 80 Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit, And look on death itself! up, up, and see The great doom's image! Malcolm!

Banquo! As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprites,

To countenance this horror! Ring the bell. Bell rings.

Enter Lady MACBETH.

Lady M. What 's the business, That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley

The sleepers of the house? speak, speak!

Macd. O gentle lady!

'T is not for you to hear what I can speak; The repetition in a woman's ear

Would murder as it fell. 90

Enter BANQUO.

O Banquo! Banquo! Our royal master's murder'd!

Lady M. Woe, alas!

What! in our house?

Ban. Too cruel any where.

Dear Duff, I prithee, contradict thyself, And say it is not so.

Re-enter MACBETH and LENNOX.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance
I had liv'd a blessed time; for, from this instant,
There's nothing serious in mortality,
All is but toys; renown and grace is dead,
The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
Is left this vault to brag of. 101

Enter MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.

Don. What is amiss?

Macb. You are, and do not know 't:
The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood

Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.

Macd. Your royal father's murder'd.

Mal. O! by whom?

Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd,
had done 't:

Their hands and faces were all badg'd with blood:

So were their daggers, which unwip'd we found

Upon their pillows:

They star'd, and were distracted; no man's life

Was to be trusted with them. 111

Macb. O! yet I do repent me of my fury,
That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you so?

Macb. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temperate and furious,

Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man:

The expedition of my violent love
Outrun the pauser, reason. Here lay Duncan,

His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood;
And his gash'd stabs look'd like a breach in nature

For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers, 120

Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers

Unmannerly breech'd with gore: who could refrain,

That had a heart to love, and in that heart
Courage to make 's love known?

Lady M. Help me hence, ho!

Macd. Look to the lady.

Mal. Aside to DONALBAIN. Why do we hold our tongues,

That most may claim this argument for ours?

Don. Aside to MALCOLM. What should be spoken

Here, where our fate, hid in an auger-hole,
May rush and seize us? Let's away: our tears

Are not yet brew'd.

Mal. Aside to DONALBAIN. Nor our strong sorrow 100

Upon the foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady:

Lady MACBETH is carried out.
And when we have our naked frailties hid,
That suffer in exposure, let us meet,

And question this most bloody piece of work,

To know it further. Fears and scruples shake us:

In the great hand of God I stand, and thence Against the undivulg'd pretence I fight
Of treasonous malice.

Macb. And so do I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness,

And meet i' the hall together.

All. Well contented.

Exeunt all but MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.

Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort with them: 141

To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
Which the false man does easy. I'll to England.

Don. To Ireland, I; our separated fortune

Shall keep us both the safer: where we are,
There's daggers in men's smiles: the near

in blood,
The nearer bloody.

Mal. This murderous shaft that's shot
Hath not yet lighted, and our safest way

Is to avoid the aim: therefore, to horse;
And let us not be dainty of leave-taking, 150

But shift away: there's warrant in that theft

Which steals itself when there's no mercy left.

Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Without the Castle.

Enter ROSS and an old Man.

Old Man. Threescore and ten I can remember well;

Within the volume of which time I have seen Hours dreadful and things strange, but this sore night

Hath trifled former knowings.

Ross. Ah! good father, Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with man's act,

Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock 't is

day,
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp.

Is 't night's predominance, or the day's shame,

That darkness does the face of earth entomb,

When living light should kiss it?

Old Man. 'T is unnatural,
Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday last, 11

A falcon, towering in her pride of place,
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd.

Ross. And Duncan's horses, a thing most strange and certain,

Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race,

Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls,
flung out,

Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would make

War with mankind.

Old Man. 'T is said they eat each other.

Ross. They did so; to the amazement of mine eyes,
That look'd upon 't. Here comes the good Macduff. 20

Enter MACDUFF.

How goes the world, sir, now?

Macd. Why, see you not?

Ross. Is 't known who did this more than bloody deed?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain.

Ross. Alas the day!

What good could they pretend?

Macd. They were suborn'd.

Malcolm and Donalbain, the king's two sons,

Are stol'n away and fled, which puts upon them

Suspicion of the deed.

Ross. 'Gainst nature still!

Thrifflless ambition, that wilt ravin up Thine own life's means! Then 't is most like

The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth. 30

Macd. He is already nam'd, and gone to Scone

To be invested.

Ross. Where is Duncan's body?

Macd. Carried to Colmekill, The sacred storehouse of his predecessors And guardian of their bones.

Ross. Will you to Scone?

Macd. No, cousin, I 'll to Fife.

Ross. Well, I will thither.

Macd. Well, may you see things well done there: adieu!

Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!

Ross. Farewell, father.

Old Man. God's benison go with you; and with those 40

That would make good of bad, and friends of foes! Exeunt.

ACT III

SCENE I.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.

Enter BANQUO.

Ban. Thou hast it now: king, Cawdor, Glamis, all,

As the weird women promis'd; and, I fear, Thou play'dst most foully for 't; yet it was said

It should not stand in thy posterity, But that myself should be the root and father Of many kings. If there come truth from them,

As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine,

Why, by the verities on thee made good, May they not be my oracles as well,

And set me up in hope? But, hush! no more.

Sennet sounded. Enter MACBETH, as king; Lady MACBETH, as queen; LENNOX, ROSS, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

Macb. Here 's our chief guest.

Lady M. If he had been forgotten It had been as a gap in our great feast, 12 And all-things unbecoming.

Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper, sir,

And I 'll request your presence.

Ban.

Let your highness Command upon me; to the which my duties Are with a most indissoluble tie For ever knit.

Macd. Ride you this afternoon?

Ban.

Ay, my good lord.

Macb. We should have else desir'd your good advice, 21

Which still hath been both grave and prosperous,

In this day's council; but we 'll take to-morrow.

Is 't far you ride?

Ban. As far, my lord, as will fill up the time

'Twixt this and supper; go not my horse the better,

I must become a borrower of the night

For a dark hour or twain.

Macb.

Fail not our feast.

Ban. My lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear our bloody cousins are bestow'd 30

In England and in Ireland, not confessing Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers With strange invention; but of that to-morrow,

When therewithal we shall have cause of state

Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse; adieu, Till you return at night. Goes Fleance with you?

Ban. Ay, my good lord: our time does call upon 's.

Macb. I wish your horses swift and sure of foot;

And so I do commend you to their backs.

Farewell. Exit BANQUO.

Let every man be master of his time Till seven at night. To make society The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself Till supper-time alone; while then, God be with you!

Exeunt all but MACBETH and an Attendant.

Sirrah, a word with you. Attend those men Our pleasure?

Atten. They are, my lord, without the palace gate.

Macb. Bring them before us.

Exit Attendant.

To be thus is nothing, But to be safely thus. Our fears in Banquo Stick deep, and in his royalty of nature 50

Reigns that which would be fear'd: 't is much he dares,

And, to that dauntless temper of his mind, He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour

To act in safety. There is none but he Whose being I do fear; and under him

My genius is rebuk'd, as it is said Mark Antony's was by Cæsar. He chid the sisters

When first they put the name of king upon me,

And bade them speak to him; then, prophet-like,
 They hail'd him father to a line of kings. 60
 Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown,
 And put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
 Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand,
 No son of mine succeeding. If 't be so,
 For Banquo's issue have I fil'd my mind;
 For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd;
 Put rancours in the vessel of my peace
 Only for them; and mine eternal jewel
 Given to the common enemy of man,
 To make them kings, the seed of Banquo kings!— 70
 Rather than so, come fate into the list,
 And champion me to the utterance! Who's there?

Re-enter Attendant, with two Murderers.

Now go to the door, and stay there till we call. Exit Attendant.

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

First Mur. It was, so please your highness.

Macb. Well then, now
 Have you consider'd of my speeches? Know That it was he in the times past which held
 you
 So under fortune, which you thought had been

Our innocent self. This I made good to you
 In our last conference, pass'd in probation
 with you, 80

How you were borne in hand, how cross'd,
 the instruments,

Who wrought with them, and all things else that might

To half a soul and to a notion craz'd

Say 'Thus did Banquo.'

First Mur. You made it known to us.

Macb. I did so; and went further, which is now

Our point of second meeting. Do you find
 Your patience so predominant in your nature
 That you can let this go? Are you so gosspell'd?

To pray for this good man and for his issue, Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave 90

And beggar'd yours for ever?

First Mur. We are men, my liege.

Macb. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men;
 As hounds and greyhounds, mongrels,
 spaniels, curs,

Shoughs, water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are clept

All by the name of dogs: the valu'd file
 Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
 The housekeeper, the hunter, every one
 According to the gift which bounteous
 nature

Hath in him clos'd; whereby he does receive Particular addition, from the bill 100

That writes them all alike; and so of men.
 Now, if you have a station in the file,

Not i' the worst rank of manhood, say it;

And I will put that business in your bosoms,

Whose execution takes your enemy off,
 Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
 Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
 Which in his death were perfect.

Second Mur. I am one, my liege, Whom the vile blows and buffets of the
 world

Have so incens'd that I am reckless what I do to spite the world.

First Mur. And I another
 So weary with disasters, tugg'd with fortune,
 That I would set my life on any chance,
 To mend it or be rid on 't.

Macb. Both of you Know Banquo was your enemy.

Second Mur. True, my lord.
Macb. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance

That every minute of his being thrusts Against my near'st of life: and though I could

With bare-fac'd power sweep him from my sight

And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not, 120
 For certain friends that are both his and
 mine,

Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall
 Who I myself struck down; and thence it is That I to your assistance do make love,
 Masking the business from the common eye
 For sundry weighty reasons.

Second Mur. We shall, my lord,
 Perform what you command us.

First Mur. Though our lives—
Macb. Your spirits shine through you.

Within this hour at most
 I will advise you where to plant yourselves, Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' the
 time, 130

The moment on 't; for 't must be done to-
 night,

And something from the palace; always
 thought

That I require a clearness: and with him,
 To leave no rubs nor botches in the work,
 Fleance his son, that keeps him company,
 Whose absence is no less material to me
 Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
 Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart;

I'll come to you anon.

Second Mur. We are resolv'd, my lord.
Macb. I'll call upon you straight: abide within. Exeunt Murderers.

It is concluded: Banquo, thy soul's flight, 141
 If it find heaven, must find it out to-night.
Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Lady MACBETH and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?

Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again tonight.

Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure

For a few words.

Serv. Madam, I will.

Exit.

Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent,
Where our desire is got without content:
'T is safer to be that which we destroy
Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter MACBETH.

How now, my lord! why do you keep alone,
Of sorriest fancies your companions making,

Using those thoughts which should indeed have died <sup>10</sup>

With them they think on? Things without all remedy

Should be without regard: what's done is done.

Macb. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it:

She'll close and be herself, whilst our poor
malice

Remains in danger of her former tooth.
But let the frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer,

Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep in the affliction of these terrible dreams That shake us nightly. Better be with the
dead,

Whom we, to gain our peace, have sent to peace, <sup>20</sup>

Than on the torture of the mind to lie
In restless ecstasy. Duncan is in his grave;
After life's fitful fever he sleeps well;
Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor
poison,

Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing
Can touch him further!

Lady M. Come on;
Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged
looks;

Be bright and jovial among your guests
to-night.

Macb. So shall I, love; and so, I pray,
be you.

Let your remembrance apply to Banquo; <sup>30</sup> Present him eminence, both with eye and
tongue:

Unsafe the while, that we Must lave our honours in these flattering streams,

And make our faces vizards to our hearts,
Disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this.
Macb. O! full of scorpions is my mind,
dear wife;

Thou know'st that Banquo and his Fleance lives.

Lady M. But in them nature's copy's not eterne.

Macb. There's comfort yet; they are assailable;

Then be thou jocund. Ere the bat hath flown <sup>40</sup>

His cloister'd flight, ere to black Hecate's summons

The shard-borne beetle with his drowsy hums

Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done

A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M. What's to be done?

Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge,
dearest chuck,
Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeling
night,

Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day,
And with thy bloody and invisible hand
Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond
Which keeps me pale! Light thickens, and <sup>50</sup>
the crow

Makes wing to the rooky wood;
Good things of day begin to droop and
drowse,

Whiles night's black agents to their preys do
rouse.

Thou marvell'st at my words: but hold thee
still;

Things had begun make strong themselves
by ill.

So, prithee, go with me. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Park, with a Road leading to the Palace.

Enter three Murderers.

First Mur. But who did bid thee join with us?

Third Mur. Macbeth.
Second Mur. He needs not our mistrust, since he delivers

Our offices and what we have to do
To the direction just.

First Mur. Then stand with us.
The west yet glimmers with some streaks
of day:

Now spurs the lated traveller apace
To gain the timely inn; and near approaches
The subject of our watch.

Third Mur. Hark! I hear horses.
Ban. Within. Give us a light there, ho!

Second Mur. Then it is he: the rest
That are within the note of expectation <sup>10</sup>
Already are i' the court.

First Mur. His horses go about.
Third Mur. Almost a mile; but he does usually,

So all men do, from hence to the palace gate
Make it their walk.

Second Mur. A light, a light!

Enter BANQUO, and FLEANCE with a torch.

Third Mur. 'T is he.

First Mur. Stand to 't.

Ban. It will be rain to-night.

First Mur. Let it come down.

They set upon BANQUO.

Ban. O, treachery! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly, fly!

Thou may'st revenge. O slave!
Dies. FLEANCE escapes.

Third Mur. Who did strike out the light?

First Mur. Was 't not the way?

Third Mur. There's but one down; the son is fled.

Second Mur. We have lost
Best half of our affair. <sup>21</sup>

First Mur. Well, let's away, and say how much is done. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room of State in the Palace.

A banquet prepared. Enter MACBETH, Lady MACBETH, ROSS, LENNOX, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees; sit down: at first
And last the hearty welcome.

Lords. Thanks to your majesty.
Macb. Ourself will mingle with society
And play the humble host.

Our hostess keeps her state, but in best time
We will require her welcome.

Lady M. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our friends;
For my heart speaks they are welcome.

Enter First Murderer, to the door.

Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks. 9
Both sides are even: here I'll sit i' the midst:

Be large in mirth; anon we'll drink a measure
The table round. Approaching the door.

There's blood upon thy face.
Mur. 'T is Banquo's then.

Macb. 'T is better thee without than he within.
Is he dispatch'd?

Mur. My lord, his throat is cut; that I I did for him.

Macb. Thou art the best o' the cut-throats; yet he's good
That did the like for Fleance: if thou didst it,

Thou art the nonpareil.
Mur. Most royal sir, 20

Fleance is 'scap'd.
Macb. Then comes my fit again: I had else been perfect;

Whole as the marble, founded as the rock,
As broad and general as the casing air;
But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound in

To saucy doubts and fears. But Banquo's safe?
Mur. Ay, my good lord; safe in a ditch he bides,

With twenty trenched gashes on his head;
The least a death to nature.

Macb. Thanks for that.
There the grown serpent lies: the worm that's fled

Hath nature that in time will venom breed,
No teeth for the present. Get thee gone; to-morrow

We'll hear ourselves again. 31
Exit Murderer.

Lady M. My royal lord,
You do not give the cheer: the feast is sold
That is not often vouch'd, while 't is a-making,

'T is given with welcome: to feed were best at home;
From thence, the sauce to meat is ceremony;
Meeting were bare without it.

Macb. Sweet remembrancer!
Now good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both!

Len. May 't please your highness sit.

The Ghost of BANQUO enters, and sits in MACBETH'S place.

Macb. Here had we now our country's honour roof'd, 40
Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present;

Who may I rather challenge for unkindness Than pity for mischance!

Ross. His absence, sir,
Lays blame upon his promise. Please 't your highness

To grace us with your royal company.
Macb. The table's full.

Len. Here is a place reserv'd, sir.
Macb. Where?

Len. Here, my good lord. What is 't that moves your highness?

Macb. Which of you have done this?
Lords. What, my good lord?

Macb. Thou canst not say I did it: never shake 50

Thy gory locks at me.
Ross. Gentlemen, rise; his highness is not well.

Lady M. Sit, worthy friends: my lord is often thus,
And hath been from his youth: pray you, keep seat;

The fit is momentary; upon a thought He will again be well. If much you note him

You shall offend him and extend his passion: Feed and regard him not. Are you a man?

Macb. Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on that

Which might appal the devil.
Lady M. O proper stuff!

This is the very painting of your fear; 61
This is the air-drawn dagger which, you said,

Led you to Duncan. O! these flaws and starts, Impostors to true fear, would well become

A woman's story at a winter's fire, Authoriz'd by her grandam. Shame itself!

Why do you make such faces? When all's done

You look but on a stool.
Macb. Prithee, see there! behold! look!

lo! how say you? 70
Why, what care I? If thou canst nod, speak too.

If charnel-houses and our graves must send Those that we bury back, our monuments

Shall be the maws of kites. Ghost vanishes.
Lady M. What! quite unmann'd in folly?

Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.
Lady M. Fie, for shame!

Macb. Blood hath been shed ere now, i' the olden time,

Ere human statute purg'd the gentle weal; Ay, and since too, murders have been per-

form'd
Too terrible for the ear: the time has been,

That, when the brains were out, the man would die, 79

And there an end; but now they rise again,
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,

And push us from our stools: this is more
strange

Than such a murder is.

Lady M. My worthy lord,
Your noble friends do lack you.

Macb. I do forget.
Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends;
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, love and health to all;

Then, I'll sit down. Give me some wine;
fill full:

I drink to the general joy o' the whole table,
And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss; 80

Would he were here! to all, and him, we thirst,

And all to all.

Lord. Our duties, and the pledge.

Re-enter Ghost.

Macb. Avaunt! and quit my sight! Let the earth hide thee!

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with.

Lady M. Think of this, good peers,
But as a thing of custom: 't is no other;
Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.

Macb. What man dare, I dare: 99

Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger;
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble: or be alive again,
And dare me to the desert with thy sword;
If trembling I inhabit then, protest me
The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow!
Unreal mockery, hence! Ghost vanishes.

Why, so; being gone,
I am a man again. Pray you, sit still.

Lady M. You have displac'd the mirth, broke the good meeting,
With most admir'd disorder.

Macb. Can such things be,
And overcome us like a summer's cloud, 111
Without our special wonder? You make me
strange

Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such
sights,

And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine is blanch'd with fear.

Ross. What sights, my lord?

Lady M. I pray you, speak not; he grows worse and worse;

Question enrages him. At once, good night:
Stand not upon the order of your going, 119
But go at once.

Len. Good night; and better health Attend his majesty!

Lady M. A kind good night to all!

Exeunt Lords and Attendants.

Macb. It will have blood, they say; blood will have blood;

Stones have been known to move and trees
to speak;

Augurs and understood relations have
By magot-pies and choughs and rooks brought forth

The secret'st man of blood. What is the
night?

Lady M. Almost at odds with morning,
which is which.

Macb. How say'st thou, that Macduff denies his person

At our great bidding?

Lady M. Did you send to him, sir?

Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send. 130

There's not a one of them but in his house
I keep a servant fee'd. I will to-morrow,

And betimes I will, to the weird sisters:
More shall they speak; for now I am bent
to know,

By the worst means, the worst. For mine own good

All causes shall give way: I am in blood Stepp'd in so far, that, should I wade no
more,

Returning were as tedious as go o'er.
Strange things I have in head that will to
hand,

Which must be acted ere they may be scann'd. 140

Lady M. You lack the season of all natures, sleep.

Macb. Come, we'll to sleep. My strange and self-abuse

Is the initiate fear that wants hard use:
We are yet but young in deed. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting HECATE.

First Witch. Why, how now, Hecate! you look angrily.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as you
are,

Saucy and overbold? How did you dare
To trade and traffic with Macbeth

In riddles and affairs of death;
And I the mistress of your charms,

The close contriver of all harms,
Was never call'd to bear my part,

Or show the glory of our art?
And, which is worse, all you have done 10

Hath been but for a wayward son,
Spiteful and wrathful; who, as others do,

Loves for his own ends, not for you.
But make amends now: get you gone,

And at the pit of Acheron
Meet me i' the morning: thither he

Will come to know his destiny:
Your vessels and your spells provide,

Your charms and every thing beside.
I am for the air; this night I'll spend 20

Unto a dismal and a fatal end:
Great business must be wrought ere noon:

Upon the corner of the moon
There hangs a vaporous drop profound;

I'll catch it ere it come to ground:
And that distill'd by magic sleights

Shall raise such artificial sprites
As by the strength of their illusion
Shall draw him on to his confusion:
He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear 30
His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear;
And you all know security
Is mortals' chiefest enemy.

*Music and a song within: 'Come away,
come away,' etc.*

Hark! I am call'd; my little spirit, see,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me.

Exit.

First Witch. Come, let 's make haste;
she 'll soon be back again. Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.

Enter LENNOX and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts,
Which can interpret further: only, I say, Things have been strangely borne. The gracious Duncan
Was pitied of Macbeth: marry, he was
dead:

And the right-valiant Banquo walk'd too
late;

Whom, you may say, if 't please you, Fleance
kill'd,

For Fleance fled: men must not walk too
late.

Who cannot want the thought how monstrous

It was for Malcolm and for Donalbain 9
To kill their gracious father? damned fact!
How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not straight

In pious rage the two delinquents tear,
That were the slaves of drink and thralls of
sleep?

Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely
too;

For 't would have anger'd any heart alive
To hear the men deny 't. So that, I say,
He has borne all things well; and I do think
That had he Duncan's sons under his key,
As, an 't please heaven, he shall not, they should find

What 't were to kill a father; so should Fleance. 2)

But, peace! for from broad words, and
'cause he fail'd

His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell
Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan, From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,

Lives in the English court, and is receiv'd
Of the most pious Edward with such grace
That the malevolence of fortune nothing Takes from his high respect. Thither Macduff

Is gone to pray the holy king, upon his aid 30
To wake Northumberland and war-like Siward;

That, by the help of these, with him above
To ratify the work, we may again

Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights,

Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knives,

Do faithful homage and receive free honours;
All which we pine for now. And this report Hath so exasperate the king that he Prepares for some attempt of war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff?

Lord. He did: and with an absolute 'Sir,
not I,' 10

The cloudy messenger turns me his back,
And hums, as who should say, 'You 'll rue
the time

That clogs me with this answer.'

Len. And that well might Advise him to a caution to hold what distance

His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel
Fly to the court of England and unfold

His message ere he come, that a swift bless-
ing

May soon return to this our suffering country

Under a hand accurs'd!

Lord. I 'll send my prayers with him.
Exeunt.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—A cavern. In the middle, a boiling Cauldron.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

First Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.

Second Witch. Thrice and once the hedge-pig whin'd.

Third Witch. Harpier cries,—'t is time,
't is time.

First Witch. Round about the cauldron
go;

In the poison'd entrails throw.
Toad, that under cold stone

Days and nights has thirty-one Swelter'd venom sleeping got,
Boil thou first i' the charmed pot.

All. Double, double toil and trouble; 10
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.

Second Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake,
In the cauldron boil and bake;

Eye of newt, and toe of frog,
Wool of bat, and tongue of dog,

Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting,
Lizard's leg, and howlet's wing,

For a charm of powerful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

All. Double, double toil and trouble; 20
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.

Third Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf,

Witches' mummy, maw and gulf
Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark.

Root of hemlock digg'd i' the dark,
Liver of blaspheming Jew,

Gall of goat, and slips of yew
Sliver'd in the moon's eclipse,

Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lips,
Finger of birth-strangled babe

Ditch-deliver'd by a drab,
Make the gruel thick and slab: 30

Add thereto a tiger's chaudron,
For the ingredients of our cauldron.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.

Second Witch. Cool it with a baboon's
blood,

Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter HECATE.

Hec. O! well done! I commend your pains,

And every one shall share i' the gains. 40

And now about the cauldron sing.

Like elves and fairies in a ring,

Enchanting all that you put in.

Music and a Song, 'Black spirits,' etc.

Second Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs,

Something wicked this way comes.

Open, locks,
Whoever knocks.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags!

What is 't you do?

All. A deed without a name.

Macb. I conjure you, by that which you profess, 50

Howe'er you come to know it, answer me:
Though you untie the winds and let them

fight Against the churches: though the yesty waves

Confound and swallow navigation up;

Though bladed corn be lodg'd and trees
blown down;

Though castles topple on their warders'
heads;

Though palaces and pyramids do slope

Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure

Of nature's germens tumble all together,
Even till destruction sicken; answer me 60

To what I ask you.

First Witch. Speak.

Second Witch. Demand.

Third Witch. We'll answer.

First Witch. Say if thou'dst rather hear it from our mouths,

Or from our masters?

Macb. Call 'em; let me see 'em.

First Witch. Pour in sow's blood, that hath eaten

Her nine farrow; grease that's sweaten

From the murderer's gibbet throw

Into the flame.

All. Come, high or low;

Thyself and office deftly show.

Thunder. First Apparition, an armed Head.

Macb. Tell me, thou unknown power,—
First Witch. He knows thy thought:

Hear his speech, but say thou nought. 70

First App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!
beware Macduff;

Beware the Thane of Fife. Dismiss me.
Enough. Descends.

Macb. Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution thanks;

Thou hast harp'd my fear aright. But one word more,—

First Witch. He will not be commanded:
here's another,

More potent than the first.

Thunder. Second Apparition, a bloody Child.

Second App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!

Macb. Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.

Second App. Be bloody, bold, and resolute; laugh to scorn 79

The power of man, for none of woman born Shall harm Macbeth. Descends.

Macb. Then live, Macduff: what need I fear of thee?

But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate: thou shalt not
live;

That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies,
And sleep in spite of thunder.

Thunder. Third Apparition, a Child crowned, with a tree in his hand.

What is this
That rises like the issue of a king,

And wears upon his baby brow the round
And top of sovereignty?

All. Listen, but speak not to 't.

Third App. Be lion-mettled, proud, and take no care 90

Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers
are:

Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be until Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill
Shall come against him. Descends.

Macb. That will never be:
Who can impress the forest, bid the tree

Unfix his earth-bound root? Sweet bodements! good!

Rebellion's head, rise never till the wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high-plac'd Macbeth

Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath

To time and mortal custom. Yet my heart Throbs to know one thing: tell me, if your

art 101
Can tell so much, shall Banquo's issue ever

Reign in this kingdom?

All. Seek to know no more.

Macb. I will be satisfied: deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me

know—
Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise is this? Hautboys.

First Witch. Show!

Second Witch. Show!

Third Witch. Show!

All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart:
Come like shadows, so depart. 111

A show of Eight Kings, the last with a glass in his hand; BANQUO'S Ghost following.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo; down!

Thy crown does sear mine eye-balls: and thy hair,
Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first:
A third is like the former. Filthy hags!
Why do you show me this? A fourth! Start,
eyes!
What! will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?
Another yet! A seventh! I'll see no more:
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass
Which shows me many more; and some
I see 120
That two-fold balls and treble sceptres carry.
Horrible sight! Now, I see, 't is true;
For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon
me,
And points at them for his.

Apparitions vanish.

What! is this so?

First Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so; but why
Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?
Come, sisters, cheer we up his sprites,
And show the best of our delights.
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antick round, 130
That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay.

Music. The Witches dance, and then vanish with HECATE.

Macb. Where are they? Gone? Let this pernicious hour
Stand aye accursed in the calendar!
Come in, without there!

Enter LENNOX.

Len. What's your grace's will?
Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?

Len. No, my lord.

Macb. Came they not by you?

Len. No, indeed, my lord.

Macb. Infected be the air whereon they ride,
And damn'd all those that trust them! I did
hear

The galloping of horse: who was 't came by?

Len. 'T is two or three, my lord, that bring you word 141

Macduff is fled to England.

Macb. Fled to England!

Len. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. Aside. Time, thou anticipat'st my dread exploits;

The flighty purpose never is o'ertook

Unless the deed go with it; from this moment

The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now,

To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done;

The castle of Macduff I will surprise; 150 Seize upon Fife; give to the edge o' the sword

His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls

That trace him in his line. No boasting like
a fool;

This deed I'll do before this purpose cool;
But no more sights! Where are these gentlemen?

Come, bring me where they are. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Fife. MACDUFF'S Castle.

Enter Lady MACDUFF, her Son, and ROSS.

L. Macd. What had he done, to make him fly the land?

Ross. You must have patience, madam.

L. Macd. He had none:

His flight was madness: when our actions
do not,

Our fears do make us traitors.

Ross. You know not Whether it was his wisdom or his fear.

L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his babes,

His mansion and his titles in a place
From whence himself does fly? He loves us not;

He wants the natural touch; for the poor
wren,

The most diminutive of birds, will fight, 10
Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.

All is the fear and nothing is the love;

As little is the wisdom, where the flight

So runs against all reason.

Ross. My dearest coz,

I pray you, school yourself: but for your
husband,

He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fits o' the season. I dare not speak much further;

But cruel are the times, when we are traitors
And do not know ourselves, when we hold rumour

From what we fear, yet know not what we
fear, 20

But float upon a wild and violent sea

Each way and move. I take my leave of
you:

Shall not be long but I'll be here again.

Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward

To what they were before. My pretty cousin,

Blessing upon you!

L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.

Ross. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer,

It would be my disgrace and your discomfort;
I take my leave at once. Exit.

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead:
And what will you do now? How will you
live? 31

Son. As bird's do, mother.

L. Macd. What! with worms and flies?

Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.

L. Macd. Poor bird! thou'dst never fear the net nor lime,

The pitfall nor the gin.

Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds they are not set for.

My father is not dead, for all your saying.

L. Macd. Yes, he is dead: how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. Nay, how wilt you do for a husband?

L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.

Son. Then you 'll buy 'em to sell again.

L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit; and yet, i' faith,

With wit enough for thee,

Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?

L. Macd. Ay, that he was.

Son. What is a traitor?

L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.

Son. And be all traitors that do so?

L. Macd. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hanged.

Son. And must they all be hanged that swear and lie?

L. Macd. Every one.

Son. Who must hang them?

L. Macd. Why, the honest men.

Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools, for there are liars and swearers enow to beat the honest men and hang up them.

L. Macd. Now God help thee, poor monkey!

But how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him: if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.

L. Macd. Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known,

Though in your state of honour I am perfect. I doubt some danger does approach you nearly:

If you will take a homely man's advice, Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.

To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage;

To do worse to you were fell cruelty, Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you!

I dare abide no longer.

L. Macd. Whither should I fly?

I have done no harm. But I remember now

I am in this earthly world, where to do harm Is often laudable, to do good sometime Accounted dangerous folly; why then, alas!

Do I put up that womanly defence,

To say I have done no harm?

Enter Murderers.

What are these faces?

First Mur. Where is your husband?

L. Macd. I hope in no place so unsanctified

Where such as thou may'st find him.

First Mur. He's a traitor.

Son. Thou liest, thou shag-hair'd villain!

First Mur. What! you egg.

Stabbing him.

Young fry of treachery!

Son. He has kill'd me, mother:

Run away, I pray you.

Exit Lady MACDUFF, crying 'Murder,' and pursued by the Murderers.

SCENE III.—England. Before the King's Palace.

Enter MALCOLM and MACDUFF.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there

Weep our sad bosoms empty.

Macd. Let us rather

Hold fast the mortal sword, and like good men

Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom; each new morn

New widows howl, new orphans cry, new sorrows

Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds As if it felt with Scotland and yell'd out

Like syllable of dolour.

Mal. What I believe I 'll wail, What know believe, and what I can redress,

As I shall find the time to friend, I will.

What you have spoke, it may be so perchance.

This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongues,

Was once thought honest: you have lov'd him well;

He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; but something

You may deserve of him through me, and wisdom

To offer up a weak, poor innocent lamb

To appease an angry god.

Macd. I am not treacherous.

Mal. But Macbeth is.

A good and virtuous nature may recoil In an imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon;

That which you are my thoughts cannot transpose;

Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell;

Though all things foul would wear the brows of grace,

Yet grace must still look so.

Macd. I have lost my hopes.

Mal. Perchance even there where I did find my doubts.

Why in that rawness left you wife and child, Those precious motives, those strong knots of love,

Without leave-taking? I pray you, Let not my jealousies be your dishonours,

But mine own safeties: you may be rightly just,

Whatever I shall think.

Macd. Bleed, bleed, poor country!

Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure, For goodness dare not check thee? wear thou thy wrongs;

The title is affeer'd! Fare thee well, lord: I would not be the villain that thou think'st

For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,

And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Be not offended:
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.
I think our country sinks beneath the yoke;
It weeps, it bleeds, and each new day a gash
Is added to her wounds: I think withal 41
There would be hands uplifted in my right;
And here from gracious England have I offer
Of goodly thousands: but for all this,
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country
Shall have more vices than it had before,
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever,

By him that shall succeed.

Macd. What should he be?
Mal. It is myself I mean; in whom I
know 50

All the particulars of vice so grafted,
That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as snow, and the poor
state

Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd
With my confineless harms.

Macd. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd
In evils to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name; but there's no bottom,
none, 60

In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters,
Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up

The cistern of my lust; and my desire
All continent impediments would o'erbear
That did oppose my will; better Macbeth
Than such an one to reign.

Macd. Boundless intemperance
In nature is a tyranny; it hath been
The untimely emptying of the happy throne,
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours; you may 70
Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink.

We have willing dames enough; there cannot be

That culture in you, to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclin'd.

Mal. With this there grows
In my most ill-compos'd affection such
A stanchless avarice that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles of their lands,
Desire his jewels and this other's house; so
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more, that I should forge
Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

Macd. This avarice Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicious
root
Than summer-seeming lust, and it hath been

The sword of our slain kings: yet do not
fear;

Scotland hath foisons to fill up your will,
Of your mere own; all these are portable,
With other graces weigh'd. 90

Mal. But I have none: the king-becoming graces,

As justice, verity, temperance, stableness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of them, but abound
In the division of each several crime, Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I should

Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Uproar the universal peace, confound 99
All unity on earth,

Macd. O Scotland, Scotland!
Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.

Macd. Fit to govern!
No, not to live. O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant bloody-scepter'd,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days
again,

Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accurs'd,
And does blaspheme his breed? Thy royal
father

Was a most sainted king; the queen that bore thee,

Off'n'd upon her knees than on her feet, 110
Died every day she liv'd. Fare thee well!

These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself Have banish'd me from Scotland. O my breast,

Thy hope ends here!

Mal. Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul Wip'd the black scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts

To thy good truth and honour. Devilish
Macbeth

By many of these trains hath sought to win
me

Into his power, and modest wisdom plucks
me 119

From over-credulous haste; but God above
Deal between thee and me! for even now

I put myself to thy direction, and Unspeak mine own detraction, here abjure

The taints and blames I laid upon myself,
For strangers to my nature. I am yet

Unknown to woman, never was forsworn,
Scarcely have coveted what was mine own,

At no time broke my faith, would not betray
The devil to his fellow, and delight

No less in truth than life; my first false speaking 130

Was this upon myself. What I am truly,
Is thine and my poor country's to command;

Whither indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike

men,
Already at a point, was setting forth.

Now we'll together, and the chance of goodness

Be like our warranted quarrel. Why are you silent?

Macd. Such welcome and unwelcome things at once
'T is hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well; more anon. Comes the king forth, I pray you? 140

Doct. Ay, sir; there are a crew of wretched souls

That stay his cure; their malady convinces The great assay of art; but at his touch, Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand, They presently amend.

Mal. I thank you, doctor. Exit Doctor.

Macd. What's the disease he means?

Mal. 'T is call'd the evil: A most miraculous work in this good king, Which often; since my here-remain in England,

I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven,

Himself best knows; but strangely-visited people, 150

All swoln and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye, The mere despair of surgery, he cures,

Hanging a golden stamp about their necks, Put on with holy prayers; and 't is spoken To the succeeding royalty he leaves

The healing benediction. With this strange virtue,

He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy, And sundry blessings hang about his throne

That speak him full of grace.

Enter ROSS.

Macd. See, who comes here?

Mal. My countryman; but yet I know him not. 160

Macd. My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.

Mal. I know him now. Good God, be-times remove

The means that makes us strangers!

Ross. Sir, amen.

Macd. Stands Scotland where it did?

Ross. Alas! poor country;

Almost afraid to know itself. It cannot Be call'd our mother, but our grave; where nothing, But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile;

Where sighs and groans and shrieks that rend the air

Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems

A modern ecstasy; the dead man's knell 170

Is there scarce ask'd for who; and good men's lives

Expire before the flowers in their caps, Dying or ere they sicken.

Macd. O! relation

Too nice, and yet too true. Mal. What's the newest grief?

Ross. That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker;

Each minute teems a new one. Macd. How does my wife?

Ross. Why, well.

Macd. And all my children?

Ross. Well too.

Macd. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?

Ross. No; they were well at peace when I did leave 'em.

Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech: how goes 't? 180

Ross. When I came hither to transport the tidings,

Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour

Of many worthy fellows that were out; Which was to my belief witness'd the rather

For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot. Now is the time of help; your eye in Scotland Would create soldiers, make our women fight, To doff their dire distresses.

Mal. Be 't their comfort We are coming thither. Gracious England hath Lent us good Siward and ten thousand men; An older and a better soldier none 191

That Christendom gives out.

Ross. Would I could answer This comfort with the like! But I have words That would be howl'd out in the desert air, Where hearing should not latch them.

Macd. What concern they? The general cause? or is it a fee-grief

Due to some single breast?

Ross. No mind that 's honest But in it shares some woe, though the main part Pertains to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine Keep it not from me; quickly let me have it.

Ross. Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever, 201

Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound

That ever yet they heard. Macd. Hum! I guess at it.

Ross. Your castle is surpris'd; your wife and babes

Savagely slaughter'd; to relate the manner, Were, on the quarry of these murder'd deer,

To add the death of you. Mal. Merciful heaven!

What! man; ne'er pull your hat upon your brows;

Give sorrow words; the grief that does not speak

Whispers the o'er-fraught heart and bids it break. 210

Macd. My children too? Ross. Wife, children, servants, all

That could be found. Macd. And I must be from thence!

My wife kill'd too? Ross. I have said.

Mal. Be comforted: Let's make us medicines of our great revenge, To cure this deadly grief. Macd. He has no children. All my pretty ones?

Did you say all? O hell-kite! All?
What! all my pretty chickens and their dam
At one fell swoop?

Mal. Dispute it like a man.

Macd. I shall do so;
But I must also feel it as a man: 221
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me. Did heaven look on,

And would not take their part? Sinful
Macduff!

They were all struck for thee. Naught that I am,

Not for their own demerits, but for mine,
Fell slaughter on their souls. Heaven rest them now!

Mal. Be this the whetstone of your sword:
let grief

Convert to anger; blunt not the heart, en-rage it.

Macd. O! I could play the woman with mine eyes, 230
And braggart with my tongue. But, gentle heavens

Cut short all intermission; front to front Bring thou this fiend of Scotland and myself;

Within my sword's length set him; if he
'scape,

Heaven forgive him too!

Mal. This tune goes manly.
Come, go we to the king; our power is
ready;

Our lack is nothing but our leave. Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you may;

The night is long that never finds the day. 240
Exeunt.

ACT V

SCENE I.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic and a Waiting-Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you,
but can perceive no truth in your report.
When was it she last walked?

Gent. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her nightgown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon 't, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast
sleep. 9

Doct. A great perturbation in nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep and do the effects of watching! In this slumbry agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say? 15

Gent. That, sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may to me, and 't is most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you nor any one, having no witness to confirm my speech. 21

Enter Lady MACBETH, with a taper.
Lo you! here she comes. This is her very guise; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light?

Gent. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 't is her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands. 31

Gent. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands. I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here 's a spot.

Doct. Hark! she speaks. I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly. 38

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say!
One; two: why, then 't is time to do 't.
Hell is murky! Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeard? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account?
Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him? 45

Doct. Do you mark that?

Lady M. The Thane of Fife had a wife:
where is she now? What! will these hands ne'er be clean? No more o' that, my lord, no more o' that: you mar all with this start-
ing. 50

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not,
I am sure of that: heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here 's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh! oh! oh!

Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charged. 60

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well.

Gent. Pray God it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice:
yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep who have died holily in their beds.

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your nightgown; look not so pale. I tell you yet again, Banquo 's buried; he cannot come out on 's grave. 71

Doct. Even so?

Lady M. To bed, to bed: there 's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand. What 's done cannot be undone. To bed, to bed, to bed.

Exit.

Doct. Will she go now to bed?

Gent. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad. Unnatural deeds 79
Do breed unnatural troubles; infected
minds

To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets;

More needs she the divine than the physician.

God, God forgive us all! Look after her; Remove from her the means of all annoyance, And still keep eyes upon her. So, good night: My mind she has mated, and amaz'd my sight.

I think, but dare not speak.

Gent. Good night, good doctor. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Country near Dunsinane.

Enter, with drum and colours, MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX, and Soldiers.

Ment. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm.

His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff. Revenges burn in them; for their dear causes

Would to the bleeding and the grim alarm Excite the mortified man.

Ang. Near Birnam wood Shall we well meet them; that way are they coming.

Caith. Who knows if Donalbain be with his brother?

Len. For certain, sir, he is not: I have a file

Of all the gentry: there is Siward's son, And many unrough youths that even now I protest their first of manhood.

Ment. What does the tyrant?

Caith. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies.

Some say he's mad; others that lesser hate him

Do call it valiant fury; but, for certain, He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause Within the belt of rule.

Ang. Now does he feel His secret murders sticking on his hands; Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breach;

Those he commands move only in command,

Nothing in love; now does he feel his title Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who then shall blame His pester'd senses to recoil and start, When all that is within him does condemn Itself for being there?

Caith. Well, march we on, To give obedience where 't is truly ow'd; Meet we the medicine of the sickly weal, And with him pour we in our country's purge Each drop of us.

Len. Or so much as it needs To dew the sovereign flower and drown the weeds.

Make we our march towards Birnam.

Exeunt, marching.

SCENE III.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter MACBETH, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all:

Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane I cannot taint with fear. What's the boy Malcolm?

Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know

All mortal consequences have pronounc'd me thus:

'Fear not, Macbeth; no man that's born of woman

Shalt e'er have power upon thee.' Then fly, false thanes,

And mingle with the English epicures:

The mind I sway by and the heart I bear Shall never sag with doubt nor shake with fear.

10

Enter a Servant.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac'd loon!

Where got'st thou that goose look?

Serv. There is ten thousand—
Macb. Geese, villain?

Serv. Soldiers, sir.
Macb. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy fear,

Thou lily-liver'd boy. What soldiers, patch? Death of thy soul! those linen cheeks of thine

Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, wheyface?

Serv. The English force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy face hence.

Exit Servant.

Seyton!—I am sick at heart When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push

Will cheer me ever or disseat me now.

I have liv'd long enough: my way of life Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf;

And that which should accompany old age, As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,

I must not look to have; but, in their stead, Curses, not loud but deep, mouth-honour, breath, Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.

Seyton!

Enter SEYTON.

Sev. What's your gracious pleasure?

Macb. What news more? Sev. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported.

Macb. I'll fight till from my bones my flesh be hack'd.

Give me my armour.

Sev. 'T is not needed yet.

Macb. I'll put it on.

Send out more horses, skirr the country round;

Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine armour.

How does your patient, doctor?

Doct. Not so sick, my lord, As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies, That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that: Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas'd, O Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow, Raze out the written troubles of the brain,

And with some sweet oblivious antidote
Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff

Which weighs upon the heart?

Doct. Therein the patient
Must minister to himself.

Macb. Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none of it.

Come, put mine armour on; give me my staff.

Septon, send out—Doctor, the thanes fly
from me.

Come, sir, dispatch.—If thou could'st,
doctor, cast

The water of my land, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine health,
I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.—Pull 't off, I say.—

What rhubarb, senna, or what purgative drug

Would scour these English hence? Hear'st thou of them?

Doct. Ay, my good lord; your royal preparation

Makes us hear something.

Macb. Bring it after me.
I will not be afraid of death and bane

Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane. 60

Doct. Aside. Were I from Dunsinane away and clear,

Profit again should hardly draw me here.
Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Country near Birnam Wood.

Drum and colours. Enter MALCOLM, old SIWARD and his Son, MACDUFF, MEN-TEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX,
ROSS, and Soldiers, marching.

Mal. Cousins, I hope the days are near at
hand

That chambers will be safe.

Ment. We doubt it nothing.
Siw. What wood is this before us?

Ment. The wood of Birnam.
Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a bough

And bear 't before him: thereby shall we shadow

The numbers of our host, and make discovery

Err in report of us.

Sold. It shall be done.
Siw. We learn no other but the confident tyrant

Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure
Our setting down before 't.

Mal. 'T is his main hope;
For where there is advantage to be given, 11

Both more and less hath given him the revolt,

And none serve with him but constrained
things

Whose hearts are absent too.

Macb. Let our just censures Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiership.

Siw. The time approaches
That will with due decision make us know

What we shall say we have and what we owe.

Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate,

But certain issue strokes must arbitrate; 20
Towards which advance the war.

Exeunt, marching.

SCENE V.—Dunsinane. Within the Castle.

Enter, with drum and colours, MACBETH, SEYTON, and Soldiers.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward walls;

The cry is still 'They come!' our castle's strength

Will laugh a siege to scorn; here let them lie
Till famine and the ague eat them up;

Were they not forc'd with those that should be ours,

We might have met them dareful, beard to beard,

And beat them backward home.

A cry of women within.
What is that noise?

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord.
Exit.

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fears.

The time has been my senses would have cool'd 10

To hear a night-shriek, and my fell of hair
Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir

As life were in 't. I have supp'd full with horrors;

Direness, familiar to my slaughterous
thoughts,

Cannot once start me.

Re-enter SEYTON.
Wherefore was that cry?

Sey. The queen, my lord, is dead.
Macb. She should have died hereafter;

There would have been a time for such a
word.

To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day, 20

To the last syllable of recorded time;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools

The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!

Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,

And then is heard no more; it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,

Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to use thy tongue; thy story quickly.

Mess. Gracious my lord, 30
I should report that which I saw, I saw,
But know not how to do it.

Macb. Well, say, sir.
Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the
hill,

I look'd toward Birnam, and anon, me-
thought,

The wood began to move.

Macb. Liar and slave!
Mess. Let me endure your wrath if 't be not so:
 Within this three mile may you see it coming;
 I say, a moving grove.

Macb. If thou speak'st false,
 Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive,
 Till famine cling thee; if thy speech be sooth, 40

I care not if thou dost for me as much.
 I pull in resolution, and begin
 To doubt the equivocation of the fiend
 That lies like truth; 'Fear not till Birnam
 wood

Do come to Dunsinane'; and now a wood Comes toward Dunsinane. Arm, arm, and out!

If this which he avouches does appear,
 There is nor flying hence nor tarrying here.
 I 'gin to be aweary of the sun,
 And wish the estate o' the world were now
 undone. 50

Ring the alarum-bell! Blow, wind! come wrack!
 At least we 'll die with harness on our back.

Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Plain before the Castle.

Enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, old SIWARD, MACDUFF, etc., and their Army, with boughs.

Mal. Now, near enough; your leavy screens throw down,
 And show like those you are. You, worthy uncle,

Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son, Lead our first battle; worthy Macduff and we

Shall take upon 's what else remains to do,
 According to our order.

Siw. Fare you well.
 Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night,
 Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macb. Make all our trumpets speak;
 give them all breath, 9
 Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death. Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The Same. Another Part of the Plain.

Alarums. Enter MACBETH.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake; I cannot fly,

But bear-like I must fight the course. What
 's he

That was not born of woman? Such a one Am I to fear, or none.

Enter young SIWARD.

Young Siw. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou 'lt be afraid to hear it.

Young Siw. No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name
 Than any is in hell.

Macb. My name 's Macbeth.

Young Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce a title
 More hateful to mine ear.

Macb. No, nor more fearful.
Young Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant;
 with my sword 10

I 'll prove the lie thou speak'st.

They fight and young SIWARD is slain.

Macb. Thou wast born of woman:
 But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn,

Brandish'd by man that 's of a woman born.
Exit.

Alarums. Enter MACDUFF.

Macd. That way the noise is. Tyrant,
 show thy face:

If thou be'st slain and with no stroke of
 mine,

My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me
 still.

I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms

Are hir'd to bear their staves: either thou,
 Macbeth,

Or else my sword with an unbatter'd edge
 I sheathe again undeeded. There thou should'st be; 20

By this great clatter, one of greatest note
 Seems bruited. Let me find him, fortune!
 And more I beg not. Exit. Alarums.

Enter MALCOLM and old SIWARD.

Siw. This way, my lord; the castle's gently render'd:

The tyrant's people on both sides do fight;
 The noble thanes do bravely in the war;

The day almost itself professes yours,
 And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes
 That strike beside us.

Siw. Enter, sir, the castle.
Exeunt. Alarums.

Re-enter MACBETH.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die 30

On mine own sword? whiles I see lives, the gashes

Do better upon them.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn!
Macb. Of all men else I have avoided
 thee:

But get thee back, my soul is too much charg'd

With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no words;
 My voice is in my sword, thou bloodier
 villain

Than terms can give thee out! They fight.

Macb. Thou lovest labour:
 As easy may'st thou the intrenchant air

With thy keen sword impress as make me
 bleed:

Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests; 40
 I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
 To one of woman born.

Macd. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel whom thou still hast serv'd Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb

Untimely ripp'd.

Macb. Accurs'd be that tongue that tells me so,

For it hath cow'd my better part of man:
And be these juggling fiends no more
believ'd,

That palter with us in a double sense;
That keep the word of promise to our ear, 50
And break it to our hope. I'll not fight with
thee.

Macd. Then yield thee, coward.
And live to be the show and gaze o' the
time:

We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,
Painted upon a pole, and underwrit,
'Here may you see the tyrant.'

Macb. I will not yield,
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's
feet,

And to be baited with the rabble's curse.
Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,

And thou oppos'd, being of no woman
born, 60

Yet I will try the last: before my body
I throw my war-like shield. Lay on, Macduff,

And damn'd be him that first cries 'Hold,
enough!'

Retreat. Flourish. Re-enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, old SIWARD, ROSS, Thanes, and Soldiers.

Mal. I would the friends we miss were safe arriv'd.

Siw. Some must go off; and yet, by these
I see,

So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son.

Ross. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt:

He only liv'd but till he was a man;
The which no sooner had his prowess con-
firm'd 70

In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.

Siw. Then he is dead?

Ross. Ay, and brought off the field. Your cause of sorrow

Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Siw. Had he his hurts before?

Ross. Ay, on the front.

Siw. Why then, God's soldier be he!

Had I as many sons as I have hairs,

I would not wish them to a fairer death:

And so, his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I'll spend for him.

Siw. He's worth no more;

They say, he parted well, and paid his score:

And so, God be with him! Here comes newer comfort. 82

Re-enter MACDUFF, with MACBETH'S head.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art. Behold, where stands

The usurper's cursed head: the time is free:

I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's
pearl,

That speak my salutation in their minds;

Whose voices I desire aloud with mine;

Hail, King of Scotland!

All. Hail, King of Scotland!

Flourish.

Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time

Before we reckon with your several loves, 90

And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,

Henceforth be earls, the first that ever
Scotland

In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do

Which would be planted newly with the
time,

As calling home our exil'd friends abroad

That fled the snares of watchful tyranny,

Producing forth the cruel ministers

Of this dead butcher and his fiend-like
queen,

Who, as 't is thought, by self and violent
hands

Took off her life; this, and what needful
else 100

That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace

We will perform in measure, time, and
place:

So thanks to all at once and to each one,

Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.

Flourish. Exeunt.

HAMLET

IT needs not Shakespeare to find in every human life a mystery. That he found it in Hamlet is true, but no more true than that he found it in every other character he ever drew. The widespread notion that there is something mysterious about Hamlet has led to much speculation that has befogged a play which by every right should make a particular appeal to youth, not only through the character of its hero, but also because of its general clarity. The tragedy of Hamlet furnishes, of course, texts for endless philosophical speculation, as do the daily experiences for that matter in the life of a newsboy; but such speculation adds nothing to our understanding of the play. To understand Hamlet, it is enough to read the play observingly.

As is his usual custom when drawing a great character, Shakespeare supplies us with a key in one of Hamlet's earliest utterances which opens the door to a sufficient understanding of his character. When the Queen pleads with Hamlet to cast his "nighted color off," reminds him that loss of fathers is "common," and adds

"If it be,

Why seems it so particular with thee?"

Hamlet in his reply frankly hands us the key to his character and, through that, to the tragedy itself:

"Seems, madam? nay, it is; I know not seems."

This line alone, if taken at its full value, is all we need in explanation of Hamlet's tragedy; but lest we should not grasp its full import, Shakespeare makes Hamlet proceed to apply it to the case in hand—his mourning for his father's death:

" 'T is not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, modes, shows of grief,
That can denote me truly; these indeed seem.
For they are actions that a man might play;
But I have that within which passeth show;
These but the trappings and the suits of woe."

Now after that speech any failure to understand Hamlet must be due to some defect in our own natures. If we have ourselves become so "brazen" by "damned custom" that we substitute, even though unconscious of the deception, the outward livery for the inward grief, we shall understand neither Hamlet nor his tragedy, however much we may seem to admire this particular piece of dramatic literature. Hamlet is real; and to him grief and love and friendship and all the inner things of life are real. If he conforms to outward customs, he never loses the distinction between appearance and reality. And this implies, of course, that he is a youth of keenest sensibilities—one who by nature would suffer most severely from any great shock to his affections or to his moral sense. When first we see him, he is already suffering under a series of such shocks, chief among which are the death of his father and the speedy re-marriage of his mother. How far these shocks have deflected Hamlet from his normal self, we surmise as the play proceeds from the testimony of those who have known him in his happier days. At the outset, we can only imagine the change in him by drawing on our own experience. And yet, the danger is that even our own experiences will, because we are so much the victims of seeming, fail properly to stimulate our imaginations. We must be ever on guard against losing Hamlet's key—"I know not seems." With this in hand, let us consider further these shocks and their effect upon Hamlet.

Assuming then, that we know no more than has been revealed to us up to the time that Hamlet hands us this key, what do we really know? We know that his father is dead; that he was of "fair and warlike form"; that the memory of his death is still "green" even in the court; that the Queen is already re-married to her former husband's brother; that this incestuous marriage was freely acquiesced in by the "better wisdoms" of the court; that Hamlet alone at the court still wears mourning for the dead king, and that his feelings toward the present king are to say the least "less than kind." Now read merely as a record of fact this list may not appear impressive; but imagined as the experiences through which a nature like Hamlet's has passed, we may well wonder that when we first see him he retains his reason. We need not wonder that when left alone his first wish is for death. Let the reader examine again that speech beginning "O! that this too too solid flesh would melt" in the light of this review, and particularly with "I know not seems" in mind, and he will wonder not so much at the mental depression under which Hamlet is suffering as that he is still capable of such coherent utterance.

And now follow further shocks: the appearance of his father's ghost; the ghost's revelation of the Queen's adulterous relations with Claudius; and the confirmation of his soul's loathing for Claudius in the discovery that he is the murderer of Hamlet's father. With mind and body reeling under these added shocks, Hamlet hears imposed upon him the solemn duty of revenge and the parting injunction of the ghost, "Remember me."

There is no room here to expatiate, nor is there need to do so. Let any reader, and especially any young man to whom his father is one whose like he ne'er will look upon again and whose mother has always been to him the highest ideal of womanhood, live through, even in imagination, this experience of Hamlet's; let such a young man profess (if he dares) to "know not seems"; let him be an athlete, a soldier, even a Hercules; and then let him ask himself whether, if he escape insanity from such a series of shocks, he could possibly escape some form of mental abnormality that would interfere with the free course of his action. It is not necessary to his understanding of either Hamlet or the play that he shall imagine himself pursuing Hamlet's course in procrastination; it is necessary only that he shall recognize that Hamlet's procrastination is but a manifestation of an abnormal state of mind induced by the experiences through which he has passed.

That Hamlet's abnormality at no time reaches the point of insanity, that is, of irresponsibility for his acts, is too obvious for discussion. It is not Shakespeare's way to trick us in such matters. The exact nature of his mental ailment may be diagnosed by experts, who will, as usual, disagree. Hamlet is not a study in mental disorders; it is not a study in anything. It is a story of the effects of sin—of lust and murder and incest—not only upon the guilty, but upon the innocent. It involves the innocent Ophelia as well as the guilty Queen; the inoffensive but meddlesome Polonius and his braggart son Laertes; the officious fools, Rosencrantz and Guildenstern; and with the deaths of King Claudius and the "sweet prince" wipes out the royal family from the state of Denmark. Had Hamlet himself been a less sensitive soul; had love and grief and ideals been to him only seeming, he might have retained his balance and acted instantly in revenge, thus avoiding the widespread consequences of the sin of Claudius and Gertrude. As he is, however, he is the more terrible. It is the dynamic and explosive effect of Hamlet's character in its reaction to the sin of others that makes him perhaps the most terrible of all Shakespeare's tragic characters.

This explosive effect is heightened by the resisting power of a marked excellence in the character of King Claudius. It belittles Hamlet if we accept his estimate of his awful antagonist. Claudius is no hardened villain; there is genuine virtue in him. The rankness of his offense pursues him. He is the victim of his guilty love for Gertrude. That sin led him to another—the murder of his own brother. The object of his love attained, he would live at peace with all men. It is not until he finds that Hamlet is in his secret—that either he or Hamlet must die—that his resourcefulness becomes apparent. In this he is great, and in his greatness as an opponent he adds lustre to Hamlet. The power of dynamite shows most upon the resisting rock; not on "shreds and patches."

ACT I

SCENE I.—Elsinore. A Platform before the Castle.

FRANCISCO at his post. Enter to him BERNARDO.

Ber. Who's there?

Fran. Nay, answer me; stand, and unfold yourself.

Ber. Long live the king!

Fran. Bernardo?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'T is now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief much thanks; 't is bitter cold,

And I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard?

Fran. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
 The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Fran. I think I hear them. Stand, ho! Who's there?

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O! farewell, honest soldier:

Who hath reliev'd you?

Fran. Bernardo has my place.

Give you good night.

Exit.

Mar. Holla! Bernardo! Say.

Ber. What! is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him.

Ber. Welcome, Horatio; welcome, good Marcellus.

Mar. What! has this thing appear'd again to-night?

Ber. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says 't is but our fantasy, And will not let belief take hold of him Touching this dreaded sight twice seen of us:

Therefore I have entreated him along With us to watch the minutes of this night; That if again this apparition come, He may approve our eyes and speak to it.

Hor. Tush, tush! 't will not appear.

Ber. Sit down awhile, And let us once again assail your ears, That are so fortified against our story, What we two nights have seen.

Hor. Well, sit we down, And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.

Ber. Last night of all, When yond same star that's westward from the pole

Had made his course to illume that part of heaven

Where now it burns, Marcellus and myself, The bell then beating one,—

Mar. Peace! break thee off; look, where it comes again!

Enter Ghost.

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a scholar; speak to it, Horatio.

Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio.

Hor. Most like; it harrows me with fear and wonder.

Ber. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Question it, Horatio.

Hor. What art thou that usurp'st this time of night,

Together with that fair and war-like form
In which the majesty of buried Denmark
Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee, speak!

Mar. It is offended.

Ber. See! it stalks away.

Hor. Stay! speak: speak, I charge thee, speak! Exit Ghost.

Mar. 'T is gone, and will not answer.

Ber. How now, Horatio! you tremble and look pale;

Is not this something more than fantasy?

What think you on 't?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe

Without the sensible and true avouch

Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the king?

Hor. As thou art to thyself:

Such was the very armour he had on

When he the ambitious Norway combated;

So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle,

He smote the sledded Polacks on the ice.

'T is strange.

Mar. Thus twice before, and jump at this dead hour,

With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work I know not;

But in the gross and scope of my opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,

Why this same strict and most observant watch

So nightly toils the subject of the land;

And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,

And foreign mart for implements of war;

Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task

Does not divide the Sunday from the week;

What might be toward, that this sweaty haste

Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day;

Who is 't that can inform me?

Hor. That can I;

At least the whisper goes so. Our last king,

Whose image even but now appear'd to us,

Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,

Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate pride,

Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant

Hamlet,

For so this side of our known world esteem'd

him,

Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact,

Well ratified by law and heraldry,
Did forfeit with his life all those his lands

Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror;
Against the which, a moiety competent

Was gaged by our king; which had return'd
To the inheritance of Fortinbras,

Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same covenant

And carriage of the article design'd,
His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, young Fortinbras,

Of unimproved mettle hot and full,
Hath in the skirts of Norway here and there

Shark'd up a list of lawless resolute,
For food and diet, to some enterprise

That hath a stomach in 't; which is no other,
As it doth well appear unto our state,

But to recover of us, by strong hand
And terms compulsative, those foresaid lands

So by his father lost. And this, I take it,
Is the main motive of our preparations,

The source of this our watch and the chief head

Of this post-haste and romage in the land.

Ber. I think it be no other but e'en so;

Well may it sort that this portentous figure Comes armed through our watch, so like the

king,

That was and is the question of these wars.

Hor. A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye.

In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
A little ere the mighty Julius fell,

The graves stood tenantless and the sheeted dead

Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets;

As stars with trains of fire and dews of blood,
Disasters in the sun; and the moist star

Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands

Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse; 120
And even the like precursor of fierce events,

As harbingers preceding still the fates
And prologue to the omen coming on,

Have heaven and earth together demonstrated

Unto our climates and countrymen.
But, soft! behold! lo! where it comes again.

Re-enter Ghost.

I'll cross it, though it blast me. Stay, illusion!

If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,

Speak to me:

If there be any good thing to be done,

That may to thee do ease and grace to me,

Speak to me:

If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which happily foreknowing may avoid,

O! speak;

Or if thou hast uphoarded in thy life

Extorted treasure in the womb of earth,

For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in

death,

Speak of it: stay, and speak! Stop it, Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partisan?

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Ber. 'T is here!

Hor. 'T is here!

Mar. 'T is gone! Exit Ghost.

We do it wrong, being so majestic,

To offer it the show of violence;

For it is, as the air, invulnerable,

And our vain blows malicious mockery.

Ber. It was about to speak when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing

Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,

The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn, 150

Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat

Awake the god of day; and, at his warning,

Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,

The extravagant and erring spirit hies

To his confine; and of the truth herein

This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock. Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes

Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated, 159

The bird of dawning singeth all night long;

And then, they say, no spirit can walk abroad;

The nights are wholesome; then no planets

strike,

No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,

So hallow'd and so gracious is the time.

Hor. So have I heard and do in part believe it.

But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,

Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill;

Break we our watch up; and by my advice

Let us impart what we have seen to-night

Unto young Hamlet; for, upon my life, 170

This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him.

Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,

As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do 't, I pray; and I this morning know

Where we shall find him most conveniently.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room of State in the Castle.

Enter the KING, QUEEN, HAMLET, POL-

ONIUS, LAERTES, VOLTIMAND, COR-

NELIUS, Lords, and Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear

brother's death

The memory be green, and that it us befitted

To bear our hearts in grief and our whole kingdom

To be contracted in one brow of woe,

Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature

That we with wisest sorrow think on him,

Together with remembrance of ourselves.

Therefore our sometime sister, now our

queen,

The imperial jointress of this war-like state,

Have we, as 't were with a defeated joy, 10

With one auspicious and one dropping eye,

With mirth in funeral and with dirge in marriage,

In equal scale weighing delight and dole,

Taken to wife: nor have we herein barr'd

Your better wisdoms, which have freely

gone

With this affair along: for all, our thanks.

Now follows, that you know, young Fortin-

bras,

Holding a weak supposal of our worth,

Or thinking by our late dear brother's

death

Our state to be disjoint and out of frame, 20

Collegued with the dream of his advantage,

He hath not fail'd to pester us with message,

Importing the surrender of those lands

Lost by his father, with all bonds of law,

To our most valiant brother. So much for

him.

Now for ourself and for this time of meet-

ing.

Thus much the business is: we have here

writ

To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,

Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears

Of this his nephew's purpose, to suppress 30

His further gait herein; in that the levies,

The lists and full proportions, are all made

Out of his subject; and we here dispatch

You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand,

For bearers of this greeting to old Norway,

Giving to you no further personal power

To business with the king more than the scope

Of these dilated articles allow.

Farewell, and let your haste commend your duty.

Cor., Vol. In that and all things will we show our duty. 40

King. We doubt it nothing: heartily fare-

well.

Exeunt VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

And now, Laertes, what's the news with

you?

You told us of some suit; what is 't, Laertes?

You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,

And lose your voice; what would'st thou beg, Laertes,

That shall not be my offer, not thy asking?

The head is not more native to the heart,

The hand more instrumental to the mouth,

Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.

What would'st thou have, Laertes?

Laer. Dread my lord,

Your leave and favour to return to France;

From whence though willingly I came to

Denmark, 52

To show my duty in your coronation,

Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,

My thoughts and wishes bend again toward

France

And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave?

What says Polonius?

Pol. He hath, my lord, wrung from me

my slow leave

By laboursome petition, and at last

Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent: 60
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,

And thy best graces spend it at thy will.

But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. Aside. A little more than kin, and less than kind.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much i'
the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour off,

And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.

Do not for ever with thy veiled lids 70

Seek for thy noble father in the dust:

Thou know'st 't is common; all that lives
must die,

Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be,

Why seems it so particular with thee?

Ham. Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know not 'seems.'

'T is not alone my inky cloak, good mother,

Nor customary suits of solemn black,

Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,

No, nor the fruitful river in the eye, 80

Nor the dejected haviour of the visage,

Together with all forms, modes, shows of
grief,

That can denote me truly; these indeed
seem.

For they are actions that a man might play;

But I have that within which passeth show;

These but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'T is sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,

To give these mourning duties to your
father:

But, you must know, your father lost a
father;

That father lost, lost his; and the survivor
bound 90

In filial obligation for some term

To do obsequious sorrow; but to persever

In obstinate condolence is a course

Of impious stubbornness; 't is unmanly
grief;

It shows a will most incorrect to heaven,

A heart unfortified, a mind impatient,

An understanding simple and unschool'd:

For what we know must be and is as common

As any the most vulgar thing to sense,

Why should we in our peevish opposition 100

Take it to heart? Fie! 't is a fault to heaven,

A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,

To reason most absurd, whose common
theme

Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,

From the first corse till he that died to-day,

'This must be so.' We pray you, throw to earth

This unprevailing woe, and think of us

As of a father; for let the world take note,

You are the most immediate to our throne;

And with no less nobility of love 110
Than that which dearest father bears his
son

Do I impart toward you. For your intent

In going back to school in Wittenberg,

It is most retrograde to our desire;

And we beseech you, bend you to remain

Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,

Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers, Hamlet;

I pray thee, stay with us; go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best obey you,
madam. 120

King. Why, 't is a loving and a fair reply:

Be as ourself in Denmark. Madam, come;

This gentle and unforc'd accord of Hamlet

Sits smiling to my heart; in grace whereof,

No jocund health that Denmark drinks today,

But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell,

And the king's rouse the heavens shall bruit
again,

Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.

Flourish. Exeunt KING, QUEEN, Lords,

etc., POLONIUS, and LAERTES.

Ham. O! that this too too solid flesh would melt,

Thaw and resolve itself into a dew; 130

Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd

His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God!
God!

How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable

Seem to me all the uses of this world.

Fie on 't! ah fie! 't is an unweeded garden,

That grows to seed; things rank and gross
in nature

Possess it merely. That it should come to this!

But two months dead: nay, not so much,
not two:

So excellent a king; that was, to this, 139

Hyperion to a satyr; so loving to my mother
That he might not beteem the winds of
heaven

Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!

Must I remember? why, she would hang on
him,

As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on; and yet, within a month,

Let me not think on 't: Frailty, thy name is woman!

A little month; or ere those shoes were old
With which she follow'd my poor father's

body,

Like Niobe, all tears: why she, even she—O God! a beast, that wants discourse of reason, 150

Would have mourn'd longer,—married with
my uncle,

My father's brother, but no more like my
father

Than I to Hercules: within a month,
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears

Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married. O! most wicked speed, to post

With such dexterity to incestuous sheets.
It is not nor it cannot come to good;
But break, my heart, for I must hold my
tongue!

Enter HORATIO, MARCELLUS, and BERNARDO.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you well:
Horatio, or I do forget myself. 161

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change that name with you.

And what make you from Wittenberg,
Horatio?

Marcellus?

Mar. My good lord,—

Ham. I am very glad to see you. To BERNARDO. Good even, sir.

But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so,
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence, 171
To make it truster of your own report

Against yourself; I know you are no truant.
But what is your affair in Elsinore?

We'll teach you to drink deep ere you de-
part.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow student;

I think it was to see my mother's wedding.
Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral bak'd meats 180

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven

Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio!
My father, methinks I see my father.

Hor. O! where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once; he was a goodly
king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in
all,

I shall not look upon his like again.
Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yester-
night.

Ham. Saw who? 190

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham. The king my father!

Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an attent ear, till I may deliver,
Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvel to you.

Ham. For God's love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen,

Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
In the dead vast and middle of the night,

Been thus encounter'd: a figure like your
father,

Armed at point exactly, cap-a-pe, 200
Appears before them, and with solemn march

Goes slow and stately by them: thrice he walk'd

By their oppress'd and fear-surprised eyes, Within his truncheon's length; whilst they,
distill'd

Almost to jelly with the act of fear, Stand dumb and speak not to him. This to
me

In dreadful secrecy impart they did,
And I with them the third night kept the
watch;

Where, as they had deliver'd, both in time,
Form of the thing, each word made true and good, 210

The apparition comes. I knew your father;
These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this?

Mar. My lord, upon the platform where we watch'd.

Ham. Did you not speak to it?

Hor. My lord, I did;

But answer made it none; yet once me-
thought

It lifted up its head and did address
Itself to motion, like as it would speak;

But even then the morning cock crew loud,
And at the sound it shrunk in haste away,
And vanish'd from our sight.

Ham. T'is very strange.

Hor. As I do live, my honour'd lord, 't is
true; 221

And we did think it writ down in our duty
To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me.

Hold you the watch to-night?

Mar., Ber. We do, my lord.

Ham. Arm'd, say you?

Mar., Ber. Arm'd, my lord.

Ham. From top to toe?

Mar., Ber. My lord, from head to foot.

Ham. Then saw you not his face?

Hor. O, yes! my lord; he wore his beaver
up.

Ham. What! look'd he frowningly? 231

Hor. A countenance more in sorrow than in anger.

Ham. Pale or red?

Hor. Nay, very pale.

Ham. And fix'd his eyes upon you?

Hor. Most constantly.

Ham. I would I had been there.

Hor. It would have much amaz'd you.

Ham. Very like, very like. Stay'd it long?

Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.

Mar., Ber. Longer, longer.

Hor. Not when I saw't.

Ham. His beard was grizzled? no?

Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life, 241
A sable silver'd.

Ham. I will watch to-night;

Perchance 't will walk again.

Hor. I warrant it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble father's person,

I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight,

Let it be tenable in your silence still;
And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue: 250
I will requite your loves. So, fare you well.
Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,
I'll visit you.

All. Our duty to your honour.

Ham. Your loves, as mine to you. Farewell.

Exeunt HORATIO, MARCELLUS, and BERNARDO.

My father's spirit in arms! all is not well;
I doubt some foul play: would the night were come!
Till then sit still, my soul. Foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes. Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in POLONIUS's House.

Enter LAERTES and OPHELIA.

Laer. My necessities are embark'd;
farewell:

And, sister, as the winds give benefit
And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that?
Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favour,

Hold it a fashion and a toy in blood,
A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,
The perfume and suppliance of a minute;
No more.

Oph. No more but so?

Laer. Think it no more:
For nature crescent does not grow alone 11
In thews and bulk; but, as this temple
waxes,

The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal. Perhaps he loves you
now,

And now no soil nor cautel doth besmirch
The virtue of his will; but you must fear,
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his
own,

For he himself is subject to his birth;
He may not, as unvalu'd persons do, 19
Carve for himself, for on his choice depends
The safety and the health of the whole state;
And therefore must his choice be circum-
scrib'd

Unto the voice and yielding of that body Whereof he is the head. Then if he says he loves you,

As fits your wisdom so far to believe it
As he in his particular act and place
May give his saying deed; which is no further

Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.
Then weigh what loss your honour may sus-tain,

If with too credent ear you list his songs, 30
Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open

To his unmaster'd importunity.

Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister,

And keep you in the rear of your affection,
Out of the shot and danger of desire.
The chariest maid is prodigal enough
If she unmask her beauty to the moon;
Virtue itself 'scapes not calumnious strokes;
The canker galls the infants of the spring
Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd. 40
And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
Contagious blastments are most imminent.
Be wary then; best safety lies in fear:
Youth to itself rebels, though none else
near.

Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson
keep,

As watchman to my heart. But, good my
brother,

Do not, as some ungracious pastors do, Show me the steep and thorny way to
heaven,

Whiles, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads, 50

And reckns not his own rede.
Laer. O! fear me not.
I stay too long; but here my father comes.

Enter POLONIUS.

A double blessing is a double grace;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard,
for shame!

The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
And you are stay'd for. There; my blessing with thee!

And these few precepts in thy memory
See thou character. Give thy thoughts no
tongue,

Nor any unproportion'd thought his act. 60
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar;
The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,

Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledg'd comrade.

Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel, but being in,
Bear't that the opposed may beware of
thee.

Give every man thine ear, but few thy
voice;

Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy, 70
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man,
And they in France of the best rank and station

Are most select and generous, chief in that.
Neither a borrower nor a lender be:
For loan oft loses both itself and friend,

And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all: to thine own self be true,

And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man. 80
Farewell; my blessing season this in thee!

Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave,
my lord.

Pol. The time invites you; go, your servants tend.

Laer. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well

What I have said to you.

Oph. 'T is in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell.

Exit.

Pol. What is 't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?

Oph. So please you, something touching the lord Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought:

'T is told me, he hath very oft of late Given private time to you; and you yourself

Have of your audience been most free and bounteous.

If it be so, as so 't is put on me,
And that is with of caution, I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly
As it behoves my daughter and your honour.
What is between you? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders

Of his affection to me.

100

Pol. Affection! pooh! you speak like a green girl,

Unsifted in such perilous circumstance.

Do you believe his tenders, as you call
them?

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself a baby,

That you have ta'en these tenders for true
pay,

Which are not sterling. Tender yourself
more dearly;

Or, not to crack the wind of the poor phrase,
Running it thus, you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importun'd me with love

110

In honourable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it; go to,
go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,

With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do know,

When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows; these blazes,

daughter,
Giving more light than heat, extinct in both,
Even in their promise, as it is a-making,

You must not take for fire. From this time
Be somewhat scanter of your maiden presence;

121

Set your entreatments at a higher rate
Than a command to parley. For Lord

Hamlet,

Believe so much in him, that he is young,
And with a larger tether may he walk

Than may be given you: in few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows, for they are brokers

Not of that dye which their investments
show,

But mere implorators of unholy suits,

129

Breathing like sanctified and pious bawds,
The better to beguile. This is for all:

I would not, in plain terms, from this time
forth,

Have you so slander any moment's leisure,
As to give words or talk with the Lord Hamlet.

Look to 't, I charge you; come your ways.

Oph. I shall obey, my lord. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Platform.

Enter HAMLET, HORATIO, and MARCELLUS.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.

Hor. It is a nipping and an eager air.

Ham. What hour now?

Hor. I think it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No, it is struck.

Hor. Indeed? I heard it not: it then draws near the season

Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

A flourish of trumpets, and ordnance shot off, within.

What does this mean, my lord?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night and takes his rouse,

Keeps wassail, and the swaggering up-
spring reels;

And as he drains his draughts of Rhenish
down,

10

The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom?

Ham. Ay, marry, is 't;
But to my mind, though I am native here

And to the manner born, it is a custom
More honour'd in the breach than the observance.

This heavy-headed revel east and west
Makes us traduc'd and tax'd of other nations;

They clepe us drunkards, and with swinish phrase

Soil our addition; and indeed it takes 20

From our achievements, though perform'd
at height,

The pith and marrow of our attribute.
So, oft it chanceth in particular men,

That for some vicious mole of nature in
them,

As, in their birth, wherein they are not guilty,

Since nature cannot choose his origin,
By the o'ergrowth of some complexion,

Oft breaking down the pales and forts of
reason,

Or by some habit that too much o'er-leavens
The form of plausive manners; that these
men,

30

Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect,
Being nature's livery, or fortune's star,

Their virtues else, be they as pure as grace,
As infinite as man may undergo,

Shall in the general censure take corruption
From that particular fault: the dram of eale

Doth all the noble substance of a doubt
To his own scandal.

Enter Ghost.

Hor. Look, my lord, it comes!

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!
 Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damn'd,
 Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts from hell, 41
 Be thy intents wicked or charitable,
 Thou com'st in such a questionable shape
 That I will speak to thee: I'll call thee Hamlet,
 King, father; royal Dane, O! answer me:
 Let me not burst in ignorance; but tell
 Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearsed in death, Have burst their cerements; why the sepulchre,
 Wherein we saw thee quietly inurn'd, 49
 Hath open'd his ponderous and marble jaws,
 To cast thee up again. What may this mean,
 That thou, dead corse, again in complete steel
 Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon, Making night hideous; and we fools of nature
 So horribly to shake our disposition With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?
 Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do? Ghost beckons HAMLET.
Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
 As if it some impartment did desire
 To you alone.
Mar. Look, with what courteous action
 It waves you to a more removed ground: 61
 But do not go with it.
Hor. No, by no means.
Ham. It will not speak; then I will follow
 it.
Hor. Do not, my lord.
Ham. Why, what should be the fear?
 I do not set my life at a pin's fee;
 And for my soul, what can it do to that,
 Being a thing immortal as itself?
 It waves me forth again; I'll follow it.
Hor. What if it tempt you toward the flood, my lord,
 Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff 70
 That beetles o'er his base into the sea,
 And there assume some other horrible form,
 Which might deprive your sovereignty of
 reason
 And draw you into madness? think of it;
 The very place puts toys of desperation,
 Without more motive, into every brain
 That looks so many fathoms to the sea
 And hears it roar beneath.
Ham. It waves me still: go on, I'll follow
 thee. 79
Mar. You shall not go, my lord.
Ham. Hold off your hands!
Hor. Be rul'd; you shall not go.
Ham. My fate cries out,
 And makes each petty artery in this body
 As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.
Ghost beckons.
 Still am I call'd. Unhand me, gentlemen.
Breaking from them.
 By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets
 me!
 I say, away! Go on, I'll follow thee.
Exeunt Ghost and HAMLET.

Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination.
Mar. Let's follow; 't is not fit thus to obey him.
Hor. Have after. To what issue will this
 come?
Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Denmark. 90
Hor. Heaven will direct it.
Mar. Nay, let's follow him.
Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Platform.

Enter Ghost and HAMLET.

Ham. Where wilt thou lead me? speak;
 I'll go no further.
Ghost. Mark me.
Ham. I will.
Ghost. My hour is almost come.
 When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames
 Must render up myself.
Ham. Alas! poor ghost.
Ghost. Pity me not, but lend thy serious hearing
 To what I shall unfold.
Ham. Speak; I am bound to hear.
Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.
Ham. What?
Ghost. I am thy father's spirit;
 Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night,
 And for the day confin'd to fast in fires, 11
 Till the foul crimes done in my days of nature
 Are burnt and purg'd away. But that I am, forbid
 To tell the secrets of my prison-house,
 I could a tale unfold whose lightest word
 Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young
 blood,
 Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres,
 Thy knotted and combined locks to part,
 And each particular hair to stand an end,
 Like quills upon the fretful porpentine; 20
 But this eternal blazon must not be
 To ears of flesh and blood. List, list, O list!
 If thou didst ever thy dear father love—
Ham. O God!
Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder.
Ham. Murder!
Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best
 it is;
 But this most foul, strange, and unnatural.
Ham. Haste me to know 't, that I, with wings as swift
 As meditation or the thoughts of love, 30
 May sweep to my revenge.
Ghost. I find thee apt:
 And duller should'st thou be than the fat
 weed
 That roots itself in ease on Lethe wharf, Would'st thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet, hear:
 'T is given out that, sleeping in mine
 orchard,

A serpent stung me; so the whole ear of Denmark

Is by a forged process of my death
Rankly abus'd; but know, thou noble youth,

The serpent that did sting thy father's life
Now wears his crown.

Ham. O my prophetic soul!
My uncle! 41

Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,
With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts,

O wicked wit and gifts, that have the power
So to seduce! won to his shameful lust
The will of my most seeming-virtuous queen.
O Hamlet! what a falling-off was there;
From me, whose love was of that dignity
That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage; and to decline 50
Upon a wretch whose natural gifts were poor
To those of mine!

But virtue, as it never will be mov'd,
Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven.

So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,
Will sate itself in a celestial being,
And prey on garbage.

But, soft! methinks I scent the morning air;
Brief let me be. Sleeping within mine orchard,

My custom always in the afternoon, 60
Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
With juice of cursed hebenon in a vial,
And in the porches of mine ears did pour
The leperous distilment; whose effect
Holds such an enmity with blood of man
That swift as quicksilver it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body,
And with a sudden vigour it doth posset
And curd, like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood; so did it
mine; 70

And a most instant tetter bark'd about,
Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust,

All my smooth body.
Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dispatch'd;

Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhous'd, disappointed, unanel'd,
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head;
O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible! 80
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;
Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
A couch for luxury and damned incest.
But, howsoever thou pursu'st this act,
Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive Against thy mother aught; leave her to
heaven,

And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once!

The glow-worm shows the matin to be near,
And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire; 90
Adieu, adieu! Hamlet, remember me.

Exit.

Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth! What else?

And shall I couple hell? O fie! Hold, hold, my heart;

And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,

But bear me stiffly up! Remember thee!
Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat

In this distracted globe. Remember thee!
Yea, from the table of my memory
I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,
All saws of books, all forms, all pressures 100
past,

That youth and observation copied there;
And thy commandment all alone shall live
Within the book and volume of my brain,
Unmix'd with baser matter: yes, by heaven!
O most pernicious woman!

O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!
My tables,—meet it is I set it down,
That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain;

At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmark:
Writing.

So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word;
It is 'Adieu, adieu! remember me.' 111
I have sworn 't.

Hor. Within. My lord! my lord!

Mar. Within. Lord Hamlet!

Hor. Within. Heaven secure him!

Ham. So be it!

Hor. Within. Hillo, ho, ho, my lord!

Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come.

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Mar. How is 't, my noble lord?

Hor. What news, my lord?

Ham. O! wonderful.

Hor. Good my lord, tell it.

Ham. No; you will reveal it.

Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.

Mar. Nor I, my lord.

Ham. How say you, then; would heart of man once think it? 121

But you 'll be secret?

Hor., Mar. Ay, by heaven, my lord.

Ham. There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Denmark

But he's an arrant knave.

Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave,

To tell us this.

Ham. Why, right; you are i' the right;
And so, without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit that we shake hands and part;
You, as your business and desire shall point you,

For every man hath business and desire, 130
Such as it is; and, for mine own poor part,
Look you, I'll go pray.

Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.

Ham. I'm sorry they offend you, heartily;
Yes, faith, heartily.

Hor. There's no offence, my lord.

Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is, Horatio,

And much offence too. Touching this vision here,

It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you;
For your desire to know what is between us,
O'ermaster 't as you may. And now, good friends, 140

As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers,
Give me one poor request.

Hor. What is 't, my lord? we will.

Ham. Never make known what you have seen to-night.

Hor., Mar. My lord, we will not.

Ham. Nay, but swear 't.

Hor. In faith,

My lord, not I.

Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith.

Ham. Upon my sword.

Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already.

Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.

Ghost. Beneath. Swear.

Ham. Ah, ha, boy! say'st thou so? art thou there, true-penny? 150

Come on,—you hear this fellow in the cellarage,—

Consent to swear.

Hor. Propose the oath, my lord.

Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen;

Swear by my sword.

Ghost. Beneath. Swear.

Ham. Hic et ubique? then we 'll shift our ground.

Come hither, gentlemen,

And lay your hands again upon my sword:
Never to speak of this that you have heard;

Swear by my sword. 160

Ghost. Beneath. Swear.

Ham. Well said, old mole! canst work i' the earth so fast?

A worthy pioner! Once more remove, good friends.

Hor. O day and night, but this is wondrous strange!

Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it welcome.

There are more things in heaven and earth,
Horatio,

Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.

But come;

Here, as before, never, so help you mercy,
How strange or odd soe'er I bear myself, 170

As I perchance hereafter shall think meet

To put an antick disposition on,

That you, at such times seeing me, never shall,

With arms encumber'd thus, or this head-shake,

Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,
As 'Well, well, we know,' or 'We could, an if we would,'

Or 'If we list to speak,' or 'There be, an if they might,'

Or such ambiguous giving out, to note
That you, at such times aught of me: this not to do,

So grace and mercy at your most need help you, 180

Swear.

Ghost. Beneath. Swear.

Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit!

They swear.

With all my love I do commend me to you:

And what so poor a man as Hamlet is

May do, to express his love and friending to you,

God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in together;

And still your fingers on your lips, I pray.

The time is out of joint; O cursed spite,

That ever I was born to set it right! 190

Nay, come; let's go together. Exeunt.

ACT II

SCENE I.—A Room in POLONIUS'S House.

Enter POLONIUS and REYNALDO.

Pol. Give him this money and these notes, Reynaldo.

Rey. I will, my lord.

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,

Before you visit him, to make inquire

Of his behaviour.

Rey. My lord, I did intend it.

Pol. Marry, well said, very well said.

Look you, sir,

Inquire me first what Danskers are in Paris;
And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,

What company, at what expense; and finding

By this encompassment and drift of question

That they do know my son, come you more nearer 11

Than your particular demands will touch it:
Take you, as 't were, some distant knowledge of him;

As thus, 'I know his father and his friends,
And, in part, him': do you mark this, Reynaldo?

Rey. Ay, very well, my lord.

Pol. 'And, in part, him; but,' you may say, 'not well:

But if 't be he I mean, he's very wild,
Addicted so and so'; and there put on him

What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank 20

As may dishonour him; take heed of that;
But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips

As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.

Rey. As gaming, my lord.

Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing,
quarrelling,

Drabbing; you may go so far.

Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge.

You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to incontinency; 30

That's not my meaning; but breathe his faults so quaintly

That they may seem the taints of liberty,
The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind,

A savageness in unreclaimed blood,
Of general assault.

Rey. But, my good lord,—
Pol. Wherefore should you do this?
Rey. Ay, my lord,
 I would know that.
Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift;
 And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant:
 You laying these slight sullies on my son,
 As 't were a thing a little soil'd i' the working, 40
 Mark you,
 Your party in converse, him you would sound,
 Having ever seen in the prenominate crimes
 The youth you breathe of guilty, be assur'd
 He closes with you in this consequence;
 'Good sir,' or so; or 'friend,' or 'gentleman,'
 According to the phrase or the addition
 Of man and country.

Rey. Very good, my lord.
Pol. And then, sir, does he this,—he does
 —What was I about to say? By the mass,
 I was about to say something: where did I leave? 51

Rey. At 'closes in the consequence,' at
 'friend or so,' and 'gentleman.'

Pol. At 'closes in the consequence,' ay, marry;
 He closes with you thus: 'I know the gentle-
 man;

I saw him yesterday, or t' other day,
 Or then, or then; with such, or such; and,
 as you say,

There was a' gaming; there o'ertook in 's
 rouse;

There falling out at tennis'; or perchance,
 'I saw him enter such a house of sale,' 60
Videlicet, a brothel, or so forth.

See you now;
 Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth;
 And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,
 With windlasses and with assays of bias,
 By indirections find directions out:
 So by my former lecture and advice Shall you my son. You have me, have you
 not?

Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God be wi' you; fare you well.

Rey. Good my lord! 70

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Rey. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his music.

Rey. Well, my lord.

Pol. Farewell! Exit REYNALDO.

Enter OPHELIA.

How now, Ophelia! what's the matter?
Oph. Alas! my lord, I have been so affrighted.

Pol. With what, i' the name of God?

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet,

Lord Hamlet, with his doublet all unbrac'd;
 No hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd,
 Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his ankle; 80
 Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each
 other;

And with a look so piteous in purport
 As if he had been loosed out of hell
 To speak of horrors, he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love?
Oph. My lord, I do not know;
 But truly I do fear it.

Pol. What said he?
Oph. He took me by the wrist and held me hard,

Then goes he to the length of all his arm,
 And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,
 He falls to such perusal of my face

As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so;
 At last, a little shaking of mine arm,

And thrice his head thus waving up and
 down,

He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound
 That it did seem to shatter all his bulk

And end his being. That done, he turns me
 go,

And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,
 He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;

For out o' doors he went without their help,
 And to a little bended their light on me. 100

Pol. Come, go with me; I will go seek the
 king.

This is the very ecstasy of love,
 Whose violent property fordoes itself
 And leads the will to desperate undertakings,

As oft as any passion under heaven,
 That does afflict our natures. I am sorry,—
 What! have you given him any hard words of late?

Oph. No, my good lord; but, as you did command,

I did repel his letters and denied

His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad.
 I am sorry that with better heed and judgment 111

I had not quoted him; I fear'd he did but trifle,

And meant to wreck thee; but, beshrew
 my jealousy!

By heaven, it is as proper to our age
 To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions

As it is common for the younger sort To lack discretion. Come, go we to the
 king:

This must be known; which, being kept close, might move

More grief to hide than hate to utter love.
 Come. Exeunt. 120

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Flourish. Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSEN-CRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz and Guildenstern!

Moreover that we much did long to see you,
 The need we have to use you did provoke

Our hasty sending. Something have you heard

Of Hamlet's transformation; so call it,
 Since not the exterior nor the inward man

Resembles that it was. What it should be,
 More than his father's death, that thus hath put him

 So much from the understanding of himself,
 I cannot dream of: I entreat you both, 10

That, being of so young days brought up
with him,
And since so neighbour'd to his youth and humour,
That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court

Some little time; so by your companies
To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather,
So much as from occasion you may glean,
Whether aught to us unknown afflicts him
thus,

That, open'd, lies within our remedy.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you; <sup>19</sup>
And sure I am two men there are not living
To whom he more adheres. If it will please
you

To show us so much gentry and good will
As to expend your time with us a while,
For the supply and profit of our hope,
Your visitation shall receive such thanks
As fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties Might, by the sovereign power you have of
us,

Put your dread pleasures more into command
Than to entreaty.

Guil. But we both obey,
And here give ourselves, in the full bent,
To lay our service freely at your feet, <sup>31</sup>
To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz and gentle
Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern and gentle Rosencrantz:

And I beseech you instantly to visit My too much changed son. Go, some of
you,

And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.
Guil. Heavens make our presence and our practices

Pleasant and helpful to him!

Queen. Ay, amen!
Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and some Attendants.

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my good lord, <sup>40</sup>
Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.

Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good liege,

I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,
Both to my God and to my gracious king;
And I do think, or else this brain of mine
Hunts not the trail of policy so sure
As it hath us'd to do, that I have found
The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O! speak of that; that do I long to hear. <sup>50</sup>

Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors;

My news shall be the fruit to that great
feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in. Exit POLONIUS.

He tells me, my sweet queen, that he hath found

The head and source of all your son's distemper.

Queen. I doubt it is no other but the main;

His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage.

King. Well, we shall sift him.

Re-enter POLONIUS, with VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway?

Volt. Most fair return of greetings and desires. <sup>60</sup>

Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His nephew's levies, which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack;
But, better look'd into, he truly found
It was against your highness: whereat
griev'd,

That so his sickness, age, and impotence
Was falsely borne in hand, sends out arrests
On Fortinbras; which he, in brief, obeys,
Receives rebuke from Norway, and in fine
Makes vow before his uncle never more <sup>70</sup>
To give the assay of arms against your majesty.

Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy, Gives him three thousand crowns in annual
fee,

And his commission to employ these soldiers.

So levied as before, against the Polack;
With an entreaty, herein further shown,

Giving a paper.
That it might please you to give quiet pass
Through your dominions for this enterprise,
On such regards of safety and allowance
As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well;
And at our more consider'd time we'll read,
Answer, and think upon this business: <sup>82</sup> Meantime we thank you for your well-took labour,

Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together:

Most welcome home!

Exeunt VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

Pol. This business is well ended.
My liege, and madam, to expostulate
What majesty should be, what duty is,
Why day is day, night night, and time is
time,

Were nothing but to waste night, day, and
time.

Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit, <sup>90</sup>
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes,

I will be brief. Your noble son is mad:
Mad call I it; for, to define true madness,
What is 't but to be nothing else but mad?
But let that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art.

Pol. Madam, I swear I use no art at all.
That he is mad, 't is true; 't is true 't is pity;
And pity 't is 't is true: a foolish figure;
But farewell it, for I will use no art.

Mad let us grant him, then; and now remains 100

That we find out the cause of this effect,
Or rather say, the cause of this defect,
For this effect defective comes by cause;
Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.
Perpend:

I have a daughter; have, while she is mine;
Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this. Now gather, and surmise.

To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautiful Opheelia,— 110

That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; 'beautified' is a vile phrase; but you shall hear.
Thus:

In her excellent white bosom, these, etc.

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?
Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful.

Doubt thou the stars are fire;

Doubt that the sun doth move;

Doubt truth to be a liar;

But never doubt I love. 119

O dear Opheelia! I am ill at these numbers: I have not art to reckon my groans; but that I love thee best, O most best! believe it. Adieu.

Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him,

HAMLET.

This in obedience hath my daughter shown me;

And more above, hath his solicitings,
As they fell out by time, by means, and place,

All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she Received his love?

Pol. What do you think of me?

King. As of a man faithful and honourable. 130

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think,

When I had seen this hot love on the wing,
As I perceiv'd it, I must tell you that,

Before my daughter told me, what might you,

Or my dear majesty, your queen here, think,
If I had play'd the desk or table-book,

Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb,

Or look'd upon this love with idle sight;
What might you think? No, I went round to work,

And my young mistress thus I did bespeak;
'Lord Hamlet is a prince, out of thy star: 141

This must not be': and then I precepts gave her,

That she should lock herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.

Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;

And he, repulsed, a short tale to make,
Fell into a sadness, then into a fast,

Thence to a watch, thence into a weakness,
Thence to a lightness; and by this declension

Into the madness wherein now he raves, 150
And all we wail for.

King. Do you think 't is this?

Queen. It may be, very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time, I'd fain know that,

That I have positively said 'T is so,'

When it prov'd otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Pointing to his head and shoulder.

Take this from this, if this be otherwise.

If circumstances lead me, I will find

Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed

Within the centre.

King. How may we try it further?

Pol. You know sometimes he walks four hours together 160

Here in the lobby.

Queen. So he does indeed.

Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter to him;

Be you and I behind an arras then,
Mark the encounter; if he love her not,

And be not from his reason fall'n thereon,
Let me be no assistant for a state,

But keep a farm and carters.

King. We will try it.

Queen. But, look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away! I do beseech you, both away. I'll board him presently.

Exeunt KING, QUEEN, and Attendants.

Enter HAMLET, reading.

O! give me leave.

How does my good Lord Hamlet? 171

Ham. Well, God-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord.

Ham. Then I would you were so honest a man.

Pol. Honest, my lord!

Ham. Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord. 180

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a god kissing carrion,—
Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk i' the sun: conception is a blessing; but not as your daughter may conceive. Friend, look to 't. 187

Pol. Aside. How say you by that? Still harping on my daughter; yet he knew me not at first; he said I was a fishmonger: he is far gone, far gone: and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love; very near this. I'll speak to him again. What do you read, my lord? 193

Ham. Words, words, words.

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?

Ham. Between who?

Pol. I mean the matter that you read, my lord.

Ham. Slanders, sir: for the satirical rogue says here that old men have grey beards, that their faces are wrinkled, their eyes purging thick amber and plum-tree gum, and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams: all which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for yourself, sir, should be old as I am, if like a crab you could go backward.

Pol. Aside. Though this be madness, yet there is method in 't. Will you walk out of the air, my lord?

Ham. Into my grave?

Pol. Indeed, that is out o' the air. Aside. How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter. My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me anything that I will more willingly part withal: except my life, except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Pol. You go to seek the Lord Hamlet; there he is.

Ros. To POLONIUS. God save you, sir!

Exit POLONIUS.

Guil. My honour'd lord!

Ros. My most dear lord!

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both?

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happy in that we are not overhappy;

On Fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours?

Guil. Faith, her privates we.

Ham. In the secret parts of Fortune? O! most true; she is a strumpet. What news?

Ros. None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest.

Ham. Then is doomsday near; but your news is not true. Let me question more in particular: what have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of Fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?

Guil. Prison, my lord!

Ham. Denmark's a prison.

Ros. Then is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one; in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons, Denmark being one o' the worst.

Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then 'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so: to me it is a prison.

Ros. Why, then your ambition makes it one: 'tis too narrow for your mind.

Ham. O God! I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guil. Which dreams indeed are ambition, for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggars bodies, and our monarchs and outstretched heroes the beggars' shadows. Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Ros., Guil. We 'll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter; I will not sort you with the rest of my servants, for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come, deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Why, any thing, but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for or no.

Ros. Aside to GUILDENSTERN. What say you?

Ham. Aside. Nay, then I have an eye of you. If you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen moulder on my feather. I have of late, but wherefore I know not, lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises; and indeed it goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! how noble in reason! how infinite in faculty!

in form and moving how express and admirable! in action how like an angel! in apprehension how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling you seem to say so. 323

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh then, when I said 'man delights not me'?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you; we coted them on the way; and hither are they coming to offer you service. 331

Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me; the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target; the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace; the clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickle o' the sere; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for 't. What players are they? 340

Ros. Even those you were wont to take delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? are they so followed? 350

Ros. No indeed they are not.

Ham. How comes it? do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace; but there is, sir, an aery of children, little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapped for 't: these are now the fashion, and so berattle the common stages, so they call them, that many wearing rapiers are afraid of goose-quills and dare scarce come thither. 363

Ham. What? are they children? who maintains 'em? how are they escoted? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players, as it is most like if their means are no better, their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession? 368

Ros. Faith, there has been much to-do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin to tarre them to controversy: there was, for a while, no money bid for argument, unless poet and the player went to cuffs in the question. 373

Ham. Is 't possible?

Guil. O! there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules and his load too. 379

Ham. It is not very strange; for my uncle is King of Denmark, and those that would make mows at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece, for his picture in little. 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.

Flourish of trumpets within.

Guil. There are the players. 386

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands. Come, then; the appurtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me comply with you in this garb, lest my extent to the players, which, I tell you, must show fairly outward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome; but my uncle-father and aunt-mother are deceived.

Guil. In what, my dear lord? 385

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly I know a hawk from a handsaw.

Re-enter POLONIUS.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern; and you too; at each ear a hearer: that great baby you see there is not yet out of his swaddling-clouts. 401

Ros. Happily he's the second time come to them; for they say an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy he comes to tell me of the players; mark it. You say right, sir; o' Monday morning; 't was so indeed. 407

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you. When Roscius was an actor in Rome,—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buz, buz!

Pol. Upon my honour. 413

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass,—

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral, scene individable, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou!

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why,

*One fair daughter, and no more,
The which he loved passing well.*

Pol. Aside. Still on my daughter.

Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well. 431

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows then, my lord?

Ham. Why,

*As by lot, God wot,
and then, you know,*

It came to pass, as most like it was,— the first row of the pious chanson will show you more; for look where my abridgment comes. 438

Enter four or five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all. I am glad to see ye well: welcome, good friends. O! my old friend. Why, thy face is valanced since I saw thee last: comest thou to beard me in Denmark? What! my young lady and mistress! By'r lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine. Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not cracked within the ring. Masters, you are all welcome. We'll e'en to't like French falconers, fly at any thing we see; we'll have a speech straight. Come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech. 451

First Play. What speech, my good lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once; for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 't was caviare to the general: but it was, as I received it, and others, whose judgments in such matters cried in the top of mine, an excellent play, well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember one said there were no sallets in the lines to make the matter savoury, nor no matter in the phrase that might indict the author of affectation; but called it an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved; 't was Aeneas' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter. If it live in your memory, begin at this line: let me see, let me see;— 471

The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast,—

't is not so; it begins with Pyrrhus:—

The rugged Pyrrhus, he whose sable arms, Black as his purpose, did the night resemble When he lay couched in the ominous horse, Hath now this dread and black complexion smear'd

With heraldry more dismal; head to foot Now is he total gules; horribly trick'd 479
With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons,

Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets,

That lend a tyrannous and a damned light To their vile murders: roasted in wrath and fire,

And thus o'er-sized with coagulate gore, With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus

Old grandsire Priam seeks.

So, proceed you.

Pol. Fore God, my lord, well spoken; with good accent and good discretion.

First Play. Anon he finds him Striking too short at Greeks; his antique sword,

Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls, 482
Repugnant to command. Unequal match'd,

Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage strikes wide;

But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword The unnerved father falls. Then senseless lump,

Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top Stoops to his base, and with a hideous crash Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his sword,

Which was declining on the milky head 500
Of reverend Priam, seem'd i' the air to stick:
So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood,
And like a neutral to his will and matter,
Did nothing.

But, as we often see, against some storm, A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still, The bold winds speechless and the orb be-

low
As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder Doth rend the region; so, after Pyrrhus'

pause,
Aroused vengeance sets him new a-work; 510
And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall
On Mars's armour, forg'd for proof eterne,
With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword

Now falls on Priam.

Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All you gods,

In general synod, take away her power; Break all the spokes and fellies from her wheel,

And bowl the round nave down the hill of heaven

As low as to the fiends!

Pol. This is too long. 520

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard. Prithee, say on: he's for a jig or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps. Say on; come to Hecuba.

First Play. But who, O! who had seen the mobled queen—

Ham. 'The mobled queen?'

Pol. That's good; 'mobled queen' is good.

First Play. Run barefoot up and down, threat'ning the flames

With bisson rheum; a clout upon that head Where late the diadem stood; and for a robe, 530

About her lank and all o'er-teemed loins, A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up; Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd,

'Gainst Fortune's state would treason have pronounc'd:

But if the gods themselves did see her then, When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport

In mincing with his sword her husband's limbs,

The instant burst of clamour that she made, Unless things mortal move them not at all, Would have made milch the burning eyes of heaven, 540

And passion in the gods.

Pol. Look! whe'er he has not turned his colour and has tears in 's eyes. Prithee, no more.

Ham. 'Tis well; I 'll have thee speak out the rest of this soon. Good my lord, will you see the players well bestow'd? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstracts and brief chronicles of the time: after your death you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live. 551

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.

Ham. God's bodikins, man, much better; use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs. 559

Ham. Follow him, friends: we 'll hear a play to-morrow.

Exit POLONIUS, with all the Players but the First.

Dost thou hear me, old friend; can you play the Murder of Gonzago?

First Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We 'll ha 't to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down and insert in 't, could you not?

First Play. Ay, my lord. 569

Ham. Very well. Follow that lord; and look you mock him not. Exit First Play. My good friends, I 'll leave you till night; you are welcome to Elsinore.

Ros. Good my lord!

Ham. Ay, so, God be wi' ye.

Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GULDENSTERN.
Now I am alone.

O! what a rogue and peasant slave am I: Is it not monstrous that this player here, But in a fiction, in a dream of passion, Could force his soul so to his own conceit That from her working all his visage wann'd, Tears in his eyes, distraction in 's aspect, 581 A broken voice, and his whole function suiting

With forms to his conceit? and all for nothing!

For Hecuba!

What 's Hecuba to him or he to Hecuba That he should weep for her? What would he do

Had he the motive and the cue for passion That I have? He would drown the stage with tears,

And cleave the general ear with horrid speech,

Make mad the guilty and appal the free, 590 Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed The very faculties of eyes and ears.

Yet I,

A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak, Like John-a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause,

And can say nothing; no, not for a king, Upon whose property and most dear life

A damn'd defeat was made. Am I a coward? Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across?

Plucks off my beard and blows it in my face? Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i' the throat 601

As deep as to the lungs? Who does me this? Ha!

'Swounds! I should take it, for it cannot be But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall To make oppression bitter, or ere this I should have fatted all the region kites With this slave's offal. Bloody, bawdy villain!

Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless villain!

O! vengeance! 610

Why, what an ass am I! This is most brave, That I, the son of a dear father murder'd, Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell, Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,

And fall a-cursing, like a very drab,

A scullion!

Fie upon 't! foh! About, my brain! I have heard

That guilty creatures sitting at a play Have by the very cunning of the scene Been struck so to the soul that presently 620 They have proclaim'd their malefactions; For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak

With most miraculous organ. I 'll have these players

Play something like the murder of my father Before mine uncle; I 'll observe his looks; I 'll tent him to the quick: if he but blench I know my course. The spirit that I have seen

May be the devil; and the devil hath power To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and perhaps

Out of my weakness and my melancholy, 635 As he is very potent with such spirits, Abuses me to damn me. I 'll have grounds More relative than this: the play 's the thing Wherein I 'll catch the conscience of the king. Exit.

ACT III

SCENE I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, and GULDENSTERN.

King. And can you, by no drift of circumstance,

Get from him why he puts on this confusion, Grating so harshly all his days of quiet With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?

Ros. He does confess he feels, himself distracted;

But from what cause he will by no means speak.

Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded,

But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof, When we would bring him on to some confession

Of his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you well?

Ros. Most like a gentleman. 11

Guil. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Ros. Niggard of question, but of our demands

Most free in his reply.

Queen. Did you assay him
To any pastime?

Ros. Madam, it so fell out that certain players

We o'er-raught on the way; of these we told him,

And there did seem in him a kind of joy
To hear of it: they are about the court,

And, as I think, they have already order 20
This night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true;
And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties

To hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart; and it doth much content me

To hear him so inclin'd.

Good gentlemen, give him a further edge,
And drive his purpose on to these delights.

Ros. We shall, my lord.

Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too;
For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither,

That he, as 't were by accident, may here 30
Affront Ophelia.

Her father and myself, lawful espials,
Will so bestow ourselves that, seeing un-

seen,
We may of their encounter frankly judge,

And gather by him, as he is behav'd,
If 't be the affliction of his love or no

That thus he suffers for.

Queen. I shall obey you.
And for your part, Ophelia, I do wish

That your good beauties be the happy
cause

Of Hamlet's wildness; so shall I hope your virtues 40

Will bring him to his wonted way again,
To both your honours.

Oph. Madam, I wish it may.

Exit QUEEN.

Pol. Ophelia, walk you here. Gracious, so please you,

We will bestow ourselves. To OPHELIA.
Read on this book,

That show of such an exercise may colour Your loneliness. We are oft to blame in this,

'Tis too much prov'd, that with devotion's visage

And pious action we do sugar o'er
The devil himself.

King. Aside. O! 't is too true;
How smart a lash that speech doth give my conscience! 50

The harlot's cheek, beautied with plastering art,

Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it
Than is my deed to my most painted word:

O heavy burden!

Pol. I hear him coming; let's withdraw,
my lord.

Exeunt KING and POLONIUS.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. To be, or not to be: that is the question:

Whether 't is nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,

Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them? To die: to

sleep; 60

No more; and by a sleep to say we end
The heart-ache and the thousand natural shocks

That flesh is heir to, 't is a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die, to sleep;

To sleep: perchance to dream: ay, there 's
the rub;

For in that sleep of death what dreams may
come

When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause. There 's the respect

That makes calamity of so long life;

For who would bear the whips and scorns
of time, 70

The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,

The pangs of dispriz'd love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurns

That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make

With a bare bodkin? who would fardels
bear,

To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after death,

The undiscover'd country from whose bourn
No traveller returns, puzzles the will, 80

And makes us rather bear those ills we have Than fly to others that we know not of?

Thus conscience does make cowards of us
all;

And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,

And enterprises of great pith and moment
With this regard their currents turn awry,

And lose the name of action. Soft you now!
The fair Ophelia! Nymph, in thy orisons 89

Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. Good my lord,
How does your honour for this many a day?

Ham. I humbly thank you; well, well,
well.

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of
yours,

That I have longed long to re-deliver;
I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not I;
I never gave you aught.

Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well you did;

And with them, words of so sweet breath
 compos'd

As made the things more rich: their perfume lost,

Take these again; for to the noble mind 100
Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove un-
kind.

There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph. My lord?

Ham. Are you fair?

Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest and fair, your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty? 110

Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness: this was sometime a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believed me; for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock but we shall relish of it; I loved you not. 120

Oph. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery: why would'st thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things that it were better my mother had not borne me. I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my beck than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven? We are arrant knaves all; believe none of us. Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father? 133

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool no where but in his own house. Farewell.

Oph. O! help him, you sweet heavens.

Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry: be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery, go; farewell. Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go; and quickly too. Farewell.

Oph. O heavenly powers, restore him! 147

Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God hath given you one face, and you make yourselves another; you jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nickname God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance. Go to, I'll no more on't; it hath made me mad. I say we will have no more marriages; those that are married already, all but one shall live; the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery, go. Exit.

Oph. O! what a noble mind is here o'er-thrown:

The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue, sword;

The expectancy and rose of the fair state, 160

The glass of fashion and the mould of form,

The observ'd of all observers, quite, quite down!

And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the honey of his music vows,

Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,

Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;

That unmatched'd form and feature of blown youth

Blasted with ecstasy: O! woe is me,
To have seen what I have seen, see what I see.

Re-enter KING and POLONIUS.

King. Love! his affections do not that way tend; 170

Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little,

Was not like madness. There's something in his soul

O'er which his melancholy sits on brood;
And I do doubt the hatch and the disclose

Will be some danger; which for to prevent,
I have in quick determination

Thus set it down: he shall with speed to England,

For the demand of our neglected tribute:

Haply the seas and countries different
With variable objects shall expel 180

This something-settled matter in his heart,
Whereon his brains still beating puts him thus

From fashion of himself. What think you on't?

Pol. It shall do well: but yet do I believe
The origin and commencement of his grief

Sprung from neglected love. How now,
Ophelia!

You need not tell us what Lord Hamlet said;
We heard it all. My lord, do as you please;

But, if you hold it fit, after the play, 189
Let his queen mother all alone entreat him

To show his griefs: let her be round with him;

And I'll be plac'd, so please you, in the ear
Of all their conference. If she find him not,

To England send him, or confine him where Your wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so: Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter HAMLET and certain Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue; but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and, as I may say, the whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness. O! it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings, who for the most part are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb-shows and noise; I would have such a fellow whipped for o'erdoing Termagant; it out-herods Herod: pray you, avoid it. 19

First Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature; for anything so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first and now, was and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure. Now, this overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of the which one must in your allowance o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O! there be players that I have seen play, and heard others praise, and that highly, not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of Christians nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted and bellowed that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

First Play. I hope we have reformed that indifferently with us.

Ham. O! reform it altogether. And let those that play your clowns speak no more than is set down for them; for there be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too, though in the mean time some necessary question of the play be then to be considered; that's villainous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready.

Exeunt Players.

Enter POLONIUS, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

How now, my lord! will the king hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make haste.

Exit POLONIUS.

Will you two help to hasten them?

Ros. Guil. We will, my lord.

Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Ham. What ho! Horatio!

Enter HORATIO.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man

As e'er my conversation cop'd withal.

Hor. O! my dear lord,—

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter; for what advancement may I hope from thee,

That no revenue hast but thy good spirits To feed and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd?

No; let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp,

And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee

Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?

Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice

And could of men distinguish, her election Hath seal'd thee for herself; for thou hast been

As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing, A man that fortune's buffets and rewards Has ta'en with equal thanks; and bless'd are those Whose blood and judgment are so well commingled

That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger To sound what stop she please. Give me that man

That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him

In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart, As I do thee. Something too much of this. There is a play to-night before the king; 80

One scene of it comes near the circumstance Which I have told thee of my father's death: I prithee, when thou seest that act afoot, Even with the very comment of thy soul

Observe mine uncle; if his occulted guilt Do not itself unkennel in one speech,

It is a damned ghost that we have seen, And my imaginations are as foul

As Vulcan's stithy. Give him heedful note; For I mine eyes will rivet to his face, 90

And after we will both our judgments join In censure of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord; If he steal aught the whilst this play is playing, And 'scape detecting, I will pay the theft.

Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be idle:

Get you a place.

Danish March. A Flourish. Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Others.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent, i' faith; of the chameleon's dish: I eat the air, promise-crammed; you cannot feed capons so. 100

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet; these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now. To POLONIUS. My lord, you played once i' the university, you say?

Pol. That did I, my lord, and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Cæsar: I was killed i' the Capitol; Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there. Be the players ready? 111

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my good Hamlet, sit by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive.

Pol. To the King. O ho! do you mark that?

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?

Lying down at OPHELIA's feet.

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap? 120

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Do you think I meant country matters?

Oph. I think nothing, my lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids' legs.

Oph. What is, my lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I? 130

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O God! your only jig-maker. What should a man do but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within's two hours. 135

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year; but, by 'r lady, he must build churches then, or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse, whose epitaph is 'For, O! for, O! the hobby-horse is forgot.' 145

Hautboys play. The dumb-show enters.

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly; the Queen embracing him, and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck; lays him down upon a bank of flowers; she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns, finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The Poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The Poisoner woos the Queen with gifts; she seems loath and unwilling awhile, but in the end accepts his love. Exeunt.

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is miching mallecho; it means mischief.

Oph. Belike this show imports the argument of the play. 150

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you will show him; be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught. I'll mark the play.

Pro. For us, and for our tragedy,
Here stooping to your clemency, 160
We beg your hearing patiently.

Exit.

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring?

Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord.

Ham. As woman's love.

Enter two Players. King and Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times hath Phæbus' cart gone round

Neptune's salt wash and Tellus' orb'd ground,

And thirty dozen moons with borrow'd sheen

About the world have times twelve thirties been,

Since love our hearts and Hymen did our hands

Unite commutual in most sacred bands. 170

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon

Make us again count o'er ere love be done;

But, woe is me! you are so sick of late,

So far from cheer and from your former state,

That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust,

Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must;

For women's fear and love holds quantity,

In neither aught, or in extremity.

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you know;

And as my love is siz'd, my fear is so. 110

Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;

Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.

P. King. Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too;

My operant powers their functions leave to do:

And thou shall live in this fair world behind,

Honour'd, belov'd; and haply one as kind

For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O! confound the rest;

Such love must needs be treason in my breast:

In second husband let me be accurst; 189

None wed the second but who kill'd the first.

Ham. Aside. Wormwood, wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances that second marriage move:

Are base respects of thrift, but none of love;

A second time I kill my husband dead,

When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe you think what now you speak;

But what we do determine oft we break.

Purpose is but the slave to memory,

Of violent birth, but poor validity;

Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree, 200

But fall unshaken when they mellow be.

Most necessary 't is that we forget

To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt;

What to ourselves in passion we propose,

The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.

The violence of either grief or joy

Their own enactures with themselves destroy;

Where joy most revels grief doth most lament,
Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.
This world is not for aye, nor 't is not strange
That even our loves should with our fortunes change; 211

For 't is a question left us yet to prove Whether love lead fortune or else fortune love.

The great man down, you mark his favourite flies;

The poor advanc'd makes friends of enemies.

And hitherto doth love on fortune tend,
For who not needs shall never lack a friend;
And who in want a hollow friend doth try
Directly seasons him his enemy.

But, orderly to end where I begun, 220
Our wills and fates do so contrary run
That our devices still are overthrown,
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own:

So think thou wilt no second husband wed;
But die thy thoughts when thy first lord is dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light!
Sport and repose lock from me day and night!

To desperation turn my trust and hope!
An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope!
Each opposite that blanks the face of joy 230
Meet what I would have well, and it destrou!

Both here and hence pursue me lasting strife,

If, once a widow, ever I be wife!

Ham. If she should break it now!

P. King. 'T is deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here awhile;
My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile

The tedious day with sleep. Sleeps.

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain;
And never come mischance between us twain! Exit.

Ham. Madam, how like you this play?

Queen. The lady protests too much, methinks. 240

Ham. O! but she 'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in 't?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence i' the world.

King. What do you call the play?

Ham. The Mouse-trap. Marry, how? Tropically. This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista. You shall see anon; 'tis a knavish piece of work: but what o' that? your majesty and we that have free souls, it touches us not: let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung. 253

Enter Player, as LUCIANUS.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

Oph. You are as good as a chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning to take off my edge. 260

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you must take your husbands. Begin, murderer; pox, leave thy damnable faces, and begin. Come; the croaking raven doth bellow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;

Confederate season, else no creature seeing;

Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,

With Hecate's ban thrice blasted, thrice infected,

Thy natural magic and dire property, 270
On wholesome life usurp immediately.

Pours the poison into the Sleeper's ears.

Ham. He poisons him 'i the garden for 's estate. His name 's Gonzago; the story is extant, and writ in choice Italian. You shall see anon how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king rises.

Ham. What! frightened with false fire?

Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light: away! 289

All. Lights, lights, lights!

Exeunt all but HAMLET and HORATIO.

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep,
The hart ungalled play;

For some must watch, while some must sleep:

So runs the world away.

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers, if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me, with two Provincial roses on my razed shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry of players, sir?

Hor. Half a share. 290

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damon dear,

This realm dismantled was

Of Jove himself; and now reigns here
A very, very—pajock.

Hor. You might have rimed.

Ham. O good Horatio! I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning? 300

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha! Come, some music! come, the recorders!

For if the king like not the comedy,
Why then, belike, he likes it not, perdy.
Come, some music!

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,— 310

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?

Guil. Is in his retirement marvellous distempered.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, rather with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer to signify this to his doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation would perhaps plunge him into far more choler. 319

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir; pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment; if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot. 331

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased; but, sir, such answer as I can make you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother: therefore no more, but to the matter: my mother, you say,—

Ros. Then thus she says: your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother! But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? Impart. 342

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. And do still, by these pickers and stealers. 349

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do surely bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, sir, but 'While the grass grows,'—the proverb is something musty. 359

Enter Players with recorders.

O! the recorders: let me see one. To withdraw with you: why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O! my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly. 364

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you. 370

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying; govern these ventages with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops. 376

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me. You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass; and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ, yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood! do you think I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me.

Enter POLONIUS.

God bless you, sir! 390

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 't is like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is backed like a weasel.

Ham. Or like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale. 399

Ham. Then will I come to my mother by and by. Aside. They fool me to the top of my bent. I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so. Exit.

Ham. By and by is easily said. Leave me friends. Exeunt all but HAMLET. 411

'T is now the very witching time of night, When churchyards yawn and hell itself breathes out

Contagion to this world: now could I drink hot blood,

And do such bitter business as the day Would quake to look on. Soft! now to my mother. 410

O heart! lose not thy nature; let not ever The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom;

Let me be cruel, not unnatural: I will speak daggers to her, but use none;

My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites; How in my words soever she be shent,

To give them seals never, my soul, consent! Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. I like him not, nor stands it safe with us

To let his madness range. Therefore prepare you;

I your commission will forthwith dispatch, And he to England shall along with you.

The terms of our estate may not endure Hazard so dangerous as doth hourly grow

Out of his lunacies.

Guil. We will ourselves provide.
Most holy and religious fear it is
To keep those many many bodies safe
That live and feed upon your majesty. 10

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound With all the strength and armour of the mind
To keep itself from noyance; but much
more

That spirit upon whose weal depends and rests

The lives of many. The cease of majesty
Dies not alone, but like a gulf doth draw
What's near it with it; it is a massy wheel,
Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,
To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things

Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls, 20

Each small annexment, petty consequence,
Attends the boisterous ruin. Never alone
Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage;

For we will fetters put upon this fear,
Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros., Guil. We will haste us.
Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet:

Behind the arras I'll convey myself
To hear the process; I'll warrant she'll tax him home;

And, as you said, and wisely was it said, 30
'Tis meet that some more audience than a mother,

Since nature makes them partial, should o'erhear

The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my liege:

I'll call upon you ere you go to bed

And tell you what I know.

King. Thanks, dear my lord.
Exit POLONIUS.

O! my offence is rank, it smells to heaven;
It hath the primal eldest curse upon 't;

A brother's murder! Pray can I not,
Though inclination be as sharp as will: 39

My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent;
And, like a man to double business bound,

I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
And both neglect. What if this cursed hand

Were thicker than itself with brother's
blood,

Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens

To wash it white as snow? Whereto serves mercy

But to confront the visage of offence?
And what's in prayer but this two-fold force,

To be forestalled ere we come to fall, 49
Or pardon'd being down? Then I'll look
up;

My fault is past. But, O! what form of prayer

Can serve my turn? 'Forgive me my foul murder?'

That cannot be; since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murder,
My crown, mine own ambition, and my
queen.

May one be pardon'd and retain the offence?
In the corrupted currents of this world

Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice,
And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself

Buys out the law; but 'tis not so above; 60
There is no shuffling, there the action lies

In his true nature, and we ourselves com-
pell'd

Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults
To give in evidence. What then? what rests?

Try what repentance can: what can it not?
Yet what can it, when one can not repent?

O wretched state! O bosom black as death!
O limed soul, that struggling to be free

Art more engaged! Help, angels! make assay;

Bow, stubborn knees; and, heart with strings of steel, 70

Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe.
All may be well. Retires and kneels.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now might I do it pat, now he is praying;

And now I'll do 't: and so he goes to
heaven;

And so am I reveng'd. That would be scann'd:

A villain kills my father; and for that,
I, his sole son, do this same villain send

To heaven.
Why, this is hire and salary, not revenge.

He took my father grossly, full of bread, 80
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as

May;
And how his audit stands who knows save
heaven?

But in our circumstance and course of
thought

'Tis heavy with him. And am I then re-veng'd,

To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage?

No.
Up, sword, and know thou a more horrid

hent;
When he is drunk asleep, or in his rage,

Or in the incestuous pleasure of his bed, 90
At gaming, swearing, or about some act

That has no relish of salvation 't;
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at

heaven,
And that his soul may be as damn'd and

black
As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays:

This physic but prolongs thy sickly days.
Exit.

The KING rises and advances.

King. My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:

Words without thoughts never to heaven go.
Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Queen's Closet.Enter QUEEN and POLONIUS.

Pol. He will come straight. Look you lay home to him;
 Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with,
 And that your grace hath screen'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll silence me e'en here.
 Pray you, be round with him.
Ham. Within. Mother, mother, mother!
Queen. I'll warrant you;
 Fear me not. Withdraw, I hear him coming.
POLONIUS hides behind the arras.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now, mother, what's the matter?
Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.
Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.
Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.
Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked tongue.
Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet!
Ham. What's the matter now?
Queen. Have you forgot me?
Ham. No, by the rood, not so:
 You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife;
 And—would it were not so!—you are my mother.
Queen. Nay then, I'll set those to you that can speak.
Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not budge;
 You go not till I set you up a glass
 Where you may see the inmost part of you.
Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder me?
 Help, help, ho!
Pol. Behind. What, ho! help, help, help!
Ham. Draws. How now! a rat! Dead! for a ducat, dead!
Makes a pass through the arras.
Pol. Behind. O! I am slain.

Falls and dies.

Queen. O me! what hast thou done?
Ham. Nay, I know not: Is it the king?
Queen. O! what a rash and bloody deed is this.
Ham. A bloody deed! almost as bad, good mother,
 As kill a king, and marry with his brother.
Queen. As kill a king!
Ham. Ay, lady, 't was my word.

Lifts up the arras and discovers POLONIUS.

Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell!
 I took thee for thy better; take thy fortune;
 Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger.
 Leave wringing of your hands: peace! sit you down,
 And let me wring your heart; for so I shall
 If it be made of penetrable stuff,

If damned custom have not braz'd it so
 That it is proof and bulwark against sense.
Queen. What have I done that thou dar'st wag thy tongue
 In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an act
 That blurs the grace and blush of modesty,
 Calls virtue hypocrite, takes off the rose
 From the fair forehead of an innocent love
 And sets a blister there, makes marriage vows
 As false as dicers' oaths; O! such a deed
 As from the body of contraction plucks
 The very soul, and sweet religion makes A rhapsody of words; heaven's face doth glow,
 Yea, this solidity and compound mass,
 With tristful visage, as against the doom,
 Is thought-sick at the act.

Queen. Ay me! what act,
 That roars so loud and thunders in the index?

Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this;
 The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
 See, what a grace was seated on this brow;
 Hyperion's curls, the front of Jove himself,
 An eye like Mars, to threaten and command,
 A station like the herald Mercury
 New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill,
 A combination and a form indeed,
 Where every god did seem to set his seal,
 To give the world assurance of a man.
 This was your husband: look you now,
 what follows.

Here is your husband; like a mildew'd ear, Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you
 eyes?
 Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
 And batten on this moor? Ha! have you
 eyes?

You cannot call it love, for at your age
 The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,

And waits upon the judgment; and what judgment

Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, you have,
 Else could you not have motion; but sure,
 that sense

Is apoplex'd; for madness would not err,
 Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd
 But it reserv'd some quantity of choice,
 To serve in such a difference. What devil was 't

That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind?

Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
 Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans
 all,

Or but a sickly part of one true sense

Could not so mope.
 O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,

 If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
 To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,
 And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame

When the compulsive ardour gives the charge,
Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
And reason panders will.

Queen. O Hamlet! speak no more;
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul; 89
And there I see such black and grained spots
As will not leave their tinct.

Ham. Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed,
Stew'd in corruption, honeying and making love

Over the nasty sty,—

Queen. O! speak to me no more;
These words like daggers enter in mine ears;

No more, sweet Hamlet!

Ham. A murderer and a villain;
A slave that is not twentieth part the tithe
Of your precedent lord; a vice of kings;
A cut-purse of the empire and the rule, 99
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,

And put it in his pocket!

Queen. No more!

Ham. A king of shreds and patches,—

Enter Ghost.

Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,
You heavenly guards! What would your gracious figure?

Queen. Alas! he's mad.

Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide,

That, slay'd in time and passion, lets go by
The important acting of your dread command?
O! say.

Ghost. Do not forget: this visitation 110
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
But, look! amazement on thy mother sits;
O! step between her and her fighting soul;
Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works:
Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you, lady?

Queen. Alas! how is 't with you,

That you do bend your eye on vacancy

And with the incorporal air do hold discourse?

Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
And, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm, 120
Your bedded hair, like life in excrements,
Starts up and stands an end. O gentle son!
Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look?

Ham. On him, on him! Look you, how pale he glares!

His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones,

Would make them capable. Do not look upon me;

Lest with this piteous action you convert
My stern effects: then what I have to do
Will want true colour; tears perchance for blood. 130

Queen. To whom do you speak this?

Ham. Do you see nothing there?

Queen. Nothing at all; yet all that is I see.

Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?

Queen. No, nothing but ourselves.

Ham. Why, look you there! look! how it steals away;

My father, in his habit as he liv'd;

Look! where he goes, even now, out at the portal. Exit Ghost.

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain:

This bodiless creation ecstasy

Is very cunning in.

Ham. Ecstasy!

My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time, 140

And makes as healthful music: It is not madness

That I have utter'd: bring me to the test,
And I the matter will re-word, which madness

Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace,

Lay not that flattering unction to your soul,
That not your trespass but my madness

speaks;

It will but skin and film the ulcerous place,
Whiles rank corruption, mining all within,

Infects unseen. Confess yourself to heaven;
Repent what's past; avoid what is to come;

And do not spread the compost on the weeds
To make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue; 152

For in the fatness of these pursy times

Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg,

Yea, curb and woo for leave to do him good.

Queen. O Hamlet! thou hast cleft my heart in twain.

Ham. O! throw away the worser part of it,

And live the purer with the other half.

Good night: but go not to mine uncle's bed;
Assume a virtue, if you have it not. 160

That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat,

Of habits devil, is angel yet in this,

That to the use of actions fair and good

He likewise gives a frock or livery,

That aptly is put on. Refrain to-night;

And that shall lend a kind of easiness

To the next abstinence: the next more easy;

For use almost can change the stamp of nature,

And either master the devil, or throw him out
With wondrous potency. Once more, good night: 170

And when you are desirous to be bless'd,
I'll blessing beg of you. For this same lord,

Pointing to POLONIUS.

I do repent: but heaven hath pleas'd it so,
To punish me with this, and this with me,

That I must be their scourge and minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well

The death I gave him. So, again, good night.

I must be cruel only to be kind:

Thus bad begins and worse remains behind.
One word more, good lady.

Queen.

What shall I do?

Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid you do: 181
 Let the bloat king tempt you again to bed;
 Pinch wanton on your cheek; call you his mouse;
 And let him, for a pair of reechy kisses,
 Or paddling in your neck with his damn'd fingers,
 Make you to ravel all this matter out,
 That I essentially am not in madness,
 But mad in craft. 'T were good you let him know;
 For who that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
 Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib, 190
 Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?
 No, in despite of sense and secrecy,
 Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
 Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
 To try conclusions, in the basket creep,
 And break your own neck down.
Queen. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath,
 And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
 What thou hast said to me.
Ham. I must to England; you know that.
Queen. Alack! 201
 I had forgot: 't is so concluded on.
Ham. There's letters seal'd; and my two schoolfellows,
 Whom I will trust as I will adders fang'd,
 They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way,
 And marshal me to knavery. Let it work;
 For 't is the sport to have the engineer
 Hoist with his own petar: an't shall go hard
 But I will delve one yard below their mines,
 And blow them at the moon. O! 't is most sweet,
 When in one line two crafts directly meet.
 This man shall set me packing; 211
 I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room.
 Mother, good night. Indeed this counsellor
 Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
 Who was in a foolish prating knave.
 Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you.
 Good night, mother.

Exeunt severally; HAMLET dragging in POLONIUS.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. There's matter in these sighs:
 these profound heaves
 You must translate; 't is fit we understand them.
 Where is your son?

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while. Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Ah! my good lord, what have I seen to-night.

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend
 Which is the mightier. In his lawless fit,
 Behind the arras hearing something stir,
 Whips out his rapier, cries, 'A rat! a rat!' 10
 And, in this brainish apprehension, kills
 The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed!
 It had been so with us had we been there.
 His liberty is full of threats to all;
 To you yourself, to us, to every one.
 Alas! how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?

It will be laid to us, whose providence
 Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt,

This mad young man: but so much was our love,

We would not understand what was most fit,

But, like the owner of a foul disease, 21
 To keep it from divulging, let it feed
 Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd;

O'er whom his very madness, like some ore
 Among a mineral of metals base,
 Shows itself pure: he weeps for what is done.

King. O Gertrude! come away.
 The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch
 But we will ship him hence; and this vile deed 30

We must, with all our majesty and skill,
 Both countenance and excuse. Ho! Guildenstern!

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Friends both, go join you with some further aid.

Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,
 And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him:

Go seek him out; speak fair, and bring the body

Into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.
Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends;
 And let them know both what we mean to do,

And what's untimely done: so, haply, slander, 40

Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
 As level as the cannon to his blank,

Transports his poison'd shot, may miss our name,

And hit the woundless air. O! come away;
 My soul is full of discord and dismay.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Safely stowed.

Ros., Guil. Within. Hamlet! Lord Hamlet!

Ham. What noise? who calls on Hamlet?
O! here they come.

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 't is kin.

Ros. Tell us where 't is, that we may take it thence

And bear it to the chapel.

Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what? 10

Ham. That I can keep your counsel and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge, what replication should be made by the son of a king?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir, that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: he keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw; first mouthed, to be last swallowed: when he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and sponge, you shall be dry again. 23

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.

Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—

Guil. A thing, my lord! 30

Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him.
Hide fox, and all after. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter KING, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.

How dangerous is it that this man goes loose!

Yet must not we put the strong law on him:

He's lov'd of the distracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes;

And where 't is so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd,

But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even,

This sudden sending him away must seem Deliberate pause: diseases desperate grown
By desperate appliance are reliev'd, 10
Or not at all.

Enter ROSENCRANTZ.

How now! what hath befall'n?

Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord,

We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he?

Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before us.

Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter HAMLET and GUILDENSTERN.

King. Now, Hamlet, where 's Polonius?

Ham. At supper.

King. At supper! Where? 19

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten: a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots: your fat king and your lean beggar is but variable service; two dishes, but to one table: that's the end. 28

King. Alas, alas!

Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm. 30

King. What dost thou mean by this?

Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven; send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby. 39

King. To some Attendants. Go seek him there.

Ham. He will stay till you come.

Exeunt Attendants.

King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,

Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve
For that which thou hast done, must send thee hence

With fiery quickness: therefore prepare thyself;

The bark is ready, and the wind at help,
The associates tend, and every thing is bent
For England.

Ham. For England!

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good. 50

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub that sees them.
But, come; for England! Farewell, dear mother. 51

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother: father and mother is man and wife, man and wife is one flesh, and so, my mother. Come, for England!

Exit.

King. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard:

Delay it not, I'll have him hence to-night.
Away! for every thing is seal'd and done
That else leans on the affair: pray you, make haste.

Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and

GUILDENSTERN.

And, England, if my love thou hold'st at
aught, 60

As my great power thereof may give thee
sense,

Since yet thy cicatrice looks raw and red
After the Danish sword, and thy free

End

Pays homage to us, thou may'st not coldly set
 Our sovereign process, which imports at full,
 By letters conjuring to that effect,
 The present death of Hamlet. Do it,
 England;
 For like the hectic in my blood he rages, 69
 And thou must cure me. Till I know 't is
 done,
 Howe'er my haps, my joys were ne'er begun.
Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Plain in Denmark.

Enter FORTINBRAS, a Captain, and Soldiers, marching.

For. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish king;
 Tell him that, by his license, Fortinbras
 Claims the conveyance of a promis'd march Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.
 If that his majesty would aught with us,
 We shall express our duty in his eye,
 And let him know so.

Cap. I will do 't, my lord.

For. Go softly on.

Exeunt FORTINBRAS and Soldiers.

Enter HAMLET, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDEN-STERN, etc.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?

Cap. They are of Norway, sir. 10

Ham. How purpos'd, sir, I pray you?

Cap. Against some part of Poland.

Ham. Who commands them, sir?

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortin-
 bras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland,
 sir,

Or for some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, and with no addition,
 We go to gain a little patch of ground
 That hath in it no profit but the name.
 To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it;
 Nor will it yield to Norway or the Pole 21
 A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, 't is already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls and twenty thousand ducats

Will not debate the question of this straw:
 This is the imposthume of much wealth and
 peace,

That inward breaks, and shows no cause without

Why the man dies. I humbly thank you,
 sir.

Cap. God be wi' you, sir. Exit.

Ros. Will 't please you go, my lord?

Ham. I'll be with you straight. Go a little before. 31

*Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDEN-
 STERN, etc.*

How all occasions do inform against me,
 And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,
 If his chief good and market of his time
 Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more.

Sure he that made us with such large discourse,

Looking before and after, gave us not

That capability and god-like reason

To fust in us unus'd. Now, whether it be

Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple 40

Of thinking too precisely on the event,

A thought, which, quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom

And ever three parts coward, I do not know

Why yet I live to say 'This thing 's to do';

Sith I have cause and will and strength and means

To do 't. Examples gross as earth exhort
 me:

Witness this army of such mass and charge

Led by a delicate and tender prince,

Whose spirit with divine ambition puff'd

Makes mouths at the invisible event, 50

Exposing what is mortal and unsure

To all that fortune, death and danger dare,

Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great

Is not to stir without great argument,

But greatly to find quarrel in a straw

When honour's at the stake. How stand I

then,

That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,

Excitements of my reason and my blood,

And let all sleep, while, to my shame, I see

The imminent death of twenty thousand 60

men,

That, for a fantasy and trick of fame,

Go to their graves like beds, fight for a plot

Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause,

Which is not tomb enough and continent

To hide the slain? O! from this time forth,

My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth.

Exit.

SCENE V.—Elsinore. A Room in the Castle.

Enter QUEEN, HORATIO, and a Gentleman.

Queen. I will not speak with her.

Gent. She is importunate, indeed distract:
 Her mood will needs be pitied.

Queen. What would she have?

Gent. She speaks much of her father;
 says she hears

There's tricks i' the world; and hems, and beats her heart;

Spurns enviously at straws; speaks things
 in doubt,

That carry but half sense: her speech is nothing,

Yet the unshaped use of it doth move
 The hearers to collection; they aim at it,

And botch the words up fit to their own
 thoughts; 10

Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield them,

Indeed would make one think there might be thought,

Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.
Hor. 'T were good she were spoken with,

for she may strew
 Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding
 minds.

Queen. Let her come in. Exit HORATIO.

Aside. To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss:
So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
It spills itself in fearing to be spilt. 70

Re-enter HORATIO, with OPHELIA.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?

Queen. How now, Ophelia!

Oph. How should I your true love know
From another one?

*By his cockle hat and staff,
And his sandal shoon.*

Queen. Alas! sweet lady, what imports this song?

Oph. Say you? nay, pray you, mark.

*He is dead and gone, lady,
He is dead and gone;
At his head a grass-green turf,
At his heels a stone.* 80

O, ho!

Queen. Nay, but, Ophelia,—

Oph. Pray you, mark.

White his shroud as the mountain snow,— Enter KING.

Queen. Alas! look here, my lord.

Oph. Larded with sweet flowers;
Which bewept to the grave did go
With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady? 40

Oph. Well, God 'ild you! They say the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord! we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray you, let 's have no words of this; but when they ask you what it means, say you this:

To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day,

*All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine;* 50

*Then up he rose, and donn'd his clothes
And dupp'd the chamber door;*

*Let in the maid, that out a maid
Never departed more.*

King. Pretty Ophelia!

Oph. Indeed, la! without an oath, I'll make an end on 't:

By Gis and by Saint Charity,

*Alack, and fie, for shame!
Young men will do 't, if they come to 't;* 60

By Cock they are to blame.

Quoth she, before you tumbled me,

You promis'd me to wed:

*So would I ha' done, by yonder sun,
An thou hadst not come to my bed.*

King. How long hath she been thus? 67

Oph. I hope all will be well. We must be patient: but I cannot choose but weep, to think they should lay him i' the cold ground. My brother shall know of it: and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies; good night, good night. 73

Exit.
King. Follow her close; give her good watch, I pray you. Exit HORATIO.

O! this is the poison of deep grief; it springs

All from her father's death. O Gertrude, Gertrude!

When sorrows come, they come not single spies,

But in battalions. First, her father slain;

Next, your son gone; and he most violent author

Of his own just remove: the people mud-died,

Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers,

For good Polonius' death; and we have done but greenly,

In hugger-mugger to inter him: poor Ophelia

Divided from herself and her fair judgment, Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts:

Last, and as much containing as all these, Her brother is in secret come from France,

Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds,

And wants not buzzers to infect his ear 90 With pestilent speeches of his father's death;

Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd, Will nothing stick our person to arraign

In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude! this, Like to a murdering-piece, in many places

Gives me superfluous death.

A noise within.
Queen. Alack! what noise is this?

Enter another Gentleman.
King. Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door.

What is the matter?

Gent. Save yourself, my lord; The ocean, overpeering of his list,

Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste 100

Than young Laertes, in a riotous head, O'erbears your officers. The rabble call him lord;

And, as the world were now but to begin, Antiquity forgot, customs not known,

The ratifiers and props of every word, They cry 'Choose we; Laertes shall be king!'

Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,

'Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!'

Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry! 109

O! this is counter, you false Danish dogs.

King. The doors are broke. Noise within.

Enter LAERTES, armed; Danes following.

Laer. Where is this king? Sirs, stand you all without.

Danes. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave.

Danes. We will, we will.

They retire without the door.

Laer. I thank you: keep the door. O thou vile king!

Give me my father.

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood that's calm proclaims me bastard,

Cries cuckold to my father, brands the harlot

Even here, between the chaste unsmirched brows

Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes, That thy rebellion looks so giant-like? 121

Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person:

There's such divinity doth hedge a king, That treason can but peep to what it would,

Acts little of his will. Tell me, Laertes, Why thou art thus incens'd. Let him go, Gertrude.

Speak, man.

Laer. Where is my father?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled with. 130

To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil!

Conscience and grace, to the profoundest pit!

I dare damnation. To this point I stand, That both the worlds I give to negligence,

Let come what comes; only I'll be reveng'd Most thoroughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you?

Laer. My will, not all the world;

And for my means, I'll husband them so well,

They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes,

If you desire to know the certainty 140 Of your dear father's death, is't writ in your revenge,

That, swoopstake, you will draw both friend and foe,

Winner and loser?

Laer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them then?

Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my arms;

And like the kind life-rendering pelican, Repast them with my blood.

King. Why, now you speak

Like a good child and a true gentleman. That I am guiltless of your father's death,

And am most sensibly in grief for it, 150 It shall as level to your judgment pierce

As day does to your eye.

Danes. Within. Let her come in.

Laer. How now! what noise is that?

Re-enter OPHELIA.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears seven times salt,

Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye! By heaven, thy madness shall be paid by weight,

Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May!

Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia! O heavens! is't possible a young maid's wits 160

Should be as mortal as an old man's life? Nature is fine in love, and where't is fine

It sends some precious instance of itself After the thing it loves.

Oph. They bore him barefac'd on the bier;

Hey non nonny, nonny, hey nonny;

And in his grave rain'd many a tear;—

Fare you well, my dove!

Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge,

It could not move thus. 169

Oph. You must sing a-down a-down, An you call him a-down-a.

O! how the wheel becomes it. It is the false steward that stole his master's daughter.

Laer. This nothing's more than matter.

Oph. There's the rosemary, that's for remembrance; pray you, love, remember: and there is pansies, that's for thoughts.

Laer. A document in madness, thoughts and remembrance fitted. 179

Oph. There's fennel for you, and columbines; there's rue for you; and here's some for me; we may call it herb-grace o' Sundays. O! you must wear your rue with a difference.

There's a daisy; I would give you some violets, but they withered all when my father died. They say he made a good end,—

For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy.

Laer. Thought and affliction, passion, hell itself,

She turns to favour and to prettiness.

Oph. And will he not come again? And will he not come again? 180

No, no, he is dead:

Go to thy death-bed.

He never will come again.

His beard was white as snow,

All flaxen was his poll;

He is gone, he is gone,

And we cast away moan:

God ha' mercy on his soul! 200

And of all Christian souls, I pray God. God be wi' ye! Exit.

Laer. Do you see this, O God? 201

King. Laertes, I must commune with your grief,

Or you deny me right. Go but apart, Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will,

And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me.

If by direct or by collateral hand
They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give,

Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours,
To you in satisfaction; but if not, <sup>209</sup>
Be you content to lend your patience to us,
And we shall jointly labour with your soul
To give it due content.

Laer. Let this be so:
His means of death, his obscure burial,
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones,

No noble rite nor formal ostentation,
Cry to be heard, as 't were from heaven to earth,

That I must call 't in question.

King. So you shall;
And where the offence is let the great axe fall.

I pray you, go with me. Exeunt. <sup>220</sup>

SCENE VI.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter HORATIO and a Servant.

Hor. What are they that would speak with me?

Serv. Sailors, sir: they say they have letters for you.

Hor. Let them come in. Exit Servant.
I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailors.

First Sail. God bless you, sir.

Hor. Let him bless thee too.

Second Sail. He shall, sir, an 't please him. There's a letter for you, sir;—it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England;—if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is. <sup>11</sup>

Hor. Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king: they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very war-like appointment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compell'd valour, and in the grapple I boarded them: on the instant they got clear of our ship, so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy; but they knew what they did; I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou would'st fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England: of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell. <sup>30</sup>

He that thou knowest thine,

HAMLET.

Come, I will give you way for these your letters;

And do 't the speedier, that you may direct me

To him from whom you brought them.

Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter KING and LAERTES.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal,

And you must put me in your heart for friend,

Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he which hath your noble father slain
Pursu'd my life.

Laer. It well appears: but tell me
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So crimeful and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, wisdom, all things else,
You mainly were stirr'd up.

King. O! for two special reasons;
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much un-sinew'd, <sup>10</sup>

And yet to me they are strong. The queen his mother

Lives almost by his looks, and for myself,
My virtue or my plague, be it either which,
She's so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,

I could not but by her. The other motive,
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear
him;

Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,
Would, like the spring that turneth wood to stone, <sup>20</sup>

Convert his gyves to graces: so that my arrows,

Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost;
A sister driven into desperate terms,
Whose worth, if praises may go back again,
Stood challenger on mount of all the age
For her perfections. But my revenge will
come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that;
you must not think <sup>30</sup>

That we are made of stuff so flat and dull
That we can let our beard be shook with danger

And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear
more;

I lov'd your father, and we love ourself,
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—

Enter a Messenger.

How now! what news?

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet.
This to your majesty; this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet! who brought them?
Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw them not:

They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd them <sup>40</sup>

Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them.
Leave us. Exit Messenger.

High and mighty, you shall know I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes; when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasions of my sudden and more strange return. 48

HAMLET.

What should this mean? Are all the rest come back?

Or is it some abuse and no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'T is Hamlet's character. 'Naked,' And in a postscript here, he says, 'alone.'

Can you advise me?

Laer. I'm lost in it, my lord. But let him come:

It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
'Thus didest thou.'

King. If it be so, Laertes,
As how should it be so? how otherwise?
Will you be rul'd by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord;
So you will not o'errule me to a peace. 61

King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd,

As checking at his voyage, and that he means

No more to undertake it, I will work him

To an exploit now ripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall;

And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe,

But even his mother shall uncharge the practice

And call it accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be rul'd;
The rather, if you could devise it so 70
That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.
You have been talk'd of since your travel much,

And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality
Wherein, they say, you shine; your sum of parts

Did not together pluck such envy from him
As did that one, and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege.

Laer. What part is that, my lord?

King. A very riband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears 80
Than settled age his sables and his weeds,
Importing health and graveness. Two months since

Here was a gentleman of Normandy:
I have seen myself, and serv'd against, the French,

And they can well on horseback; but this gallant

Had witchcraft in 't, he grew unto his seat,
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,

As he had been incorp'd and demi-natur'd
With the brave beast; so far he topp'd my thought,

That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks, 90
Come short of what he did.

Laer.

A Norman was 't?

King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life, Lamond.

King.

The very same.

Laer. I know him well; he is the brooch indeed

And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you,
And gave you such a masterly report
For art and exercise in your defence,
And for your rapier most especially,
That he cried out, 't would be a sight indeed
If one could match you; the scrimers of their nation. 101

He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye,

If you oppos'd them. Sir, this report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy
That he could nothing do but wish and beg
Your sudden coming o'er, to play with him.
Now, out of this,—

Laer.

What out of this, my lord?

King. Laertes, was your father dear to you?

Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?

Laer.

Why ask you this?

King. Not that I think you did not love your father, 111

But that I know love is begun by time,
And that I see, in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it,
And nothing is at a like goodness still,
For goodness, growing to a plurisy, Dies in his own too-much. That we would do

We should do when we would, for this
'would' changes, 120

And hath abatements and delays as many
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;

And then this 'should' is like a spendthrift sigh,

That hurts by easing. But to the quick o' the ulcer;

Hamlet comes back; what would you undertake

To show yourself your father's son in deed
More than in words?

Laer.

To cut his throat i' the church.

King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctuarize;

Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes,

Will you do this, keep close within your chamber. 130

Hamlet return'd shall know you are come home;

We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,

And set a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman gave you, bring you, in fine, together

And wager on your heads: he, being remiss,
Most generous and free from all contriving,

Will not peruse the foils; so that with ease
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A sword unbated, and in a pass of practice
Requite him for your father.

Laer. I will do 't;
And, for that purpose, I 'll anoint my sword.
I bought an unction of a mountebank, 142
So mortal that, but dip a knife in it,
Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue Under the moon, can save the thing from
death
That is but scratch'd withal; I 'll touch my point

With this contagion, that, if I gall him slightly,
It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this;
Weigh what convenience both of time and
means 150
May fit us to our shape. If this should fail,
And that our drift look through our bad performance

'T were better not assay'd; therefore this project

Should have a back or second, that might hold,

If this should blast in proof. Soft! let me
see;

We 'll make a solemn wager on your cun-
nings:

I ha' 't:
When in your motion you are hot and dry,
As make your bouts more violent to that end,
And that he calls for drink, I 'll have pre-par'd him 160

A chalice for the nonce, whereon but sip-ping,

If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,
Our purpose may hold there. But stay!
what noise?

Enter QUEEN.

How now, sweet queen?

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,

So fast they follow: your sister's drown'd,
Laertes.

Laer. Drown'd! O! where?

Queen. There is a willow grows aslant a brook,

That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy
stream;

There with fantastic garlands did she come,
Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples, 170

That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,
But our cold maids do dead men's fingers
call them:

There, on the pendent boughs her coronet
weeds

Clambering to hang, an envious sliver broke,
When down her weedy trophies and herself Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide,

And, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her
up;

Which time she chanted snatches of old
tunes,

As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and indu'd 180
Unto that element; but long it could not be Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,

Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay

To muddy death.

Laer. Alas! then, she is drown'd?
Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor
Ophelia,

And therefore I forbid my tears; but yet
It is our trick, nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will; when these are
gone

The woman will be out. Adieu, my lord! 190
I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
But that this folly douts it. Exit.

King. Let's follow, Gertrude.
How much I had to do to calm his rage!
Now fear I this will give it start again;
Therefore let's follow. Exeunt.

ACT V

SCENE I.—A Churchyard.

Enter two Clowns with spades and mattocks.

First Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

Second Clo. I tell thee she is; and therefore make her grave straight: the crowner hath sat on her, and finds it Christian burial.

First Clo. How can that be, unless she drown'd herself in her own defence?

Second Clo. Why, 't is found so. 8

First Clo. It must be se offendendo; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: if I drown myself wittingly it argues an act;
and an act hath three branches; it is, to act,
to do, and to perform: argal, she drown'd herself wittingly.

Second Clo. Nay, but hear you, Goodman
delyer,— 15

First Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water; good: here stands the man; good:
if the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he nill he, he goes; mark you that: but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself; argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life. 22

Second Clo. But is this law?

First Clo. Ay, marry, is 't; crowner's quest law.

Second Clo. Will you ha' the truth on 't?
If this had not been a gentlewoman she should have been buried out o' Christian burial. 28

First Clo. Why, there thou sayest; and the more pity that great folk shall have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves more than their even Christian.
Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession. 35

Second Clo. Was he a gentleman?

First Clo. A' was the first that ever bore arms.

Second Clo. Why, he had none. 39

First Clo. What! art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says Adam digged; could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee; if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

Second Clo. Go to. 45

First Clo. What is he that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

Second Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame outlives a thousand tenants. 50

First Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith; the gallows does well, but how does it well? it does well to those that do ill; now thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church: argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To't again; come. 56

Second Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

First Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke.

Second Clo. Marry, now I can tell. 60

First Clo. To't.

Second Clo. Mass, I cannot tell.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO, at a distance.

First Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it, for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating; and when you are asked this question next, say 'a grave-maker': the houses that he makes last till doomsday. Go, get thee to Yaughan; fetch me a stoup of liquor. Exit Second Clown. 63

First Clown digs, and sings.

In youth, when I did love, did love,

Methought it was very sweet,

To contract, O! the time, for, ah! my behove,

O! methought there was nothing meet.

Ham. Hath this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making?

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so; the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense. 78

First Clo.

But, age with his stealing steps,

Hath claw'd me in his clutch,

And hath shipp'd me intil the land,

As if I had never been such.

Throws up a skull.

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once; how the knave jowls it to the ground, as if it were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-offices, one that would circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord. 89

Ham. Or a courtier, which could say 'Good morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?' This might be my Lord Such-a-one, that praised my Lord Such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it, might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e'en so, and now my Lady Worm's; chapless, and knocked about the mazzard with a sexton's spade. Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding but to play at loggats with 'em? mine ache to think on't. 101

First Clo.

A pick-axe and a spade, a spade,

For and a shrouding sheet;

O! a pit of clay for to be made

For such a guest is meet. 107

Throws up another skull.

Ham. There's another; why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddities now, his quillets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the scone with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Hum! This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries; is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box, and must the inheritor himself have no more, ha? 121

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calf-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep and calves which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow. Whose grave's this, sir?

First Clo. Mine, sir.

O! a pit of clay for to be made

For such a guest is meet. 130

Ham. I think it be thine, indeed; for thou liest in't.

First Clo. You lie out on't, sir, and therefore it is not yours; for my part, I do not lie in't, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in't, to be in't, and say it is thine: 't is for the dead, not for the quick; therefore thou liest.

First Clo. 'Tis a quick lie, sir; 't will away again, from me to you. 140

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

First Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then?

First Clo. For none, neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

First Clo. One that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord, Horatio, this three years I have taken note of it; the age is grown so picked that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe. How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

First Clo. Of all the days i' the year, I came to 't that day that our last King Hamlet o'ercame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

First Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that; it was the very day that young Hamlet was born; he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry; why was he sent into England?

First Clo. Why, because he was mad: he shall recover his wits there; or, if he do not, 't is no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

First Clo. 'T will not be seen in him there; there the men are as mad as he. 170

Ham. How came he mad?

First Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

First Clo. Faith, e'en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

First Clo. Why, here in Denmark; I have been sexton here, man and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i' the earth ere he rot?

First Clo. Faith, if he be not rotten before he die, as we have many pocky corpses now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying in, he will last you some eight year or nine year; a tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another? 185

First Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade that he will keep out water a great while, and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here 's a skull now; this skull hath lain i' the earth three-and-twenty years. 191

Ham. Whose was it?

First Clo. A whoreson mad fellow's it was: whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

First Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! a' poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, was Yorick's skull, the king's jester.

Ham. This!

First Clo. E'en that. 200

Ham. Let me see.

Takes the skull.
Alas! poor Yorick. I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy; he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chapfallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that. Prithee, Horatio, tell me one thing. 216

Hor. What's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think Alexander looked o' this fashion i' the earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? pah!

Puts down the skull.

Hor. E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole? 226

Hor. 'T were to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it; as thus: Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam; and why of that loam, whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel? 233

Imperious Cæsar, dead and turn'd to clay,

Might stop a hole to keep the wind away: O! that that earth, which kept the world in awe,

Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw.

But soft! but soft! aside: here comes the king. 240

Enter Priests, etc., in procession; the Corpse of OPHELIA, LAERTES and Mourners following; KING, QUEEN, their Trains, etc.

The queen, the courtiers: who is this they follow?

And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken

The corse they follow did with desperate hand

Fordo its own life; 't was of some estate. Cough we awhile, and mark.

Retiring with HORATIO.

Laer. What ceremony else?

Ham. That is Laertes,

A very noble youth: mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd

As we have warrantise; her death was doubtful, 250

And, but that great command o'ersways the order,

She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd

Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers,

Shards, flints, and pebbles should be thrown on her;

Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants, Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home

Of bell and burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

Priest. No more be done: We should profane the service of the dead,

To sing a requiem and such rest to her 260

As to peace-parted souls.

Laer. Lay her i' the earth;

And from her fair and unpolluted flesh May violets spring! I tell thee, churlish priest, A ministering angel shall my sister be,

When thou liest howling.

Ham. What! the fair Ophelia?
Queen. Sweets to the sweet: farewell!
Scattering flowers.
 I hop'd thou should'st have been my Ham-let's wife;
 I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd,
 sweet maid,
 And not have strew'd thy grave.
Laer. O! treble woe
 Fall ten times treble on that cursed head 270
 Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious
 sense
 Depriv'd thee of. Hold off the earth awhile,
 Till I have caught her once more in mine arms. Leaps into the grave.
 Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
 Till of this flat a mountain you have made,
 To o'er-top old Pelion or the skyish head
 Of blue Olympus.
Ham. Advancing. What is he whose grief Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow
 Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them stand 279
 Like wonder-wounded hearers? This is I,
 Hamlet the Dane. Leaps into the grave.
Laer. The devil take thy soul!
Grapples with him.
Ham. Thou pray'st not well.
 I prithee, take thy fingers from my throat;
 For though I am not splenitive and rash
 Yet have I something in me dangerous, Which let thy wisdom fear. Away thy
 hand!
King. Pluck them asunder.
Queen. Hamlet! Hamlet!
All. Gentlemen,—
Hor. Good my lord, be quiet.
The Attendants part them, and they come out of the grave.
Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme
 Until my eyelids will no longer wag. 290
Queen. O my son! what theme?
Ham. I lov'd Ophelia: forty thousand brothers
 Could not, with all their quantity of love, Make up my sum. What wilt thou do for
 her?
King. O! he is mad, Laertes.
Queen. For love of God, forbear him.
Ham. 'Swounds! show me what thou 'lt
 do:
 Woo't weep? woo't fight? woo't fast? woo't tear thyself?
 Woo't drink up eisel? eat a crocodile? 299
 I'll do 't. Dost thou come here to whine?
 To outface me with leaping in her grave?
 Be buried quick with her, and so will I:
 And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw
 Millions of acres on us, till our ground,
 Singeing his pate against the burning zone,
 Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou 'lt mouth,
 I'll rant as well as thou.
Queen. This is mere madness:
 And thus awhile the fit will work on him;
 Anon, as patient as the female dove, 309

When that her golden couplets are disclos'd,
 His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, sir;
 What is the reason that you use me thus?
 I lov'd you ever: but it is no matter;
 Let Hercules himself do what he may,
 The cat will mew and dog will have his day.
Exit.

King. I pray you, good Horatio, wait upon him. Exit HORATIO.
 To LAERTES. Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech;
 We'll put the matter to the present push.
 Good Gertrude, set some watch over your
 son.

This grave shall have a living monument:
 An hour of quiet shortly shall we see; 321
 Till then, in patience our proceeding be.
Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO.

Ham. So much for this, sir: now let me
 see the other;

You do remember all the circumstance?

Hor. Remember it, my lord?

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting

That would not let me sleep; methought I lay

Worse than the mutines in the bilboes.
 Rashly,

And prais'd be rashness for it, let us know,
 Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well
 When our deep plots do fail; and that should teach us

There's a divinity that shapes our ends, 10
 Rough-hew them how we will.

Hor. That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my cabin,
 My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark
 Grop'd I to find out them, had my desire,
 Finger'd their packet, and in fine withdrew
 To mine own room again; making so bold,
 My fears forgetting manners, to unseal
 Their grand commission; where I found,
Horatio,

O royal knavery! an exact command, 19
 Larded with many several sorts of reasons
 Importing Denmark's health, and England's
 too,

With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my life,
 That, on the supervise, no leisure bated,
 No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,
 My head should be struck off.

Hor. Is 't possible?

Ham. Here 's the commission: read it at more leisure.

But wilt thou hear me how I did proceed?

Hor. I beseech you.

Ham. Being thus benetted round with villainies,—

Ere I could make a prologue to my brains 30
 They had begun the play,—I sat me down,
 Devis'd a new commission, wrote it fair;
 I once did hold it, as our statist do,
 A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much
 How to forget that learning; but, sir, now

It did me yeoman's service. Wilt thou know
The effect of what I wrote?

Hor. Ay, good my lord.

Ham. An earnest conjuration from the
king,

As England was his faithful tributary,
As love between them like the palm should flourish, <sup>40</sup>

As peace should still her wheaten garland
wear,

And stand a comma 'tween their amities,
And many such-like as's of great charge,
That, on the view and knowing of these contents,

Without debatement further, more or less,
He should the bearers put to sudden death,
Not shriving-time allow'd.

Hor. How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordinant.

I had my father's signet in my purse,
Which was the model of that Danish seal; 50
Folded the writ up in the form of the other, Subscrib'd it, gave 't the impression, plac'd
it safely,

The changeling never known. Now, the next day

Was our sea-fight, and what to this was se-quent

Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to 't.

Ham. Why, man, they did make love to this employment;

They are not near my conscience; their defeat

Does by their own insinuation grow. <sup>50</sup>

'Tis dangerous when the baser nature
comes

Between the pass and fell-incensed points
Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a king is this!

Ham. Does it not, thinks 't thee, stand me now upon—

He that hath kill'd my king and whor'd my mother,

Popp'd in between the election and my hopes,

Thrown out his angle for my proper life,
And with such cozenage—is 't not perfect
conscience

To quit him with this arm? and is 't not to be damn'd

To let this canker of our nature come
In further evil? <sup>70</sup>

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England

What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short: the interim is
mine;

And a man's life's no more than to say 'One.'
But I am very sorry, good Horatio,

That to Laertes I forgot myself;
For, by the image of my cause, I see

The portraiture of his: I'll court his favours:

But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me
Into a towering passion.

Hor. Peace! who comes here?

Enter OSRIC.

Os. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark. <sup>82</sup>

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir. Dost know this water-fly?

Hor. No, my good lord.

Ham. Thy state is the more gracious; for 't is a vice to know him. He hath much land, and fertile: let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess: 't is a chough; but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt. <sup>90</sup>

Os. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit. Put your bonnet to his right use; 't is for the head.

Os. I thank your lordship, 't is very hot.
Ham. No, believe me, 't is very cold; the wind is northerly. <sup>99</sup>

Os. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet methinks it is very sultry and hot for my complexion.

Os. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry, as 't were, I cannot tell how. But, my lord, his majesty bade me signify to you that he has laid a great wager on your head.
Sir, this is the matter, — <sup>107</sup>

Ham. I beseech you, remember—

HAMLET moves him to put on his hat.

Os. Nay, good my lord; for mine ease, in good faith. Sir, here is newly come to court Laertes; believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society and great showing; indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see. <sup>116</sup>

Ham. Sir, his definement suffers no perdition in you; though, I know, to divide him inventorially would dizzy the arithmetic of memory, and yet but yaw neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing
more.

Os. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer
breath?

Os. Sir? <sup>130</sup>

Hor. Is 't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do 't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Os. Of Laertes?

Hor. His purse is empty already; all 's golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Os. I know you are not ignorant— <sup>139</sup>

Ham. I would you did, sir; yet, in faith,
if you did, it would not much approve me.

Well, sir?

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is—

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but, to know a man well, were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his meed he's unfellowed. 150

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons; but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses; against the which he has imponed, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so: three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit. 160

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew you must be edified by the marriage ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more german to the matter if we could carry cannon by our sides; I would it might be hangers till then. But, on: six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish. Why is this 'imponed,' as you call it? 171

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, sir, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits; he hath laid on twelve for nine, and it would come to immediate trial if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How if I answer no? 177

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall; if it please his majesty, 't is the breathing time of day with me; let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him an I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame and the odd hits. 185

Osr. Shall I re-deliver you e'en so?

Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours. Exit OSRIC.

He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for 's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head. 194

Ham. He did comply with his dug before he sucked it. Thus has he, and many more of the same bevy that I know the drossy age dotes on, only got the tune of the time and outward habit of encounter, a kind of yesty collection which carries them through and through the most fond and winnowed opinions, and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him that you attend him in the hall; he sends to know if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time. 207

Ham. I am constant to my purposes; they follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now or whensoever, provided I be so able as now. 211

Lord. The king and queen and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. Exit Lord.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord. 219

Ham. I do not think so; since he went into France I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. But thou would'st not think how ill all's here about my heart; but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,— 224

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it; I will forestall their repair hither, and say you are not fit. 229

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury; there's a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 't is not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all. Since no man knows aught of what he leaves, what is 't to leave betimes? Let be. 235

Enter KING, QUEEN, LAERTES, Lords, OSRIC, and Attendants with foils, etc.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

The KING puts the hand of LAERTES into that of HAMLET.

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir; I've done you wrong;

But pardon 't, as you are a gentleman.

This presence knows,

And you must needs have heard, how I am punish'd 240

With sore distraction. What I have done, That might your nature, honor and exception Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.

Was 't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never Hamlet:

If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away,

And when he's not himself does wrong Laertes,

Then Hamlet does it not; Hamlet denies it. Who does it then? His madness. If 't be so,

Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd;

His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy. 250

Sir, in this audience,

Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil

Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,

That I have shot mine arrow o'er the house, And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,
Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most
To my revenge; but in my terms of honour
I stand aloof, and will no reconciliation,
Till by some elder masters, of known honour,
I have a voice and precedent of peace, 260
To keep my name ungor'd. But till that
time,
I do receive your offer'd love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely;
And will this brother's wager frankly play.
Give us the foils. Come on.

Laer. Come, one for me.
Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance

Your skill shall, like a star i' the darkest
night,
Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir.
Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric.
Cousin Hamlet, 270
You know the wager?

Ham. Very well, my lord;
Your grace hath laid the odds o' the weaker side.

King. I do not fear it; I have seen you
both;
But since he's better'd, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy; let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well. These foils have all a length?

Osr. Ay, my good lord.
King. Set me the stoups of wine upon that table.

If Hamlet give the first or second hit,
Or quit in answer of the third exchange, 280
Let all the battlements their ordnance fire;
The king shall drink to Hamlet's better
breath;

And in the cup an union shall he throw,
Richer than that which four successive kings

In Denmark's crown have worn. Give me
the cups;

And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
The trumpet to the cannoneer without,
The cannons to the heavens, the heavens
to earth,

'Now the king drinks to Hamlet!' Come,
begin;

And you, the judges, bear a wary eye. 290

Ham. Come on, sir.
Laer. Come, my lord. They play.

Ham. One. Laer. No. Ham. Judgment.

Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.
Laer. Well; again.

King. Stay; give me drink. Hamlet, this pearl is thine;

Here's to thy health. Give him the cup.

Trumpets sound, and cannon shot off within.
Ham. I'll play this bout first; set it by awhile.

Come. They play.

Laer. Another hit; what say you?
King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He's fat, and scant of breath.
Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows; 299

The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.
Ham. Good madam!

King. Gertrude, do not drink.
Queen. I will, my lord; I pray you, pardon me.

King. Aside. It is the poison'd cup! it is too late.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.
Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think 't.
Laer. Aside. And yet 't is almost 'gainst
my conscience.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes. You but dally;

I pray you, pass with your best violence.
I am afeard you make a wanton of me. 310

Laer. Say you so? come on. They play.
Osr. Nothing, neither way.

Laer. Have at you now.

LAERTES wounds HAMLET; then, in scuffling, they change rapiers, and HAMLET wounds LAERTES.

King. Part them! they are incens'd.
Ham. Nay, come again.

The QUEEN falls.
Osr. Look to the queen there, ho!

Hor. They bleed on both sides. How is it, my lord?

Osr. How is 't, Laertes?
Laer. Why, as a woodcock to mine own springe, Osric;

I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.
Ham. How does the queen?

King. She wounds to see them bleed.
Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my dear Hamlet! 320

The drink, the drink! I am poison'd. Dies.
Ham. O villany! Ho! let the door be lock'd:

Treachery! seek it out. LAERTES falls.
Laer. It is here, Hamlet. Hamlet, thou art slain;

No medicine in the world can do thee good;
In thee there is not half an hour of life;

The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,
Unbated and evenom'd. The foul practice
Hath turn'd itself on me; lo! here I lie,

Never to rise again. Thy mother's poison'd.
I can no more. The king, the king's to blame. 331

Ham. The point evenom'd too!
Then, venom, to thy work. Stabs the KING.

All. Treason! treason!

King. O! yet defend me, friends; I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murderous,
damned Dane,

Drink off this potion; is thy union here?
Follow my mother. KING dies.

Laer. He is justly serv'd;
It is a poison temper'd by himself.
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet: 340

Mine and my father's death come not upon
thee,

Nor thine on me! Dies.

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.

I am dead, Horatio. Wretched queen, adieu!

You that look pale and tremble at this chance,

That are but mutes or audience to this act,
Had I but time, as this fell sergeant, Death,

Is strict in his arrest, O! I could tell you,—
But let it be. Horatio, I am dead; 349

Thou liv'st; report me and my cause aright
To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it;
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane:
Here's yet some liquor left.

Ham. As thou'rt a man,
Give me the cup: let go; by heaven, I'll have 't.

O God! Horatio, what a wounded name, Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me.

If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity awhile,

And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,

To tell my story.

March afar off, and shout within.
What war-like noise is this?

Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland, 361

To the ambassadors of England gives
This war-like volley.

Ham. O! I die, Horatio;
The potent poison quite o'er-crows my
spirit;

I cannot live to hear the news from England,
But I do prophesy the election lights

On Fortinbras; he has my dying voice;
So tell him, with the occurrents, more and less,

Which have solicited—the rest is silence.
Dies.

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart. Good night, sweet prince, 370

And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!
Why does the drum come hither?

March within.

Enter FORTINBRAS, the English Ambassadors, and others.

For. Where is this sight?

Hor. What is it ye would see?
If aught of woe or wonder, cease your search.

For. This quarry cries on havoc. O proud Death!

What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,
That thou so many princes at a shot
So bloodily hast struck?

First Amb. The sight is dismal;
And our affairs from England come too
late:

The ears are senseless that should give us
hearing, 380

To tell him his commandment is fulfill'd, That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are
dead.

Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it the ability of life to thank you:

He never gave commandment for their
death.

But since, so jump upon this bloody question,
You from the Polack wars, and you from England,

Are here arriv'd, give order that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view; 389

And let me speak to the yet unknowing
world

How these things came about: so shall you
hear

Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts,
Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters,

Of deaths put on by cunning and forc'd
cause,

And, in this upshot, purposes mistook
Fall'n on the inventors' heads; all this can I

Truly deliver.

For. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.

For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune;
I have some rights of memory in this kingdom, 400

Which now to claim my vantage doth invite
me.

Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to
speak,

And from his mouth whose voice will draw
on more:

But let this same be presently perform'd,
Even while men's minds are wild, lest more mischance,

On plots and errors, happen.

For. Let four captains
Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage;

For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have prov'd most royally: and for his passage,

The soldiers' music and the rites of war 410
Speak loudly for him.

Take up the bodies: such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.

Go, bid the soldiers shoot.

A dead march. Exeunt, bearing off the bodies; after which a peal of ordnance is shot off.

KING LEAR

HAD Lear's original plan not miscarried, Burgundy would have married Cordelia and Lear would have passed the rest of his life with them, presumably in peace, on the richest third of the divided kingdom. As a result, he would have escaped the purgation of his soul through suffering and died with all his imperfections on his head. In the tragedy of King Lear we have the story of the salvation of a great soul. It is all the more impressive that the change in Lear comes after he has passed the age of "four score and upwards."

To follow the development of the story, it is of prime importance that we shall neither extenuate nor exaggerate the particular fault in Lear from which his tragedy springs. Above all, we must not relieve him of full accountability for that fault on the ground of insanity or the physical and mental infirmities of age. To exaggerate his physical infirmities, for instance, is to render the storm scene in large measure superfluous, the obvious purpose of which is to "make the king bow." It is a testimony both to Lear's physical and mental powers when Cordelia, kneeling by her father's couch says, referring to that awful night in the storm:

" 'T is wonder that thy life and wits at once
Had not concluded all."

To argue that Lear's plan of dividing the kingdom is so absurd as to indicate that he is in his dotage is, in my judgment, to mis-read that opening scene. That the kingdom has already been divided, and how, is no secret. Kent and Gloucester know all about it, and so, evidently, do France and Burgundy, who have long "made their amorous sojourn" at Lear's court and are fully informed of Cordelia's dowry. The day for answering them has now arrived, and the entire court has been summoned; and it is on this day, too, that Lear has chosen "to publish" his daughters' dowers—a formal and ceremonious announcement of what is already generally known. Lear has clearly no thought of re-dividing his kingdom on the basis of the professed love of his daughters; he proposes only that they give him some expression that shall enable him to say which of them loves him most,

"That we our largest bounty may extend
Where nature doth with merit challenge."

In Lear's mind there is no doubt of the outcome; Cordelia will justify her right to the richest third, while Goneril and Regan will have an opportunity to grace the occasion by expressing their thanks for their respective shares in the form of a public avowal of their love. There is nothing whatever absurd about the plan if we consider it a part of one of the most important and ceremonious events of Lear's lifetime.

Lear's fault, then, is not to be attributed to dotage. Rather we must look for it in the very awfulness of the sentence he pronounces against Cordelia; and that sentence we must regard from Lear's viewpoint rather than from our own.

Viewed as a part in a merely domestic scene, Cordelia's fault would be regarded as in reality a virtue—an evidence of her perfect truth. But this is no such scene. It is an occasion of public moment and solemn dignity, with Lear himself the central figure, and with his plan, which on its face evidenced his dearest love for Cordelia, wholly dependent on her perfect co-operation. Her failure to conform to that plan, her pleading as a virtue what, considering the nature of the occasion, was to him an unpardonable affront, her setting her pride in her own truth against his pride in his own authority and humiliating him before the entire court—all this must, from his point of view, be met with instant and terrible rebuke. It is his pride against hers; and the pride of authority always has the power to enforce itself on the instant against the pride of truth. Here, then, is Lear's tragic fault: a pride in his own authority to which even truth must yield.

The same fault repeats itself in the banishment of Kent; for Kent's offense, like Cordelia's, is against Lear's pride in his own authority—an attempt “To come betwixt our sentence and our power,

Which nor our nature nor our place can bear.”

That is, it is not a question with Lear whether Kent is right or wrong; he has opposed his pride in the truth of his position against Lear's pride in his authority, and he must suffer for it.

In the cases of both Cordelia and Kent, Lear loses our sympathy because he uses his authority to defeat the truth. In his later outbursts against Oswald, Goneril, and Regan, although it is still his pride in authority upon which he insists, he wins us back in some measure; first, because he contends not against truth, but against open insolence, hypocrisy, and filial ingratitude; and second, because we note his growing helplessness to enforce his authority. It is not, however, until we see him, his pride unshaken, calling upon the gods to “touch him with noble anger” and reaching vain hands to lay hold of the “terrors of the earth,” that he commands our full sympathy as a supremely tragic figure.

Out in the storm his pride begins to bend as he comes to realize his utter helplessness. And yet, strange to say, it is just then that he feels the impulse to be helpful. He finds one part in his heart “that's sorry yet for” the Fool; he thinks of the “poor naked wretches” and condemns himself for having “ta'en too little care of this.” With the entrance of Edgar, feigning madness, his mind gives way, and in his later ravings he utters truths of which in his reason he had never dreamed:

“They flattered me like a dog, and told me I had white hairs in my beard ere the black ones were there. To say ‘ay’ and ‘no’ to everything I said! ‘Ay’ and ‘no’ too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once and the wind to make me chatter, when the thunder would not peace at my bidding, there I found ‘em, there I smelt ‘em out. Go to, they are not men o’ their words: they told me I was everything; ‘t is a lie, I am not ague-proof.”

Here in his madness Lear has discovered his fault. He had been surrounded by flatterers, men who told him he was “everything.” Out in the storm he had learned the truth. The authority in which he had so prided himself had bred its own destruction. If one would know what authority really is, let one watch a dog chasing a beggar; authority belongs not to the person, but at best to the office. The judge who sentences the petty thief to hang is himself a usurer. Since authority begets flattery and pride and falsehood, how can any man in an office of authority be fit to pass judgment on his fellow-men? And if there is no one to pass judgment, then

“None does offend, none, I say, none; I’ll able ‘em.”

Had Lear lived, we may be sure that he would never have accepted back into his own hands the “absolute power” that Albany stood ready to resign to him. It would have been enough for him, had it been permitted, to pass the rest of his life in captivity with Cordelia:

“Come, let’s away to prison;
We two alone will sing like birds i’ the cage:
When thou dost ask me blessing, I’ll kneel down,
And ask of thee forgiveness.”

But even to prison Authority follows him in the person of the Captain. We do not see the scene in the prison; but it requires little imagination to picture Lear, “this great decay,” awakening to a realization of the awful work being wrought in the name of Authority. For a last time his power asserts itself, his giant strength returns, the steel bars of his cage yield to his grasp, and with one swift and mighty swing he lays Authority dead at his feet:

“I kill’d the slave that was a-hanging thee.”

ACT I

SCENE I.—A Room of State in King LEAR'S Palace.

Enter KENT, GLOUCESTER, and EDMUND.

Kent. I thought the king had more affected the Duke of Albany than Cornwall.

Glou. It did always seem so to us; but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for qualities are so weighed that curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety.

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glou. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blushed to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it. 11

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glou. Sir, this young fellow's mother could; whereupon she grew round-wombed, and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper. 12

Glou. But I have a son, sir, by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account: though this knave came something saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged. Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund? 25

Edm. No, my lord.

Glou. My lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better, 31

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glou. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again. The king is coming.

Sennet. Enter LEAR, CORNWALL, ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, CORDELIA, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the lords of France and Burgundy, Gloucester.

Glou. I shall, my liege.

Exeunt GLOUCESTER and EDMUND.
Lear. Meantime we shall express our darker purpose.

Give me the map there. Know that we have divided

In three our kingdom; and 't is our fast intent

To shake all cares and business from our age, 40

Conferring them on younger strengths, while we Unburden'd crawl toward death. Our son of Cornwall,

And you, our no less loving son of Albany, We have this hour a constant will to publish

Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife

May be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy,

Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love, Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn,

And here are to be answer'd. Tell me, my daughters,

Since now we will divest us both of rule, so interest of territory, cares of state,

Which of you shall we say doth love us most?

That we our largest bounty may extend

Where nature doth with merit challenge.

Goneril,

Our eldest-born, speak first.

Gon. Sir, I love you more than words can wield the matter;

Dearer than eye-sight, space, and liberty;

Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare;

No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, honour;

As much as child e'er lov'd, or father found;

A love that makes breath poor and speech unable;

Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Cor. Aside. What shall Cordelia speak? Love, and be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,

With shadowy forests and with champains rich'd,

With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads,

We make thee lady: to thine and Albany's issue

Be this perpetual. What says our second daughter,

Our dearest Regan, wife to Cornwall? Speak.

Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister,

And prize me at her worth. In my true heart

I find she names my very deed of love;

Only she comes too short: that I profess

Myself an enemy to all other joys

Which the most precious square of sense possesses,

And find I am alone felicitate

In your dear highness' love.

Cor. Aside. Then poor Cordelia! And yet not so; since I am sure my love's

More ponderous than my tongue.

Lear. To thee and thine, hereditary ever, Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom,

No less in space, validity, and pleasure,

Than that conferr'd on Goneril. Now, our joy,

Although our last, not least; to whose young love

The vines of France and milk of Burgundy Strive to be interest'd; what can you say to draw

A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak.

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. Nothing?

Cor. Nothing.

Lear. Nothing will come of nothing: speak again.

Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave My heart into my mouth: I love your majesty

According to my bond; no more nor less.

Lear. How, how, Cordelia! mend your speech a little,

Lest you may mar your fortunes.

Cor.

Good my lord,

You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me: I Return those duties back as are right fit,

Obey you, love you, and most honour you.

Why have my sisters husbands, if they say They love you all? Haply, when I shall wed,

That lord whose hand must take my plight shall carry

Half my love with him, half my care and duty.

Sure I shall never marry like my sisters,

To love my father all.

Lear. But goes thy heart with this?

Cor. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. So young, and so untender?

Cor. So young, my lord, and true.

Lear. Let it be so; thy truth then be thy dower:

For, by the sacred radiance of the sun, The mysteries of Hecate and the night,

By all the operation of the orbs

From whom we do exist and cease to be,

Here I disclaim all my paternal care,

Propinquity and property of blood, And as a stranger to my heart and me

Hold thee from this for ever. The barbarous Scythian,

Or he that makes his generation messes

To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom

Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd,

As thou my sometime daughter.

Kent. Good my liege,—

Lear. Peace, Kent!

Come not between the dragon and his wrath. I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest

On her kind nursery. Hence, and avoid my sight!

So be my grave my peace, as here I give Her father's heart from her! Call France.

Who stirs?

Call Burgundy. Cornwall and Albany, With my two daughters' dowers digest the third;

Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her.

I do invest you jointly with my power, Pre-eminence, and all the large effects

That troop with majesty. Ourself, by monthly course,

With reservation of an hundred knights,

By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode Make with you by due turn. Only we shall retain

The name and all the addition to a king; The sway, revenue, execution of the rest,

Beloved sons, be yours: which to confirm,

This coronet part between you.

Kent.

Royal Lear,

Whom I have ever honour'd as my king, Lov'd as my father, as my master follow'd,

As my great patron thought on in my prayers,—

Lear.

The bow is bent and drawn; make from the shaft.

Kent.

Let it fall rather, though the fork invade The region of my heart: be Kent unman-nerly,

When Lear is mad. What would'st thou do, old man?

Think'st thou that duty shall have dread to speak

When power to flattery bows? To plainness honour's bound 150
When majesty falls to folly. Reserve thy
state;
And, in thy best consideration, check
This hideous rashness: answer my life my judgment,
Thy youngest daughter does not love thee
least;
Nor are those empty-hearted whose low
sound
Reverbs no hollowness.
Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more.
Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn
To wage against thine enemies; nor fear to lose it.
Thy safety being the motive.
Lear. Out of my sight!
Kent. See better, Lear; and let me still remain 150
The true blank of thine eye.
Lear. Now, by Apollo,—
Kent. Now, by Apollo, king,
Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.
Lear. O, vassal! miscreant!
Laying his hand upon his sword.
Alb., Corn. Dear sir, forbear.
Kent. Do;
Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy gift;
Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat,
I'll tell thee thou dost evil.
Lear. Hear me, recreant!
On thine allegiance, hear me! 170
Since thou hast sought to make us break
our vow,
Which we durst never yet, and with strain'd pride
To come betwixt our sentence and our
power,
Which nor our nature nor our place can
bear,
Our potency made good, take thy reward.
Five days we do allot thee for provision
To shield thee from diseases of the world;
And on the sixth to turn thy hated back Upon our kingdom: if on the tenth day
following Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions, 180
The moment is thy death. Away! By Jupiter,
This shall not be revok'd.
Kent. Fare thee well, king; sith thus thou wilt appear,
Freedom lives hence, and banishment is
here.
To CORDELIA. The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid,
That justly think'st, and hast most rightly said!
To REGAN and GONERIL. And your large speeches may your deeds approve,
That good effects may spring from words of
love.
Thus Kent, O princes! bids you all adieu;
He'll shape his old course in a country new.
Exit.

Flourish. Re-enter GLOUCESTER, with FRANCE, BURGUNDY, and Attendants.
Glou. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble lord. 191
Lear. My Lord of Burgundy,
We first address toward you, who with this
king
Hath rival'd for our daughter. What, in the least,
Will you require in present dower with her,
Or cease your quest of love?
Bur. Most royal majesty,
I crave no more than hath your highness
offer'd,
Nor will you tender less.
Lear. Right noble Burgundy,
When she was dear to us we did hold her so,
But now her price is fall'n. Sir, there she stands: 200
If aught within that little seeming-substance,
Or all of it, with our displeasure piec'd,
And nothing more, may fitly like your grace,
She's there, and she is yours.
Bur. I know no answer.
Lear. Will you, with those infirmities she owes,
Unfriended, new-adapted to our hate, Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath,
Take her, or leave her?
Bur. Pardon me, royal sir;
Election makes not up on such conditions.
Lear. Then leave her, sir; for, by the power that made me, 210
I tell you all her wealth. To FRANCE. For you, great king,
I would not from your love make such a stray
To match you where I hate; therefore beseech you
To avert your liking a more worthier way
Than on a wretch whom nature is asham'd
Almost to acknowledge hers.
France. This is most strange,
That she, that even but now was your best object,
The argument of your praise, balm of your
age,
The best, the dearest, should in this trice of
time 219
Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle
So many folds of favour. Sure, her offence
Must be of such unnatural degree
That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection
Fall'n into taint; which to believe of her,
Must be a faith that reason without miracle
Should never plant in me.
Cor. I yet beseech your majesty,
If for I want that glib and oily art
To speak and purpose not; since what I well intend,
I'll do 't before I speak, that you make known
It is no vicious blot nor other foulness, nor
No unchaste action, or dishonour'd step,
That hath depriv'd me of your grace and
favour,

But even for want of that for which I am richer,
A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it Hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou
Hadst not been born than not to have pleas'd me better.

France. Is it but this? a tardiness in nature

Which often leaves the history unspoke
That it intends to do? My Lord of Burgundy, 240

What say you to the lady? Love's not love
When it is mingled with regards that stand
Aloof from the entire point. Will you have her?

She is herself a dowry.

Bur. Royal Lear,
Give but that portion which yourself propos'd,

And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Duchess of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing: I have sworn; I am firm.

Bur. I am sorry, then, you have so lost a father

That you must lose a husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy!
Since that respects of fortune are his love,
I shall not be his wife. 252

France. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich, being poor;

Most choice, forsaken; and most lov'd, despis'd!

Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon:
Be it lawful I take up what's cast away.
Gods, gods! 't is strange that from their cold'st neglect

My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.
Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance,

Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France:
Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy 261
Can buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me.
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind:
Thou lovest here, a better where to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France; let her be thine, for we Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see

That face of hers again; therefore be gone
Without our grace, our love, our benison.
Come, noble Burgundy.

Flourish. Exeunt LEAR, BURGUNDY, CORNWALL, ALBANY, GLOUCESTER, and Attendants.

France. Bid farewell to your sisters. 270

Cor. The jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes

Cordelia leaves you: I know you what you are;

And like a sister am most loath to call
Your faults as they are nam'd. Use well our father:

To your professed bosoms I commit him:

But yet alas! stood I within his grace,

I would prefer him to a better place.

So farewell to you both.

Reg. Prescribe not us our duties.

Gon. Let your study
Be to content your lord, who hath receiv'd you 280
At fortune's alms; you have obedience scant,

And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

Cor. Time shall unfold what plighted cunning hides;

Who cover faults, at last shame them derides.

Well may you prosper!

France. Come, my fair Cordelia.
Exeunt FRANCE and CORDELIA.

Gon. Sister, it is not little I have to say of what most nearly appertains to us both.
I think our father will hence to-night.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you; next month with us. 290

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is; the observation we have made of it hath not been little: he always loved our sister most; and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off appears too grossly.

Reg. 'T is the infirmity of his age; yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash; then must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-engrafted condition, but therewithal the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them. 303

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further compliment of leavetaking between France and him. Pray you, let's hit together: if our father carry authority with such disposition as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us. 310

Reg. We shall further think on 't.
Gon. We must do something, and i' the heat. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Earl of GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter EDMUND, with a letter.

Edm. Thou, Nature, art my goddess; to thy law

My services are bound. Wherefore should I stand in the plague of custom, and permit The curiosity of nations to deprive me,

For that I am some twelve or fourteen moon-shines Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base?

When my dimensions are as well compact, My mind as generous, and my shape as true,

As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us

With base? with baseness? bastardy? base, base? 10

Who in the lusty stealth of nature take More composition and fierce quality

Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed, Go to the creating a whole tribe of fops,

Got 'tween asleep and wake? Well then, Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land: Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund As to the legitimate. Fine word, 'legitimate'!

Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed, 19
And my invention thrive, Edmund the base
Shall top the legitimate. I grow, I prosper;
Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Kent banish'd thus! And France in choler parted!
And the king gone to-night! subscrib'd his
power!
Confin'd to exhibition! All this done Upon the gad! Edmund, how now! what news?

Edm. So please your lordship, none.

Putting up the letter.

Glou. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glou. What paper were you reading? 30

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glou. No? What needed then that terrible dispatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself.
Let's see: come; if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.

Edm. I beseech you sir, pardon me; it is a letter from my brother that I have not all o'erread, and for so much as I have perused,
I find it not fit for your o'erlooking. 40

Glou. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.

Glou. Let's see, let's see. 45

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue.

Glou. This policy and reverence of age makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny, who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I wake him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother. EDGAR.

Hum! Conspiracy! 'Sleep till I wake him,— you should enjoy half his revenue.' My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in? When came this to you? Who brought it? 52

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord;
there's the cunning of it; I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet.

Glou. You know the character to be your brother's?

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord,
I durst swear it were his; but, in respect of that, I would fain think it were not. 70

Glou. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but I hope his heart is not in the contents.

Glou. Has he never before sounded you in this business?

Edm. Never my lord: but I have often heard him maintain it to be fit that, sons at perfect age, and fathers declined, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue. 79

Glou. O villain, villain! His very opinion in the letter! Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutish villain! worse than brutish!
Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him.
Abominable villain! Where is he? 84

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you should run a certain course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger. 95

Glou. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening. 101

Glou. He cannot be such a monster—

Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glou. —to his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him. Heaven and earth! Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstate myself to be in a due resolution.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently; convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal. 111

Glou. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us; though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects. Love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide; in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked 'twixt son and father.
This villain of mine comes under the prediction;
there's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, hollownness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves. Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing: do it carefully. And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty! 'T is strange. Exit. 128

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune, often the surfeit of our own behaviour, we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars; as if we were villains on necessity, fools by heavenly compulsion, knaves, thieves and treachers by spherical predominance, drunkards, liars and adulterers by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: an admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail, and my nativity was under ursa major; so that it follows I am rough and lecherous. Tut! I should have been that I am had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. Edgar—

145

Enter EDGAR.

and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy: my cue is villanous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam. O! these eclipses do portend these divisions. Fa, sol, la, mi.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund! What serious contemplation are you in? 151

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you the effects he writes of succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities; divisions in state; menaces and maledictions against king and nobles; needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, nuptial breaches, and I know not what. 163

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?

Edg. The night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him by word nor countenance?

Edg. None at all. 173

Edm. Bethink yourself wherein you may have offended him; and at my entreaty forbear his presence until some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure, which at this instant so rageth in him that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong. 180

Edm. That's my fear. I pray you have a continent forbearance till the speed of his rage goes slower, and as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak. Pray you, go; there's my key. If you do stir abroad, go armed. 186

Edg. Armed, brother!

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best, go armed; I am no honest man if there be any good meaning towards you; I have told you what I have seen and heard; but faintly, nothing like the image and horror of it; pray you, away. 192

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business.

Exit EDGAR.

A credulous father, and a brother noble,
Whose nature is so far from doing harms
That he suspects none; on whose foolish honesty
My practices ride easy! I see the business.
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit:
All with me's meet that I can fashion fit.
Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in the Duke of ALBANY'S Palace.

Enter GONERIL, and OSWALD, her Steward.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. By day and night he wrongs me; every hour

He flashes into one gross crime or other,
That sets us all at odds: I'll not endure it:
His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us

On every trifle. When he returns from hunting

I will not speak with him; say I am sick:

If you come slack of former services, 9
You shall do well; the fault of it I'll answer.

Osw. He's coming, madam; I hear him.
Horns within.

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please,

You and your fellows; I'd have it come to question:

If he distaste it, let him to my sister,
Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one,

Not to be over-ruled. Idle old man,
That still would manage those authorities
That he hath given away! Now, by my life,
Old fools are babes again, and must be used
With checks as flatteries, when they are seen abus'd. 20

Remember what I have said.

Osw.

Well, madam.

Gon. And let his knights have colder looks among you;

What grows of it, no matter; advise your fellows so:

I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall,

That I may speak: I'll write straight to my sister

To hold my very course. Prepare for dinner. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Hall in the Same.

Enter KENT, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow,

That can my speech diffuse, my good intent
May carry through itself to that full issue
For which I raz'd my likeness. Now, banish'd Kent,

If thou canst serve where thou dost stand
condemn'd,

So may it come, thy master, whom thou lov'st,
Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter LEAR, Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner: go, get it ready. Exit an Attendant.
How now! what art thou?

Kent. A man, sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What would'st thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem; to serve him truly that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgment; to fight when I cannot choose; and to eat no fish. 18

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.

Lear. If thou be as poor for a subject as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What would'st thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Whom would'st thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No sir; but you have that in your countenance which I would fain call master.

Lear. What's that? 31

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly; that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in, and the best of me is diligence. 38

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing, nor so old to dote on her for any thing; I have years on my back forty-eight. 42

Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me: if I like thee no worse after dinner I will not part from thee yet. Dinner, ho! Where's my knave? my fool? Go you and call my fool hither. Exit an Attendant.

Enter OSWALD.

You, you, sirrah, where's my daughter?

Osw. So please you,— Exit.

Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clotpoll back. Exit a Knight.
Where's my fool, ho? I think the world's asleep. 52

Re-enter Knight.

How now! where's that mongrel?

Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me when I called him?

Knight. Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not! 60

Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgment, your highness is not entertained with that ceremonious affection as you were wont; there's a great abatement of kindness appears as well in the general dependants as in the duke himself also and your daughter.

Lear. Ha! sayest thou so?

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent when I think your highness wronged. 71

Lear. Thou but rememberest me of mine own conception: I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness; I will look further into't. But where's my fool? I have not seen him this two days. 78

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well. Go you and tell my daughter I would speak with her. Exit an Attendant.
Go you, call hither my fool.

Exit an Attendant.

Re-enter OSWALD.

O! you sir, you, come you hither, sir. Who am I, sir?

Osw. My lady's father.

Lear. 'My lady's father!' my lord's knave: you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur! 89

Osw. I am none of these, my lord; I beseech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal? Striking him.

Osw. I'll not be struck, my lord.

Kent. Nor tripped neither, you base football player. Tripping up his heels.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me, and I'll love thee. 98

Kent. Come, sir, arise, away! I'll teach you differences: away, away! If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry; but away! Go to; have you wisdom? so. Pushes OSWALD out.

Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee; there's earnest of thy service. Gives KENT money.

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too: here's my coxcomb. Offers KENT his cap.

Lear. How now, my pretty knave! how dost thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.

Kent. Why, fool? 110

Fool. Why? for taking one's part that's out of favour. Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly: there, take my coxcomb. Why, this fellow has banished two on's daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will: if thou follow him thou must needs wear my coxcomb. How now, nuncle! Would I had two coxcombs and two daughters! 116

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcombs myself. There's mine; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah; the whip.

Fool. Truth's a dog must to kennel; he must be whipped out when Lady the brach may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me!

Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do.

Fool. Mark it, nuncle:

130

Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest,
Ride more than thou goest,
Learn more than thou trowest,
Set less than thou throwest;
Leave thy drink and thy whore,
And keep in-a-door,
And thou shalt have more
Than two tens to a score.

140

Kent. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then 't is like the breath of an unfee'd lawyer; you gave me nothing for 't. Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. To KENT. Prithee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to: he will not believe a fool.

Lear. A bitter fool!

150

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet fool?

Lear. No, lad; teach me.

Fool. That lord that counsel'd thee
To give away thy land,
Come place him here by me,
Do thou for him stand:
The sweet and bitter fool
Will presently appear;
The one in motley here
The other found out there.

155

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on 't; and ladies too, they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching. Nuncle, give me an egg, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

172

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i' the middle and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou clovest thy crown i' the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou borest thine ass on thy back o'er the dirt: thou hadst little wit in thy bald crown when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipped that first finds it so.

180

Fools had ne'er less grace in a year;

For wise men are grown foppish,

And know not how their wits to wear,

Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?

Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mothers; for when thou gavest them the rod and puttest down thine own breeches,

190

Then they for sudden joy did weep,

And I for sorrow sung,

That such a king should play bo-peep,

And go the fools among.

Prithee, nuncle, keep a schoolmaster that can teach thy fool to lie: I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. An you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipped.

198

Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipped for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipped for lying; and sometimes I am whipped for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o' thing than a fool; and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing i' the middle: here comes one o' the parings.

Enter GONERIL.

Lear. How now, daughter! what makes that frontlet on? Methinks you are too much of late i' the frown.

207

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure. I am better than thou art; I am a fool, thou art nothing. To GONERIL. Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; so your face bids me, though you say nothing.

Mum, mum:

He that keeps nor crust nor crum,

Weary of all, shall want some.

That's a shealed peascod. Pointing to LEAR.

Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-licens'd fool.

220

But other of your insolent retinue
Do hourly carp and quarrel, breaking forth
In rank and not-to-be-endured riots. Sir,
I had thought, by making this well known unto you,

To have found a safe redress; but now grow fearful,

By what yourself too late have spoke and
done,

That you protect this course, and put it on
By your allowance; which if you should, the fault

Would not 'scape censure, nor the redresses
sleep,

229

Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal,
Might in their working do you that offence,
Which else were shame, that then necessity
Will call discreet proceeding.

Fool. For you know, nuncle,

The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo
so long,

That it had it head bit off by it young.

So out went the candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our daughter?

Gon. Come, sir,
I would you would make use of your good wisdom, 240
Whereof I know you are fraught; and put
away
These dispositions which of late transport
you
From what you rightly are.

Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse? Whoop, Jug! I love
thee.

Lear. Doth any here know me? This is not Lear:

Does Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are his eyes?

Either his notion weakens, his discernings are lethargied. Ha! waking? 't is not so.
Who is it that can tell me who I am? 250

Fool. Lear's shadow.

Lear. I would learn that; for by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge, and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters.

Fool. Which they will make an obedient
father.

Lear. Your name, fair gentlewoman?

Gon. This admiration, sir, is much o' the savour

Of other your new pranks. I do beseech
you

To understand my purposes aright: 260
As you are old and reverend, you should be wise.

Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires;

Men so disorder'd, so debosh'd, and bold,
That this our court, infected with their manners,

Shows like a riotous inn: epicurism and lust
Make it more like a tavern or a brothel
Than a grac'd palace. The shame itself doth speak

For instant remedy; be then desir'd
By her, that else will take the thing she begs,
A little to disquantity your train; 270
And the remainder, that shall still depend,
To be such men as may besort your age,
Which know themselves and you.

Lear. Darkness and devils!
Saddle my horses; call my train together.
Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee:
Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You strike my people, and your disorder'd rabble
Make servants of their betters.

Enter ALBANY.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents; O! sir,
are you come?
Is it your will? Speak, sir. Prepare my horses. 280

Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend,
More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a
child,
Than the sea-monster.

Alb. Pray, sir, be patient.
Lear. To GONERIL. Detested kite! thou liest:

My train are men of choice and rarest parts,

That all particulars of duty know,
And in the most exact regard support
The worships of their name. O most small fault,

How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show!
Which, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of nature 290

From the fix'd place, drew from my heart all
love,

And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!
Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in,

Striking his head.
And thy dear judgment out! Go, go, my people.

Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant
Of what hath mov'd you.

Lear. It may be so, my lord.

Hear, Nature, hear! dear goddess, hear!
Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend
To make this creature fruitful!
Into her womb convey sterility! 300

Dry up in her the organs of increase,
And from her derogate body never spring
A babe to honour her! If she must teem,
Create her child of spleen, that it may live
And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her!
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth,
With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks,

Turn all her mother's pains and benefits
To laughter and contempt, that she may feel
How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is 310
To have a thankless child! Away, away!

Exit.
Alb. Now, gods that we adore, whereof comes this?

Gon. Never afflict yourself to know the
cause;
But let his disposition have that scope
That dotage gives it.

Re-enter LEAR.

Lear. What! fifty of my followers at a clap;

Within a fortnight!

Alb. What's the matter, sir?

Lear. I'll tell thee. To GONERIL. Life and death! I am asham'd That thou hast power to shake my manhood
thus,

That these hot tears, which break from me
perforce, 320
Should make thee worth them. Blasts and fogs upon thee!

The untended woundings of a father's curse Pierce every sense about thee! Old fond
eyes,

Bewep this cause again, I'll pluck ye out,
And cast you, with the waters that you lose,
To temper clay. Ha! is it come to this?

Let it be so: I have another daughter,
Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable:
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails

She'll flay thy wolfish visage. Thou shalt find 330

That I'll resume the shape which thou dost think

I have cast off for ever; thou shalt, I warrant thee.

Exeunt LEAR, KENT, and Attendants.

Gon. Do you mark that, my lord?

Alb. I cannot be so partial, Goneril,

To the great love I bear you,—

Gon. Pray you, content. What, Oswald, ho!

To the Fool. You sir, more knave than fool, after your master.

Fool. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear! tarry, and take the fool with thee.

A fox, when one has caught her, 370

And such a daughter,

Should sure to the slaughter,

If my cap would buy a halter;

So the fool follows after. Exit.

Gon. This man hath had good counsel.

A hundred knights!

'Tis politic and safe to let him keep

At point a hundred knights; yes, that on every dream,

Each buzz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,

He may enguard his dotage with their powers,

And hold our lives in mercy. Oswald, I say! 350

Alb. Well, you may fear too far.

Gon. Safer than trust too far.

Let me still take away the harms I fear.

Not fear still to be taken: I know his heart.

What he hath utter'd I have writ my sister;

If she sustain him and his hundred knights,

When I have show'd the unfitness,—

Re-enter OSWALD.

How now, Oswald!

What! have you writ that letter to my sister?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse:

Inform her full of my particular fear; 360

And thereto add such reasons of your own

As may compact it more. Get you gone,

And hasten your return. Exit OSWALD.

No, no, my lord,

This milky gentleness and course of yours

Though I condemn not, yet, under pardon,

You are much more attack'd for want of wisdom

Than prais'd for harmful mildness.

Alb. How far your eyes may pierce I cannot tell:

Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.

Gon. Nay, then— 370

Alb. Well, well; the event. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Court before the Same.

Enter LEAR, KENT, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloucester with these letters. Acquaint my daughter no further with any thing you know than comes from her demand out of the letter. If your diligence be not speedy I shall be there before you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter. Exit.

Fool. If a man's brains were in 's heels, were 't not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy. 10

Fool. Then, I prithee, be merry; thy wit shall ne'er go slip-shod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see thy other daughter will use thee kindly; for though she's as like this as a crab's like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. What canst tell, boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell why one's nose stands i' the middle on 's face? 20

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep one's eyes of either side 's nose, that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong,—

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither? but I can tell why a snail has a house. 30

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put 's head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature. So kind a father! Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight? 40

Fool. Yes, indeed: thou would'st make a good fool.

Lear. To take 't again perforce! Monster ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou should'st not have been old till thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O! let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven; 50

Keep me in temper; I would not be mad!

Enter Gentleman.

How now! Are the horses ready?

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy.

Fool. She that's a maid now, and laughs at my departure,

Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter. Exeunt.

ACT II

SCENE I.—A Court within the Castle of the Earl of GLOUCESTER.

Enter EDMUND and CURAN, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father, and given him notice that the Duke of Cornwall and Regan his duchess will be here with him this night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not. You have heard of the news abroad? I mean the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments.

Edm. Not I: pray you, what are they? 10
Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, 'twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may do then, in time. Fare you well, sir. Exit.

Edm. The duke be here to-night! The better! best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business. My father hath set guard to take my brother; And I have one thing, of a queasy question, Which I must act. Briefness and fortune, work! 20

Brother, a word; descend: brother, I say!

Enter EDGAR.

My father watches: O sir! fly this place; Intelligence is given where you are hid; You have now the good advantage of the night.

Have you not spoken 'gainst the Duke of Cornwall?

He's coming hither, now, i' the night, i' the haste,

And Regan with him; have you nothing said Upon his party 'gainst the Duke of Albany? Advise yourself.

Edg. I am sure on 't, not a word.

Edm. I hear my father coming; pardon me; 30

In cunning I must draw my sword upon you; Draw; seem to defend yourself; now quit you well.

Yield; come before my father. Light, ho! here!

Fly, brother. Torches! torches! So, farewell. Exit EDGAR.

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion Wounds his arm.

Of my more fierce endeavour: I have seen drunkards

Do more than this in sport. Father! father! Stop, stop! No help?

Enter GLOUCESTER, and Servants with torches.

Glou. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out, 40

Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon

To stand auspicious mistress.

Glou. But where is he?

Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.

Glou. Where is the villain, Edmund?

Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could—

Glou. Pursue him, ho! Go after.

Exit Servant.

By no means what?

Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship;

But that I told him, the revenging gods 'Gainst parricides did all the thunder bend;

Spoke with how manifold and strong a bond The child was bound to the father; sir, in fine, 50

Seeing how loathly opposite I stood To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion, With his prepared sword he charges home My unprovided body, lanc'd mine arm: But when he saw my best alarm'd spirits Bold in the quarrel's right, rous'd to the encounter,

Or whether gasted by the noise I made, Full suddenly he fled.

Glou. Let him fly far:

Not in this land shall he remain uncaught; And found—dispatch. The noble duke my master, 60

My worthy arch and patron, comes to-night: By his authority I will proclaim it,

That he which finds him shall deserve our thanks,

Bringing the murderous coward to the stake;

He that conceals him, death.

Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent,

And found him pight to do it, with curst speech

I threaten'd to discover him: he replied, 'Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think, If I would stand against thee, would the re-posal 70

Of any trust, virtue, or worth in thee Make thy words faith'd? No: what I should deny,

As this I would, ay, though thou didst produce

My very character, I'd turn it all To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice:

And thou must make a dullard of the world, If they not thought the profits of my death

Were very pregnant and potential spurs To make thee seek it.'

Glou. Strong and fasten'd villain! Would he deny his letter? I never got him.

Tucket within.

Hark! the duke's trumpets. I know not why he comes. 81

All ports I'll bar; the villain shall not 'scape;

The duke must grant me that: besides, his picture

I will send far and near, that all the kingdom May have due note of him; and of my land,

Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means To make thee capable.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend! since I came hither,

Which I can call but now, I have heard strange news.

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short 90

Which can pursue the offender. How dost, my lord?

Glou. O! madam, my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd.

Reg. What! did my father's godson seek your life?
He whom my father nam'd? your Edgar?
Glou. O! lady, lady, shame would have it hid.
Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous knights
That tend upon my father?
Glou. I know not, madam; 't is too bad, too bad.
Edm. Yes, madam, he was of that consort.
Reg. No marvel then though he were ill affected;
'T is they have put him on the old man's death,
To have the expense and waste of his revenues.
I have this present evening from my sister
Been well inform'd of them, and with such cautions
That if they come to sojourn at my house, I'll not be there.
Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan.
Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father
A child-like office.
Edm. 'T was my duty, sir.
Glou. He did bewray his practice; and receiv'd
This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.
Corn. Is he pursued?
Glou. Ay, my good lord.
Corn. If he be taken he shall never more be fear'd of doing harm; make your own purpose.
How in my strength you please. For you, Edmund, Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend itself, you shall be ours: Natures of such deep trust we shall much need;
You we first seize on.
Edm. I shall serve you, sir.
Truly, however else.
Glou. For him I thank your grace.
Corn. You know not why we came to visit you,—
Reg. Thus out of season, threading dark-eyed night:
Occasions, noble Gloucester, of some poise, Wherein we must have use of your advice.
Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences, which I best thought it fit
To answer from our home; the several messengers
From hence attend dispatch. Our good old friend,
Lay comforts to your bosom, and bestow Your needful counsel to our businesses, 129
Which crave the instant use.
Glou. I serve you, madam.
Your graces are right welcome. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter KENT and OSWALD, severally.

Osw. Good dawning to thee, friend: art of this house?

Kent. Ay.

Osw. Where may we set our horses?

Kent. I' the mire.

Osw. Prithee, if thou lovest me, tell me.

Kent. I love thee not.

Osw. Why, then I care not for thee.

Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Osw. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not.

Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

Osw. What dost thou know me for? 14

Kent. A knave, a rascal, an eater of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy, worsted-stocking knave; a lily-livered, action-taking knave; a whoreson, glass-gazing, super-serviceable, finical rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave; one that would'st be a bawd, in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pandar, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch; one whom I will beat into clamorous whining if thou deniest the least syllable of thy addition.

Osw. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one that is neither known of thee nor knows thee! 29

Kent. What a brazen-faced varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me! Is it two days since I tripped up thy heels and beat thee before the king? Draw, you rogue; for though it be night, yet the moon shines; I'll make a sop o' the moonshine of you.

Drawing his sword.

Draw, you whoreson cullionly barber-monster, draw.

Osw. Away! I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw, you rascal; you come with letters against the king, and take Vanity the puppet's part against the royalty of her father. Draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks: draw, you rascal; come your ways. 42

Osw. Help, ho! murder! help!

Kent. Strike, you slave; stand, rogue, stand; you neat slave, strike. Beats him.

Osw. Help, ho! murder! murder!

Enter EDMUND, with his rapier drawn.

Edm. How now! What's the matter?

Parting them.

Kent. With you, Goodman boy, an you please: come, I'll flesh ye; come on, young master.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOUCESTER, and Servants.

Glou. Weapons! arms! What's the matter here? 51

Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives: He dies that strikes again. What is the matter?

Reg. The messengers from our sister and the king.

Corn. What is your difference? speak.

Osw. I am scarce in breath, my lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have so bestirred your valour. You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee: a tailor made thee. 60

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow; a tailor make a man?

Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir: a stone-cutter or a painter could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours o' the trade.

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Osw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have spared at suit of his grey beard,— 68

Kent. Thou whoreson zed! thou unnecessary letter! My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him. Spare my grey beard, you wagtail?

Corn. Peace, sirrah!

You beastly knave, know you no reverence?

Kent. Yes, sir; but anger hath a privilege.

Corn. Why art thou angry?

Kent. That such a slave as this should wear a sword.

Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these,

Like rats, oft bite the holy cords a-twain 80
Which are too intrinse t' unloose; smooth every passion

That in the natures of their lords rebel;
Being oil to fire, snow to their colder moods;
Renege, affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks
With every gale and vary of their masters.
Knowing nought, like dogs, but following.

A plague upon your epileptic visage!
Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool?
Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain,
I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot. 90

Corn. What! art thou mad, old fellow?

Glou. How fell you out? say that.

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy
Than I and such a knave.

Corn. Why dost thou call him knave?
What is his fault?

Kent. His countenance likes me not.

Corn. No more, perchance, does mine,
nor his, nor hers.

Kent. Sir, 't is my occupation to be plain:
I have seen better faces in my time
Than stands on any shoulder that I see 100
Before me at this instant.

Corn. This is some fellow,
Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect

A saucy roughness, and constrains the garb
Quite from his nature: he cannot flatter,
he,

An honest mind and plain, he must speak
truth:

An they will take it, so; if not, he's plain.
These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness

Harbour more craft and more corrupter ends
Than twenty silly-ducking observants,
That stretch their duties nicely. 110

Kent. Sir, in good sooth, in sincere verity,
Under the allowance of your great aspect,
Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant
fire

On flickering Phœbus' front,—

Corn. What mean'st by this?

Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you discommend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer: he that beguiled you in a plain accent was a plain knave; which for my part I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to 't. 120

Corn. What was the offence you gave
him?

Osw. I never gave him any:

It pleas'd the king his master very late
To strike at me, upon his misconstruction;
When he, conjunct, and flattering his dis-
pleasure,

Tripp'd me behind; being down, insulted,
rail'd,

And put upon him such a deal of man,
That worthied him, got praises of the king
For him attempting who was self-subdu'd;
And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit, 130

Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of these rogues and cowards
But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks!

You stubborn ancient knave, you reverend braggart,

We'll teach you.

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn.
Call not your stocks for me; I serve the
king,

On whose employment I was sent to you:
You shall do small respect, show too bold
malice

Against the grace and person of my master,
Stocking his messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks!
As I have life and honour, there shall he sit till noon. 141

Reg. Till noon! till night, my lord; and all night too.

Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog,

You should not use me so.

Reg. Sir, being his knave, I will.

Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same colour

Our sister speaks of. Come, bring away the stocks. Stocks brought out.

Glou. Let me beseech your grace not to do so.

His fault is much, and the good king his master

Will check him for 't: your purpos'd low correction 149

Is such as basest and contemn'd'st wretches

For pilferings and most common trespasses
Are punish'd with: the king must take it ill,
That he, so slightly valued in his messenger,
Should have him thus restrain'd.

Corn. I'll answer that.

Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse

To have her gentleman abus'd, assaulted,
For following her affairs. Put in his legs.

KENT is put in the stocks.

Come, my good lord, away.

Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER and KENT.
Glow. I am sorry for thee, friend; 't is the duke's pleasure,

Whose disposition, all the world well knows,
Will not be rubb'd nor stopp'd: I'll entreat for thee.

Kent. Pray, do not, sir. I have watch'd and travell'd hard;

Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.

A good man's fortune may grow out at heels:
Give you good morrow!

Glow. The duke's to blame in this; 't will be ill taken. Exit.

Kent. Good king, that must approve the common saw,

Thou out of heaven's benediction comest
To the warm sun.

Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,
That by thy comfortable beams I may Peruse this letter. Nothing almost sees miracles,

But misery: I know 't is from Cordelia,
Who hath most fortunately been inform'd
Of my obscured course; and shall find time
From this enormous state, seeking to give Losses their remedies. All weary and o'erwatch'd,

Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold
This shameful lodging.

Fortune, good night; smile once more;
turn thy wheel! He sleeps. 180

SCENE III.—A Part of the Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd;

And by the happy hollow of a tree
Escap'd the hunt. No port is free; no place,
That guard, and most unusual vigilance,
Does not attend my taking. Whiles I may
'scape,

I will preserve myself; and am bethought
To take the basest and most poorest shape
That ever penury, in contempt of man, Brought near to beast; my face I'll grime with filth,

Blanket my loins, elf all my hair in knots, 10
And with presented nakedness of face
The winds and persecutions of the sky.

The country gives me proof and precedent
Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices,

Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare
arms

Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary;

And with this horrible object, from low farms,
Poor pelted villages, sheep-cotes, and mills, Sometime with lunatic bans, sometime with prayers,

Enforce their charity. Poor Turlygood!
poor Tom! 20

That's something yet: Edgar I nothing am.
Exit.

SCENE IV.—Before GLOUCESTER'S Castle.
KENT in the Stocks.

Enter LEAR, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'T is strange that they should so depart from home,
And not send back my messenger.

Gent. As I learn'd,
The night before there was no purpose in
them

Of this remove.

Kent. Hail to thee, noble master!

Lear. Ha!

Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?

Kent. No, my lord.
Fool. Ha, ha! he wears cruel garters.

Horses are tied by the head, dogs and bears
by the neck, monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs: when a man's over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks. 11

Lear. What's he that hath so much thy place mistook

To set thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she,

Your son and daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No, I say.

Kent. I say, yea.

Lear. No, no; they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have. 20

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.

Lear. They durst not do 't;
They could not, would not do 't; 't is worse than murder.

To do upon respect such violent outrage.

Resolve me, with all modest haste, which way
Thou might'st deserve, or they impose, this usage,

Coming from us.

Kent. My lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness' letters to
them,

Ere I was risen from the place that show'd
My duty kneeling, came there a reeking
post, 30

Stew'd in his haste, half breathless, panting
forth

From Goneril his mistress salutations;
Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission,
Which presently they read: on whose contents

They summon'd up their meiny, straight took horse;

Commanded me to follow, and attend
The leisure of their answer; gave me cold
looks;

And meeting here the other messenger,
Whose welcome, I perceiv'd, had poison'd
mine,

Being the very fellow which of late 40
Display'd so saucily against your highness,
Having more man than wit about me, drew:
He rais'd the house with loud and coward
cries.

Your son and daughter found this trespass
worth

The shame which here it suffers.

Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild-geese fly that way.

Fathers that wear rags

Do make their children blind,

But fathers that bear bags 50

Shall see their children kind.

Fortune, that arrant whore,

Ne'er turns the key to the poor.

But for all this thou shalt have as many dolours for thy daughters as thou canst tell in a year.

Lear. O! how this mother swells up toward my heart!

Hysterica passio! down, thou climbing sorrow!

Thy element's below. Where is this daughter?

Kent. With the earl, sir; here within.

Lear. Follow me not; stay here. Exit. 60

Gent. Made you no more offence but what you speak of?

Kent. None.

How chance the king comes with so small a number?

Fool. An thou hadst been set i' the stocks for that question, thou hadst well deserved it. 66

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labouring i' the winter. All that follow their noses are led by their eyes but blind men; and there's not a nose among twenty but can smell him that's stinking. Let go thy hold when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it; but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again: I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.

That sir which serves and seeks for gain, And follows but for form, 80

Will pack when it begins to rain,

And leave thee in the storm.

But I will tarry; the fool will stay,

And let the wise man fly:

The knave turns fool that runs away;

The fool no knave, perdy.

Kent. Where learned you this, fool?

Fool. Not i' the stocks, fool.

Re-enter LEAR, with GLOUCESTER.

Lear. Deny to speak with me! They are sick! they are weary!

They have travell'd all the night! Mere fetches, 90

The images of revolt and flying off.

Fetch me a better answer.

Glou. My dear lord,

You know the fiery quality of the duke;

How unremovable and fix'd he is

In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!

Fiery! what quality? Why, Gloucester,

Gloucester,

I'd speak with the Duke of Cornwall and his wife.

Glou. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so.

Lear. Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me, man? 100

Glou. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall; the dear father

Would with his daughter speak, commands her service;

Are they inform'd of this? My breath and blood!

Fiery! the fiery duke! Tell the hot duke that—

No, but not yet; may be he is not well:

Infirmary doth still neglect all office

Whereto our health is bound; we are not ourselves

When nature, being oppress'd, commands the mind

To suffer with the body. I'll forbear; 116

And am fall'n out with my more headier will,

To take the indispos'd and sickly fit

For the sound man. Death on my state?

wherefore Looking on KENT.

Should he sit here? This act persuades me

That this remotion of the duke and her

Is practice only. Give me my servant forth.

Go tell the duke and 's wife I'd speak with them.

Now, presently: bid them come forth and hear me,

Or at their chamber-door I'll beat the drum Till it cry sleep to death. 120

Glou. I would have all well betwixt you. Exit.

Lear. O me! my heart, my rising heart! but, down!

Fool. Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney did to the eels when she put 'em i' the paste alive; she knapped 'em o' the coxcombs with a stick, and cried 'Down, wantons, down!' 'Twas her brother that, in pure kindness to his horse, buttered his hay.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOUCESTER, and Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.

Corn. Hail to your grace! KENT is set at liberty.

Reg. I am glad to see your highness. 130

Lear. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason

I have to think so: if thou should'st not be glad,

I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb, Sepulchring an adultress. To KENT. O!

are you free?

Some other time for that. Beloved Regan,

Thy sister's naught: O Regan! she hath tied

Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture, here. Points to his heart.

I can scarce speak to thee; thou 'lt not believe

With how deprav'd a quality—O Regan! hope

Reg. I pray you sir, take patience. I have 140

You less know how to value her desert

Than she to scant her duty.

Lear. Say, how is that?

Reg. I cannot think my sister in the least
Would fail her obligation: if, sir, perchance
She have restrain'd the riots of your followers,

'T is on such ground, and to such wholesome
end,

As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her!

Reg. O, sir! you are old;

Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine: you should be rul'd and led 150

By some discretion that discerns your state Better than you yourself. Therefore I pray
you

That to our sister you do make return:

Say you have wrong'd her, sir.

Lear. Ask her forgiveness?

Do you but mark how this becomes the
house:

'Dear daughter, I confess that I am old;

Age is unnecessary: on my knees I beg

Kneeling.

That you 'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed and food.'

Reg. Good sir, no more; these are unsightly tricks.

Return you to my sister.

Lear. Rising. Never, Regan. 160

She hath abated me of half my train;

Look'd black upon me; struck me with her
tongue,

Most serpent-like, upon the very heart.

All the stor'd vengeance of heaven fall

On her ingrateful top! Strike her young bones,

You taking airs, with lameness!

Corn. Fie, sir, fie!

Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames

Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty,
You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the powerful
sun,

To fall and blast her pride! 170

Reg. O the blest gods! so will you wish on me,

When the rash mood is on.

Lear. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse:

Thy tender-hefted nature shall not give

Thee o'er to harshness: her eyes are fierce,
but thine

Do comfort and not burn. 'T is not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train.

To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes,
And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt 175

Against my coming in: thou better know'st
The offices of nature, bond of childhood,

Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;

Thy half o' the kingdom hast thou not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good sir, to the purpose.

Lear. Who put my man i' the stocks?

Tucket within.

Corn. What trumpet 's that?

Reg. I know 't, my sister's: this approves her letter,

That she would soon be here.

Enter OSWALD.

Is your lady come?

Lear. This is a slave, whose easy-borrow'd pride

Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows.
Out, varlet, from my sight!

Corn. What means your grace?

Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope 191

Thou didst not know on 't. Who comes
here?

Enter GONERIL.

O heavens,

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
Allow obedience, if yourselves are old,

Make it your cause; send down and take my part!

To GONERIL. Art not ashamed to look upon this beard?

O Regan! wilt thou take her by the hand?

Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How have I offended?

All 's not offence that indiscretion finds

And dotage terms so.

Lear. O sides! you are too tough;
Will you yet hold? How came my man i' 201

the stocks?

Corn. I set him there, sir; but his own disorders

Deserv'd much less advancement.

Lear. You! did you?

Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem
so.

If, till the expiration of your month,

You will return and sojourn with my sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me:

I am now from home, and out of that provision

Which shall be needful for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her? and fifty men dis-
miss'd?

No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose 211

To wage against the enmity o' the air;

To be a comrade with the wolf and owl,

Necessity's sharp pinch! Return with her!

Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took

Our youngest born, I could as well be brought

To kneel his throne, and, squire-like, pension beg

To keep base life afoot. Return with her!

Persuade me rather to be slave and sumpter
To this detested groom.

Pointing at OSWALD.

Gon. At your choice, sir.
Lear. I prithee, daughter, do not make me mad: 221

I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell.
We 'll no more meet, no more see one an-
other;

But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my
daughter;

Or rather a disease that 's in my flesh,

Which I must needs call mine: thou art a boil,

A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle,

In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee;

Let shame come when it will, I do not call it: I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot, 230 Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove. Mend when thou canst; be better at thy leisure:

I can be patient; I can stay with Regan, I and my hundred knights.

Reg. Not altogether so: I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided For your fit welcome. Give ear, sir, to my sister;

For those that mingle reason with your passion

Must be content to think you old, and so— But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken? Reg. I dare avouch it, sir: what! fifty followers! 240

Is it not well? What should you need of more?

Yea, or so many, sith that both charge and danger

Speak 'gainst so great a number? How, in one house,

Should many people, under two commands, Hold amity? 'Tis hard; almost impossible.

Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance

From those that she calls servants, or from mine?

Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chanc'd to slack you

We could control them. If you will come to me,

For now I spy a danger, I entreat you 250 To bring but five-and-twenty; to no more Will I give place or notice.

Lear. I gave you all—

Reg. And in good time you gave it.

Lear. Made you my guardians, my depositaries,

But kept a reservation to be follow'd With such a number. What! must I come to you

With five-and-twenty? Regan, said you so? Reg. And speak 't again, my lord; no more with me.

Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look well-favour'd

When others are more wicked; not being the worst 260

Stands in some rank of praise. To GON-ERIL. I'll go with thee:

Thy fifty yet doth double five-and-twenty, And thou art twice her love.

Gon. Hear me, my lord. What need you five-and-twenty, ten, or five, To follow in a house where twice so many Have a command to tend you?

Reg. What need one? Lear. O! reason not the need; our basest beggars

Are in the poorest thing superfluous: Allow not nature more than nature needs, Man's life is cheap as beast's. Thou art a lady; 270

If only to go warm were gorgeous, Why nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,

Which scarcely keeps thee warm. But, for true need,—

You heavens, give me that patience, patience I need!

You see me here, you gods, a poor old man, As full of grief as age; wretched in both!

If it be you that stirs these daughters' hearts Against their father, fool me not so much

To bear it tamely; touch me with noble anger,

And let not women's weapons, water-drops, Stain my man's cheeks! No, you unnatural hags, 281

I will have such revenges on you both That all the world shall—I will do such things,

What they are yet I know not, but they shall be

The terrors of the earth. You think I'll weep;

No, I'll not weep:

I have full cause of weeping, but this heart Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws

Or ere I'll weep. O fool! I shall go mad.

Exeunt LEAR, GLOUCESTER, KENT, and Fool.

Corn. Let us withdraw, 't will be a storm. Storm heard at a distance.

Reg. This house is little: the old man and his people 291

Cannot be well bestow'd,

Gon. 'T is his own blame; hath put himself from rest,

And must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly,

But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purpos'd. Where is my Lord of Gloucester?

Corn. Follow'd the old man forth. He is return'd.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. The king is in high rage.

Corn. Whither is he going?

Glou. He calls to horse; but will I know not whither. 300

Corn. 'T is best to give him way; he leads himself.

Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.

Glou. Alack! the night comes on, and the high winds

Do sorely ruffle; for many miles about There's scarce a bush.

Reg. O! sir, to wilful men, The injuries that they themselves procure Must be their schoolmasters. Shut up your doors;

He is attended with a desperate train, And what they may incense him to, being apt

To have his ear abus'd, wisdom bids fear. 310 Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; 't is a wild night:

My Regan counsels well: come out o' the storm. Exeunt.

ACT III

SCENE I.—A Heath.

A storm, with thunder and lightning. Enter KENT and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's there, beside foul weather?

Gent. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.

Kent. I know you. Where's the king?

Gent. Contending with the fretful elements;

Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main,
That things might change or cease; tears
his white hair,

Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless
rage,

Catch in their fury, and make nothing of;
Strives in his little world of man to out-scorn
The to-and-fro conflicting wind and rain. 11
This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch,

The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbattered he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?

Gent. None but the fool, who labours to out-jest

His heart-struck injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you;
And dare, upon the warrant of my note, Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,

Although as yet the face of it be cover'd 20
With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall;

Who have—as who have not, that their great stars

Thron'd and set high?—servants, who seem no less,

Which are to France the spies and specula-
tions

Intelligent of our state; what hath been
seen,

Either in snuffs and packings of the dukes,
Or the hard rein which both of them have borne

Against the old kind king; or something deeper,

Whereof perchance these are but furnish-
ings;

But, true it is, from France there comes a
power 30

Into this scatter'd kingdom; who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret feet

In some of our best ports, and are at point
To show their open banner. Now to you:

If on my credit you dare build so far
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find

Some that will thank you, making just report
Of how unnatural and bemoaning sorrow

The king hath cause to plain.

I am a gentleman of blood and breeding, 40
And from some knowledge and assurance offer

This office to you.

Gent. I will talk further with you.

Kent.

No, do not.

For confirmation that I am much more

Than my out-wall, open this purse, and take
What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia,
As fear not but you shall, show her this ring,
And she will tell you who your fellow is That yet you do not know. Fie on this storm!

I will go seek the king. 50

Gent. Give me your hand. Have you no more to say?

Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more than all yet;

That, when we have found the king, in which your pain

That way, I'll this, he that first lights on him
Holla the other. Exeunt severally.

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Heath.

Storm still.

Enter LEAR and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks! rage! blow!

You cataracts and hurricanoes, spout
Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the cocks!

You sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
Vaunt-couriers of oak-cleaving thunderbolts,

Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking thunder,

Strike flat the thick rotundity o' the world!
Crack nature's moulds, all germens spill at once

That make ingrateful man! 9

Fool. O nuncle, court holy-water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door. Good nuncle, in, and ask thy daughters' blessing; here's a night pities neither wise men nor fools.

Lear. Rumble thy bellyful! Spit, fire!
spout, rain!

Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my
daughters:

I tax not you, you elements, with unkind-
ness;

I never gave you kingdom, call'd you
children,

You owe me no subscription: then let fall
Your horrible pleasure; here I stand, your slave,

A poor, infirm, weak, and despis'd old man.
But yet I call you servile ministers, 21

That have with two pernicious daughters join'd

Your high-engender'd battles 'gainst a head
So old and white as this. O! O! 't is foul.

Fool. He that has a house to put 's head in has a good head-piece.

The cod-piece that will house

Before the head has any,

The head and he shall louse;

So beggars marry many. 30

The man that makes his toe

What he his heart should make,

Shall of a corn cry woe,

And turn his sleep to wake.

For there was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass.

Lear. No. I will be the pattern of all patience; I will say nothing.

Enter KENT.Kent. Who's there?Fool. Marry, here 's grace and a cod-piece; that 's a wise man and a fool. 41*Kent.* Alas! sir, are you here? things that love night
Love not such nights as these; the wrathful skiesGallow the very wanderers of the dark,
And make them keep their caves. Since I was man

Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder,

Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard; man's nature cannot carry

The affliction nor the fear.

Lear. Let the great gods,
That keep this dreadful pother o'er our heads, 50

Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou wretch,

That hast within thee undivulged crimes,
Unwhipp'd of justice; hide thee, thou bloody hand,Thou perjur'd, and thou simular of virtue
That art incestuous; caitiff, to pieces shake,
That under covert and convenient seeming Hast practis'd on man's life; close pent-up guilts,Rive your concealing continents, and cry These dreadful summoners grace. I am a
man

More sinn'd against than sinning.

Kent. Alack! bare-headed!
Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hovel; 61
Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest;Repose you there while I to this hard house
More harder than the stones whereof 't is rais'd,Which even but now, demanding after you,
Denied me to come in, return and force
Their scantied courtesy.Lear. My wits begin to turn.
Come on, my boy. How dost, my boy? Art cold?I am cold myself. Where is this straw, my fellow?The art of our necessities is strange, 70
That can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel.Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my
heart

That 's sorry yet for thee.

Fool. He that has and a little tiny wit,— With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,—Must make content with his fortunes fit,
For the rain it raineth every day.Lear. True, my good boy. Come, bring us to this hovel.Exeunt LEAR and KENT.Fool. This is a brave night to cool a courtezan.

I'll speak a prophecy ere I go: 80

When priests are more in word than matter;When brewers mar their malt with water;
When nobles are their tailors' tutors;No heretics burn'd, but wenches' suitors;
When every case in law is right;No squire in debt, nor no poor knight;
When slanderers do not live in tongues;Nor cut-purses come not to throngs;
When usurers tell their gold i' the field;And bawds and whores do churches build;
Then shall the realm of Albion 91Come to great confusion:
Then comes the time, who lives to see 't,
That going shall be us'd with feet.This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time. *Exit.*SCENE III.—A Room in GLOUCESTER'S Castle.Enter GLOUCESTER and EDMUND.Glou. Alack, alack! Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing. When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain him. 6*Edm.* Most savage and unnatural!Glou. Go to; say you nothing. There is division between the dukes, and a worse matter than that. I have received a letter this night; 't is dangerous to be spoken; I have locked the letter in my closet. These injuries the king now bears will be revenged home; there 's part of a power already footed; we must incline to the king. I will seek him and privily relieve him; go you and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived. If he ask for me, I am ill and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king, my old master, must be relieved. There is some strange thing toward, Edmund; pray you, be careful. Exit. 21*Edm.* This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the dukeInstantly know; and of that letter too:
This seems a fair deserving, and must draw meThat which my father loses; no less than all:The younger rises when the old doth fall.
*Exit.*SCENE IV.—The Heath. Before a Hovel.
Enter LEAR, KENT, and Fool.Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter:The tyranny of the open night 's too rough For nature to endure. Storm still.Lear. Let me alone.Kent. Good my lord, enter here.Lear. Wilt break my heart?Kent. I'd rather break mine own. Good my lord, enter.

Lear. Thou think'st 't is much that this contentious storm
Invades us to the skin: so 't is to thee;
But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou 'dst shun a bear;
But if thy flight lay toward the roaring sea,
Thou 'dst meet the bear i' the mouth. When the mind's free 11
The body's delicate; the tempest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else.
Save what beats there. Filial ingratitude!
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand
For lifting food to 't? But I will punish home:
No, I will weep no more. In such a night
To shut me out! Pour on; I will endure.
In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave all,— 20
O! that way madness lies; let me shun that;
No more of that.
Kent. Good my lord, enter here.
Lear. Prithce, go in thyself; seek thine own ease:
This tempest will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more. But I'll go in.
To the Fool. In, boy; go first. You houseless poverty,— Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep. Fool goes in.
Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads and unfed sides, 30
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you
From seasons such as these? O! I have ta'en Too little care of this. Take physic, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel,
That thou may'st shake the superflux to them,
And show the heavens more just.
Edg. Within. Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!
The Fool runs out from the hovel.
Fool. Come not in here, nuncle; here's a spirit.
Help me! help me! 40
Kent. Give me thy hand. Who's there?
Fool. A spirit, a spirit: he says his name's poor Tom.
Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there i' the straw?
Come forth.
Enter EDGAR disguised as a madman.
Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Through the sharp hawthorn blow the winds.
Hum! go to thy bed and warm thee.
Lear. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
And art thou come to this? 50

Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ford and whirlpool, o'er bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inched bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor. Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold. O! do de, do de, do de. Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking! Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes. There could I have him now, and there, and there, and there again, and there. Storm still.

Lear. What! have his daughters brought him to this pass?
Could'st thou save nothing? Didst thou give them all?

Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed.

Lear. Now all the plagues that in the pendulous air
Hang fated o'er men's faults light on thy daughters! 70

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.
Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued nature

To such a lowness but his unkind daughters. Is it the fashion that discarded fathers
Should have thus little mercy on their flesh? Judicious punishment! 't was this flesh begot

Those pelican daughters.
Edg. Pillicock sat on Pillicock-hill:
Hallow, hallow, loo, loo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen. 81

Edg. Take heed o' the foul fiend. Obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array. Tom's a-cold!

Lear. What hast thou been?
Edg. A servingman, proud in heart and mind; that curled my hair, wore gloves in my cap, served the lust of my mistress' heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven; one that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it. Wine loved I deeply, dice dearly, and in woman out-paramoured the Turk: false of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes nor the rustling of silks betray thy poor heart to woman: keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend. Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind; says suum, mun, ha no nonny. Dolphin my boy, my boy; sessa! let him trot by. Storm still. 104

Lear. Why, thou wert better in thy grave than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies. Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume. Ha! here's three on's are sophisticated; thou art the thing itself; unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art. Off, off, you lendings! Come; unbutton here. Tearing off his clothes. 114

Fool. Prithee, nuncle, be contented; 't is a naughty night to swim in. Now a little fire in a wild field were like an old lecher's heart; a small spark, all the rest on's body cold. Look! here comes a walking fire. 119

Enter GLOUCESTER, with a torch.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet; he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, and makes the harelip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

Swihold footed thrice the wold;

He met the night-mare, and her nine-fold;

Bid her alight,

And her troth plight,

And aroint thee, witch, aroint thee!

Kent. How fares your grace? 130

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glou. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallets; swallows the old rat and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the standing pool; who is whipped from tithing to tithing, and stocked, punished, and imprisoned; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, 141

*Horse to ride, and weapon to wear,
But mice and rats and such small deer,
Have been Tom's food for seven long year.*

Beware my follower. Peace, Smulkin! peace, thou fiend!

Glou. What! hath your grace no better company?

Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman;

Modo he's call'd, and Mahu.

Glou. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so vile, 150

That it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glou. Go in with me. My duty cannot suffer

To obey in all your daughters' hard commands;

Though their injunction be to bar my doors, And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you,

Yet have I ventur'd to come seek you out And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher.

What is the cause of thunder? 160

Kent. Good my lord, take his offer; go into the house.

Lear. I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban.

What is your study?

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private.

Kent. Importune him once more to go, my lord;

His wits begin to unsettle.

Glou. Canst thou blame him? Storm still.

His daughters seek his death. Ah! that good Kent;

He said it would be thus, poor banish'd man! Thou say'st the king grows mad; I'll tell thee, friend, 170

I am almost mad myself. I had a son, Now outlaw'd from my blood; he sought my life,

But lately, very late; I lov'd him, friend, No father his son dearer; true to tell thee, The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a night's this!

I do beseech your grace,—

Lear. O! cry you mercy, sir.

Noble philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a-cold.

Glou. In, fellow, there, into the hovel: keep thee warm.

Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my lord.

Lear. I will keep still with my philosopher. 181

Kent. Good my lord, soothe him; let him take the fellow.

Glou. Take him you on.

Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.

Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glou. No words, no words: hush.

Edg. Child Rowland to the dark tower came,

*His word was still, Fie, foh, and fum,
I smell the blood of a British man.*

Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Room in GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter CORNWALL and EDMUND.

Corn. I will have my revenge ere I depart his house.

Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of.

Corn. I now perceive it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reproveable badness in himself. 9

Edm. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter which he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector! 14

Corn. Go with me to the duchess.

Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True or false, it hath made thee Earl of Gloucester. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension. 20

Edm. Aside. If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully. I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love.

Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—A Chamber in a Farmhouse adjoining the Castle.

Enter GLOUCESTER, LEAR, KENT, Fool, and EDGAR.

Glou. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully. I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the power of his wits have given way to his impatience. The gods reward your kindness! Exit GLOUCESTER.

Edg. Frateretto calls me, and tells me Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Prithce, nuncle, tell me whether a madman be a gentleman or a yeoman? 11

Lear. A king, a king!

Fool. No; he's a yeoman that has a gentleman to his son; for he's a mad yeoman that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits

Come hissing in upon 'em,—

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath. 21

Lear. It shall be done; I will arraign them straight.

To EDGAR. Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer;

To the Fool. Thou, sapient sir, sit here. Now, you she foxes!

Edg. Look where he stands and glares! Wantest thou eyes at trial, madam?

Come o'er the bourn, Bessy, to me,—

Fool. Her boat hath a leak,

And she must not speak

Why she dares not come over to thee. 30

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hopdance cries in Tom's belly for two white herring. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz'd:

Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?

Lear. I'll see their trial first. Bring in their evidence.

To EDGAR. Thou robed man of justice, take thy place;

To the Fool. And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity,

Bench by his side. To KENT. You are o' the commission, 40

Sit you too.

Edg. Let us deal justly.

Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?

Thy sheep be in the corn;

And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,

Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Purr! the cat is grey.

Lear. Arraign her first; 't is Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father. 50

Fool. Come hither, mistress. Is your name Goneril?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a jointstool.

Lear. And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim

What store her heart is made on. Stop her there!

Arms, arms, sword, fire! Corruption in the place!

False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape?

Edg. Bless thy five wits! 60

Kent. O pity! Sir, where is the patience now

That you so oft have boasted to retain?

Edg. Aside. My tears begin to take his part so much,

They'll mar my counterfeiting.

Lear. The little dogs and all, Tray, Blanch, and Sweetheart, see, they bark at me.

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them. Avant, you curs!

Be thy mouth or black or white,

Tooth that poisons if it bite; 70

Mustif, greyhound, mongrel grim,

Hound or spaniel, brach or lym;

Or bobtail tike or trundle-tail;

Tom will make them weep and wail:

For, with throwing thus my head,

Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.

Do de, de, de. Sessa! Come, march to wakes and fairs and market-towns. Poor Tom, thy horn is dry. 79

Lear. Then let them anatomize Regan, see what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts? To EDGAR. You, sir, I entertain for one of my hundred; only I do not like the fashion of your garments; you will say they are Persian; but let them be changed.

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains: so, so, so. We'll go to supper i' the morning: so, so, so. 91

Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Come hither, friend: where is the king my master?

Kent. Here, sir; but trouble him not, his wits are gone.

Glou. Good friend, I prithee, take him in thy arms;
I have o'erheard a plot of death upon him.
There is a litter ready; lay him in 't,
And drive toward Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet

Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master: 99

If thou should'st dally half an hour, his life,
With thine, and all that offer to defend him,
Stand in assured loss. Take up, take up;
And follow me, that will to some provision
Give thee quick conduct.

Kent. Oppress'd nature sleeps:
This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken sinews, —

Which, if convenience will not allow,
Stand in hard cure. To the Fool. Come,
help to bear thy master;

Thou must not stay behind.

Glou. Come, come, away.

Exeunt KENT, GLOUCESTER, and the Fool, bearing off the King.

Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes,

We scarcely think our miseries our foes. 110
Who alone suffers suffers most i' the mind,
Leaving free things and happy shows behind;
But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erskip,

When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.

How light and portable my pain seems now,
When that which makes me bend makes the king bow;

He childed as I father'd! Tom, away!
Mark the high noises, and thyself bewray
When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles thee, 119

In thy just proof repeals and reconciles thee.
What will hap more to-night, safe 'scape the king!

Lurk, lurk. Exit.

SCENE VII.—A Room in GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GONERIL, EDMUND, and Servants.

Corn. To GONERIL. Post speedily to my lord your husband; show him this letter: the army of France is landed. Seek out the villain Gloucester.

Exeunt some of the Servants.

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes. 5

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure.
Edmund, keep you our sister company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most festinate preparation: we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister; farewell, my Lord of Gloucester. 13

Enter OSWALD.

How now! where 's the king?
Osw. My Lord of Gloucester hath convey'd him hence:

Some five or six and thirty of his knights,
Hot questrists after him, met him at gate;
Who, with some other of the lord's dependants,

Are gone with him towards Dover, where they boast

To have well-armed friends.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress.

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister. 21

Corn. Edmund, farewell.

Exeunt GONERIL, EDMUND, and OSWALD.

Go seek the traitor Gloucester,
Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us,

Exeunt other Servants.

Though well we may not pass upon his life
Without the form of justice, yet our power
Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men
May blame but not control. Who 's there?
The traitor?

Re-enter Servants, with GLOUCESTER.

Reg. Ingrateful fox! 't is he.

Corn. Bind fast his corky arms.

Glou. What mean your graces? Good my friends, consider 30

You are my guests: do me no foul play, friends.

Corn. Bind him, I say.

Reg. Hard, hard. O filthy traitor!

Glou. Unmerciful lady as you are, I 'm none.

Corn. To this chair bind him. Villain, thou shalt find—

REGAN plucks his beard.
Glou. By the kind gods, 't is mostignobly done

To pluck me by the beard.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor!

Glou. Naughty lady,
These hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin,

Will quicken, and accuse thee: I am your host: 33

With robbers' hands my hospitable favours
You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France?

Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know the truth.

Corn. And what confederacy have you with the traitors

Late footed in the kingdom?

Reg. To whose hands have you sent the lunatic king?

Speak.

Glou. I have a letter guessingly set down,
Which came from one that 's of a neutral heart,

And not from one oppos'd.

Corn. Cunning.

Reg. And false.

Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?
Glou. To Dover.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover? Wast thou not charg'd at peril— 33

Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer that.

Glou. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Glou. Because I would not see thy cruel nails

Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce sister

In his anointed flesh stick boarish fangs.

The sea, with such a storm as his bare head
In hell-black night endur'd, would have

buoy'd up, 60

And quench'd the stelled fires;

Yet, poor old heart, he help the heavens to rain.

If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that stern

time,
Thou should'st have said 'Good porter, turn

the key,
All cruels else subscribe': but I shall see
The winged vengeance overtake such children.

Corn. See't shalt thou never. Fellows, hold the chair.

Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.

Glou. He that will think to live till he be

old,
Give me some help! O cruel! O ye gods!

Reg. One side will mock another; the other too. 71

Corn. If you see vengeance,—
First Serv. Hold your hand, my lord.

I have serv'd you ever since I was a child,
But better service I have never done you

Than now to bid you hold.
Reg. How now, you dog!

First Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin

I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do you mean?

Corn. My villain! They draw and fight.
First Serv. Nay then, come on, and take the chance of anger.

Reg. Give me thy sword. A peasant stand up thus! 80

Takes a sword and runs at him behind.

First Serv. O! I am slain. My lord, you have one eye left

To see some mischief on him. O! Dies.
Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it. Out, vile jelly!

Where is thy lustre now?

Glou. All dark and comfortless. Where's my son Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature
To quit this horrid act.

Reg. Out, treacherous villain!
Thou call'st on him that hates thee; it was

he
That made the overture of thy treasons to us,
Who is too good to pity thee. 90

Glou. O my follies! Then Edgar was abus'd.

Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper
him!

Reg. Go thrust him out at gates, and let him smell

His way to Dover.
Exit one with GLOUCESTER.

How is't, my lord? How look you?

Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt. Follow me,
lady.

Turn out that eyeless villain; throw this slave
Upon the dunghill. Regan, I bleed apace:

Untimely comes this hurt. Give me your arm. Exit CORNWALL, led by REGAN.

Second Serv. I'll never care what wickedness I do 99

If this man come to good.
Third Serv. If she live long,

And in the end meet the old course of death,
Women will all turn monsters.

Second Serv. Let's follow the old earl,
and get the Bedlam

To lead him where he would: his roguish
madness

Allows itself to any thing.
Third Serv. Go thou; I'll fetch some flax and whites of eggs

To apply to his bleeding face. Now, heaven help him. Exeunt severally.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—The Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. Yet better thus, and known to be contemn'd,

Than still contemn'd and flatter'd. To be worst,

The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune,

Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear:
The lamentable change is from the best;

The worst returns to laughter. Welcome,
then,

Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace:
The wretch that thou hast blown unto the worst Owes nothing to thy blasts. But who comes

here?

Enter GLOUCESTER, led by an old Man.
My father, poorly led? World, world, O

world! 10

But that thy strange mutations make us hate
thee

Life would not yield to age.
Old Man. O my good lord!

I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant,

These fourscore years.
Glou. Away, get thee away; good friend,

be gone:

Thy comforts can do me no good at all;
Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. You cannot see your way.
Glou. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes; 20

I stumbled when I saw. Full oft 't is seen,
Our means secure us, and our mere defects

Prove our commodities. Ah! dear son
Edgar,

The food of thy abused father's wrath;
Might I but live to see thee in my touch,

I'd say I had eyes again.
Old Man. How now! Who's there?

Edg. Aside. O gods! Who is't can say
'I am at the worst?'

I am worse than e'er I was.

Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom.

Edg. Aside. And worse I may be yet; the worst is not

So long as we can say 'This is the worst.' 30

Old Man. Fellow, where goest?

Glou. Is it a beggar-man?

Old Man. Madman and beggar too.

Glou. He has some reason, else he could not beg.

I' the last night's storm I such a fellow saw,
Which made me think a man a worm: my son

Came then into my mind; and yet my mind

Was then scarce friends with him: I have heard more since.

As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods;
They kill us for their sport.

Edg. Aside. How should this be?

Bad is the trade that must play fool to sorrow, 40

Angering itself and others. Bless thee, master!

Glou. Is that the naked fellow?

Old Man. Ay, my lord.

Glou. Then, prithee, get thee gone. If for my sake

Thou wilt o'ertake us hence a mile or twain
I' the way toward Dover, do it for ancient love;

And bring some covering for this naked soul,

Who I'll entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, sir! he is mad.

Glou. 'Tis the times' plague, when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure;
Above the rest, be gone. 50

Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parel that I have.

Come on 't what will. Exit.

Glou. Sirrah, naked fellow,—

Edg. Poor Tom 's a-cold. Aside. I can not daub it further.

Glou. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. Aside. And yet I must. Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glou. Know'st thou the way to Dover? 57

Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and foot-path. Poor Tom hath been scared out of his wits: bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once; of lust, as Obidicut; Hobbididance, prince of dumbness; Mahu, of stealing; Modo, of murder; Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing; who since possesses chamber-maids and waiting-women. So, bless thee, master! 68

Glou. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heavens' plagues

Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched

Makes thee the happier: heavens, deal so still!

Let the superfluous and lust-dieted man, 70
That slaves your ordinance, that will not see
Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly;

So distribution should undo excess,
And each man have enough. Dost thou know Dover?

Edg. Ay, master.

Glou. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head

Looks fearfully in the confined deep;

Bring me but to the very brim of it,

And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear
With something rich about me; from that place 80

I shall no leading need.

Edg.

Give me thy arm:

Poor Tom shall lead thee.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before the Duke of ALBANY'S Palace.

Enter GONERIL and EDMUND.

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel our mild husband

Not met us on the way.

Enter OSWALD.

Now, where's your master?

Osw. Madam, within; but never man so chang'd.

I told him of the army that was landed;

He smil'd at it: I told him you were coming;
His answer was 'The worse': of Gloucester's treachery.

And of the loyal service of his son,

When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot,

And told me I had turn'd the wrong side out:

What most he should dislike seems pleasant to him; 10

What like, offensive.

Gon. To EDMUND. Then shall you go no further.

It is the cowardly terror of his spirit

That dares not undertake; he'll not feel wrongs

Which tie him to an answer. Our wishes on the way

May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother;

Hasten his musters and conduct his powers:
I must change arms at home, and give the

distaff

Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant

Shall pass between us; ere long you are like to hear,

If you dare venture in your own behalf, 20
A mistress's command. Wear this; spare speech;

Giving a favour.

Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak,

Would stretch thy spirits up into the air.

Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloucester! Exit EDMUND.

O! the difference of man and man.

To thee a woman's services are due:

My fool usurps my body.

Osw. Madam, here comes my lord. Exit.

Enter ALBANY.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.
Alb. O Goneril!
 You are not worth the dust which the rude
 wind
 Blows in your face. I fear your disposition:
 That nature, which contemns its origin,
 Cannot be border'd certain in itself;
 She that herself will sliver and disbranch
 From her material sap, perforce must wither
 And come to deadly use.

Gon. No more; the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile;
 Filths savour but themselves. What have you done?

Tigers, not daughters, what have you per-
 form'd?

A father, and a gracious aged man,
 Whose reverence the head-lugg'd bear
 would lick,
 Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you madd'd.

Could my good brother suffer you to do it?
 A man, a prince, by him so benefited!
 If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
 Send quickly down to tame these vile offences,

It will come,
 Humanity must perforce prey on itself,
 Like monsters of the deep.

Gon. Milk-liver'd man!
 That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs;
 Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know'st

Fools do those villains pity who are punish'd
 Ere they have done their mischief. Where's thy drum?

France spreads his banners in our noiseless
 land,

With plumed helm thy state begins to threat, Whiles thou, a moral fool, sitt'st still, and criest

'Alack! why does he so?'

Alb. See thyself, devil!
 Proper deformity seems not in the fiend
 So horrid as in woman.

Gon. O vain fool!

Alb. Thou changed and self-cover'd thing, for shame,
 Be-monster not thy feature. Were't my fitness

To let these hands obey my blood,
 They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
 Thy flesh and bones; howe'er thou art a fiend,

A woman's shape doth shield thee.

Gon. Marry, your manhood now—

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news?

Mess. O! my good lord, the Duke of Cornwall's dead;

Slain by his servant, going to put out
 The other eye of Gloucester.

Alb. Gloucester's eyes!

Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse,

Oppos'd against the act, bending his sword
 To his great master; who, thereat enrag'd, Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him
 dead;

But not without that harmful stroke, which since

Hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you are above,
 You justicers, that these our nether crimes
 So speedily can venge! But, O poor Gloucester!

Lost he his other eye?

Mess. Both, both, my lord.
 This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
 'T is from your sister.

Gon. Aside. One way I like this well;
 But being widow, and my Gloucester with
 her,

May all the building in my fancy pluck
 Upon my hateful life: another way,
 The news is not so tart. I'll read, and answer.

Alb. Where was his son when they did take his eyes?

Mess. Come with my lady hither.

Alb. He is not here.

Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back
 again.

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?

Mess. Ay, my good lord; 't was he inform'd against him,

And quit the house on purpose that their punishment

Might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloucester, I live
 To thank thee for the love thou show'st the
 king,

And to revenge thine eyes. Come hither,
 friend:

Tell me what more thou knowest. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The French Camp near Dover.

Enter KENT and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the King of France is so suddenly gone back know you the reason?

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state, which since his coming forth is thought of; which imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger that his personal return was most required and necessary.

Kent. Who hath he left behind him
 general?

Gent. The Marshal of France, Monsieur la Far.

Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief?

Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them
 in my presence;

And now and then an ample tear trill'd
 down

Her delicate cheek; it seem'd she was a
 queen

Over her passion; who, most rebel-like,
 Sought to be king o'er her.

Kent. O! then it mov'd her.

Gent. Not to a rage; patience and sorrow strove

Who should express her goodliest. You have seen
Sunshine and rain at once; her smiles and tears 20
Were like a better way; those happy smilets
That play'd on her ripe lip seem'd not to
know
What guests were in her eyes; which parted thence,
As pearls from diamonds dropp'd. In brief,
Sorrow would be a rarity most belov'd,
If all could so become it.

Kent. Made she no verbal question?
Genl. Faith, once or twice she heav'd the name of 'father'
Pantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart;
Cried 'sisters! sisters! Shame of ladies!
sisters!

Kent! father! sisters! What! i' the storm?
i' the night? 30
Let pity not be believed! There she shook
The holy water from her heavenly eyes,
And clamour-moisten'd, then away she started

To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions;
Else one self mate and mate could not beget Such different issues. You spoke not with her since?

Genl. No.

Kent. Was this before the king return'd?

Genl. No, since.

Kent. Well, sir, the poor distressed Lear's
i' the town; 40

Who sometime, in his better tune, remembers

What we are come about, and by no means
Will yield to see his daughter.

Genl. Why, good sir?

Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him:
his own unkindness,

That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd
her

To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights
To his dog-hearted daughters, these things sting

His mind so venomously that burning shame
Detains him from Cordelia.

Genl. Alack! poor gentleman.

Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not? 50

Genl. 'T is so, they are afoot.

Kent. Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master Lear,

And leave you to attend him. Some dear
cause

Will in concealment wrap me up awhile;
When I am known aright, you shall not grieve

Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you, go Along with me. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Tent.

Enter, with drum and colours, CORDELIA, Doctor, and Soldiers.

Cor. Alack! 'tis he: why, he was met even now

As mad as the vex'd sea; singing aloud;

Crown'd with rank fumiter and furrow-
weeds,

With burdocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-
flowers,

Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn. A century send
forth;

Search every acre in the high-grown field,
And bring him to our eye. Exit an Officer.

What can man's wisdom
In the restoring his bereaved sense?

He that helps him take all my outward
worth. 10

Doct. There is means, madam;
Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks; that to provoke in him,
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor. All bless'd secrets,
All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth,
Spring with my tears! be aidant and remediate

In the good man's distress! Seek, seek for
him,

Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life
That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. News, madam;
The British powers are marching hither-
ward. 21

Cor. 'T is known before; our preparation stands

In expectation of them. O dear father!
It is thy business that I go about;

Therefore great France
My mourning and important tears hath pitied.

No blown ambition doth our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our aged father's right.

Soon may I hear and see him! Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Room in GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter REGAN and OSWALD.

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Reg. Himself in person there?

Osw. Madam, with much ado:

Your sister is the better soldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home?

Osw. No, madam.

Reg. What might import my sister's letter to him?

Osw. I know not, lady.

Reg. Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.

It was great ignorance, Gloucester's eyes
being out,

To let him live; where he arrives he moves 10

All hearts against us. Edmund, I think, is
gone,

In pity of his misery, to dispatch
His nighted life; moreover, to descry

The strength o' the enemy.

Osw. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.

Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow; stay with us, The ways are dangerous.

Osw. I may not, madam: My lady charg'd my duty in this business.

Reg. Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you

Transport her purposes by word? Belike, 20 Something—I know not what. I'll love thee much,

Let me unseal the letter.

Osw. Madam, I had rather—
Reg. I know your lady does not love her husband;

I am sure of that: and at her late being here She gave strange ceilliades and most speaking looks

To noble Edmund. I know you are of her bosom.

Osw. I, madam!

Reg. I speak in understanding; you are, I know 't:

Therefore I do advise you, take this note: My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd, 30

And more convenient is he for my hand Than for your lady's. You may gather more.

If you do find him, pray you give him this, And when your mistress hears thus much from you,

I pray desire her call her wisdom to her:

So, fare you well.

If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor, Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.

Osw. Would I could meet him, madam; I would show

What party I do follow.

Reg. Fare thee well. 40
Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Country near Dover.

Enter GLOUCESTER, and EDGAR dressed like a peasant.

Glou. When shall we come to the top of that same hill?

Edg. You do climb up it now; look how we labour.

Glou. Methinks the ground is even.

Edg. Horrible steep: Hark! do you hear the sea?

Glou. No, truly.

Edg. Why, then your other senses grow imperfect

By your eyes' anguish.

Glou. So may it be, indeed. Methinks thy voice is alter'd, and thou speak'st

In better phrase and matter than thou didst.

Edg. You're much deceiv'd; in nothing am I chang'd

But in my garments.

Glou. Methinks you're better spoken.

Edg. Come on, sir; here's the place: stand still. How fearful

And dizzy 't is to cast one's eyes so low!

The crows and choughs that wing the mid-way air

Show scarce so gross as beetles; half way down

Hangs one that gathers samphire, dreadful trade!

Methinks he seems no bigger than his head. The fishermen that walk upon the beach

Appear like mice, and yond tall anchoring bark

Diminish'd to her cock, her cock a buoy Almost too small for sight. The murmur

ing surge, 20

That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes, Cannot be heard so high. I'll look no more,

Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight Topple down headlong.

Glou. Set me where you stand. Edg. Give me your hand; you are now within a foot

Of the extreme verge: for all beneath the moon

Would I not leap upright.

Glou. Let go my hand. Here, friend, 's another purse; in it a jewel

Well worth a poor man's taking; fairies and gods 29

Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off; Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.

Edg. Now fare you well, good sir.

Glou. With all my heart. Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his despair

Is done to cure it.

Glou. O you mighty gods! This world I do renounce, and in your sights

Shake patiently my great affliction off; If I could bear it longer, and not fall

To quarrel with your great opposeless wills, My snuff and loathed part of nature should Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O bless him! Now, fellow, fare thee well.

He falls forward.
Edg. Gone, sir: farewell.

And yet I know not how conceit may rob 42 The treasury of life when life itself

Yields to the theft; had he been where he thought

By this had thought been past. Alive or dead?

Ho, you sir! friend! Hear you, sir! speak! Thus might he pass indeed; yet he revives.

What are you, sir?

Glou. Away and let me die. Edg. Hadst thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air,

So many fathom down precipitating, 50 Thou'dst shiver'd like an egg; but thou dost breathe,

Hast heavy substance, bleed'st not, speak'st, art sound.

Ten masts at each make not the altitude Which thou hast perpendicularly fell:

Thy life's a miracle. Speak yet again.

Glou. But have I fallen or no?

Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky bourn.

Look up a-height; the shrill-gorg'd lark so far

Cannot be seen or heard: do but look up.

Glou. Alack! I have no eyes.
Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit To end itself by death? 'T was yet some comfort,

When misery could beguile the tyrant's
rage,
And frustrate his proud will.

Edg. Give me your arm:
Up: so; how is 't? Feel you your legs?
You stand.

Glou. Too well, too well.
Edg. This is above all strangeness.
Upon the crown o' the cliff what thing was that
Which parted from you?

Glou. A poor unfortunate beggar.
Edg. As I stood here below methought his eyes

Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses,
Horns whelk'd and wav'd like the enridged
sea:

It was some fiend; therefore, thou happy
father,

Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours

Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd
thee.

Glou. I do remember now; henceforth I'll bear

Affliction till it do cry out itself 'Enough, enough,' and die. That thing you speak of

I took it for a man; often 't would say
'The fiend, the fiend': he led me to that
place.

Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts. But who comes here?

Enter LEAR, fantastically dressed with wild flowers.

The safer sense will ne'er accommodate His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining; I am the king himself.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!
Lear. Nature's above art in that respect.

There's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper: draw me a clothier's yard. Look, look! a mouse.
Peace, peace! this piece of toasted cheese will do 't. There's my gauntlet; I'll prove it on a giant. Bring up the brown bills. O!
well flown, bird; i' the clout, i' the clout:
hewgh! Give the word.

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

Glou. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Goneril, with a white beard!
They flattered me like a dog, and told me I had white hairs in my beard ere the black ones were there. To say 'ay' and 'no' to every thing I said! 'Ay' and 'no' too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once and the wind to make me chatter, when the thunder would not peace at my bidding, there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to, they are not men o' their words: they told me I was every thing; 't is a lie, I am not ague-proof.

Glou. The trick of that voice I do well remember:

Is 't not the king?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:
When I do stare, see how the subject quakes.

I pardon that man's life. What was thy cause?

Adultery? 112

Thou shalt not die: die for adultery! No:
The wren goes to 't, and the small gilded fly
Does lecher in my sight.

Let copulation thrive; for Gloucester's bastard son

Was kinder to his father than my daughters
Got 'tween the lawful sheets.

To 't, luxury, pell-mell! for I lack soldiers.
Behold yond simpering dame,

Whose face between her forks presageth
snow;

That minces virtue, and does shake the head
To hear of pleasure's name;

The fitchew nor the soiled horse goes to 't
With a more riotous appetite.

Down from the waist they are Centaurs,
Though women all above:

But to the girdle do the gods inherit,
Beneath is all the fiend's:

There's hell, there's darkness, there's the sulphurous pit,

Burning, scalding, stench, consumption;
fie, fie, fie! pah, pah! Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination: there's money for thee.

Glou. O! let me kiss that hand.

Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.

Glou. O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world

Shall so wear out to nought. Dost thou know me?

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough.
Dost thou squiny at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love. Read thou this challenge; mark but the penning of it.

Glou. Were all thy letters suns, I could not see.

Edg. Aside. I would not take this from report; it is,

And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glou. What! with the case of eyes?

Lear. O, ho! are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light: yet you see how this world
goes.

Glou. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What! art mad? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how yond justice rails upon yond simple thief. Hark, in thine ear:
change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief? Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?

Glou. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur?
There thou might'st behold the great image of authority; a dog's obeyed in office.

Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand!
Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back;

Thou hotly lusts to use her in that kind
For which thou whipp'st her. The usurer hangs the cozeners.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;

Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless
breaks; 170

Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw does pierce it.
None does offend, none, I say, none; I'll able 'em:

Take that of me, my friend, who have the power

To seal the accuser's lips. Get thee glass
eyes;

And, like a scurvy politician, seem
To see the things thou dost not. Now, now,

Pull off my boots; harder, harder; so.

Edg. Aside. O! matter and impertinency mix'd;

Reason in madness.

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes; 180

I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloucester;

Thou must be patient; we came crying
hither;

Thou know'st the first time that we smell the air

We waul and cry. I will preach to thee: mark.
Glou. Alack, alack the day!

Lear. When we are born, we cry that we are come

To this great stage of fools. This' a good block!

It were a delicate stratagem to shoe
A troop of horse with felt; I'll put 't in proof,

And when I have stol'n upon these sons-in-law, 190

Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill!

Enter a Gentleman, with Attendants.
Gent. O! here he is; lay hand upon him.

Sir.
Your most dear daughter—

Lear. No rescue? What! a prisoner? I am even

The natural fool of fortune. Use me well;
You shall have ransom. Let me have a surgeon;

I am cut to the brains.

Gent. You shall have any thing.
Lear. No seconds? all myself?

Why this would make a man a man of salt,
To use his eyes for garden water-pots, 200

Ay, and laying autumn's dust.

Gent. Good sir,—
Lear. I will die bravely, like a smug bridegroom. What!

I will be jovial: come, come; I am a king,
My masters, know you that?

Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey
you.

Lear. Then there's life in 't. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa. Exit; Attendants follow.

Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest
wretch,

Past speaking of in a king! Thou hast one
daughter, 205

Who redeems nature from the general curse
Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir!

Gent. Sir, send you: what's your will?

Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?

Gent. Most sure and vulgar; every one hears that,

Which can distinguish sound.
Edg. But, by your favour,

How near's the other army?

Gent. Near, and on speedy foot; the main descry

Stands on the hourly thought.
Edg. I thank you, sir: that's all.

Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is here, 219

Her army is mov'd on.
Edg. I thank you, sir. Exit Gentleman.

Glou. You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me:

Let not my worser spirit tempt me again
To die before you please!

Edg. Well pray you, father.
Glou. Now, good sir, what are you?

Edg. A most poor man, made tame to fortune's blows;

Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows,

Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your
hand,

I'll lead you to some hiding.
Glou. Hearty thanks:

The bounty and the benison of heaven
To boot, and boot! 225

Enter OSWALD.
Osw. A proclaim'd prize! Most happy!

That eyeless head of thine was first fram'd flesh

To raise my fortunes. Thou old unhappy traitor,

Briefly thyself remember: the sword is out
That must destroy thee.

Glou. Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough to 't.

EDGAR interposes.
Osw. Wherefore, bold peasant,

Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor?
Hence;

Least that the infection of his fortune take
Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

Edg. Chill not let go, zir, without vurther
'casion.

Osw. Let go, slave, or thou diest. 241

Edg. Good gentleman, go your gait, and let poor volk pass. An chud ha' bin zwag-gered out of my life, 't would not ha' bin zo long as 't is by a vortnight. Nay, come not near th' old man; keep out, che vor ye, or ise try whether your costard or my ballow be the harder. Chill be plain with you.

Osw. Out, dunghill!
Edg. Chill pick your teeth, zur. Come;
 no matter vor your foins. 251
They fight, and EDGAR knocks him down.
Osw. Slave, thou hast slain me. Villain, take my purse.
 If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body;
 And give the letters which thou find'st about
 me
 To Edmund Earl of Gloucester; seek him
 out
 Upon the English party: O! untimely death.
 Death! Dies.
Edg. I know thee well: a serviceable
 villain;
 As dutious to the vices of thy mistress
 As badness would desire.
Glou. What! is he dead?
Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you. 260
 Let's see these pockets: the letters that he speaks of
 May be my friends. He's dead; I am only sorry
 He had no other death's-man. Let us see:
 Leave, gentle wax; and, manners, blame us
 not:
 To know our enemies' minds, we'd rip their
 hearts;
 Their papers is more lawful. 266

Let our reciprocal vows be remembered.
You have many opportunities to cut him off;
if you will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offered. There is nothing done if he return the conqueror; then am I the prisoner, and his bed my gaol; from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your labour.
Your—wife, so I would say—
Affectionate servant,
 GONERIL.
 O undistinguish'd space of woman's will!
 A plot upon her virtuous husband's life,
 And the exchange my brother! Here, in the sands, 280
 Thee I'll rake up, the post unsanctified
 Of murderous lechers; and in the mature
 time
 With this ungracious paper strike the sight Of the death-practis'd duke. For him 'tis
 well
 That of thy death and business I can tell.
Glou. The king is mad: how stiff is my vile sense,
 That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling
 Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract:
 So should my thoughts be sever'd from my
 griefs,
 And woes by wrong imaginations lose 290
 The knowledge of themselves.
Drum afar off.
Edg. Give me your hand:
 Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum.
 Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend.
 Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—A Tent in the French Camp.

LEAR on a bed asleep, soft music playing;
 Gentleman, and others attending. Enter
 CORDELIA, KENT, and Doctor.

Cor. O, thou good Kent! how shall I live and work
 To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,
 And every measure fail me.
Kent. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'erpaid.
 All my reports go with the modest truth,
 Nor more nor clipp'd, but so.
Cor. Be better suited:
 These weeds are memories of those worse
 hours:
 I prithee, put them off.
Kent. Pardon me, dear madam;
 Yet to be known shortens my made intent:
 My boon I make it that you know me not 'till time and I think meet.
Cor. Then be 't so, my good lord. How does the king?
Doct. Madam, sleeps still.
Cor. O you kind gods,
 Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
 The untun'd and jarring senses, O! wind up
 Of this child-changed father.
Doct. So please your majesty
 That we may wake the king? he hath slept
 long.
Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed 19
 I'll the sway of your own will. Is he array'd?
Doct. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of
 sleep
 We put fresh garments on him.
Kent. Be by, good madam, when we do awake him;
 I doubt not of his temperance.
Cor. Very well. Music.
Doct. Please you, draw near. Louder the music there!
Cor. O my dear father! Restoration hang Thy medicine on my lips, and let this kiss Repair those violent harms that my two sisters
 Have in thy reverence made!
Kent. Kind and dear princess!
Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes 31
 Did challenge pity of them. Was this a face
 To be oppos'd against the warring winds?
 To stand against the deep dread-bolted
 thunder?
 In the most terrible and nimble stroke
 Of quick cross lightning? to watch, poor perdu!
 With this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog,
 Though he had bit me, should have stood that night Against my fire. And wast thou fain, poor
 father,
 To hovel thee with swine and rogues forlorn,
 In short and musty straw? Alack, alack! 40
 'T is wonder that thy life and wits at once

Had not concluded all. He wakes; speak to him.

Doct. Madam, do you; 't is fittest.

Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty?

Lear. You do me wrong to take me out o' the grave;

Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears Do scald like molten lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me?

Lear. You are a spirit, I know; when did you die?

Cor. Still, still, far wide. 50

Doct. He's scarce awake; let him alone awhile.

Lear. Where have I been? Where am I? Fair daylight?

I am mightily abus'd. I should e'en die with pity

To see another thus. I know not what to say.

I will not swear these are my hands: let's see;

I feel this pin prick. Would I were assur'd Of my condition!

Cor. O! look upon me, sir, And hold your hands in benediction o'er me. No, sir, you must not kneel.

Lear. Pray, do not mock me: I am a very foolish fond old man, 60 Fourscore and upward, not an hour more nor less;

And, to deal plainly, I fear I am not in my perfect mind. Methinks I should know you and know this man;

Yet I am doubtful; for I am mainly ignorant What place this is, and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know not

Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me;

For, as I am a man, I think this lady To be my child Cordelia.

Cor. And so I am, I am. Lear. Be your tears wet? Yes, faith. I pray, weep not; 71

If you have poison for me, I will drink it. I know you do not love me; for your sisters Have, as I do remember, done me wrong: You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause. Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your own kingdom, sir. Lear. Do not abuse me.

Doct. Be comforted, good madam; the great rage,

You see, is kill'd in him; and yet it is danger To make him even o'er the time he has lost. 80

Desire him to go in; trouble him no more Till further settling.

Cor. Will 't please your highness walk? Lear. You must bear with me.

Pray you now, forget and forgive: I am old and foolish.

Exeunt LEAR, CORDELIA, Doctor, and Attendants.

Gent. Holds it true, sir, that the Duke of Cornwall was so slain?

Kent. Most certain, sir.

Gent. Who is conductor of his people?

Kent. As 't is said, the bastard son of Gloucester.

Gent. They say Edgar, his banished son, is with the Earl of Kent in Germany. 91

Kent. Report is changeable. 'T is time to look about; the powers of the kingdom approach apace.

Gent. The arbitrement is like to be bloody. Fare you well, sir. Exit.

Kent. My point and period will be thoroughly wrought, Or well or ill, as this day's battle's fought. Exit.

ACT V

SCENE I.—The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, with drum and colours, EDMUND, REGAN, Officers, Soldiers, and Others.

Edm. Know of the duke if his last purpose hold,

Or whether since he is advis'd by aught To change the course; he's full of alteration

And self-reproving; bring his constant pleasure. To an Officer, who goes out.

Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.

Edm. 'T is to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord, You know the goodness I intend upon you: Tell me, but truly, but then speak the truth, Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honour'd love. Reg. But have you never found my brother's way 10

To the forfended place?

Edm. That thought abuses you.

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct

And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers.

Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her: dear my lord,

Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me not. She and the duke her husband!

Enter, with drum and colours, ALBANY, GONERIL, and Soldiers.

Gon. Aside. I had rather lose the battle than that sister

Should loosen him and me.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be-met. 20 Sir, this I heard; the king is come to his daughter,

With others whom the rigour of our state Forc'd to cry out. Where I could not be honest,

I never yet was valiant; for this business, It toucheth us, as France invades our land. Not holds the king, with others, whom I fear, Most just and heavy causes make oppose.

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason'd?

Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy;
For these domestic and particular broils 30
Are not the question here.

Alb. Let's then determine

With the ancient of war on our proceeding.
Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us?

Gon. No.

Reg. 'T is most convenient; pray you, go with us.

Gon. Aside. O, ho! I know the riddle. I will go.

Enter EDGAR, disguised.

Edg. If e'er your grace had speech with man so poor,
Hear me one word.

Alb. I'll overtake you. Speak.

Exeunt EDMUND, REGAN, GONERIL, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter. 40

If you have victory, let the trumpet sound
For him that brought it: wretched though I seem,

I can produce a champion that will prove
What is avouched there. If you miscarry,
Your business of the world hath so an end,
And machination ceases. Fortune love you!

Alb. Stay till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid it.
When time shall serve, let but the herald cry,

And I'll appear again.

Alb. Why, fare thee well: I will o'erlook thy paper. Exit EDGAR. 50

Re-enter EDMUND.

Edm. The enemy's in view; draw up your powers.

Here is the guess of their true strength and forces

By diligent discovery; but your haste is now urg'd on you.

Alb. We will greet the time. Exit.

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love;

Each jealous of the other, as the stung are of the adder. Which of them shall I take?

Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd

If both remain alive: to take the widow Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril; And hardly shall I carry out my side, 61
Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll use

His countenance for the battle; which being done,

Let her who would be rid of him devise His speedy taking off. As for the mercy Which he intends to Lear and to Cordelia, The battle done, and they within our power, Shall never see his pardon; for my state Stands on me to defend, not to debate. Exit.

SCENE II.—A Field between the two Camps.

Alarum within. Enter, with drum and colours, LEAR, CORDELIA, and their Forces; and exeunt.

Enter EDGAR and GLOUCESTER.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree

For your good host; pray that the right may thrive.

If ever I return to you again,

I'll bring you comfort.

Glou. Grace go with you, sir! Exit EDGAR.

Alarum; afterwards a retreat. Re-enter EDGAR.

Edg. Away, old man! give me thy hand: away!

King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta'en.

Give me thy hand; come on.

Glou. No further, sir; a man may rot even here.

Edg. What! in ill thoughts again? Men must endure

Their going hence, even as their coming hither: 10

Ripeness is all. Come on.

Glou. And that's true too. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, in conquest, with drum and colours, EDMUND; LEAR and CORDELIA, prisoners; Officers, Soldiers, etc.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard,

Until their greater pleasures first be known That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the first Who, with best meaning, have incur'd the worst.

For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down; Myself could else out-frown false fortune's frown.

Shall we not see these daughters and these sisters?

Lear. No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison;

We two alone will sing like birds i' the cage: When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down, 10

And ask of thee forgiveness: so we'll live, And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh

At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them too,

Who loses and who wins; who's in, who's out;

And take upon's the mystery of things,

As if we were God's spies: and we'll wear out,

In a wall'd prison, packs and sects of great ones

That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them away.

Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia, 20
The gods themselves throw incense. Have
I caught thee?
He that parts us shall bring a brand from
heaven,
And fire us hence like foxes. Wipe thine
eyes;
The good-years shall devour them, flesh and
fell,
Ere they shall make us weep: we'll see 'em
starv'd first.
Come.

Exeunt LEAR and CORDELIA, guarded.
Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.
Take thou this note; Giving a paper.

Go follow them to prison.
One step I have advanc'd thee; if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy
way
To noble fortunes; know thou this, that
men 30
Are as the time is; to be tender-minded
Does not become a sword; thy great employment
Will not bear question; either say thou 'lt do 't,
Or thrive by other means.

Off. I'll do 't, my lord.
Edm. About it; and write happy when thou hast done.
Mark,—I say, instantly, and carry it so
As I have set it down.

Off. I cannot draw a cart nor eat dried oats;
If it be man's work I'll do it. Exit.

Flourish. Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN,
Officers, and Attendants.

Alb. Sir, you have show'd to-day your valiant strain, 40
And fortune led you well; you have the captives

Who were the opposites of this day's strife;
We do require them of you, so to use them
As we shall find their merits and our safety
May equally determine.

Edm. Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention and appointed guard;
Whose age has charms in it, whose title
more,

To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes 50
Which do command them. With him I sent the queen;

My reason all the same; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at further space, to appear Where you shall hold your session. At this
time

We sweat and bleed; the friend hath lost his friend,
And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curs'd

By those that feel their sharpness;
The question of Cordelia and her father
Requires a fitter place.

Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subject of this war, 60
Not as a brother,

Reg. That's as we list to grace him:
Methinks our pleasure might have been demanded,
Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers,
Bore the commission of my place and person;
The which immediacy may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot;
In his own grace he doth exalt himself
More than in your addition.

Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.

Alb. That were the most, if he should husband you. 70

Reg. Jesters do oft prove prophets.

Gon. Holla, holla!
That eye that told you so look'd but a-squint.

Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer

From a full-flowing stomach. General,
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony;
Dispose of them, of me; the walls are thine;
Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?
Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good
will.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.
Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. To EDMUND. Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine. 81

Alb. Stay yet; hear reason. Edmund, I arrest thee

On capital treason; and, in thy arrest,
This gilded serpent. Pointing to GONERIL.

For your claim, fair sister,
I bar it in the interest of my wife;

'T is she is sub-contracted to this lord,
And I, her husband, contradict your bans.

If you will marry, make your loves to me,
My lady is bespoken.

Gon. An interlude!

Alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloucester; let the trumpet sound; 90

If none appear to prove upon thy person
Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,
There is my pledge; Throws down a glove.

I'll prove it on thy heart.
Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less Than I have here proclaim'd thee.

Reg. Sick! O, sick!
Gon. Aside. If not, I'll ne'er trust medicine.

Edm. There's my exchange;
Throws down a glove.

What in the world he is That names me traitor, villain-like he lies.

Call by thy trumpet: he that dares approach,
On him, on you, who not? I will maintain 100
My truth and honour firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho!

Edm. A herald, ho! a herald!

Alb. Trust to thy single virtue; for thy soldiers,

All levied in my name, have in my name
Took their discharge.

Reg. My sickness grows upon me.

Alb. She is not well; convey her to my tent.
Exit REGAN, led.

Enter a Herald.

Come hither, herald,—Let the trumpet sound,—

And read out this. 108

Off. Sound, trumpet! A trumpet sounds.

Her. If any man of quality or degree within the lists of the army will maintain upon Edmund, supposed Earl of Gloucester, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear by the third sound of the trumpet. He is bold in his defence. 114

Edm. Sound! First trumpet.

Her. Again! Second trumpet.

Her. Again! Third trumpet.

Trumpet answers within.

Enter EDGAR, armed, with a trumpet before him.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears

Upon this call o' the trumpet.

Her. What are you?

Your name? your quality? and why you answer 120

This present summons?

Edg. Know, my name is lost;

By treason's tooth bare-gnawn and canker-bit;

Yet am I noble as the adversary

I come to cope.

Alb. Which is that adversary?

Edg. What's he that speaks for Edmund Earl of Gloucester?

Edm. Himself: what say'st thou to him?

Edg. Draw thy sword,

That, if my speech offend a noble heart,

Thy arm may do thee justice; here is mine:

Behold, it is the privilege of mine honours,

My oath, and my profession: I protest, 130

Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,

Despite thy victor sword and fire-new fortune,

Thy valour and thy heart, thou art a traitor,

False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy

father,

Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious prince,

And, from the extremest upward of thy head

To the descent and dust below thy foot,

A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou 'No,'

This sword, this arm, and my best spirits

are bent

To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak, 140

Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom I should ask thy name;

But since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,

And that thy tongue some say of breeding breathes,

What safe and nicely I might well delay

By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn;

Back do I toss these treasons to thy head,

With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart,

Which, for they yet glance by and scarcely bruise,

This sword of mine shall give them instant way,

Where they shall rest for ever. Trumpets, speak. 150

Alarums. They fight. EDMUND falls.

Alb. Save him! save him!

Con. This is practice, Gloucester:

By the law of arms thou wast not bound to answer

An unknown opposite; thou art not vanquish'd,

But cozen'd and beguil'd.

Alb. Shut your mouth, dame,

Or with this paper shall I stop it. Hold, sir;

Thou worse than any name, read thine own evil;

No tearing, lady; I perceive you know it.

Gives the letter to EDMUND.

Con. Say, if I do, the laws are mine, not

thine:

Who can arraign me for 't? Exit.

Alb. Most monstrous! O!

Know'st thou this paper?

Edm. Ask me not what I know.

Alb. Go after her: she's desperate; govern her. Exit an Officer. 161

Edm. What you have charg'd me with,

that have I done,

And more, much more; the time will bring it out:

'T is past, and so am I. But what art thou

That hast this fortune on me? If thou 'rt noble,

I do forgive thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charity.

I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund;

If more, the more thou hast wrong'd me.

My name is Edgar, and thy father's son.

The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices

Make instruments to plague us: 171

The dark and vicious place where thee he got

Cost him his eyes.

Edm. Thou hast spoken right, 't is true.

The wheel is come full circle; I am here,

Alb. Methought thy very gait did prophesy

A royal nobleness: I must embrace thee:

Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I

Did hate thee or thy father.

Edg. Worthy prince, I know 't.

Alb. Where have you hid yourself?

How have you known the miseries of your

father? 180

Edg. By nursing them, my lord. List a brief tale;

And when 't is told, O! that my heart would burst!

The bloody proclamation to escape

That follow'd me so near,—O! our lives'

sweetness,

That we the pain of death would hourly die

Rather than die at once!—taught me to shift

Into a madman's rags, to assume a semblance

That very dogs disdain'd: and in this habit

Met I my father with his bleeding rings,

Their precious stones new lost; became his guide, 190

Led him, begg'd for him, sav'd him from despair;

Never, O fault! reveal'd myself unto him,
Until some half-hour past, when I was arm'd;

Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,

I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last
Told him my pilgrimage: but his flaw'd heart,—

Alack, too weak the conflict to support!—
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,

Burst smilingly.

Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd me,
And shall perchance do good; but speak you on; 200

You look as you had something more to say.
Alb. If there be more, more woeful, hold it in;

For I am almost ready to dissolve,

Hearing of this.

Edg. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too much, would make much more,

And top extremity.

Whilst I was big in clamour came there a man,

Who, having seen me in my worst estate,
Shunn'd my abhorr'd society; but then, finding 210

Who 't was that so endur'd, with his strong arms

He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he 'd burst heaven; threw him on my father;

Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him
That ever ear receiv'd; which in recounting
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life

Began to crack: twice then the trumpets sounded,

And there I left him tranc'd.

Alb. But who was this?
Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who in disguise

Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service 220

Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman, with a bloody knife.

Gent. Help, help! O, help!

Edg. What kind of help?

Alb. Speak, man.

Edg. What means that bloody knife?

Gent. 'T is hot, it smokes;
It came even from the heart of—O! she's dead.

Alb. Who dead? speak, man.

Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister

By her is poison'd; she confesses it.

Edm. I was contracted to them both: all three

Now marry in an instant.

Edg. Here comes Kent.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead; 230

This judgment of the heavens, that makes us tremble,

Touches us not with pity. Exit Gentleman.

Enter KENT.

O! is this he?

The time will not allow the compliment

Which very manners urges.

Kent. I am come

To bid my king and master aye good night;
Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot!
Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's Cordelia?

Seest thou this object, Kent?

The bodies of GONERIL and REGAN are brought in.

Kent. Alack! why thus?

Edm. Yet Edmund was below'd:

The one the other poison'd for my sake, 240
And after slew herself.

Alb. Even so. Cover their faces.

Edm. I pant for life: some good I mean to do

Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,
Be brief in it, to the castle; for my writ
Is on the life of Lear and on Cordelia.

Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run! O, run!

Edg. To who, my lord? Who has the office? send Thy token of reprieve.

Edm. Well thought on: take my sword, 250
Give it the captain.

Alb. Haste thee, for thy life.
Exit EDGAR.

Edm. He hath commission from thy wife and me

To hang Cordelia in the prison, and
To lay the blame upon her own despair,
That she fordid herself.

Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile. EDMUND is borne off.

Re-enter LEAR, with CORDELIA dead in his arms; EDGAR, Officer, and Others.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl! O! you are men of stones;

Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so

That heaven's vault should crack. She's gone for ever.

I know when one is dead, and when one lives; 260

She's dead as earth. Lend me a looking-glass;

If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,
Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end?

Edg. Or image of that horror?

Alb. Fall and cease!

Lear. This feather stirs; she lives! if it be so,

It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows

That ever I have felt.

Kent. Kneeling. O, my good master!

Lear. Prithee, away.

Edg. 'T is noble Kent, your friend.

Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all!
I might have sav'd her; now, she's gone for ever! 270
Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little. Ha!
What is 't thou say'st? Her voice was ever soft,

Gentle and low, an excellent thing in woman.

I kill'd the slave that was a-hanging thee.

Off. 'Tis true, my lords, he did.

Lear. Did I not, fellow?
I have seen the day, with my good biting falchion

I would have made them skip: I am old now,

And these same crosses spoil me. Who are you?

Mine eyes are not o' the best: I'll tell you straight.

Kent. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and hated, 280

One of them we behold.

Lear. This is a dull sight. Are you not Kent?

Kent. The same;

Your servant Kent. Where is your servant Caius?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that;

He'll strike, and quickly too. He's dead and rotten.

Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very man,—

Lear. I'll see that straight.

Kent. That from your first of difference and decay,

Have follow'd your sad steps,—

Lear. You are welcome hither.

Kent. Nor no man else; all's cheerless, dark and deadly: 290

Your eldest daughters have fordone themselves,

And desperately are dead.

Lear. Ay, so I think.

Alb. He knows not what he says, and vain is it

That we present us to him.

Edg. Very bootless.

Enter an Officer.

Off. Edmund is dead, my lord.

Alb. That's but a trifle here.

You lords and noble friends, know our intent; What comfort to this great decay may come

Shall be applied: for us, we will resign, During the life of this old majesty,

To him our absolute power: To EDGAR and KENT. You, to your rights, 300

With boot and such addition as your honours Have more than merited. All friends shall taste The wages of their virtue, and all foes

The cup of their deservings. O! see, see!

Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd! No, no, no life!

Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life, And thou no breath at all? Thou 'lt come no more, Never, never, never, never, never!

Pray you, undo this button: thank you, sir. 309

Do you see this? Look on her, look, her lips, Look there, look there! Dies.

Edg. He faints! My lord, my lord!

Kent. Break, heart; I prithee, break!

Edg. Look up, my lord.

Kent. Vex not this ghost: O! let him pass; he hates him

That would upon the rack of this tough world Stretch him out longer.

Edg. He is gone, indeed.

Kent. The wonder is he hath endur'd so long:

He but usurp'd his life.

Alb. Bear them from hence. Our present business

Is general woe. To KENT and EDGAR.

Friends of my soul, you twain

Rule in this realm, and the gor'd state sustain. 320

Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go; My master calls me, I must not say no.

Alb. The weight of this sad time we must obey;

Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say. The oldest hath borne most; we that are young Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

Exeunt, with a dead march.

OTHELLO

---

TO understand the tragedy of Othello we should begin, perhaps, as Shakespeare does, with Iago—the most frightful character he ever drew. He is the one character in the play that keeps it anchored to the earth. Without him we are in an unreal world where a gentle, white maiden can enter into a marriage with a black man, seeing his visage only in his mind, and where people are strangely magnanimous and free from prejudice. In a real world, even under the most favorable conditions, circumstances must almost inevitably have conspired to wreck such a union as that of Othello and Desdemona; in the play, all the destructive forces of society are gathered up and centered in Iago, whose frightfulness consists in the fact that he is the sole representative of his widespread tribe. We shudder at him, not because he is monstrous or inexplicable, but because he is the embodiment of those thoroughly human characteristics with which we are too familiar, but which we lack the courage to acknowledge.

He comes before us with his gull, Roderigo, whose purse he has commanded as if the strings were his. Already Othello's wooing of Desdemona he had turned to his own profit. Here was sufficient motive for him to simulate before Roderigo his hatred for Othello and to invent reasons to justify it. But now, with Othello and Desdemona married and with Roderigo's hopes of winning Desdemona ended, Iago's profits cease. Clearly, if Iago is still to keep his hand in Roderigo's purse, he must devise some means to keep Roderigo's hopes alive. Here is his initial motive and here is the source from which his invention springs. All else in his plot as it for a time uncertainly develops, is subordinate to this original motive of getting money out of Roderigo. Later, with his money assured, he becomes even more interested in the sport of the game with its attendant dangers than in the profits themselves. His moral sense, never completely atrophied in any human being, compels him to attempt to justify himself, which accounts for his so-called "motive-hunting"; but back of all his villainy lies that initial motive—the purse of Roderigo. As his plot develops he finds, doubtless, a keener joy in his growing sense of power over one to whom he is officially subordinate—a thoroughly human failing; but as the crisis approaches we find him ready to resort to desperate measures rather than restore the gold and jewels he has bobbed from his simple gull. In other words, the profit motive runs throughout the play, and it is to this motive that Othello and Desdemona incidentally fall a sacrifice. It is not too much to say that without a Roderigo for Iago to work upon there could have been no tragedy of Othello.

The climax of the tragedy—the point at which the action begins its descent toward the catastrophe—is clearly marked. It is where Othello first admits his suspicion of Desdemona by saying to Iago

"If more thou dost perceive, let me know more;
Set on thy wife to observe. Leave me, Iago."

Up to this point Othello had withstood all of Iago's insinuations. The fatal shaft that pierces him is Iago's hint that there is in Desdemona a sexual abnormality, evidenced by her marriage with Othello rather than with one of "her own clime, complexion and degree":

"Foh! one may smell in such a will [passion] most rank,
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural."

Pure as is his own love, Othello cannot wholly reject that thought—that a possible sexual abnormality led Desdemona into a marriage so obviously disproportionate. In other words, it is upon the disproportionateness of the marriage that the tragedy turns; even Iago must have failed but for that. And this leads us to observe that by every shade we lighten Othello's color, we weaken by so much the tragedy. Othello is portrayed in the text as a black man, evidently with all the physical attributes of a negro, and was played as such from the time of Shakespeare down to the early years of the nineteenth century. Whether the play so presented would be tolerated today is not the question. It is practically certain that Shakespeare so conceived it and that by departing from his conception we have lost much of the tragedy's deeper significance.

For in this tragedy Shakespeare confronts us with the questions: What do you think of this marriage? Would you tolerate it? Or would you go even farther than Brabantio in seeking redress? Could you join with the Duke and senators in accepting it? Such questions as these are a very part of our reaction to the play, whether we consciously reply to them or not.

If we find it impossible in so many words to condone such a marriage, how do we account for the pity that floods us at the catastrophe? Death to Othello and Desdemona was tenderer than would have been a living separation. Is not the pity that overwhelms us testimony by our better natures that the disproportionateness of this marriage is only seeming? That in this particular instance we are witnessing a love that transcends the physical? And does not this testimony of pity exalt us, our conception of love and of humanity?

Or are we of the tribe of Iago, who holds love to be but a "sect or scion" of lust; absolutely a "lust of the blood and a permission of the will"? Do we agree with him that the "eye must be fed"; that there must be "loveliness in favour, sympathy in years, manners, and beauties"? Are we of those who look for an "answerable sequestration" in seemingly disproportionate marriages? These questions are pertinent; merely to ask them suggests to how great an extent the tribe of Iago occupies the earth. Shakespeare doubtless knew that Iago, however abhorrent he might appear to his audience, would be widely supported in his answers to these questions; that Brabantio's horror at such a union would be shared by every father in London. How, then, could he hope to overcome the prejudice of his hearers and stir their pity for Othello?

The answer seems to me to be found in the consummate art by which he has woven the magic web of time in this play. As we read the story or watch the play we feel that its action extends over a period of years; as a matter of fact, however, it falls within a period of three days. As realism, the tragedy is impossible; as romance, as the revelation of a great spiritual truth, by its very art it strikes past our senses and our reason to our inmost soul, where the impossible is accepted as the only reality.

Shakespeare clearly meant that his audience should accept both times in this play; that of the actual three days and that of a period of years. During the actual time of three days he has shown us not only how impossible were the grounds for Othello's jealousy, but also that the marriage of Othello and Desdemona was in fact never consummated; that theirs is a purely spiritual union. He has accounted for practically every hour of their married life from beginning to end of the play. The audience sees them during the first night of their marriage, sees their separation, their meeting at Cyprus, their separate appearances at the night brawl, each attended, their meetings of the following day, and witnesses the death of Desdemona on the second night at Cyprus. If Shakespeare as his own stage manager had left any possible doubt in the minds of his audience about that first night in Cyprus, he later dissipated it by having Desdemona say to Emilia, "to-night Lay on my bed my wedding sheets: remember"; and later, "He hath commanded me to go to bed, And bade me to dismiss you"; and by Emilia's cry of astonishment, "Dismiss me!"

It matters not to Shakespeare that the actual time renders impossible Iago's story of Desdemona's infidelity. The creator of Iago knew well how to surpass Iago in giving fiction the appearance of fact. What did matter to him was that the audience should accept this union; and having accepted it, see in Iago how the world turns such love to its "sport and profit." By such art he has taught us to glorify love as a spiritual union of two souls, however unlike in "clime, complexion, and degree."

OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

DUKE OF VENICE.

BRABANTIO, a Senator.

Other Senators.

GRATIANO, Brother to Brabantio.

LODOVICO, Kinsman to Brabantio.

OTHELLO, a noble Moor in the service of the Venetian state.

CASSIO, his Lieutenant.

IAGO, his Ancient.

RODERIGO, a Venetian Gentleman.

MONTANO, Governor of Cyprus.

Clown, Servant to Othello.

DESEMONA, Daughter to Brabantio and Wife to Othello.

EMILIA, Wife to Iago.

BIANCA, Mistress to Cassio.

Sailor, Messengers, Herald, Officers, Gentlemen, Musicians, and Attendants.

SCENE.—For the first Act, in Venice; during the rest of the Play, at a Sea-port in Cyprus.

ACT I

SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter RODERIGO and IAGO.

Rod. Tush! never tell me; I take it much unkindly
That thou, Iago, who hast had my purse
As if the strings were thine, should'st know of this.

Iago. 'Sblood, but you will not hear me:
If ever I did dream of such a matter,
Abhor me.

Rod. Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me if I do not. Three great ones of the city,

In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,
Off-capp'd to him; and, by the faith of man,
I know my price, I am worth no worse a
place;

But he, as loving his own pride and purposes,

Evades them, with a bombast circumstance

Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war;

And, in conclusion,

Nonsuits my mediators; for, 'Certes,' says
he,

'I have already chose my officer.'

And what was he?

Forsooth, a great arithmetician,

One Michael Cassio, a Florentine,

A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife;

That never set a squadron in the field,

Nor the division of a battle knows

More than a spinster; unless the bookish
theoric,

Wherein the toged consuls can propose

As masterly as he: mere prattle, without practice,

Is all his soldiership. But he, sir, had the election;

And I, of whom his eyes had seen the proof

At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on other grounds Christian and heathen, must be be-lee'd and calm'd

By debtor and creditor, this counter-caster;
He, in good time, must his lieutenant be,
And I, God bless the mark! his Moorship's ancient.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman.

Iago. But there's no remedy: 'tis the curse of service,

Preferment goes by letter and affection,
And not by old gradation, where each second Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be judge yourself.

Whether I in any just term am affin'd
To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him then.

Iago. O! sir, content you;

I follow him to serve my turn upon him;

We cannot all be masters, nor all masters

Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark

Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave,

That, doting on his own obsequious bondage,

Wears out his time, much like his master's ass,

For nought but provender, and when he's old, cashier'd;

Whip me such honest knaves. Others there

are

Who, trimm'd in forms and visages of duty,

Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves,

And, throwing but shows of service on their

lords,

Do well thrive by them, and when they have

lin'd their coats

Do themselves homage: these fellows have some soul;

And such a one do I profess myself. For,

sir,

It is as sure as you are Roderigo,

Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago:

In following him, I follow but myself;
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty,
But seeming so, for my peculiar end: 60
For when my outward action doth demonstrate

The native act and figure of my heart
In compliment extern, 't is not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For daws to peck at: I am not what I am.

Rod. What a full fortune does the thick-lips owe,

If he can carry 't thus!

Iago. Call up her father;
Rouse him, make after him, poison his delight,

Proclaim him in the streets, incense her kinsmen.

And, though he in a fertile climate dwell, 70
Plague him with flies; though that his joy
be joy,

Yet throw such changes of vexation on 't
As it may lose some colour.

Rod. Here is her father's house; I'll call aloud.

Iago. Do; with like timorous accent and dire yell

As when, by night and negligence, the fire
Is spied in populous cities.

Rod. What, ho! Brabantio! Signior Bra-bantio, ho!

Iago. Awake! what, ho! Brabantio!
thieves! thieves! thieves!

Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags! 80

Thieves! thieves!

Enter BRABANTIO, above, at a window.

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons?

What is the matter there?

Rod. Signior, is all your family within?

Iago. Are your doors lock'd?

Bra. Why? wherefore ask you this?

Iago. 'Zounds! sir, you're robb'd; for shame, put on your gown;

Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul;

Even now, now, very now, an old black ram
Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise!

Awake the snorting citizens with the bell, 90
Or else the devil will make a grandsire of
you.

Arise, I say.

Bra. What! have you lost your wits?

Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice?

Bra. Not I; what are you?

Rod. My name is Roderigo.

Bra. The worsen welcome:

I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doors:

In honest plainness thou hast heard me say
My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness,

Being full of supper and distempering
draughts,

Upon malicious bravery dost thou come 100
To start my quiet,

Rod. Sir, sir, sir!

Bra. But thou must needs be sure
My spirit and my place have in them power
To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir.

Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing?
this is Venice;

My house is not a grange.

Rod. Most grave Brabantio,

In simple and pure soul I come to you.

Iago. 'Zounds! sir; you are one of those that will not serve God if the devil bid you.
Because we come to do you service and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse;
you'll have your nephews neigh to you;
you'll have coursers for cousins and gennets
for Germans. 114

Bra. What profane wretch art thou?

Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are—a senator.

Bra. This thou shalt answer; I know thee, Roderigo. 120

Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But I
beseech you,

If 't be your pleasure and most wise consent,
As partly I find it is, that your fair daughter,
At this odd-even and dull watch o' the night,
Transported with no worse nor better guard
But with a knave of common hire, a gondo-lier,

To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor,—
If this be known to you and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy
wrongs;

But if you know not this, my manners tell
me 130

We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe
That, from the sense of all civility,

I thus would play and trifle with your reverence:

Your daughter, if you have not given her
leave,

I say again, hath made a gross revolt;
Tying her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes
In an extravagant and wheeling stranger
Of here and every where. Straight satisfy yourself:

If she be in her chamber or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state 40
For thus deluding you.

Bra. Strike on the tinder, ho!
Give me a taper! call up all my people!

This accident is not unlike my dream;
Belief of it oppresses me already.

Light, I say! light! Exit from above.

Iago. Farewell; for I must leave you:
It seems not meet nor wholesome to my
place

To be produc'd, as if I stay I shall,
Against the Moor; for I do know the state,
However this may gall him with some check,
Cannot with safety cast him; for he's em-
bark'd 150

With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars, Which even now stand in act, that, for their
souls,

Another of his fathom they have none,
To lead their business; in which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell-pains,
Yet, for necessity of present life,
I must show out a flag and sign of love,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find him,
Lead to the Sagittary the raised search; 159
And there will I be with him. So, farewell.
Exit.

Enter BRABANTIO and Servants with torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil; gone she is,
And what's to come of my despised time
Is nought but bitterness. Now, Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her? O unhappy girl!
With the Moor, say'st thou? Who would be a father?
How didst thou know 't was she? O! she deceives me
Past thought. What said she to you? Get more tapers!
Raise all my kindred! Are they married, think you?

Rod. Truly, I think they are.

Bra. O heaven! How got she out? O! treason of the blood: 170
Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters'
minds

By what you see them act. Is there not charms

By which the property of youth and maid-hood

May be abus'd? Have you not read, Roderigo,

Of some such thing?

Rod. Yes, sir, I have indeed.

Bra. Call up my brother. O! would you had had her.

Some one way, some another! Do you
know

Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?

Rod. I think I can discover him, if you
please 179

To get good guard and go along with me.

Bra. Pray you, lead on. At every house
I'll call;

I may command at most. Get weapons, ho!
And raise some special officers of night.

On, good Roderigo; I'll deserve your pains.
Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Street.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Attendants with torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain men,
Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience
To do no contriv'd murder: I lack iniquity Sometimes to do me service. Nine or ten times
I had thought to have yerk'd him here under the ribs.

Oth. 'T is better as it is.

Iago. Nay, but he prated
And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms
Against your honour

That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray you,
sir, 10

Are you fast married? Be assur'd of this,
That the magnifico is much below'd,
And hath in his effect a voice potential
As double as the duke's; he will divorce
you,

Or put upon you what restraint and grievance

The law, with all his might to enforce it on,
Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite:
My services which I have done the signiory Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'T is yet
to know,

Which when I know that boasting is an honour 20

I shall promulgate, I fetch my life and being
From men of royal siege, and my demerits
May speak unbonneted to as proud a fortune

As this that I have reach'd; for know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhoused free condition
Put into circumscription and confine

For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come yond?

Iago. These are the raised father and his friends:

You were best go in.

Oth. Not I; I must be found:
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul 31
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?

Iago. By Janus, I think no.

Enter CASSIO and certain Officers with torches.

Oth. The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant.

The goodness of the night upon you, friends!
What is the news?

Cas. The duke does greet you, general,
And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance,

Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine.

It is a business of some heat; the galleys 40
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers

This very night at one another's heels,
And many of the consuls, rais'd and met,

Are at the duke's already. You have been hotly call'd for;

When, being not at your lodging to be found,
The senate hath sent about three several quests

To search you out.

Oth. 'T is well I am found by you.
I will but spend a word here in the house,
And go with you. Exit.

Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?

Iago. Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land carack; 50

If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever.

Cas. I do not understand.

Iago. He's married.
Cas. To who?

Re-enter OTHELLO.

Iago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go?

Oth. Have with you.

Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you.

Iago. It is Brabantio. General, be advis'd;

He comes to bad intent.

Enter BRABANTIO, RODERIGO, and Officers with torches and weapons.

Oth. Holla! stand there!

Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.

Bra. Down with him, thief!

They draw on both sides.

Iago. You, Roderigo! come, sir, I am for you.

Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.

Good signior, you shall more command with years 60

Than with your weapons.

Bra. O thou foul thief! where hast thou stow'd my daughter?

Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her;

For I'll refer me to all things of sense,
If she in chains of magic were not bound,
Whether a maid so tender, fair, and happy,
So opposite to marriage that she shunn'd
The wealthy curled darlings of our nation,
Would ever have, to incur a general mock,
Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom?
Of such a thing as thou; to fear, not to delight.

Judge me the world, if 't is not gross in sense

That thou has practis'd on her with foul charms,

Abus'd her delicate youth with drugs or minerals

That weaken motion: I'll have 't disputed on;

'T is probable and palpable to thinking.

I therefore apprehend and do attach thee

For an abuser of the world, a practiser

Of arts inhibited and out of warrant.

Lay hold upon him: if he do resist, 50

Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands,

Both you of my inclining, and the rest:
Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it Without a prompter. Where will you that I go

To answer this your charge?

Bra. To prison: till fit time
Of law and course of direct session

Call thee to answer.

Oth. What if I do obey?

How may the duke be therewith satisfied,
Whose messengers are here about my side,

Upon some present business of the state 60

To bring me to him?

Off. 'T is true, most worthy signior;
The duke's in council, and your noble self,

I am sure, is sent for.

Bra. How! the duke in council!
In this time of the night! Bring him away.
Mine's not an idle cause: the duke himself,

Or any of my brothers of the state,
Cannot but feel this wrong as 't were their own;

For if such actions may have passage free,
Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Council-chamber.

The DUKE and Senators sitting at a table: Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news

That gives them credit.

First Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd;

My letters say a hundred and seven galleys.

Duke. And mine, a hundred and forty.

Second Sen. And mine, two hundred:

But though they jump not on a just account,
As in these cases, where the aim reports,

'T is oft with difference, yet do they all confirm

A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment:

I do not so secure me in the error, 10

But the main article I do approve

In fearful sense.

Sailor Within. What, ho! what, ho! what, ho!

Off. A messenger from the galleys.

Enter Sailor.

Duke. Now, what's the business?

Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes;

So was I bid report here to the state

By Signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change?

First Sen. This cannot be,

By no assay of reason; 't is a pageant

To keep us in false gaze. When we consider

The importance of Cyprus to the Turk, 20

And let ourselves again but understand,
That as it more concerns the Turk than

Rhodes,

So may he with more facile question bear it,
For that it stands not in such war-like brace,

But altogether lacks the abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in: if we make thought of this,

We must not think the Turk is so unskilful
To leave that latest which concerns him

first,

Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain,

To wake and wage a danger profitless. 30

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.

First Off. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious,

Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,

Have there injointed them with an after fleet.

First Sen. Ay, so I thought. How many, as you guess?

Mess. Of thirty sail; and now they do re-stem

Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance

Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,

Your trusty and most valiant servitor, 40
With his free duty recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain then for Cyprus.
Marcus Luccicos, is not he in town?

First Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from us to him; post-post-haste dispatch.

First Sen. Here comes Brabantio and the valiant Moor.

Enter BRABANTIO, OTHELLO, IAGO, RODERIGO, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you

Against the general enemy Ottoman.

To BRABANTIO. I did not see you; welcome, gentle signior; 50

We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.

Bra. So did I yours. Good your grace, pardon me;

Neither my place nor aught I heard of business

Hath rais'd me from my bed, nor doth the general care

Take hold on me, for my particular grief is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature

That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter?

Bra. My daughter! O my daughter.

Duke, Sen. Dead?

Bra. Ay, to me; She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted

By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks; 61

For nature so preposterously to err, Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,

Sans witchcraft could not.

Duke. Whoe'er he be that in this foul proceeding

Hath thus beguill'd your daughter of herself And you of her, the bloody book of law

You shall yourself read in the bitter letter After your own sense; yea, though our proper son Stood in your action.

Bra. Humbly I thank your grace. Here is the man, this Moor; whom now, it seems, 71

Your special mandate for the state affairs Hath hither brought.

Duke, Sen. We are very sorry for 't.

Duke. To OTHELLO. What, in your own part, can you say to this?

Bra. Nothing, but this is so.

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors,

My very noble and approv'd good masters, That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter, It is most true; true, I have married her:

The very head and front of my offending 80 Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech, And little bless'd with the soft phrase of peace; For since these arms of mine had seven years' pith, Till now some nine moons wasted, they have us'd Their dearest action in the tented field;

And little of this great world can I speak, More than pertains to feats of broil and battle; And therefore little shall I grace my cause

In speaking for myself. Yet, by your gracious patience,

I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver 90
Of my whole course of love; what drugs,

what charms, What conjuration, and what mighty magic,

For such proceeding I am charg'd withal, I won his daughter.

Bra. A maiden never bold; Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion

Blush'd at herself; and she, in spite of nature,

Of years, of country, credit, every thing, To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on!

It is a judgment maim'd and most imperfect That will confess perfection so could err 100

Against all rules of nature, and must be driven

To find out practices of cunning hell, Why this should be. I therefore vouch again

That with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood,

Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect, He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this, is no proof, Without more wider and more overt test

Than these thin habits and poor likelihoods Of modern seeming do prefer against him.

First Sen. But, Othello, speak: 110
Did you by indirect and forced courses

Subdue and poison this young maid's affections;

Or came it by request and such fair question As soul to soul affordeth?

Oth. I do beseech you, Send for the lady to the Sagittary,

And let her speak of me before her father: If you do find me foul in her report,

The trust, the office I do hold of you, Not only take away, but let your sentence

Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither.
Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place. Exeunt IAGO and Attendants.

And, till she come, as truly as to heaven 122
I do confess the vices of my blood,

So justly to your grave ears I'll present

How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father lov'd me; oft invited me;
Still question'd me the story of my life
From year to year, the battles, sieges, fortunes

That I have pass'd.
I ran it through, even from my boyish days
To the very moment that he bade me tell it;
Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents by flood and field,
Of hair-breadth 'scapes i' the imminent deadly breach.

Of being taken by the insolent foe
And sold to slavery, of my redemption thence

And portance in my travels' history;
Wherein of antres vast and deserts idle, 140
Rough quarries, rocks and hills whose heads touch heaven,

It was my hint to speak, such was the process;

And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads Do grow beneath their shoulders. This to hear

Would Desdemona seriously incline;
But still the house-affairs would draw her
hence;

Which ever as she could with haste dispatch,

She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my discourse. Which I observ-
ing, 153

Took once a pliant hour, and found good
means

To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate, Whereof by parcels she had something
heard,

But not intently: I did consent;
And often did beguile her of her tears,
When I did speak of some distressful stroke That my youth suffer'd. My story being
done,

She gave me for my pains a world of sighs:
She swore, in faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange; 160

'T was pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful:
She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd

That heaven had made her such a man; she thank'd me,

And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd
her,

I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her. Upon this hint I spake:

She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd,
And I lov'd her that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have us'd:

Here comes the lady; let her witness it. 170

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and Attendants.

Duke. I think this tale would win my daughter too.

Good Brabantio,
Take up this mangled matter at the best;

Men do their broken weapons rather use
Than their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you, hear her speak:
If she confess that she was half the wooer,
Destruction on my head, if my bad blame Light on the man! Come hither, gentle mistress:

Do you perceive in all this noble company
Where most you owe obedience?

Des. My noble father,
I do perceive here a divided duty: 181
To you I am bound for life and education;
My life and education both do learn me
How to respect you; you are the lord of
duty;

I am hitherto your daughter: but here's my husband;

And so much duty as my mother show'd
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor my lord.

Bra. God be with you! I have done.
Please it your grace, on to the state affairs:
I had rather to adopt a child than get it. 191
Come hither, Moor:

I here do give thee that with all my heart
Which, but thou hast already, with all my
heart

I would keep from thee. For your sake,
jewel,

I am glad at soul I have no other child;
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
To hang clogs on them. I have done, my
lord.

Duke. Let me speak like yourself, and lay a sentence,

Which, as a grize or step, may help these lovers 200

Into your favour.

When remedies are past, the griefs are ended

By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.

To mourn a mischief that is past and gone
Is the next way to draw new mischief on.

What cannot be preserv'd when fortune takes

Patience her injury a mockery makes.
The robb'd that smiles steals something from the thief;

He robs himself that spends a bootless
grief.

Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile;
We lose it not so long as we can smile. 211

He bears the sentence well that nothing
bears

But the free comfort which from thence he hears;

But he bears both the sentence and the
sorrow

That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.

These sentences, to sugar or to gall,
Being strong on both sides, are equivocal:
But words are words; I never yet did hear
That the bruis'd heart was pierced through the ear.

I humbly beseech you, proceed to the affairs of state. 220

Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus. Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you; and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you: you must therefore be content to slubber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition. 229

Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave senators,

Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war My thrice-driven bed of down: I do agnize A natural and prompt alacrity

I find in hardness, and do undertake These present wars against the Ottomites. Most humbly therefore bending to your state,

I crave fit disposition for my wife, Due reference of place and exhibition, With such accommodation and besort 239 As levels with her breeding.

Duke. If you please, Be 't at her father's.

Bra. I'll not have it so.
Oth. Nor I.

Des. Nor I; I would not there reside, To put my father in impatient thoughts By being in his eye. Most gracious duke, To my unfolding lend your prosperous ear; And let me find a charter in your voice To assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona?

Des. That I did love the Moor to live with him, My downright violence and storm of fortunes 250 May trumpet to the world; my heart's subdued

Even to the very quality of my lord; I saw Othello's visage in his mind, And to his honours and his valiant parts Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate. So that, dear lords, if I be left behind, A moth of peace, and he go to the war, The rights for which I love him are bereft me, And I a heavy interim shall support By his dear absence. Let me go with him.

Oth. Let her have your voices. 261 Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not To please the palate of my appetite, Nor to comply with heat, the young affects In me defunct, and proper satisfaction, But to be free and bounteous to her mind; And heaven defend your good souls that you think

I will your serious and great business scant For she is with me. No, when light-wing'd toys

Of feather'd Cupid seel with wanton dulness My speculative and offic'd instruments, 271 That my disports corrupt and taint my business,

Let housewives make a skillet of my helm, And all indign and base adversities Make head against my estimation!

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,

Either for her stay or going. The affair cries haste,

And speed must answer it.

First Sen. You must away to-night.
Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine i' the morning here we'll meet again. 280

Othello, leave some officer behind, And he shall our commission bring to you; With such things else of quality and respect As doth import you.

Oth. So please your grace, my ancient; A man he is of honesty and trust: To his conveyance I assign my wife, With what else needful your good grace shall think

To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so.
Good night to every one. To BRABANTIO.

And, noble signior, If virtue no delighted beauty lack, 290 Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.

First Sen. Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona well.

Bra. Look to her, Moor, if thou hast eyes to see:

She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee.

Exeunt DUKE, Senators, Officers, etc.
Oth. My life upon her faith! Honest Iago,

My Desdemona must I leave to thee: I prithee, let thy wife attend on her; And bring them after in the best advantage. Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour Of love, of wordly matters and direction, 300 To spend with thee: we must obey the time.

Exeunt OTHELLO and DESDEMONA.
Rod. Iago!

Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?

Rod. What will I do, think'st thou?

Iago. Why, go to bed, and sleep.

Rod. I will incontinently drown myself.

Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after it. Why, thou silly gentleman!

Rod. It is silliness to live when to live is a torment; and then have we a prescription to die when death is our physician. 311

Iago. O! villanous; I have looked upon the world for four times seven years, and since I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury, I never found a man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say I would drown myself for the love of a guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.

Rod. What should I do? I confess it is my shame to be so fond; but it is not in my virtue to amend it. 321

Iago. Virtue! a fig! 't is in ourselves that we are thus or thus. Our bodies are our gardens, to the which our wills are gardeners; so that if we will plant nettles or sow lettuce, set hyssop and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of herbs or distract it with many, either to have it sterile with idleness or manured with industry, why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions; but we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts, whereof I take this that you call love to be a sect or scion. 337

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood and a permission of the will. Come, be a man. Drown thyself! drown cats and blind puppies. I have professed me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness; I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow these wars; defeat thy favour with an usurped beard; I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor,—put money in thy purse,—nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement in her, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration; put but money in thy purse. These Moors are changeable in their wills;—fill thy purse with money:—the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as coloquintida. She must change for youth: when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice. She must have change, she must: therefore, put money in thy purse. If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst. If sanctimony and a frail vow betwixt an erring barbarian and a supersubtle Venetian be not too hard for my wits and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. A box of drowning thyself! it is clean out of the way; seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy than to be drowned and go without her.

Rod. Will thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue? 370

Iago. Thou art sure of me: go, make money. I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again I hate the Moor: my cause is hearted; thine hath no less reason. Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him; if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, me a sport. There are many events in the womb of time which will be delivered. Traverse; go: provide thy money. We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu. 380

Rod. Where shall we meet i' the morning?

Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Roderigo?

Rod. What say you?

Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear?

Rod. I am changed. I'll sell all my land.

Iago. Go to; farewell! put money enough in your purse. Exit RODERIGO.

Thus do I ever make my fool my purse;

For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane, 390

If I would time expend with such a snipe But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor,

And it is thought abroad that 'twixt my sheets

He has done my office: I know not if 't be true,

Yet I, for mere suspicion in that kind, Will do as if for surety. He holds me well; The better shall my purpose work on him.

Cassio's a proper man; let me see now:

To get his place and to plume up my will

In double knavery; how, how? Let's see:

After some time, to abuse Othello's ear 401

That he is too familiar with his wife:

He hath a person and a smooth dispose

To be suspected, fram'd to make women

false.

The Moor is of a free and open nature,

That thinks men honest that but seem to be so.

And will as tenderly be led by the nose

As asses are.

I have 't; it is engender'd: hell and night

Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light. Exit. 410

ACT II

SCENE I.—A Sea-port Town in Cyprus. An Open Place near the Quay.

Enter MONTANO and two Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea?

First Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought flood;

I cannot 'twixt the heaven and the main Descry a sail.

Mon. Methinks the wind hath spoke aloud at land;

A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements; If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,

What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,

Can hold the mortise? What shall we hear of this?

Second Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet; 10

For do but stand upon the foaming shore,

The chidden billow seems to pelt the clouds;

The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous mane,

Seems to cast water on the burning Bear And quench the guards of the ever-fixed pole;

I never did like molestation view On the enchafed flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet Be not enshelter'd and embay'd, they are

drown'd;

It is impossible they bear it out.

Enter a Third Gentleman.

Third Gent. News, lads! our wars are done. 20

The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks

That their designment halts; a noble ship of Venice

Hath seen a grievous wreck and sufferance
On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! is this true?

Third Gent. The ship is here put in,
A Veronesa; Michael Cassio,

Lieutenant to the war-like Moor Othello,
Is come on shore: the Moor himself at sea,
And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on 't; 't is a worthy governor. 30

Third Gent. But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort

Touching the Turkish loss, yet he looks sadly

And prays the Moor be safe; for they were parted

With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. Pray heavens he be;
For I have serv'd him, and the man commands

Like a full soldier. Let 's to the sea-side, ho!

As well to see the vessel that 's come in
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello, Even till we make the main and the aerial blue

An indistinct regard.

Third Gent. Come, let 's do so; 40
For every minute is expectancy
Of more arrivance.

Enter CASSIO.

Cas. Thanks, you the valiant of this warlike isle,

That so approve the Moor. O! let the heavens

Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea.

Mon. Is he well shipp'd?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot

Of very expert and approv'd allowance; Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to
death, 50

Stand in bold cure.

Cry within. A sail!—a sail!—a sail!

Enter a Messenger.

Cas. What noise?

Mess. The town is empty; on the brow
o' the sea

Stand ranks of people, and they cry 'A sail!'

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor. Guns heard.

Second Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy;

Our friends at least.

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 't is that is arriv'd.

Second Gent. I shall. Exit.

Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general wiv'd? 60

Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achiev'd
a maid

That paragon description and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens

And in the essential vesture of creation
Does tire the engineer.

Re-enter Second Gentleman.

How now! who has put in?

Second Gent. 'T is one Iago, ancient to the general.

Cas. He has had most favourable and happy speed:

Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,

The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,
Traitors ensteep'd to clog the guiltless keel. 70

As having sense of beauty, do omit
Their mortal natures, letting go safely by

The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?

Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's captain,

Left in the conduct of the bold Iago,
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts

A se'nnight's speed. Great Jove, Othello guard,

And swell his sail with thine own powerful
breath,

That he may bless this bay with his tall
ship,

Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's
arms, 80

Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,
And bring all Cyprus comfort!

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, IAGO, ROD-ERIGO, and Attendants.

O! behold,

The riches of the ship is come on shore.
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.

Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand,

Enwheel thee round!

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.
What tidings can you tell me of my lord?

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I
aught

But that he 's well, and will be shortly here.
Des. O! but I fear—How lost you company? 91

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies

Parted our fellowship. But, hark! a sail.
Cry within. A sail!—a sail! Guns heard.

Second Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel:

This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the news!
Exit Gentleman.

Good ancient, you are welcome. To EMILIA. Welcome, mistress.

Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,
That I extend my manners; 't is my breed-
ing

That gives me this bold show of courtesy.
Kissing her.

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips 101

As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You'd have enough.

Des. Alas! she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, too much;
I find it still when I have list to sleep:
Marry, before your ladyship, I grant.
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.

Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures out of doors, 110 Bells in your parlours, wild cats in your kitchens,

Saints in your injuries, devils being offended,

Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.

Des. O! fie upon thee, slanderer.

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk:
You rise to play and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What would'st thou write of me, if thou should'st praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to 't,
For I am nothing if not critical. 120

Des. Come on; assay. There's one gone to the harbour?

Iago. Ay, madam.

Des. I am not merry, but I do beguile
The thing I am by seeming otherwise.
Come, how would'st thou praise me?

Iago. I am about it; but indeed my invention Comes from my pate as birdlime does from frize;

It plucks out brains and all: but my Muse labours,

And thus she is deliver'd.
If she be fair and wise, fairness and wit, 130
The one's for use, the other useth it.

Des. Well prais'd! How if she be black and witty?

Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a
wit,
She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How if fair and foolish?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair,

For even her folly help'd her to an heir.

Des. These are old fond paradoxes to make fools laugh i' the alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's foul and foolish? 141

Iago. There's none so foul and foolish thereunto

But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones do.

Des. O heavy ignorance! thou praisest
the worst best. But what praise could'st thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed, one that in the authority of her merit did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself?

Iago. She that was ever fair and never proud,

Had tongue at will and yet was never loud,
Never lack'd gold and yet went never gay, 151
Fled from her wish and yet said 'Now I may,'
She that being anger'd, her revenge being nigh,

Bade her wrong stay and her displeasure
fly,

She that in wisdom never was so frail
To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail,

She that could think and ne'er disclose her
mind,

See suitors following and not look behind,
She was a wight, if ever such wight were,—

Des. To do what? 160

Iago. To suckle fools and chronicle small beer.

Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion!
Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband. How say you, Cassio?
is he not a most profane and liberal counsellor?

Cas. He speaks home, madam; you may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar.

Iago. Aside. He takes her by the palm;
ay, well said, whisper; with as little a web as this will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I will gyve thee in thine own courtship. You say true, 't is so, indeed. If such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in. Very good;
well kissed! an excellent courtesy! 't is so,
indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips!
would they were clyster-pipes for your sake!
A trumpet heard.

The Moor! I know his trumpet. 190

Cas. 'T is truly so.

Des. Let's meet him and receive him.

Cas. Lo! where he comes.

Enter OTHELLO and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello!

Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content

To see you here before me. O my soul's joy!

If after every tempest come such calms,
May the winds blow till they have waken'd
death!

And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas

Olympus-high, and duck again as low 190
As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die,

'T were now to be most happy, for I fear
My soul hath her content so absolute

That not another comfort like to this Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid
But that our loves and comforts should increase

Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers!
I cannot speak enough of this content;

It stops me here; it is too much of joy;
And this, and this, the greatest discords be

Kissing her.
That e'er our hearts shall make!

Iago. Aside. O! you are well tun'd now,
But I'll set down the pegs that make this music, 202
As honest as I am.

Oth. Come, let us to the castle.
News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.

How does my old acquaintance of this isle?
Honey, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus;
I have found great love amongst them. O
my sweet,

I prattle out of fashion, and I dote
In mine own comforts. I prithee, good Iago,
Go to the bay and disembark my coffers. 210
Bring thou the master to the citadel;
He is a good one, and his worthiness Does challenge much respect. Come, Desdemona,

Once more well met at Cyprus.

Exeunt OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour. Come hither. If thou be'st valiant, as they say base men being in love have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them, list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard: first, I must tell thee this; Desdemona is directly in love with him. 221

Rod. With him! why, 't is not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor but for bragging and telling her fantastical lies: and will she love him still for prating? let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be, again to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite, loveliness in favour, sympathy in years, manners and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in. Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted, as it is a most pregnant and unforced position, who stands so eminent in the degree of this fortune as Cassio does? a knave very voluble, no further conscionable than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? why, none;
why, none: a slipper and subtle knave, a finder-out of occasions, that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself; a devil-ish knave! Besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him that folly and green minds look after;
a pestilent complete knave! and the woman
hath found him already. 254

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she's full of most blessed condition.

Iago. Blessed fig's end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes; if she had been blessed she would never have loved the Moor; blessed pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand?

didst not mark that? 260

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand! an index and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips that their breaths embraced together. Villanous thoughts, Roderigo!
when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion. Pish!
But, sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; for the command, I'll lay 't upon you: Cassio knows you not. I'll not be far from you:
do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline; or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister. 276

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash and very sudden in choler, and haply may strike at you: provoke him, that he may; for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny, whose qualification shall come into no true taste again but by the displanting of Cassio.
So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if you can bring it to any opportunity. 290

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel: I must fetch his necessities ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu.

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it; Exit.

That she loves him, 't is apt and of great credit:

The Moor, howbeit that I endure him not,
Is of a constant, loving, noble nature;
And I dare think he'll prove to Desdemona
A most dear husband. Now, I do love her
too; 306

Not out of absolute lust, though peradven-
ture

I stand accountant for as great a sin,
But partly led to diet my revenge,
For that I do suspect the lusty Moor
Hath leap'd into my seat; the thought whereof

Doth like a poisonous mineral gnaw my inwards;

And nothing can or shall content my soul
Till I am even'd with him, wife for wife;
Or failing so, yet that I put the Moor
At least into a jealousy so strong 310
That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do,

If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash
For his quick hunting, stand the putting-on,
I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip;
Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb,

For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too,
 Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me,
 For making him egregiously an ass
 And practising upon his peace and quiet
 Even to madness. 'T is here, but yet con-fus'd: 320
 Knavery's plain face is never seen till us'd.
Exit.

SCENE II.—A Street.

*Enter a Herald with a proclamation;
 People following.*

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptial. So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open, and there is full liberty of feasting from this present hour of five till the bell have told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus and our noble general, Othello! 12
Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard
 to-night:
 Let 's teach ourselves that honourable stop,
 Not to out-sport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do;
 But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye
 Will I look to 't.

Oth. Iago is most honest.
 Michael, good night; to-morrow with your earliest

Let me have speech with you. To DES-
DEMONA. Come, my dear love,

The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue;
 That profit 's yet to come 'twixt me and
 you. 10

Good night.

*Exeunt OTHELLO, DESDEMONA,
 and Attendants.*

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Welcome, Iago; we must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 't is not yet ten o' the clock. Our general cast us thus early for the love of his Desdemona, who let us not therefore blame; he hath not yet made wanton the night with her, and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She 's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game.

Cas. Indeed, she 's a most fresh and delicate creature. 21

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley to provocation.

Cas. An inviting eye; and yet methinks right modest.

Iago. And when she speaks, is it not an alarm to love?

Cas. She is indeed perfection.

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets!
 Come, lieutenant, I have a stoup of wine;
 and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants that would fain have a measure to the health of black Othello. 33

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago: I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking:
 I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O! they are our friends; but one cup: I'll drink for you. 39

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and behold what innovation it makes here: I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 't is a night of revels;
 the gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door; I pray you, call them in.

Cas. I'll do 't; but it dislikes me. Exit.

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon
 him, 50

With that which he hath drunk to-night already,

He'll be as full of quarrel and offence
 As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool, Roderigo, Whom love has turn'd almost the wrong side out,

To Desdemona hath to-night carous'd
 Potations pottle-deep; and he 's to watch.

Three lads of Cyprus, noble swelling spirits,
 That hold their honours in a wary distance,

The very elements of this war-like isle, 59
 Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups,

And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards,

Am I to put our Cassio in some action That may offend the isle. But here they

come.

If consequence do but approve my dream,
 My boat sails freely, both with wind and
 stream.

Re-enter CASSIO, with MONTANO and Gentlemen.

Cas. Fore God, they have given me a rouse already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint as I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho! 79

And let me the canakin clink, clink;

And let me the canakin clink:

A soldier 's a man;

A life 's but a span;

Why then let a soidier drink.

Some wine, boys!

Cas. Fore God, an excellent song.

Iago. I learned it in England, where indeed they are most potent in potting;
 your Dane, your German, and your swagbellied Hollander,—drink, ho!—are nothing to your English. 81

Cas. Is your Englishman so exquisite in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you with facility your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be filled.

Cas. To the health of our general!

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice. 90

Iago. O sweet England!

King Stephen was a worthy peer,

His breeches cost him but a crown;

He held them sixpence all too dear,

With that he call'd the tailor lown.

He was a wight of high renown,

And thou art but of low degree:

'T is pride that pulls the country down,

Then take thine auld cloak about thee.

Some wine, ho! 100

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear 't again?

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things. Well, God's above all; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It is true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part, no offence to the general, nor any man of quality, I hope to be saved. 111

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay; but, by your leave, not before me; the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient. Let's have no more of this; Let's to our affairs. Forgive us our sins! Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk: this is my ancient; this is my right hand, and this is my left hand. I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough. 120

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well then; you must not think then that I am drunk. Exit.

Mon. To the platform, masters; come, let's set the watch.

Iago. You see this fellow that is gone before;

He is a soldier fit to stand by Cæsar
And give direction; and do but see his vice;
'T is to his virtue a just equinox,
The one as long as the other; 't is pity of him. 130

I fear the trust Othello puts him in,

On some odd time of his infirmity,

Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'T is evermore the prologue to his sleep:

He'll watch the horologe a double set,

If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well

The general were put in mind of it.

Perhaps he sees it not; or his good nature

Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,

And looks not on his evils. Is not this true? 140

Enter RODERIGO.

Iago. Aside to him. How now, Roderigo! I pray you, after the lieutenant; go.

Exit RODERIGO.

Mon. And 't is great pity that the noble Moor
Should hazard such a place as his own second

With one of an ingraft infirmity;

It were an honest action to say

So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island:
I do love Cassio well, and would do much
To cure him of this evil. But hark! what noise? Cry within: 'Help! Help!'

Re-enter CASSIO, pursuing RODERIGO.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!

Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?
Cas. A knave teach me my duty! 151

I'll beat the knave into a twiggen bottle.

Rod. Beat me!

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue?

Striking RODERIGO.

Mon. Nay, good lieutenant;

Staying him.

I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, sir,

Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mon. Come, come; you're drunk.

Cas. Drunk! They fight.

Iago. Aside to RODERIGO. Away, I say!
go out and cry a mutiny!

Exit RODERIGO.

Nay! good lieutenant! Alas, gentlemen!

Help, ho! Lieutenant! Sir! Montano!
Sir!

Help, masters! Here's a goodly watch indeed! Bell rings.

Who's that which rings the bell? Diablo.
ho! 160

The town will rise: God's will! lieutenant,
hold!

You will be sham'd for ever.

Re-enter OTHELLO and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. 'Zounds! I bleed still; I am hurt to the death.

Oth. Hold, for your lives!

Iago. Hold, ho! Lieutenant! Sir! Montano! gentlemen!

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
Hold! the general speaks to you; hold,

hold for shame!

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence aristeth this?

Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do
that 170

Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites?
For Christian shame put by this barbarous brawl;

He that stirs next to carve for his own rage

Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.

Silence that dreadful bell! it frights the isle
From her propriety. What is the matter, masters?

Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,
Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge thee.

Iago. I do not know; friends all but now,
even now,
In quarter and in terms like bride and groom
Devesting them for bed; and then, but now,

As if some planet had unwitting men,
Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds,
And would in action glorious I had lost
Those legs that brought me to a part of it!
Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot?

Cas. I pray you, pardon me; I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil;
The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great

In mouths of wisest censure: what's the matter,

That you unlace your reputation thus
And spend your rich opinion for the name
Of a night-brawler? give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger;

Your officer, Iago, can inform you,
While I spare speech, which something now offends me,

Of all that I do know; nor know I aught
By me that's said or done amiss this night,
Unless self-charity be sometime a vice,
And to defend ourselves it be a sin
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safer guides to rule,
And passion, having my best judgment collied,

Assays to lead the way. If I once stir,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know
How this foul rout began, who set it on; 210
And he that is approv'd in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,

Shall lose me. What! in a town of war,
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court and guard of safety!

'T is monstrous. Iago, who began 't?

Mon. If partially affin'd, or leagu'd in office,

Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near;
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth

Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;
Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
Shall nothing wrong him. Thus it is, general.

Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow crying out for help,

And Cassio following him with determin'd sword

To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman
Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause;
Myself the crying fellow did pursue, 230
Lest by his clamour, as it so fell out,
The town might fall in fright; he, swift of foot,

Outran my purpose, and I return'd the rather

For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
And Cassio high in oath, which till to-night
I ne'er might say before. When I came back,

For this was brief, I found them close together,

At blow and thrust, even as again they were
When you yourself did part them.

More of this matter can I not report: 240
But men are men; the best sometimes forget:

Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,

As men in rage strike those that wish them best,

Yet surely Cassio, I believe, receiv'd
From him that fled some strange indignity,
Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago,
Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,

Making it light to Cassio. Cassio, I love thee;

But never more be officer of mine.

Re-enter DESDEMONA, attended.

Look! if my gentle love be not rais'd up; 250
I'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter?

Oth. All's well now, sweeting; come away to bed.

Sir, for your hurts, myself will be your surgeon.

Lead him off. MONTANO is led off.

Iago, look with care about the town,
And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.

Come, Desdemona; 't is the soldiers' life
To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife.

Exeunt all but IAGO and CASSIO.

Iago. What! are you hurt, lieutenant?

Cas. Ay; past all surgery. 260

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation!

O! I have lost my reputation. I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial. My reputation, Iago,

my reputation! 265

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound;

there is more sense in that than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving: you have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What! man; there are ways to recover the general again; you are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offence dog to affright an imperious lion. Sue to him again, and he's yours. 277

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised than to deceive so good a commander with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk! and speak parrot! and squabble, swagger, swear, and discourse fustian with one's own shadow! O thou invisible spirit of wine! if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil. 284

Iago. What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is't possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore. O God! that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains; that we should, with joy, pleasance, revel, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts. 294

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough; how came you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleased the devil drunkenness to give place to the devil wrath; one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself. 300

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moralist. As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen, but since it is as it is, mend it for your own good. 305

Cas. I will ask him for my place again; he shall tell me I am a drunkard! Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange! Every inordinate cup is unblest and the ingredient is a devil. 312

Iago. Come, come; good wine is a good familiar creature if it be well used; exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think you think I love you.

Cas. I have well approved it, sir. I drunk!

Iago. You or any man living may be drunk at a time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our general's wife is now the general: I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement of her parts and graces: confess yourself freely to her; importune her help to put you in your place again. She is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness not to do more than she is requested. This broken joint between you and her husband entreat her to splinter; and my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before. 331

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and betimes in the morning I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me. I am desperate of my fortunes if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant; I must to the watch. 340

Cas. Good night, honest Iago! Exit.

Iago. And what's he then that says I play the villain?

When this advice is free I give and honest, Probable to thinking and indeed the course To win the Moor again? For 't is most easy The inclining Desdemona to subdue In any honest suit; she's fram'd as fruitful As the free elements. And then for her To win the Moor, were 't to renounce his baptism.

All seals and symbols of redeemed sin, 350 His soul is so enfeet'd to her love,

That she may make, unmake, do what she list,

Even as her appetite shall play the god With his weak function. How am I then a villain

To counsel Cassio to this parallel course, Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!

When devils will their blackest sins put on,

They do suggest at first with heavenly shows, As I do now; for whiles this honest fool Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes, 360 And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor, I'll pour this pestilence into his ear, That she repeals him for her body's lust; And, by how much she strives to do him good,

She shall undo her credit with the Moor. So will I turn her virtue into pitch, And out of her own goodness make the net That shall enmesh them all.

Re-enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgelled; and I think the issue will be, I shall have so much experience for my pains; and so, with no money at all and a little more wit, return again to Venice. 375

Iago. How poor are they that have not patience!

What wound did ever heal but by degrees? Thou know'st we work by wit and not by witchcraft,

And wilt depend on dilatory time. Does 't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee, 380

And thou, by that small hurt, hast cashier'd Cassio.

Though other things grow fair against the sun,

Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe: Content thyself awhile. By the mass, 't is morning;

Pleasure and action make the hours seem short.

Retire thee; go where thou art billeted: Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter:

Nay, get thee gone. Exit RODERIGO.

Two things are to be done;

My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress;
 I'll set her on; 390
 Myself the while to draw the Moor apart,
 And bring him jump when he may Cassio find Soliciting his wife: ay, that's the way:
 Dull not device by coldness and delay. Exit.

ACT III

SCENE I.—Cyprus. Before the Castle.

Enter CASSIO and some Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here; I will content your pains;
 Something that's brief; and bid 'Good morrow, general.' Music.

Enter Clown.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been in Naples, that they speak i' the nose thus?

First Mus. How, sir, how?

Clo. Are these, I pray you, wind-instruments?

First Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.

Clo. O! thereby hangs a tail.

First Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir? 9

Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind-instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you; and the general so likes your music, that he desires you, for love's sake, to make no more noise with it.

First Mus. Well, sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to 't again; but, as they say, to hear music the general does not greatly care.

First Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away. Go; vanish into air; away! 21

Exeunt Musicians.

Cas. Dost thou hear, mine honest friend?

Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend; I hear you.

Cas. Prithce, keep up thy quillets. There's a poor piece of gold for thee. If the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir hither, I shall seem to notify unto her. 31

Cas. Do, good my friend. Exit Clown.

Enter IAGO.

In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed, then?

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke before we parted. I have made bold, Iago, to send in to your wife; my suit to her is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently; And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor out of the way, that your converse and business 40

May be more free.

Cas. I humbly thank you for 't.

Exit IAGO.

I never knew
 A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. Good morrow, good lieutenant: I am sorry
 For your displeasure; but all will sure be well.

The general and his wife are talking of it,
 And she speaks for you stoutly: the Moor replies

That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus
 And great affinity, and that in wholesome wisdom

He might not but refuse you; but he protests he loves you, 50

And needs no other suitor but his likings
 To take the safest occasion by the front
 To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you,
 If you think fit, or that it may be done,
 Give me advantage of some brief discourse
 With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you, come in:
 I will bestow you where you shall have time
 To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you.
Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot,
 And by him do my duties to the senate;
 That done, I will be walking on the works;
 Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do 't.
Oth. This fortification, gentlemen, shall we see 't?

Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship.
Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Garden of the Castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and EMILIA.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do
 All my abilities in thy behalf.

Emil. Good madam, do: I warrant it grieves my husband,
 As if the cause were his.

Des. O! that's an honest fellow. Do not doubt, Cassio,
 But I will have my lord and you again
 As friendly as you were.

Cas. Bounteous madam,
 Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio,
 He's never any thing but your true servant.

Des. I know 't; I thank you. You do love my lord; 10
 You have known him long; and be you well assur'd

He shall in strangeness stand no further off
 Than in a politic distance.

Cas. Ay, but, lady,
 That policy may either last so long,
 Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet,
 Or breed itself so out of circumstance,

That, I being absent and my place supplied,
My general will forget my love and service.
Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia
here
I give thee warrant of thy place. Assure
thee, 20
If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it
To the last article; my lord shall never rest; I'll watch him tame, and talk him out of
patience;
His bed shall seem a school, his board a
shift;
I'll intermingle every thing he does
With Cassio's suit. Therefore be merry,
Cassio;
For thy solicitor shall rather die
Than give thy cause away.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO, at a distance.

Emil. Madam, here comes my lord.
Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave. 30
Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak.
Cas. Madam, not now; I am very ill at ease.

Unfit for mine own purposes.

Des. Well, do your discretion.

Exit CASSIO.

Iago. Ha! I like not that.

Oth. What dost thou say?

Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if—I know
not what.

Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?

Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think it

That he would steal away so guilty-like,
Seeing you coming.

Oth. I do believe 't was he.

Des. How now, my lord!

I have been talking with a suitor here,
A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is 't you mean?

Des. Why, your lieutenant, Cassio. Good
my lord,

If I have any grace or power to move you,
His present reconciliation take;

For if he be not one that truly loves you,
That errs in ignorance and not in cunning,

I have no judgment in an honest face. 50
I prithee call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled

That he hath left part of his grief with me,
To suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.

Des. But shall 't be shortly?

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.

Des. Shall 't be to-night at supper?

Oth. No, not to-night.

Des. To-morrow dinner then?

Oth. I shall not dine at home
I meet the captains at the citadel.

Des. Why, then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday morn; 60

On Tuesday noon, or night; on Wednesday
morn:

I prithee name the time, but let it not Exceed three days: in faith, he 's penitent;

And yet his trespass, in our common reason,
Save that they say the wars must make examples

Out of the best, is not almost a fault
To incur a private check. When shall he
come?

Tell me, Othello. I wonder in my soul,
What you could ask me that I should deny,
Or stand so mammering on. What! Michael
Cassio, 70

That came a-wooing with you, and so many a time,

When I have spoke of you disparagingly,
Hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do
To bring him in! Trust me, I could do much—

Oth. Prithee, no more; let him come when he will;

I will deny thee nothing.

Des. Why, this is not a boon;
'T is as I should entreat you wear your gloves,

Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm,

Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit

To your own person; nay, when I have a suit 80

Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,
It shall be full of poise and difficult weight,
And fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing:
Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,
To leave me but a little to myself.

Des. Shall I deny you? no: farewell, my
lord.

Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I'll come to thee straight.

Des. Emilia, come. Be as your fancies teach you;

What'er you be, I am obedient.

Exit, with EMILIA.

Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul 90

But I do love thee! and when I love thee
not,

Chaos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?

Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you
woo'd my lady,

Know of your love?

Oth. He did, from first to last: why dost thou ask?

Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought;
No further harm.

Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?

Iago. I did not think he had been acquainted with her.

Oth. O! yes; and went between us very
oft. 100

Iago. Indeed!

Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed; discern'st thou aught in that?

Is he not honest?

Iago. Honest, my lord!

Oth. Honest! ay, honest.

Iago. My lord, for aught I know.

Oth. What dost thou think?

Iago. Think, my lord!

Oth. Think, my lord!
By heaven, he echoes me,
As if there were some monster in his thought
Too hideous to be shown. Thou dost mean something:

I heard thee say even now, thou lik'st not that,

When Cassio left my wife; what didst not like? 110

And when I told thee he was of my counsel
In my whole course of wooing, thou cried'st
'Indeed!'

And didst contract and purse thy brow together,

As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain
Some horrible conceit. If thou dost love me,
Show me thy thought.

Iago. My lord, you know I love you.

Oth. I think thou dost;
And, for I know thou art full of love and honesty,
And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them breath,

Therefore these stops of thine fright me the more; 120

For such things in a false disloyal knave
Are tricks of custom, but in a man that's just

They're close delations, working from the heart

That passion cannot rule.

Iago. For Michael Cassio,
I dare be sworn I think that he is honest.

Oth. I think so too.

Iago. Men should be what they seem;
Or those that be not, would they might seem none!

Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.

Iago. Why then, I think Cassio's an honest man.

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this. 130
I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thinkings,
As thou dost ruminate, and give thy worst of thoughts

The worst of words.

Iago. Good my lord, pardon me;
Though I am bound to every act of duty,
I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.
Utter my thoughts? Why, say they are vile and false;

As where 's that palace whereinto foul things
Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure

But some uncleanly apprehensions

Keep leets and law-days, and in session sit 140

With meditations lawful?

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago,

If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his ear

A stranger to thy thoughts.

Iago. I do beseech you,
Though I perchance am vicious in my guess,

As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy

Shapes faults that are not, that your wisdom yet,

From one that so imperfectly conceits,
Would take no notice, nor build yourself a trouble 150

Out of his scattering and unsure observance.
It were not for your quiet nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou mean?

Iago. Good name in man and woman,
dear my lord,

Is the immediate jewel of their souls:

Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;

'T is mine, 't is his, and has been slave to thousands:

But he that filches from me my good name
Robs me of that which not enriches him, 160
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thoughts.

Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;

Nor shall not, whilst 't is in my custody.

Oth. Ha!

Iago. O! beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green-eyed monster which doth mock
The meat it feeds on; that cuckold lives in bliss

Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;

But, O! what damned minutes tells he o'er
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet soundly loves. 170

Oth. O misery!

Iago. Poor and content is rich and rich enough.

But riches fineless is as poor as winter
To him that ever fears he shall be poor.

Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend

From jealousy!

Oth. Why, why is this?

Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon

With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in doubt

Is once to be resolv'd. Exchange me for a goat 180

When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsufflicate and blown surmises,

Matching thy inference. 'T is not to make me jealous

To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,

Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well;

Where virtue is, these are more virtuous:
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw

The smallest fear or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me. No, Iago,

I'll see before I doubt; when I doubt, prove; 190

And on the proof there is no more but this,
Away at once with love or jealousy!

Iago. I am glad of it; for now I shall have reason

To show the love and duty that I bear you

With franker spirit; therefore, as I am bound,
Receive it from me. I speak not yet of proof.

Look to your wife; observe her well with Cassio;

Wear your eye thus, not jealous nor secure: I would not have your free and noble nature Out of self-bounty be abus'd; look to 't. 200
I know our country disposition well; In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience Is not to leave 't undone, but keep 't unknown.

Oth. Dost thou say so?

Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you;
And when she seem'd to shake and fear your looks
She lov'd them most.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why, go to, then; She that so young could give out such a seeming,
To seal her father's eyes up close as oak, 210
He thought 't was witchcraft; but I am much to blame;

I humbly do beseech you of your pardon For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.

Iago. I see this hath a little dash'd your spirits.

Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.

Iago. I' faith, I fear it has.
I hope you will consider what is spoke Comes from my love. But I do see you're mov'd;

I am to pray you not to strain my speech To grosser issues nor to larger reach
Than to suspicion. 220

Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech should fall into such vile success

As my thoughts aim not at. Cassio's my worthy friend—
My lord, I see you're mov'd.

Oth. No, not much mov'd: I do not think but Desdemona's honest.

Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so!

Oth. And yet, how nature erring from itself,—

Iago. Ay, there's the point: as, to be bold with you,

Not to affect many proposed matches 229
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree,
Whereto we see in all things nature tends;
Foh! one may smell, in such, a will most rank,

Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.

But pardon me; I do not in position

Distinctly speak of her, though I may fear

Her will, recoiling to her better judgment,
May fall to match you with her country forms

And happily repent.

Oth.

Farewell, farewell:

If more thou dost perceive, let me know more;

Set on thy wife to observe. Leave me, Iago.
Iago. My lord, I take my leave. Going.

Oth. Why did I marry? This honest creature, doubtless, 242
Sees and knows more, much more, than he unfolds.

Iago. Returning. My lord, I would I might entreat your honour
To scan this thing no further: leave it to time.

Although 't is fit that Cassio have his place,
For sure he fills it up with great ability,
Yet, if you please to hold him off awhile,
You shall by that perceive him and his means:

Note if your lady strain his entertainment 250
With any strong or vehement importunity;
Much will be seen in that. In the mean time,

Let me be thought too busy in my fears,
As worthy cause I have to fear I am,
And hold her free, I do beseech your honor.

Oth. Fear not my government.

Iago. I once more take my leave. Exit.

Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit,

Of human dealings; if I do prove her haggard, 260
Though that her jesses were my dear heart-strings,

I'd whistle her off and let her down the wind,

To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black
And have not those soft parts of conversation

That chamberers have, or for I am declin'd
Into the vale of years, yet that's not much,

She's gone. I am abus'd; and my relief
Must be to loathe her. O curse of marriage!
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,

And not their appetites. I had rather be a toad, 270

And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love

For others' uses. Yet, 't is the plague of great ones;

Prerogativ'd are they less than the base;
'T is destiny unshunnable, like death:

Even then this forked plague is fated to us
When we do quicken. Look! Desdemona comes.

If she be false, O! then heaven mocks itself.
I'll not believe 't.

Re-enter DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

Des. How now, my dear Othello!
Your dinner and the generous islanders 280
By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am to blame.

Des. Why do you speak so faintly?
Are you not well?

Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.

Des. Faith, that's with watching; 't will away again:

Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.

Oth. Your napkin is too little;
She drops her handkerchief.
Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

Exeunt OTHELLO and DESDEMONA.

Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin;
This was her first remembrance from the Moor;

My wayward husband hath a hundred times Woo'd me to steal it, but she so loves the token,

For he conjur'd her she should ever keep it,
That she reserves it evermore about her.
To kiss and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en
out

And give 't Iago:
What he will do with it heaven knows, not I;
I nothing but to please his fantasy.

Re-enter IAGO.

Iago. How now! what do you here alone?

Emil. Do not you chide; I have a thing for you.

Iago. A thing for me? it is a common thing—

Emil. Ha!

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

Emil. O! is that all? What will you give me now

For that same handkerchief?

Iago. What handkerchief?

Emil. What handkerchief!

Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona;
That which so often you did bid me steal.

Iago. Hast stol'n it from her?

Emil. No faith; she let it drop by negligence,

And, to the advantage, I, being here, took 't
up.

Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench; give it me.

Emil. What will you do with 't, that you have been so earnest

To have me filch it?

Iago. Why, what's that to you?

Snatches it.

Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import

Give 't me again; poor lady! she'll run mad
When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not known on 't; I have use for it.

Go, leave me. Exit EMILIA.

I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it; trifles light as air

Are to the jealous confirmations strong As proofs of holy writ; this may do something.

The Moor already changes with my poison:
Dangerous conceits are in their natures poisons,

Which at the first are scarce found to dis-
taste,

But with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the mines of sulphur. I did say so:

Look! where he comes.

Re-enter OTHELLO.

Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world, 331
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'dst yesterday.

Oth. Ha! ha! false to me?
Iago. Why, how now, general! no more of that.

Oth. Avault! be gone! thou hast set me
on the rack;

I swear 't is better to be much abus'd
Than but to know 't a little.

Iago. How now, my lord!
Oth. What sense had I of her stol'n hours of lust?

I saw 't not, thought it not, it harm'd not me;
I slept the next night well, was free and merry; 340

I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips;
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stol'n,
Let him not know 't and he's not robb'd at
all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this.

Oth. I had been happy, if the general
camp,

Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known. O! now, for ever Farewell the tranquil mind; farewell content!

Farewell the plumed troop and the big wars
That make ambition virtue! O, farewell! 350

Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trump,

The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,

The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious
war!

And, O you mortal engines, whose rude
throats

The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,

Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!

Iago. Is 't possible, my lord?

Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a
whore,

Be sure of it; give me the ocular proof; 360
Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul,

Thou hadst been better have been born a dog

Than answer my wak'd wrath.

Iago. Is 't come to this?

Oth. Make me to see 't; or, at the least,
so prove it,

That the probation bear no hinge nor loop
To hang a doubt on; or woe upon thy life!

Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. If thou dost slander her and torture
me,

Never pray more; abandon all remorse;
On horror's head horrors accumulate; 370

Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth
amaz'd;

For nothing canst thou to damnation add Greater than that.

Iago. O grace! O heaven forgive me!
Are you a man? have you a soul or sense?

God be wi' you; take mine office. O wretched fool!

That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice.
 O monstrous world! Take note, take note,
 O world!
 To be direct and honest is not safe.
 I thank you for this profit, and from hence I'll love no friend, sith love breeds such offence. 380
Oth. Nay, stay; thou should'st be honest.
Iago. I should be wise; for honesty's a fool,
 And loses that it works for.
Oth. By the world,
 I think my wife be honest and think she is
 not;
 I think that thou art just and think thou art
 not.
 I'll have some proof. Her name, that was as fresh
 As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black As mine own face. If there be cords or knives,
 Poison or fire or suffocating streams,
 I'll not endure it. Would I were satisfied!
Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion. 391
 I do repent me that I put it to you.
 You would be satisfied?
Oth. Would! nay, I will.
Iago. And may; but how? how satisfied,
 my lord?
 Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on;
 Behold her tupp'd?
Oth. Death and damnation! O!
Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
 To bring them to that prospect; damn them
 then
 If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster More than their own! What then? how
 then? 400
 What shall I say? Where's satisfaction?
 It is impossible you should see this,
 Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys,
 As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross
 As ignorance made drunk; but yet, I say,
 If imputation and strong circumstances,
 Which lead directly to the door of truth,
 Will give you satisfaction, you might have 't.
Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.
Iago. I do not like the office; 410
 But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far,
 Prick'd to 't by foolish honesty and love,
 I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately;
 And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
 I could not sleep.
 There are a kind of men so loose of soul
 That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs;
 One of this kind is Cassio.
 In sleep I heard him say "Sweet Desdemona,
 Let us be wary, let us hide our loves!" 420
 And then, sir, would he gripe and wring my
 hand,
 Cry "O sweet creature!" and then kiss me
 hard,
 As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots,
 That grew upon my lips; then laid his leg Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd; and
 then

Cried "Cursed fate that gave thee to the Moor!"
Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!
Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.
Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion;
 'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.
Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs 430
 That do demonstrate thinly.
Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces.
Iago. Nay, but be wise; yet we see nothing done;
 She may be honest yet. Tell me but this:
 Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief Spotted with strawberries in your wife's
 hand?
Oth. I gave her such a one; 't was my first gift.
Iago. I know not that; but such a handkerchief,
 I am sure it was your wife's, did I to-day
 See Cassio wipe his beard with.
Oth. If it be that,—
Iago. If it be that, or any that was hers, 440
 It speaks against her with the other proofs.
Oth. O! that the slave had forty thousand
 lives;
 One is too poor, too weak for my revenge.
 Now do I see 't is true. Look here, Iago;
 All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven:
 'T is gone.
 Arise, black vengeance, from the hollow
 hell!
 Yield up, O love! thy crown and hearted throne
 To tyrannous hate. Swell, bosom, with thy fraught,
 For 't is of aspics' tongues!
Iago. Yet be content.
Oth. O! blood, blood, blood! 451
Iago. Patience, I say; your mind perhaps may change.
Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontic sea,
 Whose icy current and compulsive course
 Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on
 To the Propontic and the Hellespont, Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,
 Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble
 love,
 Till that a capable and wide revenge
 Swallow them up. Kneels.
 Now, by yond marble heaven,
 In the due reverence of a sacred vow 461
 I here engage my words.
Iago. Do not rise yet. Kneels.
 Witness, you ever-burning lights above!
 You elements that clip us round about!
 Witness that here Iago doth give up
 The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
 To wrong'd Othello's service! Let him command,
 And to obey shall be in me remorse,
 What bloody business ever.
Oth. I greet thy love,
 Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance
 bounteous, 470

And will upon the instant put thee to 't:
 Within these three days let me hear thee

say
 That Cassio's not alive.

Iago. My friend is dead; 'tis done at your request:

But let her live.

Oth. Damn her, lewd minx! O! damn
 her.

Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw To furnish me with some swift means of
 death.

For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.

Iago. I am your own for ever. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Before the Castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lies?

Clo. I dare not say he lies any where.

Des. Why, man?

Clo. He's a soldier; and for one to say a soldier lies, is stabbing.

Des. Go to; where lodges he?

Clo. To tell you where he lodges is to tell you where I lie.

Des. Can any thing be made of this? 10

Clo. I know not where he lodges, and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat.

Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report?

Clo. I will catechize the world for him;
 that is, make questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither; tell him I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope all will be well. 20

Clo. To do this is within the compass of man's wit, and therefore I will attempt the doing it. Exit.

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia?

Emil. I know not, madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse

Full of cruzadoes; and, but my noble Moor
 Is true of mind and made of no such base-
 ness

As jealous creatures are, it were enough
 To put him to ill thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous?

Des. Who? he! I think the sun where he was born 30

Drew all such humours from him.

Emil. Look! where he comes.

Des. I will not leave him now till Cassio
 Be call'd to him.

Enter OTHELLO.

How is 't with you, my lord?

Oth. Well, my good lady. Aside. O! hardness to dissemble.

How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand. This hand is moist, my lady.

Des. It yet has felt no age nor known no
 sorrow.

Oth. This argues fruitfulness and liberal
 heart;

Hot, hot, and moist; this hand of yours requires

A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer,
 Much castigation, exercise devout; 41

For here's a young and sweating devil
 here,

That commonly rebels. 'T is a good hand,
 A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so;
 For 't was that hand that gave away my
 heart.

Oth. A liberal hand; the hearts of old gave hands,

But our new heraldry is hands not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.

Oth. What promise, chuck?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak
 with you. 50

Oth. I have a salt and sorry rheum offends
 me.

Lend me thy handkerchief.

Des. Here, my lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not?

Des. No, indeed, my lord.

Oth. That is a fault.

That handkerchief

Did an Egyptian to my mother give;

She was a charmer, and could almost read
 The thoughts of people; she told her, while she kept it,

'T would make her amiable and subdue my
 father

Entirely to her love, but if she lost it

Or made a gift of it, my father's eye

Should hold her loathed, and his spirits should hunt

After new fancies. She dying gave it me;
 And bid me, when my fate would have me

wive,

To give it her. I did so: and take heed on 't;
 Make it a darling like your precious eye;

To lose 't or give 't away were such perdi-
 tion

As nothing else could match.

Des. Is 't possible?

Oth. 'T is true; there's magic in the web
 of it;

A sibyl, that had number'd in the world 70
 The sun to course two hundred compasses,

In her prophetic fury sew'd the work;
 The worms were hallow'd that did breed the silk,

And it was dy'd in mummy which the skilful
 Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed! is 't true?

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to 't
 well.

Des. Then would to God that I had never seen 't!

Oth. Ha! wherefore?

Des. Why do you speak so startlingly and rash?

Oth. Is 't lost? is 't gone? speak, is it out o' the way? 80
Des. Heaven bless us!
Oth. Say you?
Des. It is not lost; but what an if it were?
Oth. How!
Des. I say it is not lost.
Oth. Fetch 't, let me see 't.
Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not
now.
This is a trick to put me from my suit:
Pray you let Cassio be receiv'd again.
Oth. Fetch me the handkerchief; my mind misgives.
Des. Come, come; 90
You 'll never meet a more sufficient man.
Oth. The handkerchief!
Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.
Oth. The handkerchief!
Des. A man that all his time Hath founded his good fortunes on your
love.
Shar'd dangers with you,—
Oth. The handkerchief!
Des. In sooth, you are to blame.
Oth. Away! Exit.
Emil. Is not this man jealous?
Des. I ne'er saw this before. 100
Sure, there 's some wonder in this handkerchief;
I am most unhappy in the loss of it.
Emil. 'T is not a year or two shows us a
man:
They are all but stomachs, and we all but
food:
They eat us hungerly, and when they are full They belch us. Look you! Cassio and my husband.
Enter IAGO and CASSIO.
Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do 't:
And, lo! the happiness: go and importune
her.
Des. How now, good Cassio! what 's the news with you?
Cas. Madam, my former suit: I do beseech you 110
That by your virtuous means I may again
Exist, and be a member of his love
Whom I with all the office of my heart
Entirely honour; I would not be delay'd.
If my offence be of such mortal kind
That nor my service past, nor present sorrows,
Nor purpos'd merit in futurity,
Can ransom me into his love again,
But to know so must be my benefit;
So shall I clothe me in a forc'd content, 120
And shut myself up in some other course
To fortune's alms.
Des. Alas! thrice-gentle Cassio,
My advocacy is not now in tune;
My lord is not my lord; nor should I know
him,
Were he in favour as in humour alter'd.
So help me every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my best
And stood within the blank of his dis-
pleasure
For my free speech. You must awhile be patient;
What I can do I will, and more I will 130
Than for myself I dare; let that suffice you.
Iago. Is my lord angry?
Emil. He went hence but now,
And certainly in strange unequity.
Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon,
When it hath blown his ranks into the air,
And, like the devil, from his very arm Puff'd his own brother; and can he be angry?
Something of moment then; I will go meet
him;
There 's matter in 't indeed, if he be angry.
Des. I prithee, do so. Exit IAGO.
Something, sure, of state,
Either from Venice, or some unhatch'd practice 141
Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to
him,
Hath puddled his clear spirit; and in such cases
Men's natures wrangle with inferior things, Though great ones are their object. 'T is even so;
For let our finger ache, and it indues
Our other healthful members ev'n to that sense
Of pain. Nay, we must think men are not gods,
Nor of them look for such observancy
As fits the bridal. Beshrew me much,
Emilia,
I was, unhandsome warrior as I am, 151
Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;
But now I find I had suborn'd the witness,
And he 's indicted falsely.
Emil. Pray heaven it be state-matters, as you think,
And no conception nor no jealous toy
Concerning you.
Des. Alas the day! I never gave him
cause.
Emil. But jealous souls will not be an-swer'd so;
They are not ever jealous for the cause, 160
But jealous for they are jealous; 'tis a monster
Begot upon itself, born on itself.
Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind!
Emil. Lady, amen.
Des. I will go seek him. Cassio, walk hereabout;
If I do find him fit, I 'll move your suit
And seek to effect it to my uttermost.
Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.
Exeunt DESDEMONA and EMILIA.
Enter BIANCA.
Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!
Cas. What make you from home?
How is it with you, my most fair Bianca? 170
I' faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your lodging, Cassio.
What! keep a week away? seven days and nights?
Eight score eight hours? and lovers' absent hours,
More tedious than the dial eight score times?
O weary reckoning!

Cas. Pardon me, Bianca;
I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd,
But I shall, in a more continue time,
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca,

Giving her DESDEMONA'S handkerchief.
Take me this work out.

Bian. O Cassio! whence came this?
This is some token from a newer friend; 181
To the felt absence now I feel a cause;
Is it come to this? Well, well.

Cas. Go to, woman!
Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth,
From whence you have them. You are jealous now
That this is from some mistress, some remembrance:

No, in good troth, Bianca.
Bian. Why, whose is it?
Cas. I know not, sweet; I found it in my chamber.

I like the work well; ere it be demanded,
As like enough it will, I 'd have it copied; 190
Take it and do 't, and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you! wherefore?
Cas. I do attend here on the general,
And think it no addition nor my wish
To have him see me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you?
Cas. Not that I love you not.
Bian. But that you do not love me.
I pray you, bring me on the way a little,
And say if I shall see you soon at night.

Cas. 'T is but a little way that I can bring you,

For I attend here; but I 'll see you soon. 200
Bian. 'T is very good; I must be circumstanc'd. Exeunt.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Cyprus. Before the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. Think so, Iago!

Iago. What!
To kiss in private?

Oth. An unauthoriz'd kiss.

Iago. Or to be naked with her friend a-bed,

An hour or more, not meaning any harm?

Oth. Naked a-bed, Iago, and not mean harm?

It is hypocrisy against the devil:

They that mean virtuously, and yet do so,
The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven.

Iago. If they do nothing, 't is a venial slip;
But if I give my wife a handkerchief,— 10

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why, then, 't is hers, my lord; and, being hers,

She may, I think, bestow 't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too;
May she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that 's not seen;

They have it very oft that have it not:

But for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it. 19

Thou said'st,—O! it comes o'er my memory,
As doth the raven o'er the infected house,
Boding to all,—he had my handkerchief.

Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That 's not so good now.

Iago. What
If I had said I had seen him do you wrong?
Or heard him say, as knaves be such abroad,
Who having, by their own importunate suit,
Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,
Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose
But they must blab.

Oth. Hath he said any thing?

Iago. He hath, my lord; but be you well assur'd, 30

No more than he 'll unswear.

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago. Faith, that he did—I know not what he did.

Oth. What? what?

Iago. Lie—

Oth. With her?

Iago. With her, on her; what you will.

Oth. Lie with her! lie on her! We say lie on her when they belie her. Lie with her! that 's fulsome. Handkerchief,—confessions,—handkerchief. To confess, and be hanged for his labour. First, to be hanged, and then to confess: I tremble at
it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion without some instruction. It is not words that shakes me thus.
Pish! Noses, ears, and lips. Is 't possible?
Confess!—Handkerchief!—O devil! 45

Falls in a trance.

Iago. Work on,

My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught;

And many worthy and chaste dames even
thus,

All guiltless, meet reproach. What, ho!
my lord!

My lord, I say! Othello!

Enter CASSIO.

How now, Cassio!

Cas. What 's the matter? 50

Iago. My lord is fall'n into an epilepsy;
This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear;

The lethargy must have his quiet course,
If not he foams at mouth, and by and by Breaks out to savage madness. Look! he stirs;

Do you withdraw yourself a little while,

He will recover straight; when he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you.

Exit CASSIO.

How is it, general? have you hurt your
head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven.
Would you would bear your fortune like a
man!

Oth. A horned man's a monster and a beast.

Iago. There's many a beast then in a populous city,

And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good sir, be a man;
Think every bearded fellow that's but yok'd

May draw with you; there's millions now alive

That nightly lie in those unproper beds
Which they dare swear peculiar; your case is better.

O! 't is the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock,

To lip a wanton in a secure couch,
And to suppose her chaste. No, let me
know;

And knowing what I am I know what she shall be.

Oth. O! thou art wise; 't is certain.

Iago. Stand you awhile apart;
Confine yourself but in a patient list.

Whilst you were here overwhelmed with your grief,

A passion most unsuited such a man,
Cassio came hither; I shifted him away,
And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy; 80

Bade him anon return and here speak with
me;

The which he promis'd. Do but encave
yourself,

And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable
scorns,

That dwell in every region of his face;
For I will make him tell the tale anew.

Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when

He hath, and is again to cope your wife:
I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience;

Or I shall say you are all in all in spleen, 89
And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago?
I will be found most cunning in my patience;

But, dost thou hear? most bloody.

Iago. That's not amiss;
But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?

OTHELLO goes apart.
Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,

A housewife that by selling her desires Buys herself bread and clothes; it is a creature

That dotes on Cassio; as 't is the strumpets' plague

To beguile many and be beguil'd by one.
He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain

From the excess of laughter. Here he comes;

Re-enter CASSIO.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad; 101
And his unbookish jealousy must construe Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behaviour

Quite in the wrong. How do you now, lieutenant?

Cas. The worser that you give me the addition

Whose want even kills me.

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on 't.

Speaking lower. Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's power,

How quickly should you speed!

Cas. Alas! poor caitiff.

Oth. Look! how he laughs already. 110

Iago. I never knew woman love man so.

Cas. Alas! poor rogue, I think, i' faith,
she loves me.

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs
it out.

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. Now he importunes him
To tell it o'er. Go to; well said, well said.

Iago. She gives it out that you shall marry
her;

Do you intend it?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha! 120

Oth. Do you triumph, Roman? do you triumph?

Cas. I marry her! what! a customer? I prithee, bear some charity to my wit; do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. So, so, so, so. They laugh that win.

Iago. Faith, the cry goes that you shall marry her.

Cas. Prithee, say true.

Iago. I am a very villain else.

Oth. Have you scored me? Well. 130

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out;
she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me; now he begins the story.

Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was the other day talking on the sea bank with certain Venetians, and thither comes the bauble, and, by this hand, she falls me thus about my neck;— 140

Oth. Crying 'O dear Cassio!' as it were;
his gesture imports it.

Cas. So hangs and lolls and weeps upon me; so hales and pulls me; ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Now he tells how she plucked him to my chamber. O! I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw it to.

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

Iago. Before me! look, where she comes.

Cas. 'T is such another fitchew! marry, a perfumed one. 150

Enter BIANCA.

What do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you! What did you mean by that same handkerchief you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the work! A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and know not who left it there! This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work! There, give it your hobby-horse; wheresoever you had it I'll take out no work on 't. 161

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca! how now, how now!

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief!

Bian. An you 'll come to supper to-night, you may; an you will not, come when you are next prepared for. Exit.

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. Faith, I must; she'll rail in the street else. 171

Iago. Will you sup there?

Cas. Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you, for I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Prithee, come; will you?

Iago. Go to; say no more. Exit CASSIO.

Oth. Advancing. How shall I murder him, Iago?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his vice? 181

Oth. O! Iago.

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?

Oth. Was that mine?

Iago. Yours, by this hand; and to see how he prizes the foolish woman, your wife! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years a-killing. A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!

Iago. Nay, you must forget that. 190

Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night; for she shall not live. No, my heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O! the world hath not a sweeter creature; she might lie by an emperor's side and command him tasks. 196

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is. So delicate with her needle! An admirable musician! O! she will sing the savageness out of a bear. Of so high and plenteous wit and invention! 201

Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O! a thousand, a thousand times. And then, of so gentle a condition!

Iago. Ay, too gentle.

Oth. Nay, that's certain; but yet the pity of it, Iago! O! Iago, the pity of it, Iago.

Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody. 210

Oth. I will chop her into messes. Cuck-old me!

Iago. O! 't is foul in her.

Oth. With mine officer!

Iago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago; this night: I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again. This night, Iago. 219

Iago. Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good; the justice of it pleases; very good.

Iago. And for Cassio, let me be his undertaker; you shall hear more by midnight.

A trumpet within.

Oth. Excellent good. What trumpet is that same?

Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'T is Lodovico, Come from the duke; and, see, your wife is with him.

Enter LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.

Lod. God save the worthy general!

Oth. With all my heart, sir.

Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you. Gives him a packet. 230

Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures. Opens the packet, and reads.

Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico?

Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior; Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you. How does Lieutenant Cassio?

Iago. Lives, sir.

Des. Cousin, there's fall'n between him and my lord

An unkind breach; but you shall make all well.

Oth. Are you sure of that?

Des. My lord? 239

Oth. This fail you not to do, as you will—

Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper.

Is there division 'twixt my lord and Cassio?

Des. A most unhappy one; I would do much

To atone them, for the love I bear to Cassio.

Oth. Fire and brimstone!

Des. My lord?

Oth. Are you wise?

Des. What! is he angry?

Lod. May be the letter mov'd him; For, as I think, they do command him home, Deputing Cassio in his government.

Des. Trust me, I am glad on 't.

Oth. Indeed!

Des. My lord?

Oth. I am glad to see you mad.

Des. Why, sweet Othello!

Oth. Devil! Strikes her.

Des. I have not deserv'd this. 252

Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,

Though I should swear I saw 't; 't is very much;

Make her amends, she weeps.

Oth. O devil, devil!

If that the earth could teem with woman's tears,

Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile. Out of my sight!

Des. I will not stay to offend you. Going.

Lod. Truly, an obedient lady; 259

I do beseech your lordship, call her back.

Oth. Mistress!

Des. My lord?
Oth. What would you with her, sir?
Lod. Who, I, my lord?
Oth. Ay; you did wish that I would make her turn:
 Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on,
 And turn again; and she can weep, sir,
 weep;
 And she's obedient, as you say, obedient,
 Very obedient. Proceed you in your tears.
 Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted passion!
 I am commanded home. Get you away;
 I'll send for you anon. Sir, I obey the mandate, 270
 And will return to Venice. Hence! avaunt!
Exit DESDEMONA.
 Cassio shall have my place. And, sir, to-
 night,
 I do entreat that we may sup together;
 You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus. Goats and monkeys! Exit.
Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate
 Call all-in-all sufficient? Is this the nature Whom passion could not shake? whose solid virtue
 The shot of accident nor dart of chance
 Could neither graze nor pierce?
Iago. He is much chang'd.
Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain? 280
Iago. He's that he is; I may not breathe
 my censure.
 What he might be, if what he might he is
 not,
 I would to heaven he were!
Lod. What! strike his wife!
Iago. Faith, that was not so well; yet would I knew
 That stroke would prove the worst.
Lod. Is it his use?
 Or did the letters work upon his blood,
 And new-create this fault?
Iago. Alas, alas!
 It is not honesty in me to speak
 What I have seen and known. You shall observe him,
 And his own courses will denote him so 290
 That I may save my speech. Do but go after
 And mark how he continues.
Lod. I am sorry that I am deceiv'd in him.
Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO and EMILIA.

Oth. You have seen nothing then?
Emil. Nor ever heard, nor ever did suspect.
Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she
 together.
Emil. But then I saw no harm, and then
 I heard
 Each syllable that breath made up between
 them.
Oth. What! did they never whisper?
Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. Nor send you out o' the way?
Emil. Never.
Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing?
Emil. Never, my lord. 10
Oth. That's strange.
Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,
 Lay down my soul at stake: if you think
 other,
 Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom.
 If any wretch hath put this in your head,
 Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse!
 For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true,
 There's no man happy; the purest of their wives
 Is foul as slander.
Oth. Bid her come hither; go.
Exit EMILIA.
 She says enough; yet she's a simple bawd
 That cannot say as much. This is a subtle
 whore, 21
 A closet lock and key of villanous secrets;
 And yet she'll kneel and pray; I have seen her do 't.
Re-enter EMILIA, with DESDEMONA.
Des. My lord, what is your will?
Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.
Des. What is your pleasure?
Oth. Let me see your eyes;
 Look in my face.
Des. What horrible fancy's this?
Oth. To EMILIA. Some of your function, mistress;
 Leave procreants alone and shut the door;
 Cough or cry 'hem' if any body come;
 Your mystery, your mystery; nay, dispatch. Exit EMILIA. 30
Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?
 I understand a fury in your words,
 But not the words.
Oth. Why, what art thou?
Des. Your wife, my lord; your true
 And loyal wife.
Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;
 Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves
 Should fear to seize thee; therefore be double damn'd;
 Swear thou art honest.
Des. Heaven doth truly know it.
Oth. Heaven truly knows that thou art false as hell.
Des. To whom, my lord? with whom?
 how am I false?
Oth. Ah! Desdemona; away, away,
 away!
Des. Alas! the heavy day. Why do you
 weep?
 Am I the motive of these tears, my lord?
 If haply you my father do suspect
 An instrument of this your calling back,
 Lay not your blame on me; if you have lost
 him,
 Why, I have lost him too.

Oth. Had it pleas'd heaven
To try me with affliction, had they rain'd
All kinds of sores and shames on my bare
head,
Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips, 50
Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes,
I should have found in some place of my soul
A drop of patience; but, alas! to make me
A fixed figure for the time of scorn
To point his slow unmoving finger at;
Yet could I bear that too; well, very well:
But there, where I have garner'd up my
heart,

Where either I must live or bear no life,
The fountain from the which my current runs
Or else dries up; to be discarded thence! 60
Or keep it as a cistern for foul toads
To knot and gender in! Turn thy complexion
there,
Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cher-ubim;

Ay, there, look grim as hell!

Des. I hope my noble lord esteems me
honest.

Oth. O! ay; as summer flies are in the shambles,
That quicken even with blowing. O thou weed!

Who art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet
That the sense aches at thee, would thou hadst ne'er been born.

Des. Alas! what ignorant sin have I committed? 70

Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly book,

Made to write 'whore' upon? What committed!

Committed! O thou public commoner!
I should make very forges of my cheeks,
That would to cinders burn up modesty,
Did I but speak thy deeds. What committed!

Heaven stops the nose at it and the moon
winks,

The bawdy wind that kisses all it meets
Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth,
And will not hear it. What committed! 80
Impudent strumpet!

Des. By heaven, you do me wrong.
Oth. Are not you a strumpet?

Des. No, as I am a Christian.
If to preserve this vessel for my lord
From any other foul unlawful touch
Be not to be a strumpet, I am none.

Oth. What! not a whore?

Des. No, as I shall be sav'd.

Oth. Is't possible?

Des. O! heaven forgive us.

Oth. I cry you mercy then;
I took you for that cunning whore of Venice
That married with Othello. You, mistress, 90

That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keep the gate of hell!

Re-enter EMILIA.

You, you, ay, you!
We have done our course; there's money
for your pains:

I pray you, turn the key and keep our counsel.

Emil. Alas! what does this gentleman conceive? Exit.

How do you, madam? how do you, my good
lady?

Des. Faith, half asleep.

Emil. Good madam, what's the matter with my lord?

Des. With who?

Emil. Why, with my lord, madam. 100

Des. Who is thy lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady.

Des. I have none; do not talk to me,
Emilia;

I cannot weep, nor answer have I none
But what should go by water. Prithee, tonight

Lay on my bed my wedding sheets: remember:

And call thy husband hither.

Emil. Here's a change indeed!
Exit.

Des. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so, very
meet.

How have I been behav'd, that he might stick

The small'st opinion on my least misuse?

Re-enter EMILIA with IAGO.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam?
How is 't with you? 110

Des. I cannot tell. Those that do teach young babes

Do it with gentle means and easy tasks;
He might have chid me so; for, in good faith,

I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What's the matter, lady?

Emil. Alas! Iago, my lord hath so be-whor'd her,

Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon
her,

As true hearts cannot bear.

Des. Am I that name, Iago?

Iago. What name, fair lady?

Des. Such as she says my lord did say
I was.

Emil. He call'd her whore; a beggar in his drink 120

Could not have laid such terms upon his callat.

Iago. Why did he so?

Des. I do not know; I am sure I am none
such.

Iago. Do not weep, do not weep. Alas
the day!

Emil. Hath she forsook so many noble matches,

Her father and her country and her friends,
To be call'd whore? would it not make one
weep?

Des. It is my wretched fortune.

Iago. Beshrew him for 't!

How comes this trick upon him?

Des. Nay, heaven doth know.

Emil. I will be hang'd, if some eternal
villain, 130

Some busy and insinuating rogue,

Some cogg'ing cozening slave, to get some office,

Have not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd else.

Iago. Fie! there is no such man; it is impossible.

Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!

Emil. A halter pardon him, and hell gnaw his bones?

Why should he call her whore? who keeps her company?

What place? what time? what form? what likelihood?

The Moor's abus'd by some most villanous knave,

Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow. 140

O heaven! that such companions thou 'dst unfold,

And put in every honest hand a whip To lash the rascals naked through the world,

Even from the east to the west!

Iago. Speak within door.
Emil. O! fie upon them. Some such squire he was

That turn'd your wit the seamy side without, And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Des. O good Iago! What shall I do to win my lord again?

Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven, 150

I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel: If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love,

Either in discourse of thought or actual deed,

Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense, Delighted them in any other form;

Or that I do not yet, and ever did, And ever will, though he do shake me off

To beggarly divorcement, love him dearly, Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;

And his unkindness may defeat my life, 160 But never taint my love. I cannot say 'whore':

It does abhor me now I speak the word; To do the act that might the addition earn

Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you, be content, 't is but his humour;

The business of the state does him offence, And he does chide with you.

Des. If 't were no other,—

Iago. 'T is but so, I warrant. Trumpets.

Hark! how these instruments summon to supper;

The messengers of Venice stay the meat: 170 Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

Exeunt DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

Enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do not find that thou dealest justly with me.

Iago. What in the contrary? 175

Rod. Every day thou daffest me with some device, Iago; and rather, as it seems to me now, keepest from me all conveniency than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will indeed no longer endure it, nor am I yet persuaded to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered. 182

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Rod. Faith, I have heard too much, for your words and performances are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me to deliver to Desdemona would half have corrupted a votarist; you have told me she hath received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance, but I find none. 193

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 't is not very well: by this hand, I say it is very scurvy, and begin to find myself fobbed in it.

Iago. Very well. 198

Rod. I tell you 't is not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona; if she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and I have said nothing but what I protest intendment of doing. 206

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee, and even from this instant do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo; thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet I protest I have dealt most directly in thy affair. 212

Rod. It hath not appeared.

Iago. I grant indeed it hath not appeared, and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever, I mean purpose, courage, and valour, this night show it; if thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery and devise engines for my life. 222

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O! no, he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio. 233

Rod. How do you mean, removing of him?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me do?

Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit and a right. He sups to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him; he knows not yet of his honourable fortune. If you will watch his going thence, which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one, you may take him at your pleasure; I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste; about it. 250

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.

Oth. O! pardon me; 't will do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir?

O! Desdemona.

Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant, I will be returned forthwith; dismiss your attendant there; look it be done.

Des. I will, my lord. 10

Exeunt OTHELLO, LODOVICO, and Attendants.

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says he will return incontinent; He hath commanded me to go to bed, And bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good Emilia,

Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu: We must not now displease him.

Emil. I would you had never seen him.

Des. So would not I; my love doth so approve him,

That even his stubbornness, his checks and frowns,— 20

Prithee, unpin me,—have grace and favour in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All 'sone. Good faith! how foolish are our minds:

If I do die before thee, prithee, shroud me in one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid call'd Barbara;

She was in love, and he she lov'd prov'd mad

And did forsake her; she had a song of 'willow';

An old thing 't was, but it express'd her fortune,

And she died singing it; that song to-night Will not go from my mind; I have much to do 13

But to go hang my head all at one side, And sing it like poor Barbara. Prithee, dispatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?

Des. No, unpin me here.

This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. He speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice would have walked barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip. 40

Des. The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,

Sing all a green willow;

Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,

Sing willow, willow, willow:

The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones:—

Lay by these.—

Sing willow, willow, willow.

Prithee, hie thee; he'll come anon.— 50

Sing all a green willow must be my garland.

Let nobody blame him, his scorn I approve,—

Nay, that 's not next. Hark! who is 't that knocks?

Emil. It is the wind.

Des. I call'd my love false love; but what said he then?

Sing willow, willow, willow:

If I court moe women, you'll couch with moe men.

So, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes do itch;

Doth that bode weeping?

Emil. 'T is neither here nor there.

Des. I have heard it said so. O! these men, these men. 60

Dost thou in conscience think, tell me, Emilia,

That there be women do abuse their husbands

In such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Would'st thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heavenly light!

Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light; I might do 't as well i' the dark.

Des. Would'st thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. The world's a huge thing; it is a great price 69

For a small vice.

Des. In troth, I think thou would'st not.

Emil. In troth, I think I should, and undo 't when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor for measures of lawn, nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition; but for the whole world; why, who would not make her husband a cuckold to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for't.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong.
79

For the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' the world; and having the world for your labour 't is a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.

Emil. Yes, a dozen; and as many to the vantage as would store the world they played for.

But I do think it is their husbands' faults If wives do fall. Say that they slack their duties,

And pour our treasures into foreign laps, Or else break out in peevish jealousies 90 Throwing restraint upon us; or say they strike us,

Or scant our former having in despite; Why, we have galls, and though we have some grace,

Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands know

Their wives have sense like them; they see and smell,

And have their palates both for sweet and sour,

As husbands have. What is it that they do When they change us for others? Is it sport?

I think it is; and doth affection breed it? I think it doth; is 't frailty that thus errs? 100 It is so too; and have not we affections, Desires for sport, and frailty, as men have? Then let them use us well; else let them know,

The ills we do, their ills instruct us so.

Des. Good night, good night; heaven me such uses send,

Not to pick bad from bad, but by bad mend!
Exeunt.

ACT V

SCENE I—Cyprus. A Street.

Enter IAGO and RODERIGO.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:

Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home. Quick, quick; fear nothing; I'll be at thy elbow.

It makes us, or it mars us; think on that, And fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in't.

Iago. Here, at thy hand: be bold, and take thy stand. Retires.

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed;

And yet he has given me satisfying reasons; 'T is but a man gone; forth, my sword; he dies.
10

Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost to the sense, And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Cassio,

Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other, Every way makes my gain: live Roderigo,

He calls me to a restitution large Of gold and jewels that I bobb'd from him,

As gifts to Desdemona; It must not be: if Cassio do remain,

He hath a daily beauty in his life That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor

May unfold me to him; there stand I in much peril. 21

No, he must die. But so: I hear him coming.

Enter CASSIO.

Rod. I know his gait: 't is he. Villain, thou diest! Makes a pass at CASSIO.

Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed

But that my coat is better than thou know'st; I will make proof of thine.

Draws, and wounds RODERIGO.
Rod. O! I am slain.

IAGO from behind wounds CASSIO in the leg, and exit.

Cas. I am maim'd for ever. Help, ho! murder! murder!
Falls.

Enter OTHELLO, at a distance.

Oth. The voice of Cassio: Iago keeps his word.

Rod. O! villain that I am.
Oth. It is even so.

Cas. O, help, ho! light! a surgeon! 30
Oth. 'T is he. O brave Iago, honest and just!

That hath such noble sense of thy friend's wrong;

Thou teachest me. Minion, your dear lies dead,

And your unblest fate hies; strumpet, I come!

Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted;

Thy bed lust-stain'd shall with lust's blood be spotted. Exit.

Enter LODOVICO and GRATIANO, at a distance.

Cas. What, ho! no watch? no passage? murder! murder!

Gra. 'T is some mischance; the cry is very direful.

Cas. O, help!
Lod. Hark!

Rod. O wretched villain!
Lod. Two or three groan; it is a heavy night;

These may be counterfeits; let's think 't unsafe

To come in to the cry without more help.

Rod. Nobody come? then shall I bleed to death.

Lod. Hark!

Re-enter IAGO, with a light.

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago. Who's there? whose noise is this that cries on murder?

Lod. We do not know.

Iago. Did not you hear a cry?

Cas. Here, here! for heaven's sake, help me!

Iago. What's the matter? 50

Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Lod. The same indeed; a very valiant fellow.

Iago. What are you here that cry so grievously?

Cas. Iago? O! I am spoil'd, undone by villains:

Give me some help.

Iago. O me, lieutenant! what villains have done this?

Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout, And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains!

To LODOVICO and GRATIANO. What are you there? come in, and give some help!

Rod. O! help me here. 60

Cas. That's one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave! O villain!

Stabs RODERIGO.

Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog!

Iago. Kill men i' the dark! Where be these bloody thieves?

How silent is this town! Ho! murder! murder!

What may you be? are you of good or evil?

Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico?

Lod. He, sir.

Iago. I cry you mercy. Here's Cassio hurt by villains.

Gra. Cassio! 70

Iago. How is't, brother?

Cas. My leg is cut in two.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Light, gentlemen; I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is 't that cried?

Iago. Who is 't that cried!

Bian. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio!

O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio!

Iago. O notable strumpet! Cassio, may you suspect

Who they should be that have thus mangled you?

Cas. No. 80

Gra. I am sorry to find you thus; I have been to seek you.

Iago. Lend me a garter. So. O! for a chair,

To bear him easily hence.

Bian. Alas! he faints. O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio!

Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash

To be a party in this injury.

Patience awhile, good Cassio. Come, come.

Lend me a light. Know we this face or no? Alas! my friend and my dear countryman, Roderigo; no; yes, sure. O heaven! Roderigo.

Gra. What! of Venice? 90

Iago. Even he, sir; did you know him?

Gra. Know him! ay.

Iago. Signior Gratiano! I cry you gentle pardon;

These bloody accidents must excuse my manners,

That so neglected you.

Gra. I am glad to see you.

Iago. How do you, Cassio? O! a chair, a chair.

Gra. Roderigo!

Iago. He, he, 't is he. A chair brought in. O! that's well said; the chair.

Some good man bear him carefully from hence;

I'll fetch the general's surgeon. To BIANCA.

For you, mistress, 100

Save you your labour. He that lies slain here, Cassio,

Was my dear friend. What malice was between you?

Cas. None in the world; nor do I know the man.

Iago. To BIANCA. What! look you pale? O! bear him out o' the air.

CASSIO and RODERIGO are borne off.

Stay you, good gentlemen. Look you pale, mistress?

Do you perceive the ghastness of her eye? Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon.

Behold her well; I pray you, look upon her:

Do you see, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness will speak

Though tongues were out of use. 110

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. 'Las! what's the matter? what's the matter, husband?

Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark

By Roderigo and fellows that are 'scap'd. He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead.

Emil. Alas! good gentleman; alas! good Cassio.

Iago. This is the fruits of whoring. Prithee, Emilia,

Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night. To BIANCA. What! do you shake at that?

Bian. He supp'd at my house; but I therefore shake not.

Iago. O! did he so? I charge you, go with me. 120

Emil. Fie, fie upon thee, strumpet!

Bian. I am no strumpet, but of life as honest

As you that thus abuse me.

Emil. As I foh! fie upon thee!

Iago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor Cassio dress'd.

Come, mistress, you must tell's another tale.

Emilia, run you to the citadel, And tell my lord and lady what hath happ'd.

Will you go on afore? Aside. This is the night
That either makes me or fordoes me quite.
Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber in the Castle.
DESDEMONA in bed asleep. A light burning.

Enter OTHELLO.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul;
Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!
It is the cause. Yet I'll not shed her blood,
Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow,
And smooth as monumental alabaster.
Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.

Put out the light, and then put out the light:
If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore,
Should I repent me; but once put out thy light,
Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heat
That can thy light relume. When I have pluck'd the rose,

I cannot give it vital growth again,
It needs must wither: I'll smell it on the tree.
Kisses her.
O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade Justice to break her sword! One more, one more.

Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee,
And love thee after. One more, and this the last:

So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep, 20
But they are cruel tears; this sorrow 's heavenly,

It strikes where it doth love. She wakes.

Des. Who 's there? Othello?

Oth. Ay, Desdemona.

Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?

Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?

Des. Ay, my lord.

Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime
Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace,
Solicit for it straight.

Des. Alas! my lord, what may you mean by that?

Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk by: 30

I would not kill thy unprepared spirit;
No; heaven forbid! I would not kill thy soul.

Des. Talk you of killing?

Oth. Ay, I do.

Des. Then heaven

Have mercy on me!

Oth. Amen! with all my heart.

Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me.

Oth. Hum!

Des. And yet I fear you; for you are fatal then

When your eyes roll so. Why I should fear I know not.

Since guiltiness I know not; but yet I feel I fear.

Oth. Think on thy sins.

Des. They are loves I bear to you.

Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest. 41

Des. That death 's unnatural that kills for loving.

Alas! why gnaw you so your nether lip?
Some bloody passion shakes your very frame;

These are portents, but yet I hope, I hope
They do not point on me.

Oth. Peace, and be still!

Des. I will so. What 's the matter?

Oth. That handkerchief which I so lov'd and gave thee

Thou gav'st to Cassio.

Des. No, by my life and soul!

Send for the man and ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed,

Take heed of perjury; thou art on thy death-bed. 51

Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Yes, presently;

Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin;

For to deny each article with oath

Cannot remove nor choke the strong conception

That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.

Des. Then Lord have mercy on me!

Oth. I say, amen.

Des. And have you mercy too! I never did

Offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio

But with such general warranty of heaven 60

As I might love; I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in 's hand.

O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart,

And mak'st me call what I intend to do

A murder, which I thought a sacrifice:

I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then;

I never gave it him. Send for him hither;

Let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd.

Des. What, my lord? 69

Oth. That he hath us'd thee.

Des. How? unlawfully?

Oth. Ay.

Des. He will not say so.

Oth. No; his mouth is stopp'd:

Honest Iago hath ta'en order for 't.

Des. O! my fear interprets. What! is he dead?

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge

Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas! he is betray'd and I undone.

Oth. Out, strumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O! banish me, my lord, but kill me not.

Oth. Down, strumpet!

Des. Kill me to-morrow; let me live to-night. 80

Oth. Nay, if you strive,—

Des. But half an hour!

Oth. Being done, there is no pause.

Des. But while I say one prayer.

Oth. It is too late.
He stifles her.

Emil. Within. My lord, my lord! what, ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. What noise is this? Not dead? not yet quite dead?

I that am cruel am yet merciful;
I would not have thee linger in thy pain.

So, so.

Emil. Within. What, ho! my lord, my
lord!

Oth. Who's there?

Emil. Within. O! good my lord, I would speak a word with you. 90

Oth. Yes; 't is Emilia: by and by. She
's dead.

'T is like she comes to speak of Cassio's
death;

The noise was here. Ha! no more moving?
Still as the grave. Shall she come in?

Were 't good?

I think she stirs again: no. What's best
to do?

If she come in she 'll sure speak to my wife:
My wife! my wife! what wife? I have no
wife!

O, insupportable! O heavy hour!
Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
Of sun and moon, and that the affrighted globe

Should yawn at alteration.

Emil. Within. I do beseech you 101

That I may speak with you, O, good my lord!

Oth. I had forgot thee. O! come in,
Emilia.

Soft, by and by: let me the curtains draw.
Where art thou? Unlocks the door.

Enter EMILIA.

What's the matter with thee now?

Emil. O! my good lord, yonder 's foul murder done.

Oth. What! now?

Emil. But now, my lord.

Oth. It is the very error of the moon;

She comes more nearer earth than she was wont, 110

And makes men mad.

Emil. Cassio, my lord, has kill'd a young Venetian

Call'd Roderigo.

Oth. Roderigo kill'd!

And Cassio kill'd!

Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.

Oth. Not Cassio kill'd! Then murder 's out of tune,

And sweet revenge grows harsh.

Des. O! falsely, falsely murder'd.

Emil. Alas! what cry is that?

Oth. That! what?

Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady's voice: 119

Help! help, ho! help! O lady, speak
again!

Sweet Desdemona! O! sweet mistress,
speak.

Des. A guiltless death I die.

Emil. O! who hath done this deed?

Des. Nobody; I myself; farewell;

Commend me to my kind lord. O! farewell! Dies.

Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?

Emil. Alas! who knows?

Oth. You heard her say herself it was not I.

Emil. She said so; I must needs report
the truth.

Oth. She 's like a liar gone to burning
hell;

'T was I that kill'd her.

Emil. O! the more angel she,
And you the blacker devil. 131

Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore.

Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil.

Oth. She was false as water.

Emil. Thou art rash as fire to say
That she was false: O! she was heavenly
true.

Oth. Cassio did tup her; ask thy husband
else.

O! I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell
But that I did proceed upon just grounds
To this extremity. Thy husband knew it
all.

Emil. My husband! 140

Oth. Thy husband.

Emil. That she was false to wedlock?

Oth. Ay, with Cassio. Nay, had she been
true,

If heaven would make me such another
world

Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,

I'd not have sold her for it.

Emil. My husband!

Oth. Ay, 't was he that told me first:
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband!

Oth. What needs this iterance, woman?
I say thy husband. 150

Emil. O mistress! villany hath made mocks with love.

My husband say that she was false!

Oth. He, woman;
I say thy husband: dost understand the
word?

My friend, thy husband, honest, honest
Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious
soul

Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the
heart:

She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha!

Emil. Do thy worst; 159

This deed of thine is no more worthy
heaven

Than thou wast worthy her.

Oth. Peace! you were best.

Emil. Thou hast not half that power to do me harm

As I have to be hurt. O gull! O dolt!

As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a
deed,—

I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee known,
Though I lost twenty lives. Help! help, ho! help!
The Moor has kill'd my mistress! Murder! murder!

Enter MONTANO, GRATIANO, IAGO, and Others.

Mon. What is the matter? How now, general!

Emil. O! are you come, Iago? you have done well,

That men must lay their murders on your neck. 170

Gra. What is the matter?

Emil. Disprove this villain if thou be'st a man:

He says thou told'st him that his wife was false.

I know thou didst not, thou 'rt not such a villain.

Speak, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought, and told no more Than what he found himself was apt and true.

Emil. But did you ever tell him she was false?

Iago. I did.

Emil. You told a lie, an odious, damned lie; 180

Upon my soul, a lie, a wicked lie.

She false with Cassio! Did you say with Cassio?

Iago. With Cassio, mistress. Go to, charm your tongue.

Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak.

My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed.

All. O heavens forbend!

Emil. And your reports have set the murder on.

Oth. Nay, stare not, masters; it is true, indeed.

Gra. 'T is a strange truth.

Mon. O monstrous act!

Emil. Villany! villany! villany!

I think upon 't, I think, I smell 't: O villany! 191

I thought so then: I'll kill myself for grief. O! villany, villany.

Iago. What! are you mad? I charge you, get you home.

Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak:

'T is proper I obey him, but not now. Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.

Oth. O! O! O! Falls on the bed.

Emil. Nay, lay thee down and roar, For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent That e'er did lift up eye.

Oth. Rising. O! she was foul. I scarce did know you, uncle. There lies your niece, 201

Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd:

I know this act shows horrible and grim.

Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead.

Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief

Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now,

This sight would make him do a desperate turn,

Yea, curse his better angel from his side, And fall to reprobance.

Oth. 'T is pitiful; but yet Iago knows 210 That she with Cassio hath the act of shame

A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it:

And she did gratify his amorous works With that recognizance and pledge of love

Which I first gave her. I saw it in his hand:

It was a handkerchief, an antique token My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers! Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'T will out, 't will out; I hold my peace, sir; no;

No, I will speak as liberal as the north; 220 Let heaven and men and devils, let them all,

All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home. Emil. I will not.

IAGO offers to stab EMILIA. Fie!

Gra. Your sword upon a woman?

Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of

I found by fortune and did give my husband; For often, with a solemn earnestness,

More than indeed belong'd to such a trifle, He begg'd of me to steal it.

Iago. Villanous whore! Emil. She give it Cassio! no, alas! I found it, 230

And I did give 't my husband. Iago. Filtch, thou liest!

Emil. By heaven, I do not, I do not, gentlemen.

O murderous coxcomb! what should such a fool

Do with so good a wife? Oth. Are there no stones in heaven

But what serve for the thunder? Precious villain! He runs at IAGO: IAGO stabs EMILIA, and exit.

Gra. The woman falls; sure, he hath kill'd his wife.

Emil. Ay, ay. O! lay me by my mistress' side.

Gra. He's gone; but his wife's kill'd. Mon. 'T is a notorious villain. Take you this weapon,

Which I have here recover'd from the Moor. Come, guard the door without; let him not pass, 241

But kill him rather. I'll after that same villain,

For 't is a damned slave.

Exeunt MONTANO and GRATIANO. Oth. I am not valiant neither,

But every puny whipster gets my sword.

But why should honour outlive honesty?
Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy song bode, lady?
Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,
And die in music.

Willow, willow, willow.

Moor, she was chaste; she lov'd thee, cruel
Moor; 249

So come my soul to bliss as I speak true;
So speaking as I think, I die, I die. Dies.

Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber;

It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's
temper.

O! here it is. Uncle, I must come forth.

Gra. Within. If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear:

Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me then, and speak
with me,
Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter GRATIANO.

Gra. What is the matter?

Oth. Behold! I have a weapon;
A better never did itself sustain 260

Upon a soldier's thigh: I have seen the day,
That with this little arm, and this good
sword,

I have made my way through more imped-
ments

Than twenty times your stop: but, O vain boast!

Who can control his fate? 't is not so now.
Be not afraid, though you do see me weap-
on'd;

Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.

Do you go back dismay'd? 't is a lost fear;
Man but a rush against Othello's breast, 270

And he retires. Where should Othello go?
Now how dost thou look now? O ill-starr'd wench!

Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at compt,

This look of thine will hurl my soul from
heaven,

And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl!

Even like thy chastity.

O! cursed, cursed slave. Whip me, ye devils,

From the possession of this heavenly sight!
Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!

Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!
O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead! 281

Oh! oh! oh!

Enter LODOVICO, MONTANO, CASSIO carried in a chair, and Officers with IAGO, prisoner.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?

Oth. That 's he that was Othello; here
I am.

Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain forth.

Oth. I look down towards his feet; but that 's a fable:

If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.
Wounds IAGO.

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.

Oth. I am not sorry neither; I'd have thee
live;

For, in my sense, 't is happiness to die. 290

Lod. O thou Othello! that wert once so
good,

Fall'n in the practice of a damned slave,
What shall be said to thee?

Oth. Why, any thing:
An honourable murderer, if you will;

For nought did I in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd his villany;

Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Oth. Ay.

Cas. Dear general, I never gave you
cause.

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask you pardon. 300

Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil
Why he hath thus ensnar'd my soul and

body?

Iago. Demand me nothing: what you know, you know:

From this time forth I never will speak word.

Lod. What! not to pray?

Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best.

Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall'n,

Which, as I think, you know not. Here is a letter

Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo,
And here another; the one of them imports

The death of Cassio to be undertook 311

By Roderigo.

Oth. O villain!

Cas. Most heathenish and most gross!

Lod. Now here 's another discontented paper,

Found in his pocket too; and this, it seems,
Roderigo meant to have sent this damned

villain,

But that, belike, Iago in the interim
Came in and satisfied him.

Oth. O the pernicious caitiff!

How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief

That was my wife's?

Cas. I found it in my chamber;
And he himself confess'd but even now 321

That there he dropp'd it for a special purpose
Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool! fool! fool!

Cas. There is besides in Roderigo's letter
How he upbraids Iago that he made him
Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came
That I was cast: and even but now he spake,
After long seeming dead, Iago hurt him,
Iago set him on.

Lod. You must forsake this room and go with us; 330

Your power and your command is taken off,
And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,
If there be any cunning cruelty
That can torment him much and hold him
long,
It shall be his. You shall close prisoner
rest,
Till that the nature of your fault be known To the Venetian state. Come, bring him
away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two before you
go.

I have done the state some service, and they know 't; 339

No more of that. I pray you, in your letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate, Nor set down aught in malice: then must you speak

Of one that lov'd not wisely but too well;
Of one not easily jealous, but, being wrought,

Perplex'd in the extreme; of one whose
hand,

Like the base Indian, threw a pearl away Richer than all his tribe; of one whose subdu'd eyes,

Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees 350

Their medicinable gum. Set you down
this;

And say besides, that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk
Beat a Venetian and traduc'd the state,
I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him, thus. Stabs himself.

Lod. O bloody period!

Gra. All that 's spoke is marr'd.
Oth. I kiss'd thee ere I kill'd thee; no way but this,

Falling upon DESDEMONA.

Killing myself to die upon a kiss. Dies.

Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon; 360

For he was great of heart.

Lod. To IAGO. O Spartan dog!

More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea,
Look on the tragic loading of this bed;

This is thy work; the object poisons sight;
Let it be hid. Gratiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
For they succeed on you. To you, lord
governor,

Remains the censure of this hellish villain,
The time, the place, the torture; O! enforce
it.

Myself will straight aboard, and to the state
This heavy act with heavy heart relate. 371

Exeunt.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA

IT is doubtful if there can be found within the entire range of the drama a more wonderful opening scene than that in Antony and Cleopatra. It is more than an exposition; it is an epitome. To the average reader who finishes the play dazed by its paradoxes, its portrayal of strength in weakness and of weakness in strength, of shame in glory and of the glorification of shame, no more helpful advice can be given than that he re-read at once this first scene in the light of the entire play and find its meaning there. There he will find a picture of Antony's past glory and present bondage, his reaction to the call of duty—"Grates me; the sum"—the character of Cleopatra in its essential features, the love of the pair removed from the sphere of earthly judgment into "a new heaven and a new earth"—a love compared with which it is of no moment that Rome should "in Tiber melt, and the wide arch of the rang'd empire fall"; and, not least significant, report in Rome—"the common liar"—proved true in Antony's behavior. Indeed we shall do well to "rest happy" and "hope Of better deeds to-morrow." We know, however, without the gift of prescience, that no lovers, not even a royal pair, to whom "kingdoms are clay" and who see in life no other nobility than that of loving, can long retain earthly power. And we know this all the more surely when that love demands that "not a minute of our lives should stretch without some pleasure now." If one is reading this play for a moral lesson one need scarcely read further, for the moral is here, only too obvious. And it is the very obviousness of the moral that makes it practically certain that Shakespeare, in writing the play, was not primarily concerned with an ethical problem.

This play is the product of Shakespeare's maturer thought and style. It was written about six years later than his first Roman play, Julius Cæsar, during which interval Hamlet, Othello, King Lear, and Macbeth had appeared, probably in the order named. In each of these great plays, whatever the particular problem dealt with, the fortunes of the state are inextricably interwoven with the fortunes of the hero; and Antony and Cleopatra is no exception to this rule, although here the scope is enlarged to embrace the fortunes of the world. It is as if Shakespeare, having scaled the very heights of tragedy, sought out some herculean task in which to breathe himself and test his powers indeed. If in some particulars he was foredoomed to failure because of the exigencies of the stage and the range of his material, in others, notably the opening scene, the drinking scene, the glorious poetry of the later scenes and the characterization of Cleopatra, he is unsurpassed even by himself.

Interest in this play centers chiefly in the fortunes of a great but frankly tarnished pair of lovers with whose fate is bound up the fate of the world. It is essentially a tragedy of middle life and in its essential features is being reënacted to-day and will continue to be enacted so long as men remain susceptible to enchantresses, though the sky rain Fulvias and Octavias. Idealism and inexperience will ever protect youth from a similar tragedy, and age is exempted by coldness of blood; but middle life, with the dimming of its idealism, its awakening sense of the worthlessness of earthly honor and its consciousness of abundant physical powers, will always be peculiarly susceptible to mistaking a new and strong sexual appeal for the "nobility of life." This play, so far as its ethical value is concerned, merits particularly the attention of those of middle age. But this is far from saying that Shakespeare aimed primarily in this play to teach a moral lesson. Had he done so, he would never have dismissed these lovers from this earthly scene in a blaze of glory. There can be little question that he aims to awaken and to hold our sympathy for this great pair until the end and to keep us, so far as possible, from passing judgment on their lives. Throughout the play the moral is kept in the background while we, but dimly conscious of it, sit under the spell of the enchantress, not as participants, but as onlookers; not as desiring to share with Antony in his experiences, but with the feeling that not to have been witnesses would discredit our travel. The moral power of the play lies in Shakespeare's consummate art in intertwining the fate of the lovers with the fate of the world.

With respect to Cleopatra, it does not occur to us to judge her morally. Antony is not deceived; he is bewitched. He found her "as a morsel cold upon Dead Cæsar's trencher" and paid his heart for her. Nor does it occur to us to censure Antony for conjugal infidelity. Fulvia's death is early announced and the union with Octavia appears in the light of a mere expedient on Cæsar's part to insure peace with Antony. Our censure of Antony is for neglect of public duty for private pleasure. And even this censure is modified by the gross materialism of the world that drums him from his sport. May it not be that as he approached the catastrophe in this play Shakespeare recalled that line he had written in King Lear: "None does offend, none, I say, none"? May it not be that there is compensation in losing a world "which in thy absence is no better than a sty," when one can say with Cleopatra: "My desolation does begin to make A better life"? And is there any earthly duty the performance of which can prepare us to face death with a more triumphant cry than

"I have
Immortal longings in me. . . .
Methinks I hear
Antony call; I see him rouse himself
To praise my noble act; . . .
. . . . . husband, I come:
Now to that name my courage prove my title!"?

ACT I

SCENE I.—Alexandria. A Room in CLEOPATRA'S Palace.

Enter DEMETRIUS and PHILO.

Phi. Nay, but this dotage of our general's O'erflows the measure; those his goodly
eyes,

That o'er the files and musters of the war
Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend,
now turn,

The office and devotion of their view
Upon a tawny front; his captain's heart,
Which in the scuffles of great fights hath
burst

The buckles on his breast, reneges all
temper,

And is become the bellows and the fan
To cool a gipsy's lust. Look! where they come.

Flourish. Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, with their Trains; Eunuchs fanning her.

Take but good note, and you shall see in
him

The triple pillar of the world transform'd
Into a strumpet's fool; behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.

Ant. There's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be be-lov'd.

Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome.

Ant. Grates me; the sum.

Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony: Fulvia perchance is angry; or, who knows so
If the scarce-bearded Cæsar have not sent His powerful mandate to you, 'Do this, or
this;

Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that;
Perform 't, or else we damn thee'?

Ant. How, my love!

Cleo. Perchance! nay, and most like;
You must not stay here longer; your dis-
mission

Is come from Cæsar; therefore hear it,
Antony.

Where 's Fulvia's process? Cæsar's I would say? both?

Call in the messengers. As I am Egypt's
queen,

Thou blushest, Antony, and that blood of
thine

Is Cæsar's homager; else so thy cheek pays shame

When shrill-tongued Fulvia scolds. The messengers!

Ant. Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide arch

Of the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space.
Kingdoms are clay; our duny earth alike

Feeds beast as man; the nobleness of life
Is to do thus; when such a mutual pair

Embracing.
And such a twain can do 't, in which I bind.

On pain of punishment, the world to weet
We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood!
Why did he marry Fulvia and not love her?
I'll seem the fool I am not; Antony 42
Will be himself.

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.
Now, for the love of Love and her soft hours,
Let's not confound the time with conference harsh:

There's not a minute of our lives should stretch
Without some pleasure now. What sport
to-night?

Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Fie, wrangling queen!
Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,

To weep; whose every passion fully strives 50

To make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd.
No messenger; but thine, and all alone,
To-night we'll wander through the streets and note

The qualities of people. Come, my queen;
Last night you did desire it: speak not to us.

Exeunt ANTONY and CLEOPATRA with their Train.

Dem. Is Cæsar with Antonius priz'd so slight?

Phi. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I am full sorry
That he approves the common liar, who 60
Thus speaks of him at Rome; but I will hope

Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy!
Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O! that I knew this husband, which, you say, must charge his horns with garlands.

Alex. Soothsayer!

Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the man? Is't you, sir, that know things?

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand.

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine
enough 11
Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray then, foresee me one.

Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.

Char. He means in flesh.

Ir. No, you shall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid!

Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.

Char. Hush! 21

Sooth. You shall be more beloved than belov'd.

Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune!
Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all; let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage; find me to marry with Octavius Cæsar, and companion me with my mistress. 30

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.

Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen and prov'd a fairer former fortune
Than that which is to approach.

Char. Then, belike, my children shall have no names; prithee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a
womb,

And fertile every wish, a million.

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.

Alex. You think none but your sheets are privy to your wishes. 41

Char. Nay, come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, tonight, shall be—drunk to bed.

Ir. There's a palm presages chastity,
if nothing else.

Char. E'en as the o'erflowing Nilus pres-ageth famine. 50

Ir. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear. Prithee, tell her but a worky-day fortune.

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Ir. But how? but how? give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said.

Ir. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she? 60

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?

Ir. Not in my husband's nose.

Char. Our worse thoughts heavens mend! Alexas,—come, his fortune, his fortune. O! let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee; and let her die too, and give him a worse; and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight; good Isis, I beseech thee! 72

Ir. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! for, as it is a heartbreaking to see a handsome man loosewived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded: therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly!

Char. Amen.

Alex. Lo, now! if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores but they 'd do't. 82

Eno. Hush! here comes Antony.

Char. Not he; the queen.

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No, lady.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No, madam.

Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirth; but on the sudden

A Roman thought hath struck him. Enobarbus!

Eno. Madam!

Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither.

Where's Alexas?

Alex. Here, at your service. My lord approaches. 90

Enter ANTONY with a Messenger and Attendants.

Cleo. We will not look upon him; go with us.

Exeunt CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, ALEXAS, IRAS, CHARMIAN, Soothsayer, and Attendants.

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.

Ant. Against my brother Lucius?

Mess. Ay:

But soon that war had end, and the time's state

Made friends of them, jointing their force 'gainst Cæsar,

Whose better issue in the war, from Italy Upon the first encounter drave them.

Ant. Well, what worst?

Mess. The nature of bad news infects the teller.

Ant. When it concerns the fool or coward.

On: 100

Things that are past are done with me. 'Tis thus:

Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death,

I hear him as he flatter'd.

Mess. Labienus,

This is stiff news, hath with his Parthian force

Extended Asia; from Euphrates

His conquering banner shook from Syria

To Lydia and to Ionia: whilst—

Ant. Antony, thou would'st say,—

Mess. O! my lord.

Ant. Speak to me home, mince not the general tongue;

Name Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome; 110 Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase; and taunt my faults

With such full license as both truth and malice

Have power to utter. O! then we bring forth weeds

When our quick minds lie still; and our ills told us

Is as our earing. Fare thee well awhile.

Mess. At your noble pleasure. Exit.

Ant. From Sicyon, ho, the news! Speak there!

First Att. The man from Sicyon, is there such an one?

Second Att. He stays upon your will.

Ant. Let him appear.

These strong Egyptian fetters I must break, Or lose myself in dotage. 121

Enter another Messenger.

What are you?

Second Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where died she?

Second Mess. In Sicyon:

Her length of sickness, with what else more serious

Importeth thee to know, this bears.

Gives a letter.

Ant. Forbear me.

Exit Second Messenger.

There's a great spirit gone. Thus did I desire it:

What our contempts do often hurl from us We wish it ours again; the present pleasure,

By revolution lowering, does become The opposite of itself: she's good, being gone; 130 The hand could pluck her back that shov'd her on.

I must from this enchanting queen break off;

Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know,

My idleness doth hatch. How now! Enobarbus!

Re-enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir?

Ant. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women. We see how mortal an unkindness is to them; if they suffer our departure, death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone. 140

Eno. Under a compelling occasion let women die; it were pity to cast them away for nothing; though between them and a great cause they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly; I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment. I do think there is mettle in death which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying. 149

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought.

Eno. Alack! sir, no; her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love. We cannot call her winds and waters sighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report; this cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove. 157

Ant. Would I had never seen her!

Eno. O, sir! you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work, which not to have been blessed withal would have discredited your travel.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir?

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia!

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth; comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented: this grief is crowned with consolation; your old smock brings forth a new petticoat; and indeed the tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow. 177

Ant. The business she hath broached in the state
Cannot endure my absence.

Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you; especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode. 182

Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers

Have notice what we purpose. I shall break

The cause of our expedience to the queen,
And get her leave to part. For not alone
The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches,

Do strongly speak to us, but the letters too
Of many our contriving friends in Rome
Petition us at home. Sextus Pompeius 190
Hath given the dare to Cæsar, and commands
The empire of the sea; our slippery people,
Whose love is never link'd to the deser-
Till his deserts are past, begin to throw Pompey the Great and all his dignities
Upon his son; who, high in name and power,
Higher than both in blood and life, stands up
For the main soldier, whose quality, going on,

The sides o' the world may danger. Much is breeding,

Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life, 200

And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure,

To such whose place is under us, requires
Our quick remove from hence.

Eno. I shall do 't. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is, who's with him, what he does;

I did not send you: if you find him sad,

Say I am dancing; if in mirth, report

That I am sudden sick: quick, and return.

Exit ALEXAS.

Char. Madam, methinks if you did love him dearly,

You do not hold the method to enforce
The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do I do not?

Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.

Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool; the way to lose him. 10

Char. Tempt him not so too far; I wish, forbear:

In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter ANTONY.

But here comes Antony.

Cleo. I am sick and sullen.

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose,—

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fall:

It cannot be thus long, the sides of nature
Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen,—

Cleo. Pray you, stand further from me.

Ant. What's the matter?

Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some good news.

What says the married woman? You may go;

Would she had never given you leave to come! 21

Let her not say 't is I that keep you here;
I have no power upon you; hers you are.

Ant. The gods best know,—

Cleo. O! never was there queen
So mightily betray'd; yet at the first
I saw the treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Why should I think you can be mine and true,

Though you in swearing shake the throned gods,

Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness,

To be entangled with those mouth-made vows, 30

Which break themselves in swearing!

Ant. Most sweet queen,—

Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going,

But bid farewell, and go; when you sued staying

Then was the time for words; no going then:
Eternity was in our lips and eyes,

Bliss in our brows' bent; none our parts so poor

But was a race of heaven; they are so still,
Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world,

Art turn'd the greatest liar.

Ant. How now, lady!

Cleo. I would I had thy inches; thou should'st know 40

There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant. Hear me, queen;

The strong necessity of time commands
Our services awhile, but my full heart

Remains in use with you. Our Italy Shines o'er with civil swords; Sextus Pom-peius

Makes his approaches to the port of Rome;
Equality of two domestic powers Breed scrupulous faction. The hated, grown to strength,
Are newly grown to love; the condemn'd
Pompey,

Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace 50
Into the hearts of such as have not thriv'd
Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten;

And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge
By any desperate change. My more particular,

And that which most with you should safe
my going,
Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom,

It does from childishness: can Fulvia die?
Ant. She's dead, my queen. 59

Look here, and at thy sovereign leisure read

The garboils she awak'd; at the last, best,
See when and where she died.

Cleo. O most false love!
Where be the sacred vials thou should'st fill

With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see,
In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd shall
be.

Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to
know

The purposes I bear, which are, or cease,
As you shall give the advice. By the fire
That quickens Nilus' slime, I go from hence
Thy soldier, servant, making peace or war 70
As thou affect'st.

Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come;
But let it be: I am quickly ill,—and well,
So Antony loves.

Ant. My precious queen, forbear,
And give true evidence to his love which stands

An honourable trial.
Cleo. So Fulvia told me.

I prithee, turn aside and weep for her;
Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears
Belong to Egypt: good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissembling, and let it look Like perfect honour.

Ant. You'll heat my blood; no more.
Cleo. You can do better yet, but this is meetly. 81

Ant. Now, by my sword,—
Cleo. And target. Still he mends;

But this is not the best. Look, prithee,
Charmian,

How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his chafe.

Ant. I'll leave you, lady.
Cleo. Courteous lord, one word.

Sir, you and I must part, but that's not it:
Sir, you and I have lov'd, but there's not it;
That you know well: something it is I
would,—

O! my oblivion is a very Antony, 90
And I am all forgotten.

Ant. But that your royalty

Holds idleness your subject, I should take
you

For idleness itself.

Cleo. 'T is sweating labour
To bear such idleness so near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me;
Since my becomings kill me when they do
not

Eye well to you: your honour calls you
hence;

Therefore be deaf to my unpitied folly,
And all the gods go with you! Upon your
sword

Sit laurel victory, and smooth success 100
Be strew'd before your feet!

Ant. Let us go. Come;

Our separation so abides and flies,
That thou, residing here, go'st yet with me,
And I, hence fleeting, here remain with thee.
Away! Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—*Rome. A Room in CÆSAR'S
House.*

Enter OCTAVIUS CÆSAR, LEPIDUS, and Attendants.

Cæs. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know,

It is not Cæsar's natural vice to hate
Our great competitor. From Alexandria
This is the news: he fishes, drinks, and wastes

The lamps of night in revel; is not more man-like

Than Cleopatra, nor the queen of Ptolemy More womanly than he; hardly gave audience, or

Vouchsaf'd to think he had partners: you shall find there

A man who is the abstract of all faults
That all men follow.

Lep. I must not think there are Evils enow to darken all his goodness; 11
His faults in him seem as the spots of
heaven,

More fiery by night's blackness; hereditary Rather than purchas'd; what he cannot change

Than what he chooses.

Cæs. You are too indulgent. Let us grant it is not

Amisss to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy,
To give a kingdom for a mirth, to sit

And keep the turn of tipping with a slave,
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet 20

With knaves that smell of sweat; say this becomes him,

As his composure must be rare indeed
Whom these things cannot blemish, yet must Antony

No way excuse his soils, when we do bear
So great weight in his lightness. If he fill'd

His vacancy with his voluptuousness,
Full surfeits and the dryness of his bones

Call on him for't; but to confound such
time

That drums him from his sport, and speaks
as loud

As his own state and ours, 't is to be chid 30
 As we rate boys, who, being mature in knowledge,
 Pawn their experience to their present
 pleasure,
 And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger.

Lep. Here's more news.
Mess. Thy biddings have been done, and every hour,
 Most noble Caesar, shalt thou have report
 How 't is abroad. Pompey is strong at sea,
 And it appears he is belov'd of those
 That only have fear'd Caesar; to the ports
 The discontents repair, and men's reports 39
 Give him much wrong'd.

Cæs. I should have known no less.
 It hath been taught us from the primal state,
 That he which is was wish'd until he were;
 And the ebb'd man, ne'er lov'd till ne'er worth love,
 Comes dear'd by being lack'd. This common body,
 Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
 Goes to and back, lacking the varying tide,
 To rot itself with motion.

Mess. Caesar, I bring thee word,
 Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates,
 Make the sea serve them, which they ear and wound 49
 With keels of every kind: many hot inroads
 They make in Italy; the borders maritime Lack blood to think on 't, and flush youth
 revolt;
 No vessel can peep forth, but 't is as soon
 Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes
 more
 Than could his war resisted.

Cæs. Antony,
 Leave thy lascivious wassails. When thou
 once
 Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
 Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
 Did famine follow, whom thou fought'st
 against,
 Though daintily brought up, with patience 60
 more Than savages could suffer; thou didst
 drink
 The stale of horses and the gilded puddle
 Which beasts would cough at; thy palate
 then did deign
 The roughest berry on the rudest hedge;
 Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
 The barks of trees thou browsed'st; on the Alps
 It is reported thou didst eat strange flesh,
 Which some did die to look on; and all this,
 It wounds thine honour that I speak it now,
 Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek 70
 So much as lank'd not.

Lep. 'T is pity of him.
Cæs. Let his shames quickly
 Drive him to Rome. 'T is time we twain Did show ourselves i' the field; and to that
 end

Assemble we immediate council; Pompey
 Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Caesar,
 I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly Both what by sea and land I can be able
 To front this present time.

Cæs. Till which encounter,
 It is my business too. Farewell. 80

Lep. Farewell, my lord. What you shall know meantime

Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
 To let me be partaker.

Cæs. Doubt not, sir;
 I knew it for my bond. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Charmian!

Char. Madam!

Cleo. Ha, ha!

Give me to drink mandragora.

Char. Why, madam?

Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time

My Antony is away.

Char. You think of him too much.

Cleo. O! 't is treason.

Char. Madam, I trust, not so.

Cleo. Thou, eunuch Mardian!

Mar. What's your highness' pleasure?

Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing; I take no pleasure

In aught an eunuch has. 'T is well for
 thee, 10

That, being unseminar'd, thy freer thoughts
 May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?

Mar. Yes, gracious madam.

Cleo. Indeed!

Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing

But what indeed is honest to be done;
 Yet have I fierce affections, and think

What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo. O Charmian!

Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he,
 or sits he?

Or does he walk? or is he on his horse? 20
 O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony!

Do bravely, horse, for wott'st thou whom thou movest?

The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
 And burget of men. He's speaking now,

Or murmuring 'Where's my serpent of old Nile?'

For so he calls me. Now I feed myself
 With most delicious poison. Think on me,

That am with Phœbus' amorous pinches
 black,

And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted Caesar, 29

When thou wast here above the ground I was

A morsel for a monarch, and great Pompey Would stand and make his eyes grow in my
 brow;

There would he anchor his aspect and die
With looking on his life.

Enter ALEXAS.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail!

Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark
Antony!

Yet, coming from him, that great medicine hath

With his tinct gilded thee.

How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?

Alex. Last thing he did, dear queen,
He kiss'd, the last of many doubled kisses, 40
This orient pearl. His speech sticks in my
heart.

Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.

Alex. 'Good friend,' quoth he,
'Say, the firm Roman to great Egypt sends
This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot,
To mend the petty present, I will piece
Her opulent throne with kingdoms; all the east,

Say thou, shall call her mistress.' So he nodded,

And soberly did mount an arm-gaunt steed,
Who neigh'd so high that what I would have spoke

Was beastly dumb'd by him.

Cleo. What! was he sad or merry?

Alex. Like to the time o' the year between the extremes 51

Of hot and cold; he was nor sad nor merry.

Cleo. O well-divided disposition! Note
him,

Note him, good Charmian, 't is the man, but note him;

He was not sad, for he would shine on those That make their looks by his; he was not merry,

Which seem'd to tell them his remembrance
lay

In Egypt with his joy; but between both:
O heavenly mingle! Be'st thou sad or
merry,

The violence of either thee becomes, 60
So does it no man else. Mett'st thou my posts?

Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers.

Why do you send so thick?

Cleo. Who's born that day
When I forget to send to Antony,

Shall die a beggar. Ink and paper, Char-mian.

Welcome, my good Alexas. Did I, Char-
mian,

Ever love Cæsar so?

Char. O! that brave Cæsar.
Cleo. Be chok'd with such another emphasis!

Say, the brave Antony.

Char. The valiant Cæsar!
Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth, 70

If thou with Cæsar paragon again

My man of men.

Char. By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.

Cleo. My salad days,

When I was green in judgment, cold in
blood,

To say as I said then! But come, away;

Get me ink and paper:

He shall have every day a several greeting,
Or I'll unpeople Egypt. Exeunt.

ACT II

SCENE I.—Messina. A Room in POMPEY'S House.

Enter POMPEY, MENEKRATES, and MENAS.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist

The deeds of justest men.

Mene. Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay, they not deny.

Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their throne, decays

The thing we sue for.

Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves, Beg often our own harms, which the wise
powers

Deny us for our good; so find we profit

By losing of our prayers.

Pom. I shall do well:
The people love me, and the sea is mine;

My powers are crescent, and my auguring
hope 10

Says it will come to the full. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make

No wars without doors; Cæsar gets money
where

He loses hearts; Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd; but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.

Mene. Cæsar and Lepidus Are in the field; a mighty strength they carry.

Pom. Where have you this? 't is false.

Mene. From Silviu's, sir.
Pom. He dreams; I know they are in Rome together, Looking for Antony. But all the charms of

love, 20

Salt Cleopatra, soften thy wan'd lip!

Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with
both!

Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming; Epicurean cooks
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite, That sleep and feeding may prorogue his honour

Even till a Lethe'd dulness!

Enter VARRIUS.

Var. How now, Varrius!
This is most certain that I shall deliver:

Mark Antony is every hour in Rome
Expected; since he went from Egypt 't is 30
A space for further travel.

Pom. I could have given less matter
A better ear. Menas, I did not think This amorous surfeiter would have donn'd his helm

For such a petty war; his soldiership
Is twice the other twain. But let us rear
The higher our opinion, that our stirring

Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck
The ne'er-lust-wearied Antony.

Men. I cannot hope
Cæsar and Antony shall well greet together;
His wife that's dead did trespasses to
Cæsar, 40
His brother warr'd upon him, although I think

Not mov'd by Antony.

Pom. I know not, Menas, How lesser enmities may give way to greater.

Were 't not that we stand up against them
all

'T were pregnant they should square between themselves,

For they have entertained cause enough
To draw their swords; but how the fear of us
May cement their divisions and bind up
The petty difference, we yet not know. 49
Be 't as our gods will have 't! It only stands
Our lives upon to use our strongest hands.
Come, Menas. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Rome. A Room in LEPIDUS'S House.

Enter ENOBARBUS and LEPIDUS.

Leb. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy
deed,

And shall become you well, to entreat your captain

To soft and gentle speech.

Eno. I shall entreat him
To answer like himself; if Cæsar move him,
Let Antony look over Cæsar's head,
And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard,
I would not shave 't to-day.

Leb. 'T is not a time
For private stomaching.

Eno. Every time Serves for the matter that is then born in 't. 10

Leb. But small to greater matters must give way.

Eno. Not if the small come first.

Leb. Your speech is passion;
But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes

The noble Antony.

Enter ANTONY and VENTIDIUS.

Eno. And yonder, Cæsar.

Enter CÆSAR, MECÆNAS, and AGRIPPA.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia:
Hark ye, Ventidius.

Cæs. I do not know,

Mecænas; ask Agrippa.

Leb. Noble friends,
That which combin'd us was most great,
and let not

A leaner action rend us. What's amiss,
May it be gently heard; when we debate 20
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit Murder in healing wounds; then, noble partners,

The rather for I earnestly beseech,

Touch you the sourest points with sweetest
terms,

Nor curstness grow to the matter.

Ant. 'T is spoken well.

Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus.

Cæs. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. I thank you.

Cæs. Sit.

Ant. Sit, sir.

Cæs. Nay, then.

Ant. I learn, you take things ill which are not so,

Or being, concern you not.

Cæs. I must be laugh'd at
If, or for nothing or a little, I 31

Should say myself offended, and with you Chiefly i' the world; more laugh'd at that I should

Once name you derogately, when to sound your name

It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt, Cæsar,
What was 't to you?

Cæs. No more than my residing here at Rome

Might be to you in Egypt; yet, if you there Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt

Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis'd?

Cæs. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent 41

By what did here befall me. Your wife and
brother

Made wars upon me, and their contestation
Was theme for you, you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business; my brother never

Did urge me in his act: I did inquire it;

And have my learning from some true reports,

That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather

Discredit my authority with yours,

And make the wars alike against my stomach, 50

Having alike your cause? Of this my letters Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel,

As matter whole you have not to make it with,

It must not be with this.

Cæs. You praise yourself
By laying defects of judgment to me, but

You patch'd up your excuses.

Ant. Not so, not so;
I know you could not lack, I am certain on 't,

Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,

Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars 60

Which fronted mine own peace. As for my
wife,

I would you had her spirit in such another:
The third o' the world is yours, which with a snaffle

You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

Eno. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women!

Ant. So much uncurbable, her garboils,
Cæsar,
Made out of her impatience, which not wanted

Shrewdness of policy too, I grieving grant
Did you too much disquiet; for that you must

But say I now did not help it.

Cæs. I wrote to you
When rioting in Alexandria; you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did gibe my missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir,
He fell upon me ere admitted: then
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want

Of what I was i' the morning; but next day
I told him of myself, which was as much
As to have ask'd him pardon. Let this follow

Be nothing of our strife; if we contend, so
Out of our question wipe him.

Cæs. You have broken
The article of your oath, which you shall never

Have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Cæsar!
Ant. No,

Lepidus, let him speak;
The honour 's sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lack'd it. But on, Cæsar;
The article of my oath.

Cæs. To lend me arms and aid when I requir'd them,

The which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected, rather;
And then when poison'd hours had bound me up

From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,
I'll play the penitent to you; but mine honesty

Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power

Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon as befits mine honour

To stoop in such a case.

Lep. 'T is noble spoken.
Mec. If it might please you, to enforce no further

The griefs between ye: to forget them quite
Were to remember that the present need
Speaks to atone you.

Lep. Worthily spoken, Mecænas.

Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a soldier only; speak no more.

Eno. That truth should be silent I had almost forgot.

Ant. You wrong this presence; therefore speak no more.

Eno. Go to, then; your considerate stone.

Cæs. I do not much dislike the matter, but

The manner of his speech; for 't cannot be
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions

So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew What hoop should hold us stanch, from edge to edge

O' the world I would pursue it.

Ag. Give me leave, Cæsar,

Cæs. Speak, Agrippa.

Ag. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side,

Admir'd Octavia; great Mark Antony is now a widower.

Cæs. Say not so, Agrippa;
If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof

Were well deserv'd of rashness.

Ant. I am not married, Cæsar; let me hear Agrippa further speak.

Ag. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts

With an unslipping knot, take Antony Octavia to his wife; whose beauty claims

No worse a husband than the best of men,

Whose virtue and whose general graces speak

That which none else can utter. By this marriage,

All little jealousies which now seem great,
And all great fears which now import their dangers,

Would then be nothing; truths would be tales

Where now half tales be truths; her love to both

Would each to other and all loves to both Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke,

For 't is a studied, not a present thought, By duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Cæsar speak?

Cæs. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd

With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say, 'Agrippa, be it so,'

To make this good?

Cæs. The power of Cæsar, and His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never
To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,
Dream of impediment! Let me have thy hand;

Further this act of grace, and from this hour

The heart of brothers govern in our loves
And sway our great designs!

Cæs. There is my hand.
A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother

Did ever love so dearly; let her live
To join our kingdoms and our hearts, and never

Fly off our loves again!

Lep. Happily, amen!

Ant. I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst Pompey,

For he hath laid strange courtesies and great
Of late upon me; I must thank him only,
Lest my remembrance suffer ill report;
At heel of that, defy him.

Lep. Time calls upon 's:
Of us must Pompey presently be sought, 161
Or else he seeks out us.

Ant. Where lies he?

Cæs. About the Mount Misenum.

Ant. What is his strength
By land?

Cæs. Great and increasing; but by sea
He is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the fame.
Would we had spoke together! Haste we
for it;

Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, dispatch
we

The business we have talk'd of.

Cæs. With most gladness;
And do invite you to my sister's view, 170
Whither straight I'll lead you.

Ant. Let us, Lepidus,
Not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Antony.

Not sickness should detain me.
Flourish. Exeunt CÆSAR, ANTONY, and LEPIDUS.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Cæsar, worthy Mecænas!

My honourable friend, Agrippa!

Agr. Good Enobarbus!

Mec. We have cause to be glad that matters are so well digested. You stayed well by 't in Egypt. 180

Eno. Ay, sir; we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight wild boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there; is this true?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle;
we had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.

Mec. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her. 190

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony she pursed up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.

Agr. There she appeared indeed, or my reporter devised well for her.

Eno. I will tell you.

The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd
throne,

Burn'd on the water; the poop was beaten
gold,

Purple the sails, and so perfumed that
The winds were love-sick with them; the oars were silver,

Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and
made 200

The water which they beat to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,

It beggar'd all description; she did lie
In her pavilion, cloth-of-gold of tissue,
O'er-picturing that Venus where we see

The fancy outwork nature; on each side
her

Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling
Cupids,

With divers-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem

To glow the delicate cheeks which they did cool, 209

And what they undid did.

Agr.

O! rare for Antony.

Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
So many mermaids, tended her i' the
eyes,

And made their bends adornings; at the helm

A seeming mermaid steers; the silken tackle

Swell with the touches of those flower-soft
hands,

That yarely frame the office. From the barge

A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast

Her people out upon her, and Antony,
Enthron'd i' the market-place, did sit alone,

Whistling to the air; which, but for vacancy,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too 222

And made a gap in nature.

Agr.

Rare Egyptian!

Eno. Upon her landing Antony sent to
her,

Invited her to supper; she replied

It should be better he became her guest,
Which she entreated. Our courteous An-
tony,

Whom ne'er the word of 'No' woman heard
speak,

Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the
feast,

And for his ordinary pays his heart 230
For what his eyes eat only.

Agr.

Royal wench!

She made great Cæsar lay his sword to bed;
He plough'd her, and she cropp'd.

Eno.

I saw her once
Hop forty paces through the public street;

And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted,

That she did make defects perfection,
And, breathless, power breathe forth.

Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Eno. Never; he will not.

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale 240
Her infinite variety; other women cloy

The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry

Where most she satisfies; for vilest things Become themselves in her, that the holy priests

Bless her when she is riggish.

Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle

The heart of Antony, Octavia is
A blessed lottery to him.

Agr.

Let us go.

Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest
Whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in CÆSAR'S House.

Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, OCTAVIA between them; Attendants.

Ant. The world and my great office will sometimes Divide me from your bosom.

Octa. All which time
Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers

To them for you.

Ant. Good night, sir. My Octavia, Read not my blemishes in the world's report;

I have not kept my square, but that to come Shall all be done by the rule. Good night, dear lady.

Good night, sir.

Cæs. Good night.

Exeunt CÆSAR and OCTAVIA.

Enter Soothsayer.

Ant. Now, sirrah; you do wish yourself in Egypt? 10

Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you

Thither!

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see it in My motion, have it not in my tongue: but yet

Hie you to Egypt again.

Ant. Say to me,
Whose fortunes shall rise higher, Cæsar's or mine?

Sooth. Cæsar's.

Therefore, O Antony! stay not by his side;
Thy demon, that's thy spirit which keeps thee, is

Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable, 20
Where Cæsar's is not; but near him thy angel

Becomes a fear, as being o'erpower'd; therefore

Make space enough between you.

Ant. Speak this no more.
Sooth. To none but thee; no more but when to thee.

If thou dost play with him at any game
Thou art sure to lose, and of that natural luck,

He beats thee 'gainst the odds; thy lustre thickens

When he shines by. I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him,
But he away, 't is noble.

Ant. Get thee gone:
Say to Ventidius I would speak with him. 31
Exit Soothsayer.

He shall to Parthia. Be it art or hap
He hath spoken true; the very dice obey
him,

And in our sports my better cunning faints
Under his chance; if we draw lots he speeds,

His cocks do win the battle still of mine,
When it is all to nought, and his quails ever Beat mine, inhoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt;

And though I make this marriage for my
peace,

I' the east my pleasure lies.

Enter VENTIDIUS.

O! come, Ventidius,

You must to Parthia; your commission's
ready; 41

Follow me, and receive 't. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter LEPIDUS, MECÆNAS, and AGRIPPA.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further; pray you, hasten

Your generals after.

Agr. Sir, Mark Antony

Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we 'll follow.

Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress,

Which will become you both, farewell.

Mec.

We shall,

As I conceive the journey, be at the Mount
Before you, Lepidus.

Lep.

Your way is shorter;

My purposes do draw me much about:

You 'll win two days upon me.

Mec., Agr.

Sir, good success!

Lep. Farewell.

Exeunt. 10

SCENE V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

ALEXAS.*

Cleo. Give me some music; music, moody
food

Of us that trade in love.

Attendants.

The music, ho!

Enter MARDIAN.

Cleo. Let it alone; let's to billiards;
come, Charmian.

Char. My arm is sore; best play with Mardian.

Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch
play'd

As with a woman. Come, you 'll play with me, sir?

Mar. As well as I can, madam.

Cleo. And when good will is show'd, though 't come too short,

The actor may plead pardon. I 'll none now.
Give me mine angle; we 'll to the river:
there, 10

My music playing far off, I will betray Tawny-finn'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce

Their slimy jaws; and, as I draw them up,
I 'll think them every one an Antony,
And say 'Ah, ha! you 're caught.'

Char.

'T was merry when

You wager'd on your angling; when your diver

Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he
With fervency drew up.

Cleo.

That time—O times!—

I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night
I laugh'd him into patience; and next
morn, 20

Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed;
Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst
I wore his sword Philippan.

Enter a Messenger.

O! from Italy;
Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,
That long time have been barren.

Mess. Madam, madam,— Cleo. Antony's dead! If thou say so,
villain,

Thou kill'st thy mistress; but well and free,
If thou so yield him, there is gold, and
here

My bluest veins to kiss; a hand that kings
Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing. 30

Mess. First, madam, he is well.

Cleo. Why, there's more gold.

But, sirrah, mark, we use

To say the dead are well: bring it to that,
The gold I give thee will I melt, and pour Down thy ill-uttering throat.

Mess. Good madam, hear me.

Cleo. Well, go to, I will;
But there's no goodness in thy face; if An-
tony

Be free and healthful, so tart a favour
To trumpet such good tidings! if not well, Thou should'st come like a Fury crown'd
with snakes, 40

Not like a formal man.

Mess. Will 't please you hear me?

Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speak'st:

Yet, if thou say Antony lives, is well,
Or friends with Cæsar, or not captive to
him,

I'll set thee in a shower of gold and hail
Rich pearls upon thee.

Mess. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mess. And friends with Cæsar.

Cleo. Thou 'rt an honest man.

Mess. Cæsar and he are greater friends than ever.

Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.

Mess. But yet, madam,—

Cleo. I do not like 'but yet,' it does allay 50
The good precedence; fie upon 'but yet'!
'But yet' is as a gaoler to bring forth
Some monstrous malefactor. Prithee,
friend,

Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear,
The good and bad together. He's friends with Cæsar;

In state of health, thou say'st; and, thou say'st, free.

Mess. Free, madam! no; I made no such report:

He's bound unto Octavia.

Cleo. For what good turn?

Mess. For the best turn i' the bed.

Cleo. I am pale, Charmian!

Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia. 60

Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee! Strikes him down.

Mess. Good madam, patience.

Cleo.

What say you? Hence.

Strikes him again.

Horrible villain! or I'll spurn thine eyes
Like balls before me; I'll unhair thy head:
She hales him up and down.
Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and stew'd
in brine,

Smarting in lingering pickle.

Mess. Gracious madam,
I that do bring the news made not the match.

Cleo. Say 't is not so, a province I will give thee,
And make thy fortunes proud; the blow
thou hadst 69

Shall make thy peace for moving me to rage,
And I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg.

Mess. He's married, madam.

Cleo. Rogue! thou hast liv'd too long.
Draws a knife.

Mess. Nay, then I'll run.

What mean you, madam? I have made no fault. Exit.

Char. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself;

The man is innocent.

Cleo. Some innocents' scape not the thunderbolt. 77

Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures
Turn all to serpents! Call the slave again:
Though I am mad, I will not bite him. Call.

Char. He is afraid to come.

Cleo. I will not hurt him.

Exit CHARMIAN.

These hands do lack nobility, that they strike

A meaner than myself; since I myself
Have given myself the cause.

Re-enter CHARMIAN and Messenger.

Come hither, sir.
Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad news; give to a gracious message

An host of tongues, but let ill tidings tell Themselves when they be felt.

Mess. I have done my duty.

Cleo. Is he married?

I cannot hate thee worse than I do 90
If thou again say 'Yes.'

Mess. He's married, madam.

Cleo. The gods confound thee! dost thou hold there still?

Mess. Should I lie, madam?

Cleo. O! I would thou didst,
So half my Egypt were submerg'd and made A cistern for scald snakes. Go, get thee
hence;

Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me Thou would'st appear most ugly. He is married?

Mess. I crave your highness' pardon.

Cleo. He is married?

Mess. Take no offence that I would not offend you;

To punish me for what you make me do 100
Seems much unequal; he's married to Octavia.

Cleo. O! that his fault should make a knave of thee,
That art not what thou 'rt sure of. Get thee hence;
The merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome
Are all too dear for me; lie they upon thy hand,
And be undone by 'em! Exit Messenger.
Char. Good your highness, patience.
Cleo. In praising Antony I have disprais'd Cæsar.
Char. Many times, madam.
Cleo. I am paid for 't now.
Lead me from hence;
I faint: O Iras! Charmian! 'T is no matter.
Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him
Report the feature of Octavia, her years,
Her inclinations, let him not leave out
The colour of her hair: bring me word quickly. Exit ALEXAS.
Let him for ever go:—let him not—Charmian!
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
The other way's a Mars. To MARDIAN.
Bid you Alexas
Bring me word how tall she is. Pity me,
Charmian,
But do not speak to me. Lead me to my chamber. Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Near Misenum.

Flourish. Enter POMPEY and MENAS at one side, with drum and trumpet; at another, CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, ENO-BARBUS, MECÆNAS, with Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine;
And we shall talk before we fight.

Cæs. Most meet
That first we come to words, and therefore have we

Our written purposes before us sent;
Which if thou hast consider'd, let us know
If 't will tie up thy discontented sword,
And carry back to Sicily much tall youth
That else must perish here.

Pom. To you all three,
The senators alone of this great world,
Chief factors for the gods, I do not know
Wherefore my father should revengers want,

Having a son and friends: since Julius Cæsar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted,
There saw you labouring for him. What was 't

That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire? and what

Made the all-honour'd, honest Roman, Brutus,
With the arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous freedom,

To drench the Capitol, but that they would Have one man but a man? And that is it
Hath made me rig my navy, at whose burden

The anger'd ocean foams, with which I meant
To scourge the ingratitude that spiteful Rome

Cast on my noble father.

Cæs. Take your time.
Ant. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey,
with thy sails;

We 'll speak with thee at sea; at land, thou know'st

How much we do o'er-count thee.

Pom. At land, indeed,
Thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house;

But since the cuckoo builds not for himself,
Remain in 't as thou may'st.

Lep. Be pleas'd to tell us,
For this is from the present, how you take
The offers we have sent you.

Cæs. There's the point.

Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh

What it is worth embrac'd.

Cæs. And what may follow,
To try a larger fortune.

Pom. You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome; this 'greed upon,

To part with unhack'd edges, and bear back
Our targes undinted.

Cæs., Ant., Lep. That's our offer.

Pom. Know then,
I came before you here a man prepar'd
To take this offer; but Mark Antony
Put me to some impatience. Though I lose
The praise of it by telling, you must know,
When Cæsar and your brother were at blows,

Your mother came to Sicily and did find
Her welcome friendly.

Ant. I have heard it, Pompey;
And am well studied for a liberal thanks
Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have your hand:
I did not think, sir, to have met you here.

Ant. The beds i' the east are soft; and thanks to you,

That call'd me timelier than my purpose hither,

For I have gain'd by 't.

Cæs. Since I saw you last
There is a change upon you.

Pom. Well, I know not
What counts harsh fortune casts upon my face,

But in my bosom shall she never come
To make my heart her vassal.

Lep. Well met here.
Pom. I hope so, Lepidus. Thus we are agreed.

I crave our composition may be written
And seal'd between us.

Cæs. That's the next to do.

Pom. We 'll feast each other ere we part;
and let's

Draw lots who shall begin.

Ant. That will I, Pompey.

Pom. No, Antony, take the lot:
But, first or last, your fine Egyptian cookery Shall have the fame. I have heard that
Julius Cæsar

Grew fat with feasting there.

Ant. You have heard much.

Pom. I have fair meanings, sir.

Ant. And fair words to them.

Pom. Then so much have I heard;

And I have heard Apollodorus carried—

Eno. No more of that: he did so.

Pom. What, I pray you?

Eno. A certain queen to Cæsar in a mattress.

Pom. I know thee now; how far'st thou, soldier?

Eno. Well;

And well am like to do; for I perceive Four feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand;
I never hated thee. I have seen thee fight,
When I have envied thy behaviour.

Eno. Sir,
I never lov'd you much, but I ha' prais'd ye
When you have well deserv'd ten times as much

As I have said you did.

Pom. Enjoy thy plainness,
It nothing ill becomes thee.

Aboard my galley I invite you all:

Will you lead, lords?

Cæs., Ant., Lep. Show us the way, sir.

Pom. Come.

Exeunt POMPEY, CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, Soldiers, and Attendants.

Men. Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty. You and I have known, sir.

Eno. At sea, I think.

Men. We have, sir.

Eno. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me; though it cannot be denied what I have done by land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety; you have been a great thief by sea.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas; if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.

Men. All men's faces are true, whatsoe'er their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

Men. No slander; they steal hearts.

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure he cannot weep 't back again.

Men. You've said, sir. We looked not for Mark Antony here: pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Cæsar's sister is called Octavia.

Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Men. Pray ye, sir?

Eno. 'T is true.

Men. Then is Cæsar and he for ever knit
together.

Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage than the love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too; but you shall find the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very strangler of their amity. Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Men. Who would not have his wife so?

Eno. Not he that himself is not so; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again; then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Cæsar, and as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is; he married but his occasion
here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir; we have used our throats in Egypt.

Men. Come; let's away.

Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—On board POMPEY'S Galley, off Misenum.

Music. Enter two or three Servants with a banquet.

First Serv. Here they'll be, man. Some o' their plants are ill-rooted already; the least wind 't the world will blow them down.

Second Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured.

First Serv. They have made him drink almsdrink.

Second Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out 'No more,' reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink.

First Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

Second Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship; I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service as a partisan I could not heave.

First Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in 't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A sennet sounded. Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POMPEY, AGRIPPA, MECÆ-NAS, ENOBARBUS, MENAS, with other Captains.

Ant. Thus do they, sir. They take the flow o' the Nile

By certain scales i' the pyramid: they know
By the height, the lowness, or the mean, if d=arth

Or foison follow. The higher Nilus swells

The more it promises; as it ebbs, the seeds-
man

Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain,
And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You 've strange serpents there.

Ant. Ay, Lepidus.

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun; so is your crocodile. 31

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sit,—and some wine! A health to Lepidus!

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out.

Eno. Not till you have slept; I fear me you 'll be in till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard the Ptolemies' pyramises are very goodly things;
without contradiction, I have heard that. 41

Men. Pompey, a word.

Pom. Say in mine ear; what is 't?

Men. Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain,
And hear me speak a word.

Pom. Forbear me till anon.

This wine for Lepidus!

Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile?

Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself, and it is as broad as it hath breadth; it is just so high as it is, and moves with it own organs;
it lives by that which nourisheth it; and the elements once out of it, it transmi-grates. 51

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of it own colour too.

Lep. 'T is a strange serpent.

Ant. 'T is so; and the tears of it are wet.

Cæs. Will this description satisfy him?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure.

Pom. Go hang, sir, hang! Tell me of that? away!
Do as I bid you. Where 's this cup I call'd
for? 60

Men. If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me,
Rise from thy stool.

Pom. I think thou 'rt mad. The matter?
Walks aside.

Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith.

What 's else to say?

Be jolly, lords.

Ant. These quick-sands, Lepidus,
Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world?

Pom. What say'st thou?

Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world? That 's twice.

Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertain it,
And, though thou think me poor, I am the
man 70

Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well?

Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup.

Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove:
Whate'er the ocean pales, or sky inclips,
Is thine, if thou wilt ha 't.

Pom.

Show me which way.

Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors,

Are in thy vessel: let me cut the cable;
And, when we are put off, fall to their throats:

All there is thine.

Pom. Ah! this thou should'st have
done,

And not have spoke on 't. In me 't is vil-lany;

In thee 't had been good service. Thou must know 81

'T is not my profit that does lead mine honour;

Mine honour, it. Repent that e'er thy
tongue

Hath so betray'd thine act; being done unknown,

I should have found it afterwards well done.
But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.

Men. Aside. For this,
I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more.

Who seeks, and will not take when once 't is
offer'd,

Shall never find it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidus!

Ant. Bear him ashore. I'll pledge it for him, Pompey. 91

Eno. Here 's to thee, Menas!

Men. Enobarbus, welcome!

Pom. Fill till the cup be hid.

Eno. There 's a strong fellow, Menas.

Pointing to the Attendant who carries off LEPIDUS.

Men. Why?

Eno. A' bears the third part of the world,
man; see'st not?

Men. The third part then is drunk;
would it were all,

That it might go on wheels!

Eno. Drink thou; increase the reels. 100

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian
feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it. Strike the vessels, ho!

Here is to Cæsar!

Cæs. I could well forbear 't.
It 's monstrous labour, when I wash my brain,

And it grows fouler.

Ant. Be a child o' the time.

Cæs. Possess it, I'll make answer;
But I had rather fast from all four days

Than drink so much in one. 109

Eno. To ANTONY. Ha! my brave emperor;

Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals,

And celebrate our drink?

Pom. Let 's ha 't, good soldier.

Ant. Come, let us all take hands,

Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our sense
In soft and delicate Lethe.
Eno. All take hands.
Make battery to our ears with the loud
music;
The while I'll place you; then the boy shall sing,
The holding every man shall bear as loud
As his strong sides can volley.

Music plays. ENOBARBUS places them hand in hand.

SONG.

*Come, thou monarch of the vine, 120
Plumby Bacchus with pink eyne!
In thy vats our cares be drown'd,
With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd:
Cup us, till the world go round,
Cup us, till the world go round!*

Cæs. What would you more? Pompey,
good night. Good brother,
Let me request you off; our graver business
Frowns at this levity. Gentle lords, let 's
part;
You see we have burnt our cheeks; strong
Enobarb
Is weaker than the wine, and mine own
tongue 130
Splits what it speaks; the wild disguise hath almost Antick'd us all. What needs more words?
Good night.

Good Antony, your hand.

Pom. I'll try you on the shore.

Ant. And shall, sir. Give 's your hand.

Pom. O Antony!

You have my father's house,—But what?
we are friends.

Come down into the boat.

Eno. Take heed you fall not.

*Exeunt POMPEY, CÆSAR, ANTONY,
and Attendants.*

Menas, I'll not on shore.

Men. No, to my cabin.
These drums! these trumpets, flutes!
what!

Let Neptune hear we bid a loud farewell To these great fellows: sound and be hang'd! sound out!

A flourish of trumpets, with drums.

Eno. Hoo! says a'. There 's my cap. 141

Men. Hoo! Noble captain! come.

Exeunt.

ACT III

SCENE I.—A Plain in Syria.

Enter VENTIDIUS as it were in triumph, with SILIUS, and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers; the dead body of PACORUS borne before him.

Ven. Now, darting Parthia, art thou struck; and now
Pleas'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus'
death

Make me revenger. Bear the king's son's
body

Before our army. Thy Pacorus, Orides, Pays this for Marcus Crassus.

Sil. Noble Ventidius, Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is
warm,
The fugitive Parthians follow; spur through Media,
Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither
The routed fly; so thy grand captain Antony
Shall set thee on triumphant chariots and 10
Put garlands on thy head.

Ven. O Silius, Silius!
I have done enough; a lower place, note
well,
May make too great an act; for learn this,
Silius,

Better to leave undone than by our deed
Acquire too high a fame when him we serve
's away.

Cæsar and Antony have ever won
More in their officer than person; Sossius,
One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant,
For quick accumulation of renown,
Which he achiev'd by the minute, lost his
favour. 20

Who does i' the wars more than his captain can

Becomes his captain's captain; and ambition,

The soldier's virtue, rather makes choice of loss

Than gain which darkens him.
I could do more to do Antonius good,
But 't would offend him; and in his offence
Should my performance perish.

Sil. Thou hast, Ventidius, that Without the which a soldier, and his sword, Grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony? 29

Ven. I'll humbly signify what in his
name,

That magical word of war, we have effected;
How, with his banners and his well-paid ranks,

The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia
We have jaded out o' the field.

Sil. Where is he now?

Ven. He purposeth to Athens; whither, with what haste

The weight we must convey with 's will permit,

We shall appear before him. On, there;
pass along. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Rome. A Room in CÆSAR'S
House.

Enter AGRIPPA and ENOBARBUS, meeting.

Agr. What! are the brothers parted?

Eno. They have dispatch'd with Pompey;
he is gone,

The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps

To part from Rome; Cæsar is sad; and Lepidus,

Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled

With the green sickness.

Agr. 'T is a noble Lepidus.

Eno. A very fine one. O! how he loves
Cæsar.

Ag. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark Antony!

E. Cæsar? Why, he 's the Jupiter of men.

Ag. What 's Antony? The god of Jupiter.

E. Spake you of Cæsar? How! the nonpareil!

Ag. O Antony! O thou Arabian bird!

E. Would you praise Cæsar, say 'Cæsar'; go no further.

Ag. Indeed, he plied them both with excellent praises.

E. But he loves Cæsar best; yet he loves Antony.

Hoo! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets, cannot Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number; hoo!

His love to Antony. But as for Cæsar, Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Ag. Both he loves.

E. They are his shards, and he their beetle. Trumpets within.

So;
This is to horse. Adieu, noble Agrippa. 21

Ag. Good fortune, worthy soldier, and farewell.

Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, and OCTAVIA.

Ant. No further, sir.

Cæs. You take from me a great part of myself;

Use me well in 't. Sister, prove such a wife As my thoughts make thee, and as my furthest band Shall pass on thy approval. Most noble

Antony,

Let not the piece of virtue, which is set Betwixt us as the cement of our love

To keep it builded, be the ram to batter 30 The fortress of it; for better might we Havelov'd without this mean, if on both parts This be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended In your distrust.

Cæs. I have said.

Ant. You shall not find, Though you be therein curious, the least cause For what you seem to fear. So, the gods keep you, And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends! We will here part.

Cæs. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well.

The elements be kind to thee, and make 40 Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.

Octa. My noble brother!

Ant. The April 's in her eyes; it is love's spring,

And these the showers to bring it on. Be cheerful.

Octa. Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—

Cæs. What, Octavia?

Octa. I 'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can

Her heart inform her tongue,—the swan's down-feather,

That stands upon the swell at full of tide, And neither way inclines. 49

E. Aside to AGRIPPA. Will Cæsar weep?

Ag. He has a cloud in 's face.

E. He were the worse for that were he a horse;

So is he, being a man.

Ag. Why, Enobarbus, When Antony found Julius Cæsar dead

He cried almost to roaring; and he wept When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

E. That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum;

What willingly he did confound he wail'd, Believe 't, till I wept too.

Cæs. No, sweet Octavia, You shall hear from me still; the time shall not 60 Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant. Come, sir, come; I 'll wrestle with you in my strength of love:

Look, here I have you; thus I let you go, And give you to the gods.

Cæs. Adieu; be happy!

Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light

To thy fair way!

Cæs. Farewell, farewell!

Ant. Kisses OCTAVIA. Farewell!

Trumpets sound. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex. Half afraid to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to. Come hither, sir.

Enter the Messenger.

Alex. Good majesty,

Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you But when you are well pleas'd.

Cleo. That Herod's head I 'll have; but how, when Antony is gone Through whom I might command it? Come thou near.

Mess. Most gracious majesty!

Cleo. Didst thou behold Octavia?

Mess. Ay, dread queen.

Cleo. Where?

Mess. Madam, in Rome;

I look'd her in the face, and saw her led 12 Between her brother and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mess. She is not, madam.

Cleo. Didst hear her speak? is she shrill-tongued or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak; she is low-voiced.

Cleo. That 's not so good. He cannot like her long.

Char. Like her! O Isis! 't is impossible.
Cleo. I think so, Charmian: dull of tongue, and dwarfish!
 What majesty is in her gait? Remember, 20
 If e'er thou look'dst on majesty.

Mess. She creeps;
 Her motion and her station are as one;
 She shows a body rather than a life,
 A statue than a breather.

Cleo. Is this certain?
Mess. Or I have no observance.
Char. Three in Egypt
 Cannot make better note.

Cleo. He's very knowing,
 I do perceive 't. There's nothing in her yet.
 The fellow has good judgment.

Char. Excellent.
Cleo. Guess at her years, I prithee.

Mess. Madam,
 She was a widow, —

Cleo. Widow! Charmian, hark.
Mess. And I do think she's thirty. 31

Cleo. Bear'st thou her face in mind? is 't long or round?

Mess. Round even to faultiness.
Cleo. For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so.

Her hair, what colour?
Mess. Brown, madam; and her forehead
 As low as she would wish it.

Cleo. There's gold for thee:
 Thou must not take my former sharpness ill.
 I will employ thee back again; I find thee
 Most fit for business. Go make thee ready;
 Our letters are prepar'd. Exit Messenger.

Char. A proper man.
Cleo. Indeed, he is so; I repent me much That so I harried him. Why, methinks, by
 him, 43

This creature's no such thing.
Char. Nothing, madam.

Cleo. The man has seen some majesty, and should know.

Char. Hath he seen majesty? Isis else defend,

And serving you so long!
Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him
 yet, good Charmian:

But 't is no matter; thou shalt bring him to
 me, 44

Where I will write. All may be well enough.
Char. I warrant you, madam. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Athens. A Room in ANTONY'S House.

Enter ANTONY and OCTAVIA.

Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,
 That were excusable, that, and thousands
 more

Of semblable import, but he hath wag'd
 New wars 'gainst Pompey; made his will,
 and read it

To public ear:
 Spoke scanty of me; when perforce he could not

But pay me terms of honour, cold and sickly
 He vented them; most narrow measure lent
 me;

When the best hint was given him, he not took 't,

Or did it from his teeth.

Octa. O my good lord!
 Believe not all; or, if you must believe, 11
 Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady,
 If this division chance, ne'er stood between,
 Praying for both parts:

The good gods will mock me presently,
 When I shall pray, 'O! bless my lord and
 husband';

Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud,
 'O! bless my brother.' Husband win, win
 brother,

Prays, and destroys the prayer; no midway
 'Twixt these extremes at all.

Ant. Gentle Octavia, Let your best love draw to that point which seeks 21

Best to preserve it. If I lose mine honour
 I lose myself; better I were not yours

Than yours so branchless. But, as you requested,

Yourself shall go between's; the mean time, lady,

I'll raise the preparation of a war
 Shall stain your brother; make your soonest haste,

So your desires are yours.

Octa. Thanks to my lord.
 The Jove of power make me most weak,
 most weak,

Your reconciler! Wars 'twixt you twain would be 30

As if the world should cleave, and that slain
 men

Should solder up the rift.

Ant. When it appears to you where this begins,

Turn your displeasure that way; for our faults

Can never be so equal that your love Can equally move with them. Provide your going;

Choose your own company, and command
 what cost

Your heart has mind to. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter ENOBARBUS and EROS, meeting.

Eno. How now, friend Eros!

Eros. There's strange news come, sir.

Eno. What, man?

Eros. Cæsar and Lepidus have made wars upon Pompey.

Eno. This is old: what is the success?

Eros. Cæsar, having made use of him in the wars 'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivalry, would not let him partake in the glory of the action; and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal, seizes him: so the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine. 13

Eno. Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps, no more;

And throw between them all the food thou
 hast,

They'll grind the one the other. Where's Antony?

Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus; and spurns The rush that lies before him; cries 'Fool, Lepidus!'

And threats the throat of that his officer That murder'd Pompey.

Eno. Our great navy's rigg'd.

Eros. For Italy and Cæsar. More, Domitius; 21

My lord desires you presently: my news I might have told hereafter.

Eno. 'T will be naught;

But let it be. Bring me to Antony.

Eros. Come, sir. Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Rome. A Room in CÆSAR'S House.

Enter CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, and MECÆNAS.

Cæs. Contemning Rome, he has done all this, and more,

In Alexandria; here's the manner of 't; P the market-place, on a tribunal silver'd, Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold Were publicly enthron'd; at the feet sat Cæsarion, whom they call my father's son, And all the unlawful issue that their lust Since then hath made between them. Unto her

He gave the stablishment of Egypt; made her

Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, 10
Absolute queen.

Mec. This in the public eye?

Cæs. P the common show-place, where they exercise.

His sons he there proclaim'd the kings of kings;

Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia

He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd

Syria, Cilicia, and Phœnicia. She

In the habiliments of the goddess Isis

That day appear'd; and oft before gave audience,

As 't is reported, so.

Mec.

Let Rome be thus

Inform'd.

Ag. Who, queasy with his insolence Already, will their good thoughts call from him. 21

Cæs. The people know it; and have now receiv'd

His accusations.

Ag. Whom does he accuse?

Cæs. Cæsar; and that, having in Sicily Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him

His part o' the isle; then does he say he lent me

Some shipping unrestor'd; lastly, he frets

That Lepidus of the triumvirate

Should be depos'd; and, being, that we detain

All his revenue.

Ag. Sir, this should be answer'd.

Cæs. 'T is done already, and the messenger gone. 31

I have told him, Lepidus was grown too cruel;

That he his high authority abus'd, And did deserve his change: for what I have conquer'd,

I grant him part; but then, in his Armenia, And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I Demand the like.

Mec. He'll never yield to that.

Cæs. Nor must not then be yielded to in this.

Enter OCTAVIA, with her Train.

Octa. Hail, Cæsar, and my lord! hail, most dear Cæsar!

Cæs. That ever I should call thee castaway! 40

Octa. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.

Cæs. Why have you stol'n upon us thus? You come not Like Cæsar's sister; the wife of Antony

Should have an army for an usher, and

The neighs of horse to tell of her approach

Long ere she did appear; the trees by the way

Should have borne men; and expectation faint'd,

Longing for what it had not; nay, the dust Should have ascended to the roof of heaven,

Rais'd by your populous troops. But you are come 50

A market-maid to Rome, and have prevented

The ostentation of our love, which, left unshown,

Is often left unlov'd: we should have met you

By sea and land, supplying every stage

With an augmented greeting.

Octa. Good my lord,

To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it

On my free will. My lord, Mark Antony, Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted

My grieved ear withal; whereon, I begg'd His pardon for return.

Cæs. Which soon he granted,

Being an obstruct 'tween his lust and him. 61

Octa. Do not say so, my lord.

Cæs. I have eyes upon him,

And his affairs come to me on the wind.

Where is he now?

Octa. My lord, in Athens.

Cæs. No, my most wronged sister; Cleopatra

Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his empire

Up to a whore; who now are levying

The kings o' the earth for war. He hath assembled

Bocchus, the King of Libya; Archelaus,

Of Cappadocia; Philadelphos, King 70

Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adal-las;

King Malchus of Arabia; King of Pont;

Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, King

Of Comagene; Polemon and Amyntas,

The Kings of Mede and Lycaonia,
With a more larger list of sceptres.

Octa. Ay me, most wretched,
That have my heart parted betwixt two
friends

That do afflict each other!

Cæs. Welcome hither:
Your letters did withhold our breaking
forth,

Till we perceiv'd both how you were wrong
led

And we in negligent danger. Cheer your
heart;

Be you not troubled with the time, which drives

O'er your content these strong necessities,
But let determin'd things to destiny

Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome;

Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd
Beyond the mark of thought, and the high
gods,

To do you justice, make their ministers
Of us and those that love you. Best of comfort,

And ever welcome to us.

Ag. Welcome, lady.
Mec. Welcome, dear madam.

Each heart in Rome does love and pity you;
Only the adulterous Antony, most large
In his abominations, turns you off,
And gives his potent regiment to a trull,
That noises it against us.

Octa. Is it so, sir?
Cæs. Most certain. Sister, welcome;
pray you,
Be ever known to patience; my dear'st sister!
Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—ANTONY'S Camp, near the Promontory of Actium.

Enter CLEOPATRA and ENOBARBUS.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it
not.

Eno. But why, why, why?

Cleo. Thou hast forspoke my being in these wars,

And say'st it is not fit.

Eno. Well, is it, is it?

Cleo. If not denounc'd against us, why should not we

Be there in person?

Eno. Aside. Well, I could reply:

If we should serve with horse and mares
together,

The horse were merely lost; the mares would bear

A soldier and his horse.

Cleo. What is 't you say?

Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle
Antony;

Take from his heart, take from his brain,
from 's time,

What should not then be spar'd. He is already

Traduc'd for levity, and 't is said in Rome
That Photinus, an eunuch, and your maids Manage this war.

Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues rot
That speak against us! A charge we bear
i' the war,

And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it;
I will not stay behind.

Eno. Nay, I have done. 20
Here comes the emperor.

Enter ANTONY and CANIDIUS.

Ant. Is it not strange, Canidius,
That from Tarentum and Brundisium
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in Toryne? You have heard on 't,
sweet?

Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd
Than by the negligent.

Ant. A good rebuke, Which might have well becom'd the best of
men,

To taunt at slackness. Canidius, we
Will fight with him by sea.

Cleo. By sea! What else?

Can. Why will my lord do so?

Ant. For that he dares us to 't.

Eno. So hath my lord dar'd him to single
fight.

Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Phar-salia,

Where Cæsar fought with Pompey; but these offers,

Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes
off;

And so should you.

Eno. Your ships are not well mann'd;
Your mariners are muleters, reapers, people
Ingross'd by swift impress; in Cæsar's fleet
Are those that often have 'gainst Pompey
fought:

Their ships are yare; yours, heavy. No disgrace

Shall fall you for refusing him at sea, 30
Being prepar'd for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea.

Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw
away

The absolute soldiership you have by land;
Distract your army, which doth most consist

Of war-mark'd footmen; leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego
The way which promises assurance; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard

From firm security.

Ant. I'll fight at sea.

Cleo. I have sixty sails, Cæsar none better.

Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn;

And with the rest, full-mann'd, from the head of Actium

Beat the approaching Cæsar. But if we fail,
We then can do 't at land.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy business?

Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is descried;

Cæsar has taken Toryne.

Ant. Can he be there in person? 't is impossible;
Strange that his power should be. Canidius,
Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land,
And our twelve thousand horse. We'll to our ship:
Away, my Thetis!

Enter a Soldier.

How now, worthy soldier! 60
Sold. O noble emperor! do not fight by sea;
Trust not to rotten planks: do you misdoubt
This sword and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians
And the Phœnicians go a-ducking; we Have used to conquer standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well: away!

Exeunt ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, and ENOBARBUS.

Sold. By Hercules, I think I am i' the right.

Can. Soldier, thou art; but his whole action grows 69

Not in the power on 't: so our leader's led,
And we are women's men.

Sold. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you
not?

Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justeius, Publicola, and Cælius, are for sea;
But we keep whole by land. This speed of Cæsar's

Carries beyond belief.

Sold. While he was yet in Rome
His power went out in such distractions as Beguil'd all spies.

Can. Who's his lieutenant, hear you?

Sold. They say, one Taurus.

Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The emperor calls Canidius. 80

Can. With news the time's with labour, and throes forth
Each minute some. Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—A Plain near Actium.

Enter CÆSAR, TAURUS, Officers, and Others.

Cæs. Taurus!

Taur. My lord?

Cæs. Strike not by land; keep whole:
provoke not battle,
Till we have done at sea. Do not exceed
The prescript of this scroll: our fortune lies Upon this jump. Exeunt.

Enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on yond side
o' the hill,
In eye of Cæsar's battle; from which place
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. Exeunt. 10

Enter CANIDIUS, marching with his land army one way over the stage; and TAU-RUS, the Lieutenant of CÆSAR, the other way. After their going in, is heard the noise of a sea-fight.

Alarum. Re-enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer.
The Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral,
With all their sixty, fly, and turn the rudder;
To see 't mine eyes are blasted.

Enter SCARUS.

Scar. Gods and goddesses,
All the whole synod of them!

Eno. What's thy passion?

Scar. The greater cantele of the world is lost

With very ignorance; we have kiss'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight?

Scar. On our side like the token'd pestilence,

Where death is sure. Yon ribaudred nag of Egypt, 20

Whom leprosy o'ertake! i' the midst o' the
fight,

When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder,
The breese upon her, like a cow in June,
Hoists sails and flies.

Eno. That I beheld:

Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could
not

Endure a further view.

Scar. She once being loof'd,
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony, Claps on his sea-wing, and like a doting
mallard, 29

Leaving the fight in height, flies after her.
I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before
Did violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack!

Enter CANIDIUS.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of
breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general

Been what he knew himself, it had gone
well:
O! he has given example for our flight
Most grossly by his own.

Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts?

Why then good night indeed.

Can. Toward Peloponnesus are they fled. 40

Scar. 'T is easy to 't; and there I will attend

What further comes.

Can. To Cæsar will I render My legions and my horse; six kings already Show me the way of yielding.

Eno. I'll yet follow
The wounded chance of Antony, though my
reason

Sits in the wind against me. Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY and Attendants.

Ant. Hark! the land bids me tread no more upon 't;
It is asham'd to bear me. Friends, come hither:

I am so lated in the world that I
Have lost my way for ever. I have a ship
Laden with gold; take that, divide it; fly,
And make your peace with Cæsar.

Att. Fly! not we.
Ant. I have fled myself, and have instructed cowards
To run and show their shoulders. Friends, be gone;

I have myself resolv'd upon a course
Which has no need of you; be gone: 10
My treasure 's in the harbour, take it. O!
I follow'd that I blush to look upon:
My very hairs do mutiny, for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them

For fear and doting. Friends, be gone; you shall Have letters from me to some friends that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,

Nor make replies of loathness; take the hint

Which my despair proclaims; let that be left
Which leaves itself; to the sea-side straight-way; 20

I will possess you of that ship and treasure.
Leave me, I pray, a little; pray you now:
Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command,

Therefore I pray you. I'll see you by and by. Sits down.

Enter CLEOPATRA led by CHARMIAN and IRAS; EROS following.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him, comfort him.

Iras. Do, most dear queen.

Char. Do! Why, what else?

Cleo. Let me sit down. O Juno!

Ant. No, no, no, no, no.

Eros. See you here, sir? 30

Ant. O fie, fie, fie!

Char. Madam!

Iras. Madam; O good empress!

Eros. Sir, sir!

Ant. Yes, my lord, yes. He at Philippi kept

His sword e'en like a dancer, while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and 't was I
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on lieutenantry, and no practice had
In the brave squares of war: yet now—No matter. 40

Cleo. Ah! stand by.

Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.

Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him:
He is unqualitied with very shame.

Cleo. Well then, sustain me: O!

Eros. Most noble sir, arise; the queen approaches;

Her head 's declin'd, and death will seize her, but

Your comfort makes the rescue.

Ant. I have offended reputation,

A most unnoble swerving.

Eros. Sir, the queen.

Ant. O! whither hast thou led me, Egypt! 5

See,

How I convey my shame out of thine eyes
By looking back on what I have left behind
Stroy'd in dishonour.

Cleo. O my lord, my lord!
Forgive my fearful sails: I little thought
You would have follow'd.

Ant. Egypt, thou knew'st too well
My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings,

And thou should'st tow me after; o'er my spirit

Thy full supremacy thou knew'st, and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods 60

Command me.

Cleo. O! my pardon.

Ant. Now I must
To the young man send humble treaties, dodge

And palter in the shifts of lowness, who
With half the bulk o' the world play'd as I pleas'd,

Making and marring fortunes. You did know

How much you were my conqueror, and that My sword, made weak by my affection, would

Obeys it on all cause.

Cleo. Pardon, pardon!

Ant. Fall not a tear, I say; one of them rates

All that is won and lost. Give me a kiss; 70
Even this repays me. We sent our schoolmaster;

Is he come back? Love, I am full of lead.
Some wine, within there, and our viands!

Fortune knows
We scorn her, most when most she offers blows. Exeunt

SCENE X.—Egypt. CÆSAR'S Camp.

Enter CÆSAR, DOLABELLA, THYREUS, and Others.

Cæs. Let him appear that 's come from Antony.

Know you him?

Dol. Cæsar, 't is his schoolmaster:
An argument that he is pluck'd, when hither
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing,
Which had superfluous kings for messengers
Not many moons gone by.

Enter EUPHRONIUS.

Cæs. Approach, and speak.

Euph. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
I was of late as petty to his ends
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle-leaf
To his grand sea.

Cæs. Be 't so. Declare thine office.

Euph. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee and Requires to live in Egypt; which not granted,
He lessens his requests, and to thee sues
To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,

A private man in Athens; this for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness,
Submits her to thy might, and of thee craves
The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy grace.

Cæs. For Antony,
I have no ears to his request. The queen 20
Of audience nor desire shall fail, so she
From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend,
Or take his life there; this if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.

Euph. Fortune pursue thee!

Cæs. Bring him through the bands.

Exit EUPHRONIUS.

To THYREUS. To try thy eloquence, now
'tis time; dispatch.

From Antony win Cleopatra; promise,
And in our name, what she requires; add
more,

From thine invention, offers. Women are
not

In their best fortunes strong, but want will perjure 30

The ne'er-touch'd vestal. Try thy cunning, Thyreus;

Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we

Will answer as a law.

Thyr. Cæsar, I go.

Cæs. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw,

And what thou think'st his very action
speaks

In every power that moves.

Thyr. Cæsar, I shall. Exeunt.

SCENE XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHAR-MIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

Eno. Think, and die.

Cleo. Is Antony or we in fault for this?

Eno. Antony only, that would make his will

Lord of his reason. What though you fled From that great face of war, whose several ranges

Frighted each other, why should he follow?
The itch of his affection should not then

Have nick'd his captainship; at such a
point,

When half to half the world oppos'd, he being

The mered question. 'T was a shame no
less 10

Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,

And leave his navy gazing.

Cleo. Prithee, peace.

Enter ANTONY, with EUPHRONIUS.

Ant. Is that his answer?

Euph. Ay, my lord.

Ant. The queen shall then have courtesy,
so she

Will yield us up.

Euph. He says so.

Ant.

Let her know 't.
To the boy Cæsar send this grizzled head,
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim

With principalities.

Cleo. That head, my lord?

Ant. To him again. Tell him he wears the rose 20

Of youth upon him, from which the world should note

Something particular; his coin, ships, legions,

May be a coward's, whose ministers would prevail

Under the service of a child as soon

As i' the command of Cæsar: I dare him therefore

To lay his gay comparisons apart,

And answer me declin'd, sword against
sword,

Ourselves alone. I'll write it: follow me.

Exeunt ANTONY and EUPHRONIUS.

Eno. Aside. Yes, like enough, high-battled Cæsar will

Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd to the
show 30

Against a sworder! I see men's judgments
are

A parcel of their fortunes, and things outward

Do draw the inward quality after them,
To suffer all alike. That he should dream,

Knowing all measures, the full Cæsar will Answer his emptiness! Cæsar, thou hast subdu'd

His judgment too.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. A messenger from Cæsar.

Cleo. What! no more ceremony? See!
my women:

Against the blown rose may they stop their
nose,

That kneel'd unto the buds. Admit him,
sir. Exit Attendant.

Eno. Aside. Mine honesty and I begin to square. 41

The loyalty well held to fools does make
Our faith mere folly; yet he that can endure

To follow with allegiance a fall'n lord,
Does conquer him that did his master conquer,

And earns a place i' the story.

Enter THYREUS.

Cleo. Cæsar's will?

Thyr. Hear it apart.

Cleo. None but friends; say boldly.

Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to An-
tony.

Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Cæsar has,

Or needs not us. If Cæsar please, our master 50

Will leap to be his friend; for us, you
know
Whose he is we are, and that is Cæsar's.

Thyr. So.
Thus then, thou most renown'd: Cæsar en-treats,

Not to consider in what case thou stand'st,
Further than he is Cæsar.

Cleo. Go on; right royal.

Thyr. He knows that you embrace not
Antony

As you did love, but as you fear'd him.

Cleo. O!

Thyr. The scars upon your honour therefore he

Does pity, as constrained blemishes, 59
Not as deserv'd.

Cleo. He is a god, and knows What is most right. Mine honour was not yielded,

But conquer'd merely.

Eno. Aside. To be sure of that,
I will ask Antony. Sir, sir, thou art so leaky,
That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee. Exit.

Thyr. Shall I say to Cæsar
What you require of him? for he partly begs
To be desir'd to give. It much would please
him,

That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon; but it would warm his spirits
To hear from me you had left Antony, 70
And put yourself under his shroud,
The universal landlord.

Cleo. What's your name?

Thyr. My name is Thyreus.

Cleo. Most kind messenger,
Say to great Cæsar this: in deputation
I kiss his conquer'ing hand; tell him, I am prompt

To lay my crown at's feet, and there to kneel;

Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear
The doom of Egypt.

Thyr. 'T is your noblest course.
Wisdom and fortune combating together,
If that the former dare but what it can, 80
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay

My duty on your hand.

Cleo. Your Cæsar's father oft,
When he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in,
Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place
As it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders!
What art thou, fellow?

Thyr. One that but performs
The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest

To have command obey'd.

Eno. Aside. You will be whipp'd.

Ant. Approach, there! Ay, you kite!

Now, gods and devils!

Authority melts from me: of late, when I cried 'Ho!' 90

Like boys unto a muss, kings would start
forth,

And cry 'Your will?' Have you no ears? I am

Antony yet,

Enter Attendants.

Take hence this Jack and whip him.

Eno. Aside. 'T is better playing with a lion's whelp

Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Moon and stars!

Whip him. Were 't twenty of the greatest tributaries

That do acknowledge Cæsar, should I find
them

So saucy with the hand of—she here, what's her name, 98

Since she was Cleopatra? Whip him, fellows,

Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face
And whine aloud for mercy; take him hence.

Thyr. Mark Antony,—

Ant. Tug him away; being whipp'd, Bring him again; this Jack of Cæsar's shall Bear us an errand to him.

Exeunt Attendants with THYREUS.

You were half blasted ere I knew you: ha!
Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome,
Forborne the getting of a lawful race,
And by a gem of women, to be abus'd
By one that looks on feeders?

Cleo. Good my lord,—

Ant. You have been a boggler ever: 110
But when we in our viciousness grow hard,
O misery on 't! the wise gods seel our
eyes;

In our own filth drop our clear judgments;
make us

Adore our errors; laugh at 's, while we strut
To our confusion.

Cleo. O! is 't come to this?

Ant. I found you as a morsel cold upon Dead Cæsar's trencher, nay; you were a fragment

Of Cneius Pompey's; besides what hotter
hours,

Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have Luxuriously pick'd out; for I am sure, 120

Though you can guess what temperance
should be,

You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this?

Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards
And say 'God quit you!' be familiar with

My playfellow, your hand; this kingly seal
And plighter of high hearts. O! that I were

Upon the hill of Basan, to outroar
The horned herd; for I have savage cause;

And to proclaim it civilly were like
A halter'd neck, which does the hangman

thank 130
For being yare about him.

Re-enter Attendants with THYREUS.

Is he whipp'd?

First Att. Soundly, my lord.

Ant. Cried he? and begg'd a pardon?

First Att. He did ask favour.

Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent

Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou sorry
To follow Cæsar in his triumph, since Thou hast been whipp'd for following him:
henceforth

The white hand of a lady fever thee,
Shake thou to look on 't. Get thee back to
Cæsar,

Tell him thy entertainment; look thou say
He makes me angry with him; for he seems Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was: he makes me
angry;

And at this time most easy 't is to do 't,
When my good stars, that were my former guides,

Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires

Into the abyssm of hell. If he mislike
My speech and what is done, tell him he has

Hipparchus, my enfranchis'd bondman, whom

He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,

As he shall like, to quit me: urge it thou:
Hence! with thy stripes; be gone!

Exit THYREUS.

Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alack! our terrestre moon
Is now eclips'd; and it portends alone
The fall of Antony.

Cleo. I must stay his time.
Ant. To flatter Cæsar would you mingle
eyes

With one that ties his points?

Cleo. Not know me yet?
Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah! dear, if I be so,
From my cold heart let heaven engender
hail,

And poison it in the source; and the first stone

Drop in my neck: as it determines, so Dissolve my life. The next Cæsarion smite,
Till by degrees the memory of my womb,
Together with my brave Egyptians all,
By the discandying of this pelleted storm,
Lie graveless, till the flies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey!

Ant. I am satisfied.
Cæsar sits down in Alexandria, where
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly held; our sever'd navy too Have knit again, and fleet, threat'ning most sealike.

Where hast thou been, my heart? Dost thou hear, lady?

If from the field I shall return once more
To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;
I and my sword will earn our chronicle:
There's hope in 't yet.

Cleo. That's my brave lord!
Ant. I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted,
breath'd,

And fight maliciously; for when mine hours
Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
Of me for jests; but now I'll set my teeth

And send to darkness all that stop me.
Come,

Let's have one other gaudy night: call to
me

All my sad captains; fill our bowls once
more;

Let's mock the midnight bell.

Cleo. It is my birth-day:
I had thought to have held it poor; but since
my lord

Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We will yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my
lord.

Ant. Do so, we'll speak to them; and tonight I'll force

The wine peep through their scars. Come on, my queen;

There's sap in 't yet. The next time I do
fight

I'll make death love me, for I will contend
Even with his pestilent scythe.

Exeunt ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, and Attendants.

Eno. Now he'll outstare the lightning. To be furious

Is to be frighted out of fear, and in that mood

The dove will peck the estridge; and I see
still,

A diminution in our captain's brain Restores his heart. When valour preys on reason

It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek
Some way to leave him. Exit. 201

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Before Alexandria. CÆSAR'S
Camp.

Enter CÆSAR, reading a letter; AGRIPPA, MECÆNAS, and Others.

Cæs. He calls me boy, and chides, as he had power

To beat me out of Egypt; my messenger
He hath whipp'd with rods; dares me to personal combat,

Cæsar to Antony. Let the old ruffian know
I have many other ways to die; meantime
Laugh at his challenge.

Mec. Cæsar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted

Even to falling. Give him no breath, but
now

Make boot of his distraction: never anger
Made good guard for itself.

Cæs. Let our best heads
Know that to-morrow the last of many battles

We mean to fight. Within our files there
are,

Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but
late,

Enough to fetch him in. See it done;
And feast the army; we have store to do 't,
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony! Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and Others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius.

Eno. No.

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,

He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To-morrow, soldier, By sea and land I'll fight: or I will live, Or bathe my dying honour in the blood Shall make it live again. Woo't thou fight well?

Eno. I'll strike, and cry 'Take all.'

Ant. Well said; come on. Call forth my household servants; let's to-night

Be bounteous at our meal.

Enter three or four Servitors.

Give me thy hand. Thou hast been rightly honest; so hast thou;

Thou; and thou; and thou: you have serv'd me well,

And kings have been your fellows.

Cleo. Aside to ENOBARBUS. What means this?

Eno. 'Tis one of those odd tricks which sorrow shoots Out of the mind.

Ant. And thou art honest too. I wish I could be made so many men, And all of you clapp'd up together in An Antony, that I might do you service So good as you have done.

Servitors. The gods forbid! Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-night:

Scant not my cups, and make as much of me As when mine empire was your fellow too, And suffer'd my command.

Cleo. Aside to ENOBARBUS. What does he mean?

Eno. To make his followers weep.

Ant. Tend me to-night; May be it is the period of your duty:

Haply you shall not see me more; or if, A mangled shadow: perchance to-morrow You'll serve another master. I look on you

As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friends,

I turn you not away; but, like a master Married to your good service, stay till death. Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more, And the gods yield you for't!

Eno. What mean you, sir, To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep;

And I, an ass, am onion-eyed: for shame, Transform us not to women.

Ant. Ho, ho, ho! Now the witch take me, if I meant it thus: Grace grow where those drops fall! My hearty friends,

You take me in too dolorous a sense, For I spake to you for your comfort; did desire you

To burn this night with torches. Know, my hearts,

I hope well of to-morrow; and will lead you

Where rather I'll expect victorious life Than death and honour. Let's to supper.

And drown consideration. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter two Soldiers to their guard.

First Sold. Brother, good-night; to-morrow is the day.

Second Sold. It will determine one way: fare you well.

Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

First Sold. Nothing. What news?

Second Sold. Belike 'tis but a rumour. Good night to you.

First Sold. Well, sir, good night.

Enter two other Soldiers.

Second Sold. Soldiers, have careful watch.

Third Sold. And you. Good night, good night. The first two place themselves at their posts.

Fourth Sold. Here we: They take their posts.

Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope 10 Our landmen will stand up.

Third Sold. 'Tis a brave army, And full of purpose.

Music of hautboys under the stage. Fourth Sold. Peace! what noise?

First Sold. List, list!

Second Sold. Hark!

First Sold. Music! 'the air.

Third Sold. Under the earth.

Fourth Sold. It signs well, does it not?

Third Sold. No.

First Sold. Peace, I say!

What should this mean?

Second Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony lov'd, Now leaves him.

First Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen

Do hear what we do.

They advance to another post. Second Sold. How now, masters!

Soldiers. How now!—

How now!—do you hear this?

First Sold. Ay; is 't not strange?

Third Sold. Do you hear, masters? do you hear?

First Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter;

Let's see how 't will give off.

Soldiers. Content.—'Tis strange.

Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA; CHARMIAN and Others attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!

Cleo. Sleep a little.

Ant. No, my chuck. Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!

Enter EROS with armour.

Come, good fellow, put mine iron on:

If fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her. Come.

Cleo. Nay, I'll help too.

What's this for?

Ant. Ah! let be, let be; thou art The armourer of my heart: false, false; this, this.

Cleo. Sooth, la! I'll help: thus it must be.

Ant. Well, well;

We shall thrive now. Seest thou, my good fellow?

Go put on thy defences.

Eros. Briefly, sir. 10

Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Ant. Rarely, rarely:

He that unbuckles this, till we do please

To doff 't for our repose, shall hear a storm.

Thou fumblest, Eros; and my queen's a squire

More tight at this than thou: dispatch. O

love!

That thou could'st see my wars to-day, and knew'st

The royal occupation, thou should'st see

A workman in 't.

Enter an armed Soldier.

Good morrow to thee; welcome;

Thou look'st like him that knows a war-like

charge:

To business that we love we rise betime, 20

And go to 't with delight.

Sold. A thousand, sir,

Early though 't be, have on their riveted

trim,

And at the port expect you.

Shout. Trumpets flourish.

Enter Captains and Soldiers.

Capt. The morn is fair. Good morrow,

general.

All. Good morrow, general.

Ant. 'T is well blown, lads.

This morning, like the spirit of a youth

That means to be of note, begins betimes.

So, so; come, give me that: this way; well

said.

Fare thee well, dame, what'er becomes of

me;

This is a soldier's kiss. Kisses her.

Rebukable 30

And worthy shameful check it were, to

stand

On more mechanic compliment; I'll leave

thee

Now, like a man of steel. You that will fight, Follow me close; I'll bring you to 't. Adieu.

Exeunt ANTONY, EROS, Captains, and Soldiers.

Char. Please you, retire to your chamber.

Cleo. Lead me.

He goes forth gallantly. That he and Cæsar might Determine this great war in single fight!

Then Antony,—but now—Well, on. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Alexandria. ANTONY'S Camp.

Trumpets sound. Enter ANTONY and EROS; a Soldier meeting them.

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony!

Ant. Would thou and those thy scars had once prevail'd

To make me fight at land!

Sold. Hadst thou done so, The kings that have revolted, and the soldier

That has this morning left thee, would have still

Follow'd thy heels.

Ant. Who's gone this morning?

Sold. Who!

One ever near thee; call for Enobarbus,

He shall not hear thee; or from Cæsar's

camp

Say 'I am none of thine.'

Ant. What say'st thou?

Sold. Sir,

He is with Cæsar.

Eros. Sir, his chests and treasure 10

He has not with him.

Ant. Is he gone?

Sold. Most certain.

Ant. Go, Eros, send his treasure after;

do it;

Detaim no jot, I charge thee. Write to him,

I will subscribe, gentle adieus and greet-

ings;

Say that I wish he never find more cause

To change a master. O! my fortunes have Corrupted honest men. Dispatch. Enobarbus! Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Alexandria. CÆSAR'S Camp.

Flourish. Enter CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, ENOBARBUS, and Others.

Cæs. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight:

Our will is Antony be took alive; Make it so known.

Agr. Cæsar, I shall. Exit.

Cæs. The time of universal peace is near:

Prove this a prosperous day, the threenook'd world

Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Antony Is come into the field.

Cæs. Go charge Agrippa

Plant those that have revolted in the van,

That Antony may seem to spend his fury 10
Upon himself.

Exeunt CÆSAR and his Train.

Eno. Alexas did revolt, and went to Jewry
on

Affairs of Antony; there did persuade Great Herod to incline himself to Cæsar,
And leave his master Antony: for this pains Cæsar hath hang'd him. Canidius and the rest

That fell away have entertainment, but
No honourable trust. I have done ill,
Of which I do accuse myself so sorely
That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of CÆSAR'S.

Sold. Enobarbus, Antony
Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with 21
His bounty overplus: the messenger
Came on my guard; and at thy tent is now
Unloading of his mules.

Eno. I give it you.

Sold. Mock not, Enobarbus.
I tell you true: best you saf'd the bringer
Out of the host; I must attend mine office Or would have done 't myself. Your emperor

Continues still a Jove.

Exit.

Eno. I am alone the villain of the earth, 30
And feel I am so most. O Antony!
Thou mine of bounty, how would'st thou have paid

My better service, when my turpitude
Thou dost so crown with gold. This blows
my heart:

If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean Shall outstrike thought; but thought will do 't I feel.

I fight against thee! No: I will go seek Some ditch wherein to die; the foul'st best fits

My latter part of life.

Exit.

SCENE VII.—Field of Battle between the Camps.

Alarum. Drums and trumpets. Enter AGRIPPA and Others.

Ag. Retire, we have engag'd ourselves too far.

Cæsar himself has work, and our oppression
Exceeds what we expected. Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter ANTONY, and SCARUS wounded.

Scar. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed!

Had we done so at first, we had droven them home

With clouts about their heads.

Ant. Thou bleed'st apace.

Scar. I had a wound here that was like
a T,

But now 't is made an H.

Ant. They do retire.

Scar. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes:
I have yet

Room for six scotches more. 10

Enter EROS.

Eros. They are beaten, sir; and our advantage serves
For a fair victory.

Scar. Let us score their backs,
And snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind:

'T is sport to maul a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee
Once for thy sprightly comfort, and ten-fold
For thy good valour. Come thee on.

Scar. I'll halt after. Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Under the Walls of Alexandria.

Alarum. Enter ANTONY, marching; SCARUS and Forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp; run one before

And let the queen know of our gests. Tomorrow,

Before the sun shall see 's, we'll spill the
blood

That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all;
For doughty-handed are you, and have
fought

Not as you serv'd the cause, but as 't had been

Each man's like mine; you have shown all Hectors.

Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends,
Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful tears

Wash the congealment from your wounds, and kiss 10

The honour'd gashes whole. Give me thy
hand:

Enter CLEOPATRA, attended.

To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts,
Make her thanks bless thee. O thou day
o' the world!

Chain mine arm'd neck; leap thou, attire
and all,

Through proof of harness to my heart, and
there

Ride on the pants triumphing.

Cleo. Lord of lords!
O infinite virtue! com'st thou smiling from
The world's great snare uncaught?

Ant. My nightingale,
We have beat them to their beds. What,

girl! though grey
Do something mingle with our younger

brown, yet ha' we 20

A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal from goal of youth. Behold this

man;

Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand:
Kiss it, my warrior; he hath fought to-day

As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy'd in such a shape.

Cleo. I'll give thee, friend,
An armour all of gold; it was a king's.

Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it carbun-clad

Like holy Phœbus' car. Give me thy hand:
Through Alexandria make a jolly march; 30

Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe them:

Had our great palace the capacity
To camp this host, we all would sup together
And drink carouses to the next day's fate,
Which promises royal peril. Trumpeters,
With brazen din blast you the city's ear,
Make mingle with our rattling tabourines,
That heaven and earth may strike their sounds together,
Applauding our approach. Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—CÆSAR'S Camp.

Sentinels at their Post.

First Sold. If we be not reliev'd within this hour,

We must return to the court of guard: the night

Is shiny, and they say we shall embattle By the second hour i' the morn.

Second Sold. This last day was A shrewd one to 's.

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. O bear me witness, night,—

Third Sold. What man is this?

Second Sold. Stand close and list him.

Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon,

When men revolted shall upon record
Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did Before thy face repent!

First Sold. Enobarbus!

Third Sold. Peace!

Hark further.

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy,

The poisonous damp of night disponge upon me,

That life, a very rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me; throw my heart
Against the flint and hardness of my fault,
Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,

And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony!

Nobler than my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular;

But let the world rank me in register

A master-leaver and a fugitive.

O Antony! O Antony! Dies.

Second Sold. Let's speak

To him.

First Sold. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks

May concern Cæsar.

Third Sold. Let's do so. But he sleeps.

First Sold. Swoons rather; for so bad a prayer as his

Was never yet for sleep.

Second Sold. Go we to him.

Third Sold. Awake, sir, awake! speak to us.

Second Sold. Hear you, sir?

First Sold. The hand of death hath raught him. Drums afar off.

Hark! the drums

Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us bear him

To the court of guard; he is of note: one hour

Is fully out. 33

Third Sold. Come on then;
He may recover yet. Exeunt with the body.

SCENE X.—Between the two Camps.

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS, with Forces, marching.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea;
We please them not by land.

Scar. For both, my lord.

Ant. I would they'd fight i' the fire or i' the air;

We'd fight there too. But this it is; our foot

Upon the hills, adjoining to the city

Shall stay with us; order for sea is given.

They have put forth the haven,

Where their appointment we may best discover

And look on their endeavour. Exeunt.

Enter CÆSAR and his Forces, marching.

Cæs. But being charg'd, we will be still by land,

Which, as I take't, we shall; for his best force

Is forth to man his galleys. To the vales,
And hold our best advantage! Exeunt.

Re-enter ANTONY and SCARUS.

Ant. Yet they are not join'd. Where yond pine does stand

I shall discover all; I'll bring thee word Straight how't is like to go. Exit.

Scar. Swallows have built
In Cleopatra's sails their nests; the augurers

Say they know not, they cannot tell; look grimly,

And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony

Is valiant, and dejected; and by starts,

His fretted fortunes give him hope and fear

Of what he has and has not.

Alarum afar off, as at a sea-fight.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Ant. All's lost!

This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me;
My fleet hath yielded to the foe, and yonder

They cast their caps up and carouse together
Like friends long lost. Triple-turn'd whore!

't is thou
Hast sold me to this novice, and my heart

Makes only wars on thee. Bid them all fly;
For when I am reveng'd upon my charm,

I have done all. Bid them all fly; be gone. 30
Exit SCARUS.

O sun! thy uprise shall I see no more;
Fortune and Antony part here; even here

Do we shake hands. All come to this? The hearts

That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave Their wishes, do discandy, melt their sweets

On blossoming Cæsar; and this pine is
bark'd,

That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am.
 O this false soul of Egypt! this grave charm,
 Whose eye beck'd forth my wars, and call'd them home,
 Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end,
 Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose,
 Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss.
 What, Eros! Eros!

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Ah! thou spell. Avaunt!
Cleo. Why is my lord enrag'd against his love?
Ant. Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserv-
 ing,
 And blemish Cæsar's triumph. Let him take thee,
 And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians;
 Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot
 Of all thy sex; most monster-like be shown
 For poor'st diminutives, for dolts; and let so Patient Octavia plough thy visage up With her prepared nails. Exit CLEOPATRA.
 'Tis well thou 'rt gone,

If it be well to live; but better 't were Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death
 Might have prevented many. Eros, ho!
 The shirt of Nessus is upon me; teach me,
 Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage;
 Let me lodge Lichas on the horns o' the moon;
 And with those hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club, Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall die;
 To the young Roman boy she hath sold me,
 and I fall
 Under this plot; she dies for 't. Eros, ho!
Exit.

SCENE XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Help me, my women! O! he is more mad Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly
 Was never so emboss'd.
Char. To the monument!
 There lock yourself, and send him word you are dead.
 The soul and body rive not more in parting
 Than greatness going off.

Cleo. To the monument!
 Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;
 Say that the last I spoke was 'Antony,'
 And word it, prithee, piteously. Hence, Mardian, and bring me how he takes my
 death.
 To the monument! Exeunt. 10

SCENE XII.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter ANTONY and EROS.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold 'st me?
Eros. Ay, noble lord.

Ant. Sometime we see a cloud that's dragonish;
 A vapour sometime like a bear or lion,
 A tower'd citadel, a pendent rock,
 A forked mountain, or blue promontory
 With trees upon 't, that nod unto the world
 And mock our eyes with air: thou hast seen these signs;
 They are black vesper's pageants.
Eros. Ay, my lord.
Ant. That which is now a horse, even with a thought
 The rack dislimns, and makes it indistinct,
 As water is in water.

Eros. It does, my lord.
Ant. My good knave Eros, now thy captain is
 Even such a body: here I am Antony;
 Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.
 I made these wars for Egypt; and the queen, Whose heart I thought I had, for she had
 mine,
 Which whilst it was mine had annex'd unto 't
 A million more, now lost; she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Cæsar, and false-play'd my glory
 Unto an enemy's triumph. 20
 Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us
 Ourselves to end ourselves.

Enter MARDIAN.

O! thy vile lady;
 She has robb'd me of my sword.
Mar. No, Antony;
 My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled
 With thine entirely.

Ant. Hence, saucy eunuch; peace!
 She hath betray'd me and shall die the
 death.

Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once,
 And that she has discharg'd. What thou would'st do
 Is done unto thy hand; the last she spake
 Was 'Antony! most noble Antony!' 30
 Then in the midst a tearing groan did break
 The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips. She render'd life,

Thy name so buried in her.
Ant. Dead, then?
Mar. Dead.

Ant. Unarm, Eros; the long day's task is
 done,
 And we must sleep. To MARDIAN. That thou depart'st hence safe,
 Does pay thy labour richly; go.

Exit MARDIAN.

Off, pluck off:
 The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep The battery from my heart. O! cleave, my sides; 39
 Heart, once be stronger than thy continent.
 Crack thy frail case! Apace, Eros, apace.
 No more a soldier; bruised pieces, go;
 You have been nobly borne. From me awhile. Exit EROS.

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now
All length is torture; since the torch is out, Lie down and stray no further. Now all
labour

Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles Itself with strength; seal then, and all is done.

Eros!—I come, my queen.—Eros!—Stay for me; <sup>50</sup>

Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll
hand in hand,

And with our sprightly port make the ghosts
gaze;

Dido and her Æneas shall want troops,
And all the haunt be ours. Come, Eros!
Eros!

Re-enter EROS.

Eros. What would my lord?

Ant. Since Cleopatra died,
I have liv'd in such dishonour, that the gods
Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back

With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack

The courage of a woman; less noble mind <sup>60</sup>
Than she which by her death our Cæsar tells
'I am conqueror of myself.' Thou art sworn,
Eros,

That when the exigent should come, which
now

Is come indeed, when I should see behind
me

The inevitable prosecution of Disgrace and horror, that on my command
Thou then would'st kill me: do 't; the time is come.

Thou strik'st not me, 'tis Cæsar thou defeat'st.

Put colour in thy cheek.

Eros. The gods withhold me!
Shall I do that which all the Parthian darts, <sup>70</sup>

Though enemy, lost aim and could not?

Ant. Eros, Would'st thou be window'd in great Rome,
and see

Thy master thus with pleach'd arms, bending down

His corrigible neck, his face subdued
To penetrative shame, whilst the wheel'd seat

Of fortunate Cæsar, drawn before him, branded

His baseness that ensued?

Eros. I would not see 't.

Ant. Come then; for with a wound I must be cur'd.

Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn

Most useful for thy country.

Eros. O, sir! pardon me.

Ant. When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then <sup>81</sup>

To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once,
Or thy precedent services are all
But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw, and come.

Eros. Turn from me then that noble countenance,

Wherein the worship of the whole world lies.

Ant. Lo thee! Turning from him.

Eros. My sword is drawn.

Ant. Then let it do at once
The thing why thou hast drawn it.

Eros. My dear master,
My captain, and my emperor, let me say, <sup>90</sup>
Before I strike this stroke, farewell.

Ant. 'Tis said, man; and farewell.

Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike now?

Ant. Now, Eros.

Eros. Why, there then; thus I do escape the sorrow

Of Antony's death. Kills himself.

Ant. Thrice-nobler than myself!
Thou teachest me, O valiant Eros, what I should, and thou could'st not. My queen and Eros

Have by their brave instruction got upon me
A nobleness in record; but I will be
A bridegroom in my death, and run into 't <sup>100</sup>

As to a lover's bed. Come then; and, Eros, Thy master dies thy scholar: to do thus
Falls on his sword.

I learn'd of thee. How! not dead? not
dead?

The guard, ho! O! dispatch me.

Enter DERCETAS and Guard.

First Guard. What's the noise?
Ant. I have done my work ill, friends:
O! make an end
Of what I have begun.

Second Guard. The star is fallen.

First Guard. And time is at his period.

All. Alas! and woe.

Ant. Let him that loves me strike me
dead.

First Guard. Not I.

Second Guard. Nor I.

Third Guard. Nor any one. Exeunt Guard.

Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly. <sup>111</sup>

This sword but shown to Cæsar, with this tidings,

Shall enter me with him.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Where's Antony?

Der. There, Diomed, there.

Dio. Lives he?

Wilt thou not answer, man? Exit DERCETAS.

Ant. Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword, and give me
Sufficing strokes for death.

Dio. Most absolute lord,
My mistress Cleopatra sent me to thee.

Ant. When did she send thee?

Dio. Now, my lord.

Ant. Where is she?

Dio. Lock'd in her monument. She had a prophesying fear <sup>120</sup>
Of what hath come to pass; for when she saw,
Which never shall be found, you did suspect

She had dispos'd with Cæsar, and that your
rage
Would not be purg'd, she sent you word she was dead;
But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent

Me to proclaim the truth; and I am come,
I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late, good Diomed. Call my guard, I prithee.

Dio. What, ho! the emperor's guard!
The guard, what, ho!

Come; your lord calls. 130

Enter four or five of the Guard of ANTONY.

Ant. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides;

'T is the last service that I shall command
you.

First Guard. Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear

All your true followers out.

All. Most heavy day!

Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate

To grace it with sorrows; bid that welcome
Which comes to punish us, and we punish it

Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up;

I have led you off; carry me now, good
friends,

And have my thanks for all. 140

Exeunt, bearing ANTONY.

SCENE XIII.—The Same. A Monument.

Enter CLEOPATRA and her maids, aloft, with CHARMIAN and IRAS.

Cleo. O Charmian! I will never go from
hence.

Char. Be comforted, dear madam.

Cleo. No, I will not.
All strange and terrible events are welcome,

But comforts we despise; our size of sorrow,

Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great
As that which makes it.

Enter, below, DIOMEDES.

How now! is he dead?

Look out o' the other side your monument;
His guard have brought him thither.

Enter, below, ANTONY, borne by the Guard.

Cleo. O sun!
Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in; darkling stand 10

The varying shore o' the world. O Antony!
Antony, Antony. Help! Charmian, help,

Irás, help;
Help, friends below! let's draw him hither.

Ant. Peace!
Not Cæsar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony,

But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself.

Cleo. So it should be, that none but An-
tony

Should conquer Antony; but woe 't is so!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only
I here importune death awhile, until

Of many thousand kisses the poor last 20
I lay upon thy lips.

Cleo. I dare not, dear,—
Dear my lord, pardon,—I dare not,
Lest I be taken: not the imperious show

Of the full-fortun'd Cæsar ever shall Be brooch'd with me; if knife, drugs, serpents have

Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe:
Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes

And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour Demuring upon me. But come, come, An-
tony,— 29

Help me, my women,—we must draw thee
up.

Assist, good friends.

Ant. O! quick, or I am gone.

Cleo. Here 's sport indeed! How heavy weighs my lord!

Our strength is all gone into heaviness,
That makes the weight. Had I great Juno's

power,
The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up.

And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,

Wishers were ever fools. O! come, come, come; They heave ANTONY aloft to

CLEOPATRA.

And welcome, welcome! die where thou hast liv'd;

Quicken with kissing; had my lips that
power,

Thus would I wear them out.

All. A heavy sight!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying: 41
Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail
so high,

That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel,

Provok'd by my offence.

Ant. One word, sweet queen.
Of Cæsar seek your honour with your safety. O!

Cleo. They do not go together.

Ant. Gentle, hear me:
None about Cæsar trust but Proculeius.

Cleo. My resolution and my hands I'll trust;

None about Cæsar. 50

Ant. The miserable change now at my
end

Lament nor sorrow at; but please your thoughts

In feeding them with those my former fortunes

Wherein I liv'd, the greatest prince o' the
world,

The noblest; and do now not basely die,
Not cowardly put off my helmet to

My countryman; a Roman by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd. Now my spirit is going;

I can no more.

Cleo. Noblest of men, woo 't die?
Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide 60

In this dull world, which in thy absence is No better than a sty? O! see, my women,

ANTONY dies.

The crown o' the earth doth melt. My lord!
O! wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fall'n: young boys and girls

Are level now with men; the odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable Beneath the visiting moon. Swoons.

Char. O! quietness, lady.

Irás. She is dead too, our sovereign.

Char. Lady!

Irás. Madam!

Char. O madam, madam, madam!

Irás. Royal Egypt!

Empress! 71

Char. Peace, peace, Irás!

Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman, and commanded

By such poor passion as the maid that milks
And does the meanest chares. It were for
me

To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods;
To tell them that this world did equal theirs Till they had stol'n our jewel. All's but naught;

Patience is sottish, and impatience does
Become a dog that's mad; then is it sin 80,
To rush into the secret house of death,
Ere death dare come to us? How do you,
women?

What, what! good cheer! Why, how now
Charmian!

My noble girls! Ah! women, women, look!
Our lamp is spent, it's out. Good sirs, take
heart;

We'll bury him; and then, what's brave,
what's noble,

Let's do it after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us. Come,
away;

This case of that huge spirit now is cold;
Ah! women, women. Come; we have no 90
friend

But resolution, and the briefest end.

Exeunt; those above bearing off
ANTONY'S body.

ACT V

SCENE I.—Alexandria. CÆSAR'S Camp.

Enter CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, DOLABELLA, ME-CÆNAS, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, and Others.

Cæs. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield;
Being so frustrate, tell him he mocks
The pauses that he makes.

Dol. Cæsar, I shall. Exit.

Enter DERCETAS, with the sword of ANTONY.

Cæs. Wherefore is that? and what art thou that dar'st
Appear thus to us?

Der. I am call'd Dercetas;
Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy Best to be serv'd; whilst he stood up and spoke

He was my master, and I wore my life
To spend upon his haters. If thou please

To take me to thee, as I was to him 10
I'll be to Cæsar; if thou pleasest not,
I yield thee up my life.

Cæs. What is 't thou say'st?

Der. I say, O Cæsar, Antony is dead.

Cæs. The breaking of so great a thing should make

A greater crack; the round world
Should have shook lions into civil streets,
And citizens to their dens. The death of

Antony
Is not a single doom; in the name lay
A moiety of the world.

Der. He is dead, Cæsar;

Not by a public minister of justice, 20

Nor by a hired knife; but that self hand,

Which writ his honour in the acts it did,

Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,

Split the heart. This is his sword;

I robb'd his wound of it; behold it stain'd

With his most noble blood.

Cæs. Look you sad, friends?

The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings

To wash the eyes of kings.

Agr. And strange it is,

That nature must compel us to lament

Our most persisted deeds.

Mec. His taints and honours

Wag'd equal with him.

Agr. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity; but you, gods, will give us 32

Some faults to make us men. Cæsar is

touch'd.

Mec. When such a spacious mirror's set before him,

He needs must see himself.

Cæs. O Antony!

I have follow'd thee to this; but we do lance

Diseases in our bodies: I must perforce

Have shown to thee such a declining day,

Or look on thine; we could not stall together

In the whole world. But yet let me lament,

With tears as sovereign as the blood of

hearts, 41

That thou, my brother, my competitor

In top of all design, my mate in empire,

Friend and companion in the front of war,

The arm of mine own body, and the heart

Where mine his thoughts did kindle, that our stars,

Unreconcilable, should divide

Our equalness to this. Hear me, good

friends,—

Enter an Egyptian.

But I will tell you at some meetter season:
The business of this man looks out of him; 50

We'll hear him what he says. Whence are
you?

Egypt. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen
my mistress,

Confin'd in all she has, her monument,
Of thy intents desires instruction,

That she preparedly may frame herself
To the way she's forc'd to.

Cæs. Bid her have good heart;

She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,

How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her; for Cæsar cannot live
To be ungentle.

Egypt. So the gods preserve thee!

Exit.

Cæs. Come hither, Proculeius. Go and
say,

We purpose her no shame; give her what comforts

62

The quality of her passion shall require,
Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal stroke

She do defeat us; for her life in Rome
Would be eternal in our triumph. Go,
And with your speediest bring us what she says,

And how you find of her.

Pro. Cæsar, I shall. Exit.

Cæs. Gallus, go you along. Exit GALLUS.
Where's Dolabella,

To second Proculeius?

All. Dolabella! 70

Cæs. Let him alone, for I remember now How he's employ'd; he shall in time be ready.

Go with me to my tent; where you shall see
How hardly I was drawn into this war;
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my writings. Go with me, and see What I can show in this. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. The Monument.

Enter, aloft, CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make
A better life. 'Tis paltry to be Cæsar;
Not 'being Fortune, he's but Fortune's
knave,

A minister of her will; and it is great
To do that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which shackles accidents, and bolts up
change,

Which sleeps, and never palates more the dug,

The beggar's nurse and Cæsar's.

Enter, below, PROCULEIUS, GALLUS, and Soldiers.

Pro. Cæsar sends greeting to the Queen of Egypt;

And bids thee study on what fair demands 10
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

Cleo. What's thy name?

Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. Antony

Did tell me of you, bade me trust you; but I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd, That have no use for trusting. If your master

Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him,

That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom: if he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son,

He gives me so much of mine own as I 20
Will kneel to him with thanks.

Pro. Be of good cheer;

You're fall'n into a princely hand, fear nothing.

Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace that it flows over
On all that need; let me report to him
Your sweet dependency, and you shall find
A conqueror that will pray in aid for kindness
Where he for grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo.

Pray you, tell him

I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. I hourly learn 30
A doctrine of obedience, and would gladly
Look him i' the face.

Pro.

This I'll report, dear lady:

Have comfort, for I know your plight is pitied

Of him that caus'd it.

Gal. You see how easily she may be surpris'd.

PROCULEIUS and two of the Guard ascend the monument by a ladder, and come behind CLEOPATRA.
Some of the Guard unbar and open
the gates.

To PROCULEIUS and the Guard. Guard her till Cæsar come. Exit.

Iras. Royal queen!

Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen.

Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.

Drawing a dagger.

Pro.

Hold, worthy lady, hold!

Seizes and disarms her.

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this

Reliev'd, but not betray'd.

Cleo.

What, of death too,

That rids our dogs of languish?

Pro.

Cleopatra,

Do not abuse my master's bounty by
The undoing of yourself; let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo.

Where art thou, death?

Come hither, come! come, come, and take a
queen

Worth many babes and beggars!

Pro.

O! temperance, lady.

Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink, sir;

If idle talk will once be necessary,

I'll not sleep neither. This mortal house
I'll ruin,

Do Cæsar what he can. Know, sir, that I Will not wait pinion'd at your master's
court,

Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up
And show me to the shouting variety Of censuring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt

Be gentle grave unto me! rather on Nilus'
mud

Lay me stark naked, and let the water-flies

Blow me into abhorring! rather make 60
My country's high pyramides my gibbet,
And hang me up in chains!

Pro.

You do extend

These thoughts of horror further than you shall

Find cause in Cæsar.

Enter DOLABELLA

Dol. Proculeius,
What thou hast done thy master Cæsar
knows,
And he hath sent for thee; for the queen,
I'll take her to my guard.

Pro. So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best; be gentle to her.
To CLEOPATRA. To Cæsar I will speak what you shall please,
If you'll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would die.

Exeunt PROCULEIUS and Soldiers.
Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me? 71

Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly, you know me.

Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known:

You laugh when boys or women tell their dreams;

Is't not your trick?

Dol. I understand not, madam.

Cleo. I dream'd there was an Emperor
Antony:

O! such another sleep, that I might see
But such another man.

Dol. If it might please ye,—

Cleo. His face was as the heavens, and therein stuck

A sun and moon, which kept their course, and lighted 80

The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature,—

Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean; his rear'd arm

Crested the world; his voice was propertied
As all the tuned spheres, and that to
friends;

But when he meant to quail and shake the
orb,

He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in't, an autumn 't was
That grew the more by reaping; his delights
Were dolphin-like, they show'd his back above

The element they liv'd in; in his livery 90
Walk'd crowns and crownets, realms and islands were

As plates dropp'd from his pocket.

Dol. Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Think you there was, or might be, such a man

As this I dream'd of?

Dol. Gentle madam, no.

Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods.

But, if there be, or ever were, one such,
It's past the size of dreaming; nature wants
stuff

To vie strange forms with fancy; yet to imagine

An Antony were nature's piece 'gainst fancy, Condemning shadows quite.

Dol. Hear me, good madam.

Your loss is as yourself, great; and you bear it 101

As answering to the weight: would I might never

O'ertake pursu'd success, but I do feel,
By the rebound of yours, a grief that smites
My very heart at root,

Cleo. I thank you, sir.

Know you what Cæsar means to do with me?

Dol. I am loath to tell you what I would you knew.

Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir,—

Dol. Though he be honourable,—

Cleo. He'll lead me then in triumph?

Dol. Madam, he will; I know't. 110

Cry within. Make way there!—Cæsar!

Enter CÆSAR, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, ME-CÆNAS, SELEUCUS, and Attendants.

Cæs. Which is the Queen of Egypt?

Dol. It is the emperor, madam,

CLEOPATRA kneels.

Cæs. Arise, you shall not kneel:

I pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods

Will have it thus; my master and my lord
I must obey.

Cæs. Take to you no hard thoughts;
The record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our flesh, we shall remember

As things but done by chance.

Cleo. Sole sir o' the world,
I cannot project mine own cause so well, 120
To make it clear; but do confess I have Been laden with like frailties which before
Have often sham'd our sex.

Cæs. Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than enforce:

If you apply yourself to our intents,
Which towards you are most gentle, you shall find

A benefit in this change; but if you seek
To lay on me a cruelty, by taking Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself
Of my good purposes, and put your children 131

To that destruction which I'll guard them from,

If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.

Cleo. And may through all the world:
't is yours; and we,

Your scutcheons and your signs of conquest, shall

Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord.

Cæs. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.

Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate,
and jewels,

I am possess'd of: 't is exactly valued; 140
Not petty things admitted. Where's Seleu-cus?

Sel. Here, madam.

Cleo. This is my treasurer; let him speak, my lord,

Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd
To myself nothing. Speak the truth Seleu-cus.

Sel. Madam,

I had rather seal my lips, than, to my peril,
Speak that which is not.

Cleo. What have I kept back?

Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Cæs. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve

Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See! Cæsar; O! behold, How pomp is follow'd; mine will now be yours; 151

And, should we shift estates, yours would be mine.

The ingratitude of this Seleucus does Even make me wild. O slave! of no more trust

Than love that's hir'd. What! goest thou back? thou shalt

Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes

Though they had wings: slave, soulless villain, dog!

O rarely base!

Cæs. Good queen, let us entreat you. Cleo. O Cæsar! what a wounding shame is this,

That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me, Doing the honour of thy lordliness 161 To one so meek, that mine own servant should.

Parcel the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy. Say, good Cæsar, That I some lady trifles have reserv'd, Immoment toys, things of such dignity As we greet modern friends withal; and say Some nobler token I have kept apart

For Livia and Octavia, to induce Their mediation; must I be unfolded 170 With one that I have bred? The gods! it smites me

Beneath the fall I have. To SELEUCUS. Prithee, go hence;

Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits Through the ashes of my chance. Wert thou a man,

Thou would'st have mercy on me.

Cæs. Forbear, Seleucus. Exit SELEUCUS.

Cleo. Be it known that we, the greatest, are misthought

For things that others do; and, when we fall,

We answer others' merits in our name, Are therefore to be pitied.

Cæs. Cleopatra,

Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowledg'd, 180

Put we i' the roll of conquest: still be't yours,

Bestow it at your pleasure; and believe, Cæsar's no merchant, to make prize with you

Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd;

Make not your thoughts your prisons: no, dear queen;

For we intend so to dispose you as Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and sleep:

Our care and pity is so much upon you, That we remain your friend; and so, adieu.

Cleo. My master, and my lord!

Cæs. Not so. Adieu.

Flourish. Exeunt CÆSAR and his Train.

Cleo. He words me, girls, he words me, that I should not 191

Be noble to myself: but hark thee, Charmian.

Iras. Finish, good lady; the bright day is done,

And we are for the dark.

Cleo. Hie thee again:

I have spoke already, and it is provided; Go, put it to the haste.

Char. Madam, I will.

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Where is the queen?

Char. Behold, sir. Exit.

Cleo. Dolabella!

Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,

Which my love makes religion to obey, I tell you this: Cæsar through Syria 200

Intends his journey; and within three days

You with your children will he send before. Make your best use of this; I have per-

form'd

Your pleasure and my promise. Cleo. Dolabella,

I shall remain your debtor.

Dol. I your servant.

Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Cæsar.

Cleo. Farewell, and thanks.

Exit DOLABELLA.

Now, Iras, what think'st thou?

Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown In Rome, as well as I; mechanic slaves

With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers, shall 210

Uplift us to the view; in their thick breaths, Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded,

And forc'd to drink their vapour.

Iras. The gods forbid!

Cleo. Nay, 't is most certain, Iras. Saucy lictors

Will catch at us, like strumpets, and scald rimers

Ballad us out o' tune; the quick comedians Extemporally will stage us, and present

Our Alexandrian revells. Antony Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall

see 219

Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness I' the posture of a whore.

Iras. O the good gods!

Cleo. Nay, that's certain.

Iras. I'll never see't; for I am sure my nails

Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo. Why, that's the way To fool their preparation, and to conquer Their most absurd intents.

Re-enter CHARMIAN.

Now, Charmian!

Show me, my women, like a queen; go fetch

My best attires; I am again for Cydnus, To meet Mark Antony. Sirrah Iras, go.

Now, noble Charmian, we'll dispatch indeed; 231
 And when thou hast done this chare, I'll give thee leave
 To play till doomsday. Bring our crown and all. Exit IRAS. A noise within.
 Wherefore's this noise?

Enter one of the Guard.

Guard. Here is a rural fellow
 That will not be denied your highness' presence:

He brings you figs.

Cleo. Let him come in. Exit Guard.

What poor an instrument
 May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty.

My resolution's place'd, and I have nothing
 Of woman in me; now from head to foot
 I am marble-constant, now the fleeting moon 240
 No planet is of mine.

Re-enter Guard, with a Clown bringing in a basket.

Guard. This is the man.

Cleo. Avoid, and leave him. Exit Guard.
 Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there,
 That kills and pains not?

Clown. Truly I have him; but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal; those that do die of it do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Rememberest thou any that have died on't? 249

Clown. Very many, men and women too.
 I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday; a very honest woman, but something given to lie, as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty; how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt. Truly, she makes a very good report o' the worm,
 but he that will believe all that they say shall never be saved by half that they do.
 But this is most fallible, the worm's an odd worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence; farewell. 250

Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.
Sets down the basket.

Cleo. Farewell.

Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.

Cleo. Ay, ay; farewell.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted to in the keeping of wise people;
 for indeed there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thou no care; it shall be heeded.

Clown. Very good. Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding. 271

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clown. You must not think I am so simple but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman; I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But, truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women, for in every ten that they make, the devils mar five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone; farewell. 280
Clown. Yes, forsooth; I wish you joy o'
 the worm. Exit.

Re-enter IRAS with a robe, crown, etc.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown;
 I have
 Immortal longings in me; now no more
 The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip.

Yare, yare, good Iras; quick. Methinks I
 hear

Antony call; I see him rouse himself
 To praise my noble act; I hear him mock
 The luck of Cæsar, which the gods give men
 To excuse their after wrath: husband, I
 come: 290

Now to that name my courage prove my title!

I am fire and air; my other elements
 I give to baser life. So; have you done?
 Come then, and take the last warmth of my
 lips.

Farewell, kind Charmian; Iras, long fare-
 well.

Kisses them. IRAS falls and dies.
 Have I the aspic in my lips? Dost fall?
 If thou and nature can so gently part,
 The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,
 Which hurts, and is desir'd. Dost thou lie
 still?

If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world
 It is not worth leave-taking. 301

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain;
 that I may say,

The gods themselves do weep.

Cleo. This proves me base:
 If she first meet the curled Antony, He'll make demand of her, and spend that kiss

Which is my heaven to have. Come, thou mortal wretch,

*To the asp, which she applies to her
 breast.*

With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate

Of life at once untie; poor venomous fool,
 Be angry, and dispatch. O! could'st thou
 speak,

That I might hear thee call great Cæsar ass
 Unpoliced. 311

Char. O eastern star!

Cleo. Peace, peace!
 Dost thou not see my baby at my breast,
 That sucks the nurse asleep?

Char. O, break! O, break!
Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle,—

O Antony!—Nay, I will take thee too.

Applying another asp to her arm.
 What should I stay— Dies.

Char. In this wide world? So, fare thee
 well.

Now boast thee, Death, in thy possession lies

A lass unparallel'd. Downy windows, close;
 And golden Phœbus never be beheld 320
 Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's awry;
 I'll mend it, and then play.

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

First Guard. Where is the queen?

Char. Speak softly; wake her not.

First Guard. Cæsar hath sent—

Char. Too slow a messenger.

Applies an asp.

O! come apace, dispatch; I partly feel thee.

First Guard. Approach, ho! All's not well; Cæsar's beguil'd.

Second Guard. There's Dolabella sent from Cæsar; call him.

First Guard. What work is here! Charmian, is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a princess

Descended of so many royal kings. 330

Ah! soldier. Dies.

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. How goes it here?

Second Guard. All dead.

Dol. Cæsar, thy thoughts Touch their effects in this; thyself art coming

To see perform'd the dreaded act which thou So sought'st to hinder.

Within. A way there!—A way for Cæsar!

Re-enter CÆSAR and all his Train.

Dol. O! sir, you are too sure an augurer; That you did fear is done.

Cæs. Bravest at the last, She levell'd at our purposes, and, being royal,

Took her own way. The manner of their deaths? 340

I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them?

First Guard. A simple countryman that brought her figs:

This was his basket.

Cæs. Poison'd then.

First Guard. O Cæsar!

This Charmian liv'd but now; she stood and spake:

I found her trimming up the diadem On her dead mistress; tremblingly she stood,

And on the sudden dropp'd.

Cæs. O noble weakness!

If they had swallow'd poison't would appear By external swelling; but she looks like sleep,

As she would catch another Antony 350 In her strong toil of grace.

Dol. Here, on her breast,

There is a vent of blood, and something blown;

The like is on her arm.

First Guard. This is an asp's trail; and these fig-leaves

Have slime upon them, such as the asp's leaves

Upon the caves of Nile.

Cæs. Most probable

That so she died; for her physician tells me

She hath pursu'd conclusions infinite Of easy ways to die. Take up her bed;

And bear her women from the monument. 360

She shall be buried by her Antony;

No grave upon the earth shall clip in it A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them; and their story is

No less in pity than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall In solemn show attend this funeral,

And then to Rome. Come, Dolabella, see High order in this great solemnity. Exeunt.

CYMBELINE

WE should be on our guard in reading Cymbeline not to allow our admiration for the character of Imogen to blind us to the real significance of the play. This caution would seem unnecessary were it not for the fact that most critical discussions of the play center about the Posthumus-Imogen story. Indeed, some critics go so far as to insist that Cymbeline is a misnomer and that the play should properly have been named "Posthumus and Imogen." They apparently fail to see that the story of Posthumus and Imogen is subordinated throughout to the fortunes of the state.

We learn, for example, at the very beginning of the play, that Imogen is Cymbeline's daughter and heir to his kingdom. It is, therefore, primarily her relation to the state rather than her relation to Posthumus that gives significance to her story. Her imprisonment, Posthumus' banishment, her father's cruelty, the queen's hypocrisy, Cloten's hateful suit, Imogen's fidelity to her husband—all are of importance in the play chiefly as they affect the state. Had Imogen been indeed, as she wished, a "neat-herd's daughter" and Posthumus a "neighbor shepherd's son" their story would have found no place in Cymbeline.

Perhaps the most important piece of information we receive in the opening scene, so far as the real development of the plot is concerned, is that of the disappearance of the two princes. The manner in which this information is conveyed to us—"if this be worth your hearing, mark it"—is equivalent, if considered in connection with what has gone before, to the announcement that at some point in the play the princes will be found and the true succession to the throne established. It is with this expectation that we watch the developments of the first two Acts. If for the time we become so engrossed with Imogen that we almost forget about the lost princes, that is because Shakespeare has his own purpose to serve—a purpose that far transcends in its significance any love story that he ever wrote. For while holding us entranced with the Posthumus-Imogen story, he is at the same time incidentally conveying to us most important information concerning the peril that threatens the state from within. We learn of the queen's duplicity and unscrupulousness; we see that Cymbeline is utterly deceived by her and almost wholly within her power; that to gain her ends she is ready to poison those that oppose her; and that Imogen's fidelity to Posthumus and her loathing for Cloten are really preserving the state for the time being from one of the worst calamities that could befall it, namely, giving it wholly into the power of the wicked queen and her foolish and braggart son.

At the end of the second Act our interest in Posthumus and Imogen reaches its climax. At the beginning of the third Act Shakespeare turns directly to the central issue of the play and one of the gravest questions that can confront a state—the question of national sovereignty in its relation to peace and war.

Until his recent marriage with the queen Cymbeline had for many years faithfully paid the yearly tribute granted by Cassibelan to Rome "for him and his succession." Caius Lucius, ambassador from Augustus Cæsar, now arrives to demand the tribute which, he says, "lately is left untendered." Without raising any question of justice or honor, without proposing compromise, but relying solely upon Britain's power to resist payment, the queen and Cloten at once take their stand for national independence. It would be impossible to find among all the characters of Shakespeare a more perfect prototype of the modern "two-fisted, red-blooded, one-hundred-per-cent" nationalist than Cloten:

"Britain is

A world by itself, and we will nothing pay
For wearing our own noses."

Cymbeline himself at last weakly follows the queen's lead and as a result Caius Lucius pronounces "war and confusion" against Britain in the name of Augustus Cæsar.

Never was there a more skillful presentation made of the menace of nationalism to the peace of the world. Here is no secret diplomacy; no clouding of issues; no blowing up of the fires of patriotism. A British audience is calmly asked to decide whether in this particular case, knowing thoroughly the character and motives of the queen, it will support her in an issue involving national sovereignty; or whether, in this instance at least, national sovereignty must remain subordinate to an ethical principle that transcends even the existence of the nation itself.

Having fixed this issue in our minds Shakespeare returns to Posthumus and Imogen. Pisanio is in receipt of a letter from Posthumus commanding him to entice Imogen to Milford-Haven, ostensibly to meet him there, and then to put her to death. Many words have been wasted in condemning Posthumus for his horrible and cowardly purpose. It is, of course, wholly out of character unless we assume that Iachimo's deception has driven him mad. But it is a dramatic necessity. It is the point to which every incident of the Posthumus-Imogen story has been leading. It serves the double purpose of sending Imogen to Milford-Haven and at the same time revealing the boundless resources of her character. Not even national limits can prescribe the loyalty of her heart:

"Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day, night,
Are they not but in Britain? I' the world's volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in 't;
In a great pool a swan's nest: prithee, think
There 's livers out of Britain."

Obviously Imogen is not so ardent a nationalist as Cloten, and we are at full liberty to choose between their two types of loyalty.

There is no more beautiful scene in the play than that at the cave of old Belarius: the meeting between brothers and sister, their instinctive attraction to one another, her seeming death, their singing her to the ground and covering her grave with flowers. Surely such a scene justifies Shakespeare's long delay in fulfilling his promise to discover to us the whereabouts of the missing sons of Cymbeline.

The victory of the Britons over the Romans at Milford-Haven is, in effect, a miracle. Cymbeline ascribes it rightly to the gods, whose instruments he recognizes in the poor peasant and the old man with his two sons "thought to be angels." His later discovery of their identity as Posthumus and the long lost princes renders them in his thought none the less divine instruments and intensifies his sense of obligation to the divine powers. The joy of re-union—the fruit of repentance, and forgiveness—teaches him the ways and purposes of the gods. Witness to the nobility of Posthumus' pardon to Iachimo, he learns to pardon all. Recipient of the divine promise of a future of peace and plenty for his kingdom, he is now ready to establish that kingdom on the principle of righteousness rather than on that of might. A throne preserved through the intervention of the gods cannot, with their approval, retain the fruits of a victory sought in injustice and dishonor even though renunciation involves the loss of sovereignty. Only righteousness exalteth a nation.

Surely Shakespeare must have been confident that his audience had learned that lesson and must at the same time have entertained the hope that the nations of the world in time to come would learn it. Cymbeline's renunciation of the fruits of victory, his submitting to Cæsar and promising to pay the

" . . . . . wanted tribute, from the which We were dissuaded by our wicked queen—"

is no mere "quixotic surrender" either on the part of Cymbeline or of Shakespeare. It is the goal toward which every incident of the play is directed. It is the crowning outcome of Imogen's fidelity and Posthumus' repentance. Imogen has lost a kingdom, but she has "got two worlds by 't."

ACT I

SCENE I.—Britain. The Garden of CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter two Gentlemen.

First Gent. You do not meet a man but frowns; our bloods
 No more obey the heavens than our courtiers
 Still seem as does the king.

Second Gent. But what's the matter?

First Gent. His daughter, and the heir of's kingdom, whom
 He purpos'd to his wife's sole son, a widow
 That late he married, hath referr'd herself Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She's wedded,
 Her husband banish'd, she imprison'd; all
 Is outward sorrow, though I think the king
 Be touch'd at very heart.

Second Gent. None but the king?

First Gent. He that hath lost her too; so is the queen,
 That most desir'd the match; but not a courtier,

Although they wear their faces to the bent
 Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

Second Gent. And why so?

First Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess is a thing Too bad for bad report; and he that hath
 her,
 I mean that married her, alack! good man,
 And therefore banish'd, is a creature such

As, to seek through the regions of the earth
 For one like him, there would be something failing.
 In him that should compare. I do not think So fair an outward and such stuff within Endows a man but he.

Second Gent. You speak him far.
First Gent. I do extend him, sir, within
 himself,

Crush him together rather than unfold
 His measure duly.

Second Gent. What's his name and birth?

First Gent. I cannot delve him to the root: his father
 Was called Sicilius, who did join his honour
 Against the Romans with Cassibelan,
 But had his titles by Tenantius whom
 He serv'd with glory and admir'd success,
 So gain'd the sur-addition Leonatus;
 And had, besides this gentleman in question,

Two other sons, who in the wars o' the time Died with their swords in hand; for which their father,

Then old and fond of issue, took such sorrow
 That he quit being, and his gentle lady,
 Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas'd
 As he was born. The king, he takes the babe
 To his protection; calls him Posthumus
 Leonatus;

Breeds him and makes him of his bedcham-
 ber,

Puts to him all the learnings that his time Could make him the receiver of; which he took,

As we do air, fast as 't was minister'd,
And in 's spring became a harvest; liv'd in
court,
Which rare it is to do, most prais'd, most
lov'd;

A sample to the youngest, to the more mature

A glass that feated them, and to the graver
A child that guided dotards; to his mistress,

For whom he now is banish'd, her own price Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue;

By her election may be truly read
What kind of man he is.

Second Gent. I honour him
Even out of your report. But pray you, tell
me,

Is she sole child to the king?

First Gent. His only child.
He had two sons; if this be worth your
hearing,

Mark it; the eldest of them at three years
old,

I' the swathing-clothes the other, from their nursery

Were stol'n; and to this hour no guess in knowledge

Which way they went.

Second Gent. How long is this ago?

First Gent. Some twenty years.

Second Gent. That a king's children should be so convey'd,

So slackly guarded, and the search so slow,
That could not trace them!

First Gent. Howsoe'er 't is strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd
at,

Yet is it true, sir.

Second Gent. I do well believe you.

First Gent. We must forbear. Here comes the gentleman,

The queen, and princess. Exeunt.

Enter the QUEEN, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

Queen. No, be assur'd you shall not find me, daughter,

After the slander of most stepmothers,
Evil-eyed unto you; you're my prisoner,
but

Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys
That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,

So soon as I can win the offended king,
I will be known your advocate; marry,
yet

The fire of rage is in him, and 't were good You lean'd unto his sentence with what patience

Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness,
I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril:
I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of barr'd affections, though the
king

Hath charg'd you should not speak together.

Exit.

Imo.

Dissembling courtesy. How fine this tyrant Can tickle where she wounds! My dearest
husband,

I something fear my father's wrath; but
nothing,

Always reserv'd my holy duty, what His rage can do on me. You must be
gone;

And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes, not comforted to live,
But that there is this jewel in the world
That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress!
O lady, weep no more, lest I give cause

To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man. I will remain

The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight
truth.

My residence in Rome at one Philario's;
Who to my father was a friend, to me

Known but by letter; thither write, my
queen,

And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send,

Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter QUEEN.

Queen. Be brief I pray you:
If the king come, I shall incur I know not

How much of his displeasure. Aside. Yet
I'll move him

To walk this way. I never do him wrong,
But he does buy my injuries to be friends,
Pays dear for my offences. Exit.

Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,

The loathness to depart would grow. Adieu!

Imo. Nay, stay a little:
Were you but riding forth to air yourself

Such parting were too petty. Look here,
love;

This diamond was my mother's; take it,
heart,

But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.

Post. How! how! another!
You gentle gods, give me but this I have,

And sear up my embracements from a next
With bonds of death! Putting on the ring.

Remain, remain thou here
While sense can keep it on. And, sweetest,

As I my poor self did exchange for you,
To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles

I still win of you; for my sake wear this;
It is a manacle of love; I'll place it

Upon the fairest prisoner.

Putting a bracelet on her arm.
Imo. O the gods!

When shall we see again?

Enter CYMBELINE and Lords.

Post. Alack! the king!
Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence from my sight!

If after this command thou fraught the court
With thy unworthiness, thou diest. Away!

Thou'rt poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you,
And bless the good remainders of the court!
I am gone. Exit.

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp than this is.

Cym. O disloyal thing, 131
That should'st repair my youth, thou heap'st
A year's age on me.

Imo. I beseech you, sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation;
I am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare

Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Past grace? obedience?

Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace.

Cym. That might'st have had the sole son of my queen!

Imo. O bless'd, that I might not! I chose an eagle

And did avoid a puttock. 140

Cym. Thou took'st a beggar; would'st have made my throne

A seat for baseness.

Imo. No; I rather added

A lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vile one!

Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus;
You bred him as my playfellow, and he is A man worth any woman, overbuys me
Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What! art thou mad?

Imo. Almost, sir; heaven restore me!

Would I were 148

A neat-herd's daughter, and my Leonatus
Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Cym. Thou foolish thing!

Re-enter QUEEN.

They were again together; you have done
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up.

Queen. Beseech your patience. Peace!
Dear lady daughter, peace! Sweet sovereign,

Leave us to ourselves, and make yourself
some comfort

Out of your best advice.

Cym. Nay, let her languish

A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,

Die of this folly!

Exeunt CYMBELINE and Lords.

Enter PISANIO.

Queen. Fie! you must give way.
Here is your servant. How now, sir! What
news? 159

Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.

Queen. Ha!

No harm, I trust, is done?

Pis. There might have been,
But that my master rather play'd than
fought,

And had no help of anger; they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.

Queen. I am very glad on 't.

Imo. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part.

To draw upon an exile! O brave sir!
I would they were in Afric both together,
Myself by with a needle, that I might prick The goer-back. Why came you from your master?

Pis. On his command: he would not suffer me 170

To bring him to the haven; left these notes
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When 't pleas'd you to employ me.

Queen. This hath been Your faithful servant; I dare lay mine honour

He will remain so.

Pis. I humbly thank your highness.

Queen. Pray, walk awhile.

Imo. About some half-hour hence,
Pray you, speak with me. You shall at least Go see my lord aboard; for this time leave me. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A public Place.

Enter CLOTEN and two Lords.

First Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt; the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice. Where air comes out, air comes in; there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it. Have I hurt him?

Second Lord, Aside. No, faith; not so much as his patience. 9

First Lord. Hurt him! his body's a passable carcass if he be not hurt; it is a throughfare for steel if it be not hurt.

Second Lord, Aside. His steel was in debt; it went o' the backside the town.

Clo. The villain would not stand me.

Second Lord, Aside. No; but he fled forward still, toward your face.

First Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own; but he added to your having, gave you some ground. 20

Second Lord, Aside. As many inches as you have oceans. Puppies!

Clo. I would they had not come between us.

Second Lord, Aside. So would I till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clo. And that she should love this fellow and refuse me!

Second Lord, Aside. If it be a sin to make a true selection, she is damned. 30

First Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together; she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

Second Lord, Aside. She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done!

Second Lord, Aside. I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

Clo. You'll go with us? 40

First Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

Second Lord. Well, my lord. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores
o' the haven,
And question'dst every sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 't were a paper lost.
As offer'd mercy is. What was the last
That he spake to thee?

Pis. It was his queen, his queen!

Imo. Then wav'd his handkerchief?

Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen, happier therein than I!

And that was all?

Pis. No madam; for so long
As he could make me with this eye or ear
Distinguish him from others, he did keep 10
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,

Still waving, as the fits and stirs of 's mind
Could best express how slow his soul sail'd
on,

How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou should'st have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left
To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings, crack'd them, but
To look upon him, till the diminution
Of space has pointed him sharp as my needle,

Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from 20
The smallness of a gnat to air, and then
Have turn'd my eye, and wept. But, good
Pisanio,

When shall we hear from him?

Pis. Be assur'd, madam,
With his next vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had

Most pretty things to say; ere I could tell
him

How I would think on him at certain hours Such thoughts and such, or I could make him swear

The shes of Italy should not betray Mine interest and his honour, or have charg'd him, 30

At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at mid-
night,

To encounter me with orisons, for then
I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss which I had set Betwixt two charming words, comes in my
father,

And like the tyrannous breathing of the north

Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The queen, madam,
Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them dispatch'd. 39

I will attend the queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Rome. A Room in PHILARIO'S House.

Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain; he was then of a crescent note, expected to prove so worthy as since he hath been allowed the name of; but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration, though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side and I to peruse him by items. 7

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished than now he is with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he. 13

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, wherein he must be weighed rather by her value than his own, words him,
I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And then his banishment. 15

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce under her colours are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without less quality. But how comes it he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance? 25

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life. Here comes the Briton: let him be so entertained amongst you as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of his quality. 30

Enter POSTHUMUS.

I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman, whom I commend to you as a noble friend of mine; how worthy he is I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing. 34

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay and yet pay still. 40

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness. I was glad I did atone my countryman and you; it had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature. 45

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather shunned to go even with what I heard than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences; but upon my mended judgment, if I offend not to say it is mended, my quarrel was not altogether slight. 51

French. Faith, yes to be put to the arbitrament of swords, and by such two that would by all likelihood have confounded one the other, or have fallen both. 55

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think. 'T was a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching, and upon warrant of bloody affirmation, his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant, qualified, and less attemptable than any the rarest of our ladies in France. 66

Iach. That lady is not now living, or this gentleman's opinion by this worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her fore ours of Italy. 71

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing, though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair and as good, a kind of hand-in-hand comparison, had been something too fair and too good for any lady in Britain. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours outlustrs many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many; but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady. 82

Post. I praised her as I rated her; so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's outprized by a trifle. 88

Post. You are mistaken; the one may be sold, or given; or if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift; the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods. 93

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours, but you know strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen too; so your brace of unprizable estimations, the one is but frail and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last. 102

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince the honour of my mistress, if, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail. I do nothing doubt you have store of thieves: notwithstanding I fear not my ring. 108

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first. 112

Iach. With five times so much conversation I should get ground of your fair mistress, make her go back, even to the yielding, had I admittance and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no. 117

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring, which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something; but I make my wager rather against your confidence than her reputation; and, to bar your offence

herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world. 123

Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse; though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more,—a punishment too. 129

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this; it came in too suddenly; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my estate and my neighbour's on the approbation of what I have spoke!

Post. What lady would you choose to assail? 136

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy you think stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers which you imagine so reserved. 143

Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it; my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are afraid, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting. But I see you have some religion in you, that you fear. 149

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue; you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches, and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you? I shall but lend my diamond till your return. Let there be covenants drawn between's; my mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking; I dare you to this match. Here's my ring.

Phi. I will have it no lay. 159

Iach. By the gods, it is one. If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too: if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours; provided I have your commendation for my more free entertainment. 167

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us. Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make your voyage upon her and give me directly to understand you have prevailed, I am no further your enemy; she is not worth our debate: if she remain unused, you not making it appear otherwise, for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword. 178

Iach. Your hand; a covenant. We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold and starve. I will fetch my gold and have our two wagers recorded. 181

Post. Agreed.

Exeunt POSTHUMUS and IACHIMO.

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signor Iachimo will not from it. Pray let us follow 'em. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Britain. A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter QUEEN, Ladies, and CORNELIUS.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground,
gather those flowers;

Make haste; who has the note of them?

First Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Dispatch. Exeunt Ladies.

Now, master doctor, have you brought those drugs?

Cor. Pleaseth your highness, ay; here they are, madam;

Presenting a small box.

But I beseech your grace, without offence,
My conscience bids me ask, wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds,

Which are the movers of a languishing death,

But though slow, deadly?

Queen. I wonder, doctor,

Thou ask'st me such a question; have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how

To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so

That our great king himself doth woo me oft
For my confections? Having thus far proceeded,

Unless thou think'st me devilish, is't not meet

That I amplify my judgment in Other conclusions? I will try thy forces

Of these thy compounds on such creatures as

We count not worth the hanging, but none human. 20

To try the vigour of them and apply
Allayments to their act, and by them gather
Their several virtues and effects.

Cor. Your highness

Shall from this practice but make hard your heart;

Besides, the seeing these effects will be

Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O! content thee.

Enter PISANIO.

Aside. Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him

Will I first work: he's for his master,
And enemy to my son. How now, Pisanio!

Doctor, your service for this time is ended; so Take your own way.

Cor. Aside. I do suspect you, madam;

But you shall do no harm.

Queen. To PISANIO. Hark thee, a word.

Cor. Aside. I do not like her. She doth think she has Strange lingering poisons; I do know her spirit,

And will not trust one of her malice with
A drug of such damn'd nature. Those she has

Will stupefy and dull the sense awhile;
Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats and dogs,

Then afterward up higher; but there is

No danger in what show of death it makes, 40
More than the locking-up the spirits a time,
To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd

With a most false effect; and I the truer,
So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor,
Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. Exit.

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou?
Dost thou think in time

She will not quench, and let instructions enter

Where folly now possesses? Do thou work:
When thou shalt bring me word she loves

my son,
I'll tell thee on the instant thou art then 50

As great as is thy master; greater, for His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name

Is at last gasp; return he cannot, nor Continue where he is; to shift his being

Is to exchange one misery with another,
And every day that comes comes to decay

A day's work in him. What shalt thou expect,

To be depend on a thing that leans,
Who cannot be new built, nor has no friends,

So much as but to prop him?

The QUEEN drops the box; PISANIO takes it up.

Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy labour: 61

It is a thing I made, which hath the king
Five times redeem'd from death; I do not know

What is more cordial; nay, I prithee, take it;
It is an earnest of a further good

That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how The case stands with her; do't as from thyself.

Think what a chance thou changest on, but think

Thou hast thy mistress still, to boot, my son,

Who shall take notice of thee. I'll move the king 70

To any shape of thy preferment such
As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly,

That set thee on to this desert, am bound
To load thy merit richly. Call my women;

Think on my words. Exit PISANIO.

A sly and constant knave,
Not to be shak'd; the agent for his master,

And the remembrancer of her to hold
The hand-fast to her lord. I have given him that

Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her

Of liegers for her sweet, and which she
after, 80
Except she bend her humour, shall be as-sur'd
To taste of too.

Re-enter PISANIO and Ladies

So, so; well done, well done.
The violets, cowslips, and the primroses
Bear to my closet. Fare thee well, Pisanio;
Think on my words.

Exeunt QUEEN and Ladies.

Pis. And shall do;
But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
I'll choke myself; there's all I'll do for you.
Exit.

SCENE VI.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame
false;
A foolish suitor to a wedded lady,
That hath her husband banish'd: O! that
husband;
My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated
Vexations of it! Had I been thief stol'n,
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious: bless'd be those,
How mean soe'er, that have their honest
wills,
Which seasons comfort. Who may this be?
Fie!

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome, 10
Comes from my lord with letters.
Iach. Change you, madam?
The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your highness dearly.

Presents a letter.

Imo. Thanks, good sir:
You're kindly welcome.

Iach. Aside. All of her that is out of door
most rich!
If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone the Arabian bird, and I Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!
Or, like the Parthian, I shall fly'ing fight; 20
Rather, directly fly.

Imo. *He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied.
Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust—*
LEONATUS.

So far I read aloud;
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully.

You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I 29
Have words to bid you; and shall find it so
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.
What! are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes

To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop
Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery orbs above and the twinn'd stones
Upon the number'd beach, and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul?

Imo. What makes your admiration?

Iach. It cannot be i' the eye; for apes and
monkeys
'Twixt two such shes would chatter this way and 40
Contemn with mows the other; nor i' the
judgment,

For idiots in this case of favour would
Be wisely definite; nor i' the appetite;
Sluttery to such neat excellence oppos'd
Should make desire vomit emptiness,
Not so allur'd to feed.

Imo. What is the matter, trow?

Iach. The cloyed will,
That satiate yet unsatisfied desire, that tub Both fill'd and running, ravening first the lamb,

Longs after for the garbage.
Imo. What, dear sir,
Thus raps you? Are you well?

Iach. Thanks, madam, well.
To PISANIO. Beseech you, sir, 52 Desire my man's abode where I did leave
him;

He's strange and peevish.
Pis. I was going, sir,
To give him welcome. Exit.

Imo. Continues well my lord his health,
beseech you?

Iach. Well, madam.
Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth? I hope he is.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger there

So merry and so gamesome: he is call'd 50
The Briton reveller.
Imo. When he was here
He did incline to sadness, and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion, one
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much
loves

A Gallian girl at home; he furnaces
The thick sighs from him, whiles the jolly Briton,

Your lord, I mean, laughs from 's free lungs,
cries 'O!
Can my sides hold, to think that man, who knows

By history, report, or his own proof, 70
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be, will his free hours languish for Assured bondage?

Imo. Will my lord say so?
Iach. Ay, madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter:

It is a recreation to be by
And hear him mock the Frenchman; but,
heavens know,
Some men are much to blame.

Imo. Not he, I hope.
Iach. Not he; but yet heaven's bounty towards him might Be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 't is much;

In you, which I account his beyond all talents,
 Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, sir?
Iach. Two creatures, heartily.

Imo. Am I one, sir?
 You look on me: what wreck discern you in me

Deserves your pity?
Iach. Lamentable! What! To hide me from the radiant sun and solace I' the dungeon by a snuff?

Imo. I pray you, sir, Deliver with more openness your answers To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Iach. That others do.
 I was about to say, enjoy your—But It is an office of the gods to venge it, Not mine to speak on 't.

Imo. You do seem to know Something of me, or what concerns me; pray you,—

Since doubting things go ill often hurts more Than to be sure they do; for certainties Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing,

The remedy then born,—discover to me What both you spur and stop.

Iach. Had I this cheek To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch,

Whose every touch, would force the feeler's soul

To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye, Fixing it only here; should I, damn'd then, Slaver with lips as common as the stairs That mount the Capitol; join gripes with hands

Made hard with hourly falsehood, falsehood as

With labour, then by-peeping in an eye Base and inlustrous as the smoky light 109 That's fed with stinking tallow; it were fit That all the plagues of hell should at one time

Encounter such revolt.

Imo. My lord, I fear,
 Has forgot Britain.

Iach. And himself. Not I, Inclind to this intelligence, pronounce The beggary of his change; but 't is your graces

That from my mutest conscience to my tongue

Charms this report out.

Imo. Let me hear no more.
Iach. O dearest soul! your cause doth strike my heart

With pity, that doth make me sick. A lady So fair, and fast'd to an empery 120 Would make the great'st king double, to be partner'd

With tom-boys hir'd with that self-exhibition

Which your own coffers yield! with diseases'd ventures

That play with all infirmities for gold Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil'd stuff

As well might poison poison! Be reveng'd; Or she that bore you was no queen, and you Recoil from your great stock.

Imo. Reveng'd!
 How should I be reveng'd? If this be true, As I have such a heart that both mine ears Must not in haste abuse, if it be true, 131 How should I be reveng'd?

Iach. Should he make me Live like Diana's priest, betwix cold sheets, While he is vaulting variable ramps, In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge it.

I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure, More noble than that runagate to your bed, And will continue fast to your affection, Still close as sure.

Imo. What, ho, Pisanio!

Iach. Let me my service tender on your lips.

Imo. Away! I do condemn mine ears that have

So long attended thee. If thou wert honourable,

Thou would'st have told this tale for virtue, not

For such an end thou seek'st; as base as strange.

Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far From thy report as thou from honour, and Solicit's there a lady that disdains

Thee and the devil alike. What, ho, Pisanio!

The king my father shall be made acquainted

Of thy assault; if he shall think it fit, 150 A saucy stranger in his court to mart

As in a Romish stew and to expound His beastly mind to us, he hath a court

He little cares for and a daughter who He not respects at all. What, ho, Pisanio!

Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say: The credit that thy lady hath of thee

Deserves thy trust, and thy most perfect goodness

Her assur'd credit. Blessed live you long! A lady to the worthiest sir that ever 160

Country call'd his; and you his mistress, only

For the most worthiest fit. Give me your pardon.

I have spoke this, to know if your affiance Were deeply rooted and shall make your lord

That which he is, new o'er; and he is one The truest manner'd; such a holy witch

That he enchants societies into him; Half all men's hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends.
Iach. He sits 'mongst men like a descended god;

He hath a kind of honour sets him off, 170

More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
 Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd
 To try your taking of a false report; which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment
 In the election of a sir so rare.
 Which you know cannot err. The love I bear him
 Made me to fan you thus; but the gods made you,
 Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon.
Imo. All's well, sir. Take my power I'
 the court for yours.
Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot
 To entreat your grace but in a small request,
 And yet of moment too, for it concerns
 Your lord; myself and other noble friends
 Are partners in the business.
Imo. Pray, what is 't?
Iach. Some dozen Romans of us and your
 lord,
 The best feather of our wing, have mingled sums
 To buy a present for the emperor;
 Which I, the factor for the rest, have
 done
 In France; 'tis plate of rare device, and jewels
 Of rich and exquisite form; their values
 great;
 And I am something curious, being strange,
 To have them in safe stowage. May it please you
 To take them in protection?
Imo. Willingly;
 And pawn mine honour for their safety:
 since
 My lord hath interest in them, I will keep
 them
 In my bedchamber.
Iach. They are in a trunk,
 Attended by my men; I will make bold
 To send them to you, only for this night;
 I must abode to-morrow.
Imo. O! no, no.
Iach. Yes, I beseech, or I shall short my
 word
 By lengthening my return. From Gallia
 I cross'd the seas on purpose and on promise
 To see your grace.
Imo. I thank you for your pains;
 But not away to-morrow!
Iach. O! I must, madam:
 Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please
 To greet your lord with writing, do 't to-
 night:
 I have outstood my time, which is material
 To the tender of our present.
Imo. I will write.
 Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept,
 And truly yielded you. You're very welcome.

Exeunt.

ACT II

SCENE I.—Britain. Before CYMBELINE'S Palace.Enter CLOTEN and two Lords.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck! when I kissed the jack, upon an up-cast to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on 't; and then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing, as if I borrowed mine oaths of him and might not spend them at pleasure.

First Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl.

Second Lord. Aside. If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out.

Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths, ha?

Second Lord. No, my lord; Aside. nor crop the ears of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog! I give him satisfaction! Would he had been one of my rank!

Second Lord. Aside. To have smelt like a fool.

Clo. I am not vexed more at any thing in the earth. A pox on 't! I had rather not be so noble as I am. They dare not fight with me because of the queen my mother. Every Jackslave hath his bellyful of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

Second Lord. Aside. You are cock and capon too; and you crow, cock, with your comb on.

Clo. Sayest thou?

Second Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to.

Clo. No, I know that; but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.

Second Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clo. Why, so I say.

First Lord. Did you hear of a stranger that's come to court to-night?

Clo. A stranger, and I not know on 't!

Second Lord. Aside. He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not.

First Lord. There's an Italian come; and 't is thought one of Leonatus' friends.

Clo. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

First Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in 't?

First Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

Second Lord. Aside. You are a fool granted; therefore your issues, being foolish, do not derogate.

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian. What I have lost to-day at bowls I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

Second Lord. I'll attend your lordship.
Exeunt CLOTEN and First Lord.

That such a crafty devil as is his mother
Should yield the world this ass! a woman
that Bears all down with her brain, and this her
son 59
Cannot take two from twenty for his heart
And leave eighteen. Alas! poor princess,
Thou divine Imogen, what thou endur'st,
Betwixt a father by the step-dame govern'd,
A mother hourly coining plots, a wooer
More hateful than the foul expulsion is
Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act
Of the divorce he'd make. The heavens hold firm
The walls of thy dear honour; keep un-shak'd
That temple, thy fair mind; that thou may'st
stand, 69
To enjoy thy banish'd lord and this great land! Exit.

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber; in one part of it a Trunk.

IMOGEN reading in her bed; a Lady attending.

Imo. Who's there? my woman Helen?
Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then; mine eyes are weak;

Fold down the leaf where I have left; to bed:
Take not away the taper, leave it burning,
And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock,
I prithee, call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly. Exit Lady.

To your protection I commend me, gods!
From fairies and the tempters of the night
Guard me, beseech ye! 10

Sleeps. IACHIMO comes from the trunk.

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'erlabour'd sense

Repairs itself by rest. Our Tarquin thus Did softly press the rushes ere he waken'd
The chastity he wounded. Cytherea,
How bravely thou becom'st thy bed! fresh
lily,
And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!

But kiss; one kiss! Rubies unparagon'd,
How dearly they do 't! 'T is her breathing
that

Perfumes the chamber thus; the flame o'
the taper

Bows toward her, and would under-peep her lids, 20

To see the enclosed lights, now canopied
Under these windows, white and azure lac'd With blue of heaven's own tinct. But my design,

To note the chamber: I will write all down:
Such and such pictures; there the window;
such

The adornment of her bed; the arras, figures,

Why, such and such; and the contents o'
the story.

Ah! but some natural notes about her body,
Above ten thousand meaner moveables
Would testify, to enrich mine inventory. 30
O sleep! thou ape of death, lie dull upon
her,

And be her sense but as a monument
Thus in a chapel lying. Come off, come off;

Taking off her bracelet.

As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard!
'T is mine; and this will witness outwardly,
As strongly as the conscience does within
To the madding of her lord. On her left
breast

A mole cinque-spotted like the crimson drops

'P the bottom of a cowslip: here's a voucher Stronger than ever law could make; this secret 40

Will force him think I have pick'd the lock and ta'en

The treasure of her honour. No more. To what end?

Why should I write this down, that's riveted, Screw'd to my memory? She hath been reading late

The tale of Tereus; here the leaf's turn'd
down

Where Philomel gave up. I have enough:
To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it.

Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that dawning

May bare the raven's eye! I lodge in fear;
Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here. 50

Clock strikes.

One, two, three: time, time!

Goes into the trunk. The scene closes.

SCENE III.—An Antechamber adjoining IMOGEN'S Apartment.

Enter CLOTEN and Lords.

First Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to lose.

First Lord. But not every man patient after the noble temper of your lordship.
You are most hot and furious when you win.

Clo. Winning will put any man into courage. If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It's almost morning, is 't not? 10

First Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come. I am advis'd to give her music o' mornings;
they say it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune. If you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain; but I'll ne'er give o'er. First, a very excellent good-conceited thing; after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it: and then let her consider. 20

SONG

*Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phoebus 'gins arise,
His steeds to water at those springs
On chalic'd flowers that lies;*

*And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes:
With everything that pretty is,
My lady sweet, arise:
Arise, arise!*

30

Clo. So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better; if it do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse-hairs and calves'-guts, nor the voice of un-paved enunch to boot, can never amend.

Exeunt Musicians.

Second Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late, for that's the reason I was up so early; he cannot choose but take this service I have done fatherly.

Enter CYMBELINE and Queen.

Good morrow to your majesty and to my gracious mother.

41

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern daughter?

Will she not forth?

Clo. I have assailed her with musics, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new. She hath not yet forgot him: some more time

Must wear the print of his remembrance out.

And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king. Who lets go by no vantages that may

50

Prefer you to his daughter. Frame yourself To orderly solicits, and be friended With aptness of the season; make denials Increase your services; so seem as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which You tender to her; that you in all obey her, Save when command to your dismissal tends,

And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless! not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome;

The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy fellow, Albeit he comes on angry purpose now; But that's no fault of his: we must receive him

61

According to the honour of his sender; And towards himself, his goodness fore-spent on us,

We must extend our notice. Our dear son, When you have given good morning to your mistress,

Attend the queen and us; we shall have need

To employ you towards this Roman. Come, our queen.

Exeunt all but CLOTEN.

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not,

Let her lie still and dream. By your leave, ho!

Knocks.

I know her women are about her. What If I do line one of their hands? 'T is gold

71

Which buys admittance; oft it doth; yea, and makes

Diana's rangers false themselves, yield up Their deer to the stand o' the stealer; and 't is gold

Which makes the true man kill'd and saves the thief;

Nay, sometimes hangs both thief and true man. What

Can it not do and undo? I will make One of her women lawyer to me, for

I yet not understand the case myself. By your leave.

Knocks.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who's there that knocks?

Clo. A gentleman.

Lady. No more?

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

Lady. That's more

Than some whose tailors are as dear as yours

Can justly boast of. What's your lordship's pleasure?

Clo. Your lady's person: is she ready?

Lady. Ay,

To keep her chamber.

Clo. There's gold for you; sell me your good report.

Lady. How! my good name? or to report of you

89

What I shall think is good?—The princess!

Exit.

Enter IMOGEN.

Clo. Good morrow, fairest; sister, your sweet hand.

Imo. Good morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains

For purchasing but trouble; the thanks I give

Is telling you that I am poor of thanks

And scarce can spare them.

Clo. Still, I swear I love you.

Imo. If you but said so, 't were as deep with me;

If you swear still, your recompense is still That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield being silent

I would not speak. I pray you, spare me: faith, 100

I shall unfold equal discourtesy To your best kindness. One of your great knowing

Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clo. To leave you in your madness, 't were my sin;

I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clo. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do:

If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad; That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir, You put me to forget a lady's manners, 110

By being so verbal; and learn now, for all, That I, which know my heart, do here pro-nounce

By the very truth of it, I care not for you;
And am so near the lack of charity,
To accuse myself, I hate you; which I had rather
You felt than make 't my boast.

Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For The contract you pretend with that base
wretch,

One bred of alms and foster'd with cold dishes,

With scraps o' the court, it is no contract,
none; <sup>120</sup>

And though it be allow'd in meaner parties, Yet who than he more mean? to knit their
souls

On whom there is no more dependency
But brats and beggary, in self-figur'd knot;
Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by
The consequence o' the crown, and must not soil

The precious note of it with a base slave,
A hilding for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler, not so eminent.

Imo. Profane fellow!
Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more
But what thou art besides, thou wert too base <sup>131</sup>

To be his groom; thou wert dignified
enough,

Even to the point of envy, if 't were made
Comparative for your virtues, to be styl'd
The under-hangman of his kingdom, and hated

For being preferr'd so well.

Clo. The south-fog rot him!
Imo. He never can meet more mischance than come

To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment,
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer

In my respect than all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men. How now,
Pisanio! <sup>141</sup>

Enter PISANIO.

Clo. 'His garment!' Now the devil—
Imo. To Dorothy my woman hie thee
presently—

Clo. 'His garment!'
Imo. I am sprighted with a fool, Frighted, and anger'd worse. Go bid my woman

Search for a jewel that too casually Hath left mine arm; it was thy master's,
'shrew me

If I would lose it for a revenue
Of any king's in Europe. I do think
I saw 't this morning; confident I am <sup>150</sup>
Last night 't was on mine arm, I kiss'd it;
I hope it be not gone to tell my lord
That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'T will not be lost.
Imo. I hope so; go and search.

Exit PISANIO.
Clo. You have abus'd me:

'His meanest garment!'
Imo. Ay, I said so, sir.

If you will make 't an action, call witness to 't.

Clo. I will inform your father.
Imo. Your mother too;
She's my good lady, and will conceive, I
hope,

But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,
To the worst of discontent. Exit.

Clo. I'll be reveng'd.
'His meanest garment!' Well. Exit. 161

SCENE IV.—*Rome. A Room in PHILARIO'S
House.*

Enter POSTHUMUS and PHILARIO.

Post. Fear it not, sir; I would I were so sure
To win the king as I am bold her honour
Will remain hers.

Phi. What means do you make to him?

Post. Not any, but abide the change of
time,
Quake in the present winter's state and wish

That warmer days would come; in those sear'd hopes,

I barely gratify your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.

Phi. Your very goodness and your company

O'erpays all I can do. By this, your king <sup>10</sup> Hath heard of great Augustus; Caius Lucius

Will do 's commission thoroughly, and I think
He 'll grant the tribute, send the arrearsages,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance

Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,
Statist though I am none, nor like to be,
That this will prove a war; and you shall
hear

The legions now in Gallia sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen <sup>20</sup>

Are men more order'd than when Julius
Cæsar

Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage

Worthy his frowning at; their discipline,
Now mingled with their courages, will make known

To their approvers they are people such
That mend upon the world.

Enter IACHIMO.

Phi. See! Iachimo!
Post. The swiftest harts have posted you
by land,

And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,

To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, sir.
Post. I hope the briefness of your answer
made

The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady
Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.

Post. And therewithal the best; or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts
And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you.

Post. Their tenour good, I trust.

Iach. 'Tis very like.

Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court

When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then,

But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet.
Sparkles this stone as it was won't? or is 't

not 40
Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.
I'll make a journey twice as far to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness

which
Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by.

Iach. Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant. Had I not brought The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant 51

We were to question further, but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour.
Together with your ring; and not the wronger

Of her or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.

Post. If you can make 't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand
And ring is yours; if not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour gains or loses
Your sword or mine, or masterless leaves

both 60
To you shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth, as I will make them, Must first induce you to believe; whose

strength
I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,
You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find

You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Iach. First, her bedchamber,
Where I confess I slept not, but profess Had that was well worth watching, it was

hang'd
With tapestry of silk and silver; the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Ro-

man, 70
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or

for
The press of boats or pride; a piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship and value; which I wonder'd

Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life on 't was—

Post. This is true;
And this you might have heard of here, by

me,
Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars

Must justify my knowledge.

Post. So they must.
Or do your honour injury.

Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber, and the chimney-
piece 81

Chaste Dian bathing; never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves; the cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent

her,
Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing Which you might from relation likewise reap,

Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iach. The roof o' the chamber With golden cherubins is fretted; her andirons,

I had forgot them, were two winking Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands. 91

Post. This is her honour!
Let it be granted you have seen all this, and

praise
Be given to your remembrance, the description

Of what is in her chamber nothing saves

The wager you have laid.

Iach. Then, if you can,
Be pale: I beg but leave to air this jewel;
see!

Showing the bracelet.
And now 't is up again; it must be married
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

Post. Jove!
Once more let me behold it. Is it that
Which I left with her?

Iach. Sir, I thank her, that:
She stripp'd it from her arm; I see her yet;
Her pretty action did outsell her gift, 102
And yet enrich'd it too. She gave it me, and said

She priz'd it once.

Post. May be she pluck'd it off
To send it me.

Iach. She writes so to you, doth she?

Post. O! no, no, no; 't is true. Here, take this too; Gives the ring.

It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on 't. Let there be no
honour

Where there is beauty; truth where semblance; love

Where there's another man; the vows of
women 110

Of no more bondage be to where they are
made

Than they are to their virtues, which is nothing.

O! above measure false.

Phi. Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again; 't is not yet won:
It may be probable she lost it; or

Who knows if one of her women, being corrupted,

Hath stol'n it from her?

Post. Very true;
And so, I hope, he came by 't. Back my ring.

Render to me some corporal sign about her, More evident than this; for this was stolen.

Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears.

'Tis true; nay, keep the ring; 'tis true, I am sure

She would not lose it; her attendants are All sworn and honourable; they induc'd to steal it!

And by a stranger! No, he hath enjoy'd her;

The cognizance of her incontinency Is this; she hath bought the name of whore thus dearly.

There, take thy hire; and all the fiends of hell

Divide themselves between you!

Phi. Sir, be patient.
This is not strong enough to be believ'd
Of one persuaded well of—

Post. Never talk on 't:
She hath been colted by him.

Iach. If you seek
For further satisfying, under her breast,

Worthy the pressing, lies a mole, right proud Of that most delicate lodging: by my life,

I kiss'd it, and it gave me present hunger To feed again, though full. You do remember

This stain upon her?

Post. Ay, and it doth confirm Another stain, as big as hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.

Iach. Will you hear more?

Post. Spare your arithmetic; never count the turns;

Once, and a million!

Iach. I'll be sworn,—

Post. No swearing.

If you will swear you have not done 't, you lie;

And I will kill thee if thou dost deay
Thou 'st made me cuckold.

Iach. I'll deny nothing.

Post. O! that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal.

I will go there and do 't, i' the court, before Her father. I'll do something.—Exit.

Phi. Quite besides

The government of patience! You have won:

Let 's follow him, and pervert the present wrath

He hath against himself.

Iach. With all my heart. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. Another Room in the Same.

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Post. Is there no way for men to be but

WOMEN

Must be half-workers? We are all bastards;

And that most venerable man which I Did call my father was I know not where

When I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools

Made me a counterfeit; yet my mother seem'd

The Dian of that time; so doth my wife The nonpareil of this. O! vengeance, vengeance;

Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd
And pray'd me off forbearance; did it with

A pudency so rosy the sweet view on 't Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her

As chaste as unsunn'd snow. O! all the devils!

This yellow Iachimo, in an hour, was 't not? Or less, at first? perchance he spoke not,

but

Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one, Cried 'O!' and mounted; found no opposition

But what he look'd for should oppose and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out

The woman's part in me! For there's no motion

That tends to vice in man but I affirm It is the woman's part; be it lying, note it,

The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers;

Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenges, hers;

Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,

Nice longing, slanders, mutability, All faults that may be nam'd, nay, that hell

knows,

Why, hers, in part or all; but rather, all; For even to vice

They are not constant, but are changing still One vice but of a minute old for one

Not half so old as that. I'll write against them,

Detest them, curse them. Yet 'tis greater skill

In a true hate to pray they have their will: The very devils cannot plague them better.

Exit.

ACT III

SCENE I.—Britain. A Room of State in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, and Lords at one door, and at another CAIUS LUCIUS and Attendants.

Cym. Now say what would Augustus Cæsar with us?

Luc. When Julius Cæsar, whose remembrance yet

Lives in men's eyes, and will to ears and tongues

Be theme and hearing ever, was in this Britain,

And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle,
Famous in Cæsar's praises, no whit less Than in his feats deserving it, for him
And his succession granted Rome a tribute, Yearly three thousand pounds, which by these lately 9
Is left untender'd.

Queen. And, to kill the marvel,
Shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Cæsars
Ere such another Julius. Britain is A world by itself, and we will nothing pay
For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity Which then they had to take from 's, to resume

We have again. Remember, sir, my liege,
The kings your ancestors, together with The natural bravery of your isle, which stands

As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in
With rocks unscaleable and roaring waters,
With sands that will not bear your enemies'
boats, 21

But suck them up to the topmast. A kind of conquest

Cæsar made here, but made not here his brag

Of 'came, and saw, and overcame': with
shame,

The first that ever touch'd him, he was carried

From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping,

Poor ignorant baubles! on our terrible seas,
Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges,
crack'd

As easily 'gainst our rocks: for joy whereof
The fam'd Cassibelan, who was once at point, 30

O gislot fortune! to master Cæsar's sword,
Make Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright,
And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid. Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and as I said, there is no more such Cæsars; other of them may have crooked noses, but to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end. 39

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan; I do not say I am one, but I have a hand. Why tribute?
why should we pay tribute? If Cæsar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now. 46

Cym. You must know,
Till the injurious Romans did extort
This tribute from us, we were free; Cæsar's ambition,

Which swell'd so much that it did almost
stretch 50

The sides o' the world, against all colour
here

Did put the yoke upon 's; which to shake
off

Becomes a war-like people, whom we reckon

Ourselves to be. We do say then to Cæsar,
Our ancestor was that Mulmutius which Ordain'd our laws, whose use the sword of
Cæsar

Hath too much mangled; whose repair and franchise

Shall by the power we hold, be our good
deed,

Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our laws, 59

Who was the first of Britain which did put His brows within a golden crown, and call'd
Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar, Cæsar, that hath more kings his servants than

Thyself domestic officers, thine enemy.
Receive it from me, then: war and confusion

In Cæsar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee:
look

For fury not to be resisted. Thus defied,
I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius.
Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him; of him I gather'd honour;
Which he to seek of me again, perforce, 72

Behoves me keep at utterance. I am perfect

That the Pannonians and Dalmatians for Their liberties are now in arms; a precedent
Which not to read would show the Britons
cold;

So Cæsar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.

Clo. His majesty bids you welcome.
Make pastime with us a day or two, or longer; if you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle; if you beat us out of it, it is yours.
If you fall in the adventure, our crows shall fare the better for you; and there's an end. 84

Luc. So, sir.

Cym. I know your master's pleasure and he mine;

All the remain is 'Welcome!' Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter PISANIO, reading a letter.

Pis. How! of adultery! Wherefore write you not

What monster's her accuser? Leonatus?
O master! what a strange infection

Is fall'n into thy ear! What false Italian,
As poisonous tongued as handed, hath prevail'd

On thy too ready hearing? Disloyal! No;
She's punish'd for her truth, and undergoes,

More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults

As would take in some virtue. O my master!
Thy mind to her is now as low as were 10

Thy fortunes. How! that I should murder
her?

Upon the love and truth and vows which I Have made to thy command? I, her? her
blood?

If it be so to do good service, never Let me be counted serviceable. How look I,
That I should seem to lack humanity
So much as this fact comes to?

*Do't. The letter
That I have sent her, by her own command
Shall give thee opportunity.*

O damn'd paper!
Black as the ink that's on thee. Senseless bauble, 20
Art thou a feodary for this act, and look'st
So virgin-like without? Lo! here she comes.
I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. How now, Pisanio!
Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.
Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord,
Leonatus.

O! learn'd indeed were that astronomer
That knew the stars as I his characters;
He'd lay the future open. You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd relish of love, 30
Of my lord's health, of his content, yet not
That we two are asunder; let that grieve
him:

Some griefs are med'cinable; that is one of
them.

For it doth physic love: of his content,
All but in that! Good wax, thy leave.
Bless'd be

You bees that make these locks of counsel!
Lovers

And men in dangerous bonds pray not alike;
Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid's tables. Good news, gods! 39

*Justice and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would even renew me with your eyes.
Take notice that I am in Cambria, at Milford-Haven; what your own love will out of this advise you, follow. So he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vow,
and your, increasing in love,*

LEONATUS POSTHUMUS.

O! for a horse with wings. Hear'st thou,
Pisanio? 50

He is at Milford-Haven; read, and tell me
How far 't is thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I Glide thither in a day? Then, true Pisanio, Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who
long'st,

O! let me 'bate; but not like me; yet
long'st,

But in a fainter kind: O! not like me,
For mine's beyond beyond; say, and speak
thick;

Love's counsellor should fill the bores of
hearing, 59

To the smothering of the sense, how far it is To this same blessed Milford; and, by the
way,

Tell me how Wales was made so happy as
To inherit such a haven; but first of all,

How we may steal from hence, and for the

<sup>60</sup>
That we shall make in time, from our hence-
going
And our return, to excuse; but first, how get hence.

Why should excuse be born or e'er begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Prithee, speak,
How many score of miles may we well ride
'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun,
Madam, 's enough for you, and too much
too. 70

Imo. Why, one that rode to 's execution,
man,

Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding wagers,

Where horses have been nimbler than the sands

That run i' the clock's behalf. But this is foolery;

Go bid my woman feign a sickness; say She'll home to her father; and provide me
presently

A riding-suit, no costlier than would fit
A franklin's housewife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man; nor here, nor
here. 80

Nor what ensues, but have a fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I prithee;
Do as I bid thee. There's no more to say;
Accessible is none but Milford way.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Wales. A mountainous
Country, with a Cave.

Enter from the Cave BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house with such

Whose roof's as low as ours! Stoop, boys;
this gate

Instructs you how to adore the heavens, and bows you

To a morning's holy office; the gates of monarchs

Are arch'd so high that giants may jet through

And keep their impious turbans on, without Good morrow to the sun. Hail, thou fair

heaven!

We house i' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly

As prouder livers do.

Gui. Hail, heaven!
Arv. Hail, heaven!

Bel. Now for our mountain sport. Up to yond hill; 10

Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats.
Consider,

When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place which lessens and sets off;

And you may then revolve what tales I have told you

Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war;
This service is not service, so being done,
But being so allow'd; to apprehend thus

Draws us a profit from all things we see,
 And often, to our comfort, shall we find
 The sharded beetle in a safer hold <sup>20</sup>
 Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O! this life
 Is nobler than attending for a check,
 Richer than doing nothing for a bribe,
 Prouder than rustling in unpaid-for silk;
 Such gain the cap of him that makes 'em
 fine,
 Yet keeps his book uncross'd; no life to ours.
Gui. Out of your proof you speak; we,
 poor unfledg'd,
 Have never wing'd from view o' the nest,
 nor know not What air's from home. Haply this life is best,
 If quiet life be best; sweeter to you <sup>30</sup>
 That have a sharper known, well correspond-
 ing
 With your stiff age; but unto us it is
 A cell of ignorance, travelling a-bed,
 A prison for a debtor, that not dares
 To stride a limit.

Arv. What should we speak of
 When we are old as you? when we shall
 hear
 The rain and wind beat dark December, how
 In this our pinching cave shall we discourse
 The freezing hours away? We have seen
 nothing;
 We are beastly, subtle as the fox for prey, <sup>40</sup>
 Like war-like as the wolf for what we eat;
 Our valour is to chase what flies; our cage
 We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird,
 And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak!
 Did you but know the city's usuries
 And felt them knowingly; the art o' the
 court,

As hard to leave as keep, whose top to climb
 Is certain falling, or so slippery that The fear's as bad as falling; the toil o' the
 war,

A pain that only seems to seek out danger <sup>50</sup>
 I' the name of fame and honour; which dies
 i' the search,

And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph
 As record of fair act; nay, many times, Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,

Must court'sy at the censure. O boys! this story
 The world may read in me; my body's mark'd

With Roman swords, and my report was once
 First with the best of note; Cymbeline lov'd
 me,

And when a soldier was the theme, my name
 Was not far off; then was I as a tree <sup>60</sup> Whose boughs did bend with fruit, but in one night,

A storm or robbery, call it what you will,
 Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my
 leaves,

And left me bare to weather.

Gui. Uncertain favour!

Bel. My fault being nothing, as I have told you oft,

But that two villains, whose false oaths pre-
 vail'd

Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbe-line

I was confederate with the Romans; so Follow'd my banishment, and this twenty years

This rock and these demesnes have been my world, <sup>70</sup>

Where I have liv'd at honest freedom, paid

More pious debts to heaven than in all The fore-end of my time. But up to the mountains!

This is not hunters' language. He that strikes

The venison first shall be the lord o' the
 feast;

To him the other two shall minister;
 And we will fear no poison which attends In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys.

Exeunt GUIDERIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature!
 These boys know little they are sons to the king; <sup>80</sup>

Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
 They think they are mine; and though train'd up thus meanly

I' the cave wherein they bow, their thoughts
 do hit

The roofs of palaces, and nature prompts
 them

In simple and low things to prince it much Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,
 The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, whom
 The king his father call'd Guiderius,—Jove!
 When on my three-foot stool I sit and tell

The war-like feats I have done, his spirits fly out <sup>90</sup>

Into my story: say 'Thus mine enemy
 fell,

And thus I set my foot on 's neck;' even
 then

The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats,

Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture

That acts my words. The younger brother,
 Cadwal,

Once Arviragus, in as like a figure,
 Strikes life into my speech and shows much
 more

His own conceiving. Hark! the game is rous'd.

O Cymbeline! heaven and my conscience
 knows

Thou didst unjustly banish me; whereon, <sup>100</sup>
 At three and two years old, I stole these babes,

Thinking to bar thee of succession, as Thou reft'st me of my lands. Euriphile,

Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,

And every day do honour to her grave:
 Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,

They take for natural father. The game is up.

Exit.

SCENE IV.—Near Milford-Haven.

Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse, the place
Was near at hand: ne'er long'd my mother
To see me first, as I have now. Pisanio!
man!

Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind,
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh
From the inward of thee? One, but painted
thus,

Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication; put thyself
Into a havour of less fear, ere wildness Vanquish my staid senses. What's the matter?

Why tender'st thou that paper to me with A look untender? If 't be summer news,
Smile to 't before; if winterly, thou need'st
But keep that countenance still. My husband's hand!

That drug-damn'd Italy hath outcraftied
him,
And he's at some hard point. Speak, man;
thy tongue

May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you, read;
And you shall find me, wretched man, a
thing

The most disdain'd of fortune.

Imo. Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part thou, Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life; I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven; she hath my letter for the purpose; where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pander to her dishonour and equally to me disloyal.

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword?
the paper

Hath cut her throat already. No, 't is slander,

Whose edge is sharper than the sword,
whose tongue

Outvenoms all the worms of Nile, whose
breath

Rides on the posting winds and doth belie
All corners of the world; kings, queens, and
states,

Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave

This viperous slander enters. What cheer,
madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What is it to be false?

To lie in watch there and to think on him?
To weep 'twixt clock and clock? if sleep
charge nature,

To break it with a fearful dream of him,
And cry myself awake? that's false to 's bed, is it?

Pis. Alas! good lady.

Imo. I false! Thy conscience witness!
Iachimo,

Thou didst accuse him of incontinency;
Thou then look'dst like a villain; now methinks

Thy favour's good enough. Some jay of Italy,

Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd him:

Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion,
And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls,

I must be ripp'd; to pieces with me! O!
Men's vows are women's traitors. All good seeming,

By thy revolt, O husband! shall be thought
Put on for villany; not born where 't grows,
But worn a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.
Imo. True honest men being heard, like false Aeneas,

Were in his time thought false, and Sinon's
weeping

Did scandal many a holy tear, took pity
From most true wretchedness; so thou,

Posthumus,
Wilt lay the heaven on all proper men;

Goodly and gallant shall be false and per-jur'd

From thy great fail. Come, fellow, be thou
honest;

Do thou thy master's bidding. When thou see'st him,

A little witness my obedience; look!
I draw the sword myself; take it, and hit
The innocent mansion of my love, my
heart.

Fear not, 't is empty of all things but grief;
Thy master is not there, who was indeed
The riches of it: do his bidding; strike.

Thou may'st be valiant in a better cause,
But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!
Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die;
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No servant of thy master's. Against self-slaughter

There is a prohibition so divine That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's
my heart;

Something's afore 't; soft, soft! we'll no defence,

Obedient as the scabbard. What is here?
The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus

All turn'd to heresy! Away, away!
Corrupters of my faith; you shall no more
Be stomachers to my heart. Thus may poor
fools

Believe false teachers; though those that are betray'd

Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.

And thou, Posthumus, thou that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,

And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness; and I grieve myself
To think, when thou shalt be disedg'd by
her

That now thou tir'st on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me. Prithee, dispatch;

The lamb entreats the butcher; where's thy knife?

Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding, 100

When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady!
Since I receiv'd command to do this business

I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do 't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eyeballs blind first.

Imo. Wherefore then Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many miles with a pretence? this place?
Mine action and thine own? our horses'
labour?

The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,
For my being absent? whereunto I never Purpose return. Why hast thou gone so far, 110

To be unbent when thou hast ta'en thy
stand,

The elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time,
To lose so bad employment, in the which I have consider'd of a course. Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak:
I have heard I am a strumpet, and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater
wound,

Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.

Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Most like,
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither;
But if I were as wise as honest, then 121

My purpose would prove well. It cannot be
But that my master is abus'd;

Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtesan.

Pis. No, on my life.
I'll give but notice you are dead and send
him

Some bloody sign of it; for 't is commanded
I should do so: you shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? where bide? how
live? 131

Or in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?

Pis. If you 'll back to the court,—
Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado

With that harsh, noble, simple nothing,
That Cloten, whose love-suithath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day,
night,

Are they not but in Britain? I' the world's volume 140

Our Britain seems as of it, but not in 't;
In a great pool a swan's nest: prithee, think
There's livers out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow; now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise
That which, to appear itself, must not yet be But by self-danger, you should tread a course

Pretty and full of view; yea, haply, near 150
The residence of Posthumus; so nigh at least

That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear
As truly as he moves.

Imo. O! for such means:
Though peril to my modesty, not death on 't,
I would adventure.

Pis. Well then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience; fear and nice-
ness,

The handmaids of all women, or more truly Woman it pretty self, into a waggish cour-
age; 140

Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrellous as the weasel; nay, you must

Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it—but, O! the harder heart!
Alack! no remedy!—to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan, and forget

Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.

Imo. Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like one.
Forethinking this, I have already fit, 171

'T is in my cloak-bag, doublet, hat, hose, all That answer to them; would you in their serving,

And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, fore noble
Lucius

Present yourself, desire his service, tell him Wherein you're happy, which you'll make him know,

If that his head have ear in music, doubtless
With joy he will embrace you for he's honourable,

And, doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad, 180

You have me, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning nor supplement.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Prithee, away;
There's more to be consider'd, but we'll even

All that good time will give us; this attempt

I'm soldier to, and will abide it with A prince's courage. Away, I prithee.

Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short
farewell,

Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of Your carriage from the court. My noble
mistress, 190

Here is a box, I had it from the queen, What's in 't is precious; if you are sick at
sea,

Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this
Will drive away distemper. To some shade, And fit you to your manhood. May the gods

Direct you to the best!

Imo. Amen. I thank thee. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Room in CYMBELINE'S
Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, LUCIUS, Lords, and Attendants.

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal sir.
My emperor hath wrote, I must from hence;
And am right sorry that I must report ye
My master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, sir,
Will not endure his yoke; and for ourself
To show less sovereignty than they, must needs
Appear unkinglike.

Luc. So, sir: I desire of you
A conduct over land to Milford-Haven.
Madam, all joy befall your grace!

Queen. And you!
Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office; 10

The due of honour in no point omit.
So farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord.
Clo. Receive it friendly; but from this time forth

I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event
Is yet to make the winner. Fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords,

Till he have cross'd the Severn. Happiness!
Exeunt LUCIUS and Lords.

Queen. He goes hence frowning; but it honours us,

That we have given him cause.

Clo. 'T is all the better;
Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor 21

How it goes here. It fits us therefore ripely
Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness:

The powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves

His war for Britain.

Queen. 'T is not sleepy business;
But must be look'd to speedily and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be
thus

Hath made us forward. But, my gentle
queen,

Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd 30

Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day; she looks us like
A thing more made of malice than of duty:
We have noted it. Call her before us, for
We have been too slight in sufferance.

Exit an Attendant.

Queen. Royal sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my
lord,

'T is time must do. Beseech your majesty, Forbear sharp speeches to her; she's a lady

So tender of rebukes that words are strokes,
And strokes death to her. 41

Re-enter Attendant.

Cym. Where is she, sir? How Can her contempt be answer'd?

Atten. Please you, sir,
Her chambers are all lock'd, and there's no
answer

That will be given to the loudest noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit
her,

She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close,
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,

She should that duty leave unpaid to you,
Which daily she was bound to proffer; this

She wish'd me to make known, but our great
court 50

Made me to blame in memory.

Cym. Her doors lock'd!
Not seen of late! Grant, heavens, that which I fear

Prove false! Exit.

Queen. Son, I say follow the king.

Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant,

I have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after. Exit CLOTEN.
Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus!

He hath a drug of mine; I pray his absence
Proceed by swallowing that, for he believes

It is a thing most precious. But for her,
Where is she gone? Haply despair hath seiz'd her, 60

Or wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown

To her desir'd Posthumus. Gone she is
To death or to dishonour, and my end

Can make good use of either; she being
down,

I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter CLOTEN.

How, now, my son!

Clo. 'T is certain she is fled.
Go in and cheer the king; he rages, none
Dare come about him.

Queen. Aside. All the better; may
This night forestall him of the coming day!

Exit.

Clo. I love and hate her; for she's fair and royal, 70
And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite
Than lady, ladies, woman; from every one
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded,
Outsells them all. I love her therefore; but Disdaining me and throwing favours on The low Posthumus slanders so her judgment
That what's else rare is chok'd, and in that point
I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,
To be reveng'd upon her, for when fools
Shall—

Enter PISANIO.

Who is here? What! are you packing, sirrah? 80
Come hither. Ah! you precious pandar.
Villain,

Where is thy lady? In a word; or else
Thou art straightway with the fiends.

Pis. O! good my lord.
Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter
I will not ask again. Close villain,
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?

From whose so many weights of baseness
cannot

A dram of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas! my lord, How can she be with him? When was she miss'd? 90
He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer,
No further halting; satisfy me home
What is become of her.

Pis. O! my all-worthy lord.

Clo. All-worthy villain!
Discover where thy mistress is at once
At the next word; no more of 'worthy
lord'!

Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then, sir,
This paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight. Presenting a letter.

Clo. Let's see 't. I will pursue her 100
Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. Aside. Or this, or perish.
She's far enough; and what he learns by
this

May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clo. Hum!
Pis. Aside. I'll write to my lord she's dead, O Imogen!

Safe may'st thou wander, safe return again.
Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think. 110

Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know 't.
Sirrah, if thou would'st not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry, that is, what villany soe'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly, I would think thee an honest man; thou should'st neither want my means for thy relief nor my voice for thy preferment. 116

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me? 122

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand; here's my purse.
Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service;
go. 131

Pis. I shall, my lord.

Exit.

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven! I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember 't anon. Even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee. I would these garments were come. She said upon a time, the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart, that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes;
there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body, and when my lust hath dined, which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised, to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge. 150

Re-enter PISANIO, with the clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clo. How long is't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber;
that is the second thing that I have commanded thee: the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee. My revenge is now at Milford; would I had wings to follow it! Come, and be true. Exit. 152

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my loss; for true to thee

Were to prove false, which I will never
be,

To him that is most true. To Milford go,
And find not her whom thou pursu'st. Flow, flow,

You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed

Be cross'd with slowness; labour be his meed! Exit.

SCENE VI.—Wales. Before the Cave of
BELARIUS.

Enter IMOGEN, in boy's clothes.

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one;
I have tir'd myself, and for two nights together

Have made the ground my bed; I should be sick

But that my resolution helps me. Milford,
When from the mountain-top Pisano show'd
thee,

Thou wast within a ken. O Jove! I think Foundations fly the wretched; such, I mean,
Where they should be reliev'd. Two beggars told me

I could not miss my way; will poor folks lie,
That have afflictions on them, knowing 'tis 10
A punishment or trial? Yes; no wonder,
When rich ones scarce tell true. To lapse in fulness

Is sorer than to lie for need, and falsehood
Is worse in kings than beggars. My dear
lord!

Thou art one o' the false ones. Now I think on thee,

My hunger's gone, but even before I was
At point to sink for food. But what is this?
Here is a path to 't; 't is some savage hold;
I were best not call, I dare not call, yet
famine,

Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant. 20

Plenty and peace breeds cowards, hardness
ever

Of hardness is mother. Ho! who's here?
If any thing that's civil, speak; if savage, Take or lend. Ho! No answer? Then I'll enter.

Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on 't.

Such a foe, good heavens!

Enters the cave.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVI-RAGUS.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman, and

Are master of the feast; Cadwal and I Will play the cook and servant, 'tis our match; 30

The sweat of industry would dry and die
But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs

Will make what's homely savoury; weariness

Can snore upon the flint when resty sloth Finds the down pillow hard. Now peace be
here,

Poor house, that keep'st thyself!

Gui. I am thoroughly weary.

Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.

Gui. There is cold meat i' the cave; we'll browse on that,

Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.

Bel. Looking into the cave. Stay; come not in; 40

But that it eats our victuals, I should think Here were a fairy.

Gui. What's the matter, sir?

Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not,
An earthly paragon! Behold divineness
No elder than a boy!

Re-enter IMOGEN.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not:
Before I enter'd here, I call'd; and thought
To have begg'd or bought what I have took.

Good troth,

I have stol'n nought, nor would not, though
I had found

Gold strew'd i' the floor. Here's money for my meat; 50

I would have left it on the board so soon
As I had made my meal, and parted
With prayers for the provider.

Gui. Money, youth?

Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt!

As 't is no better reckon'd but of those
Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see you're angry.
Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died had I not made it.

Bel. Whither bound?

Imo. To Milford-Haven.

Bel. What's your name? 60

Imo. Fidele, sir. I have a kinsman who Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford:
To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,

I am fall'n in this offence.

Bel. Prithee, fair youth, Think us no churls, nor measure our good
minds

By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd!

'Tis almost night; you shall have better
cheer

Ere you depart, and thanks to stay and eat it.

Boys, bid him welcome.

Gui. Were you a woman, youth,
I should woo hard but be your groom. In honesty, 70

I bid for you as I'd buy.

Arv. I'll make 't my comfort
He is a man; I'll love him as my brother;
And such a welcome as I'd give to him
After long absence, such is yours: most welcome!

Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.

Imo. 'Mongst friends,
If brothers. Aside. Would it had been so,
that they

Had been my father's sons; then had my prize

Been less, and so more equal ballasting

To thee, Posthumus.

Bel. He wrings at some distress.

Gui. Would I could free 't!

Arv. Or I, whate'er it be,
What pain it cost, what danger. Gods!

Bel. Hark, boys. Whispering.

Imo. Great men, 82
That had a court no bigger than this cave,

That did attend themselves and had the virtue
 Which their own conscience seal'd them, laying by
 That nothing gift of differing multitudes,
 Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me,
 gods!
 I'd change my sex to be companion with
 them.

Since Leonatus' false.

Bel. It shall be so.

Boys, we'll go dress our hunt. Fair youth, come in; 90

Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have supp'd,

We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,
 So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray, draw near.

Arv. The night to the owl and morn to the lark less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, sir.

Arv. I pray, draw near. Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Rome. A public Place.

Enter two Senators and Tribunes.

First Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ:

That since the common men are now in action

'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians,
 And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against
 The fall'n-off Britons, that we do incite
 The gentry to this business. He creates Lucius proconsul; and to you the tribunes,
 For this immediate levy, he commends
 His absolute commission. Long live
 Cæsar! 10

Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces? 10

Second Sen. Ay.

Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

First Sen. With those legions
 Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy Must be suppliant; the words of your commission

Will tie you to the numbers and the time
 Of their dispatch.

Tri. We will discharge our duty.
Exeunt.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Wales. The Forest, near the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I am near the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly. How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too? the rather, saving reverence of the word, for 't is said a woman's fitness comes by fits.
 Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself, for it is not vain-glory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber, I mean, the lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no less young,

more strong, not beneath him in fortunes,
 beyond him in the advantage of the time,
 above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions; yet this imperseverant thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off, thy mistress enforced, thy garments cut to pieces before thy face; and all this done, spurn her home to her father, who may haply be a little angry for my so rough usage, but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe; out, sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me. Exit.

SCENE II.—Before the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter, from the Cave, BELARIUS, GUI-DERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN.

Bel. To IMOGEN. You are not well; remain here in the cave;
 We'll come to you after hunting.

Arv. To IMOGEN. Brother, stay here;
 Are we not brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be,
 But clay and clay differs in dignity.

Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Gui. Go you to hunting; I'll abide with
 him.

Imo. So sick I am not, yet I am not well;
 But not so citizen a wanton as To seem to die ere sick. So please you, leave me,

Stick to your journal course; the breach of custom 10

Is breach of all. I am ill, but your being by
 me

Cannot amend me; society is no comfort
 To one not sociable. I am not very sick, Since I can reason of it; pray you, trust me
 here,

I'll rob none but myself, and let me die,
 Stealing so poorly.

Gui. I love thee; I have spoke it;
 How much the quantity, the weight as much,
 As I do love my father.

Bel. What! how! how!

Arv. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me
 In my good brother's fault: I know not why
 I love this youth; and I have heard you say, Love's reason's without reason: the bier
 at door, 22

And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say
 'My father, not this youth.'

Bel. Aside. O noble strain!
 O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!
 Cowards father cowards, and base things
 sire base:

Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and
 grace.

I'm not their father; yet who this should be,
 Doth miracle itself, lov'd before me. 24

'T is the ninth hour o' the morn.

Arv. Brother, farewell.

Imo. I wish ye sport.
Arv. You health. So please you, sir.
Imo. Aside. These are kind creatures.
 Gods, what lies I have heard!
 Our courtiers say all's savage but at court:
 Experience, O! thou disprov'st report.
 The imperious seas breed monsters, for the dish
 Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.
 I am sick still, heart-sick. Pisanio, I'll now taste of thy drug. Swallows some.
Gui. I could not stir him;
 He said he was gentle, but unfortunate;
 Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest. 40
Arv. Thus did he answer me; yet said hereafter
 I might know more.
Bel. To the field, to the field!
 We'll leave you for this time; go in and
 rest.
Arv. We'll not be long away.
Bel. Pray, be not sick,
 For you must be our housewife.
Imo. Well or ill,
 I am bound to you.
Bel. And shalt be ever. Exit IMOGEN.
 This youth, howe'er distress'd, appears he hath had Good ancestors.
Arv. How angel-like he sings!
Gui. But his neat cookery! He cut our roots
 In characters, 49
 And sauc'd our broths as Juno had been sick
 And he her dieter.
Arv. Nobly he yokes
 A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh
 Was that it was, for not being such a smile;
 The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly
 From so divine a temple, to commix
 With winds that sailors rail at.
Gui. I do note
 That grief and patience, rooted in him
 both,
 Mingle their spurs together.
Arv. Grow, patience!
 And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine
 His perishing root with the increasing vine!
Bel. It is great morning. Come, away!
 Who's there? 61

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I cannot find those runagates; that villain
 Hath mock'd me. I am faint.
Bel. 'Those runagates'!
 Means he not us? I partly know him; 't is Cloten, the son o' the queen. I fear some ambush.
 I saw him not these many years, and yet
 I know 't is he. We are held as outlaws:
 hence!
Gui. He is but one. You and my brother
 search
 What companies are near; pray you,
 away; 69
 Let me alone with him.

Exeunt BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Clo. Soft! What are you
 That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers?
 I have heard of such. What slave art thou?
Gui. A thing
 More slavish did I ne'er than answering
 A slave without a knock.
Clo. Thou art a robber,
 A law-breaker, a villain. Yield thee, thief.
Gui. To who? to thee? What art thou?
 Have not I
 An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?
 Thy words, I grant, are bigger, for I wear not My dagger in my mouth. Say what thou
 art, 79
 Why I should yield to thee?
Clo. Thou villain base,
 Know'st me not by my clothes?
Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
 Who is thy grandfather: he made those clothes,
 Which, as it seems, make thee.
Clo. Thou precious varlet,
 My tailor made them not.
Gui. Hence then, and thank
 The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool;
 I am loath to beat thee.
Clo. Thou injurious thief,
 Hear but my name, and tremble.
Gui. What's thy name?
Clo. Cloten, thou villain.
Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy
 name,
 I cannot tremble at it; were it toad, or adder, spider, 90
 'T would move me sooner.
Clo. To thy further fear,
 Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
 I am son to the queen.
Gui. I am sorry for 't, not seeming
 So worthy as thy birth.
Clo. Art not afeard?
Gui. Those that I reverence, those I fear,
 the wise;
 At fools I laugh, not fear them.
Clo. Die the death:
 When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
 I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
 And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads:
 Yield, rustic mountaineer. Exeunt, fighting.
Re-enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.
Bel. No companies abroad? 101
Arv. None in the world. You did mistake him, sure.
Bel. I cannot tell; long is it since I saw
 him,
 But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of favour
 Which then he wore; the snatches in his voice,
 And bursts of speaking, were as his. I am absolute
 'T was very Cloten.
Arv. In this place we left them:
 I wish my brother make good time with him,
 You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up, I mean, to man, he had not apprehension 110
Of roaring terrors; for defect of judgment Is oft the cease of fear. But see, thy brother.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS, with CLOTEN's head.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse,
There was no money in 't. Not Hercules Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none;
Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?

Gui. I am perfect what: cut off one Cloten's head,
Son to the queen, after his own report;
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer, and swore 120
With his own single hand he'd take us in,
Displace our heads where, thank the gods!
they grow,
And set them on Lud's town.

Bel. We are all undone.

Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose,
But that he swore to take, our lives? The law
Protects not us; then why should we be tender

To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us,
Play judge and executioner all himself,
For we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul

Can we set eye on; but in all safe reason
He must have some attendants. Though his humour 132

Was nothing but mutation, ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy,
not

Absolute madness could so far have rav'd
To bring him here alone. Although, perhaps,

It may be heard at court that such as we Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in
time

May make some stronger head; the which he hearing,

As it is like him, might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet is't not probable 141
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering; then on good ground
we fear,

If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.

Arv. Let ordinance

Come as the gods foresay it; howsoe'er,
My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind

To hunt this day; the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.

Gui. With his own sword,

Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en 150
His head from him; I'll throw 't into the creek

Behind our rock, and let it to the sea,

And tell the fishes he 's the queen's son,
Cloten:

That 's all I reck. Exit.

Bel. I fear 't will be reveng'd.
Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done 't!
though valour

Becomes thee well enough.

Arv. Would I had done 't,
So the revenge alone pursu'd me! Polydore,
I love thee brotherly, but envy much Thou hast robb'd me of this deed; I would revenges,
That possible strength might meet, would seek us through 160

And put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, 't is done.
We 'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger

Where there 's no profit. I prithee, to our rock;

You and Fidele play the cooks; I'll stay
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Arv. Poor sick Fidele!

I'll willingly to him; to gain his colour
I'd let a parish of such Clotens blood,
And praise myself for charity. Exit.

Bel. O thou goddess!
Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou bla-zon'st 170

In these two princely boys. They are as gentle

As zephyrs, blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough,

Their royal blood enchaf'd, as the rud'st
wind,

That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'T is wonder

That an invisible instinct should frame
them

To royalty unlearn'd, honour untaught,
Civility, not seen from other, valour 176
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop

As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it 's
strange

What Cloten's being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS.

Gui. Where 's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream,

In embassy to his mother; his body 's hostage

For his return. Solemn music.

Bel. My ingenious instrument!
Hark! Polydore, it sounds; but what occasion

Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark!

Gui. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now.

Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother 190
It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?

Triumphs for nothing and lamenting toys
Is jollity for apes and grief for boys.
Is Cadwal mad?

*Re-enter ARVIRAGUS, bearing IMOGEN
as dead in his arms.*

Bel. Look! here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms
Of what we blame him for.

Arv. The bird is dead
That we have made so much on. I had rather
Have skip'd from sixteen years of age to sixty.
To have turn'd my leaping-time into a crutch, 200
Than have seen this.

Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily!
My brother wears thee not the one half so
well
As when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find
The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggish crare
Might earliest harbour in? Thou blessed thing!
Jove knows what man thou might'st have made; but I,
Thou didst, a most rare boy, of melancholy.

How found you him?

Arv. Stark, as you see:
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber, 210
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at; his right cheek

Reposing on a cushion.

Gui. Where?
Arv. O' the floor,
His arms thus leagu'd; I thought he slept,
and put

My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose rudeness
Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui. Why, he but sleeps:
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed:
With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,

And worms will not come to thee.

Arv. With fairest flowers
Whilst summer lasts and I live here, Fidele, I'll sweeten thy sad grave; thou shalt not
lack 220

The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose, nor

The azur'd hare-bell, like thy veins, no, nor
The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander, Outsweeten'd not thy breath: the ruddock
would,

With charitable bill, O bill! sore-shaming
Those rich-left heirs that let their fathers lie
Without a monument, bring thee all this;
Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are none,

To winter-ground thy corse.

Gui. Prithee, have done,
And do not play in wench-like words with
that 230

Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt. To the grave!

Arv. Say, where shall's lay him?

Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.

Arv. Be't so: And let us, Polydore, though now our voices

Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground,

As once our mother; use like note and
words,

Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing; I'll weep, and word it with
thee; 240

For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse
Than priests and fanes that lie.

Arv. We'll speak it then.

Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less,
for Cloten

Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys,
And though he came our enemy, remember

He was paid for that; though mean and mighty, rotting

Together, have one dust, yet reverence,
That angel of the world, doth make distinction

Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princely,

And though you took his life, as being our foe, 250

Yet bury him as a prince.

Gui. Pray, fetch him hither.
Thersites' body is as good as Ajax'

When neither are alive.

Arv. If you'll go fetch him,
We'll say our song the whilst. Brother, begin. Exit BELARIUS.

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;

My father hath a reason for't.

Arv. 'T is true.

Gui. Come on then, and remove him.

Arv. So, begin.

Gui. Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages;

Thou thy worldly task hast done, 260 Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages:

Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Arv. Fear no more the frown o' the great,
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;

Care no more to clothe and eat;

To thee the reed is as the oak;

The sceptre, learning, physic, must

All follow this, and come to dust.

Gui. Fear no more the lightning-flash, 270

Arv. Nor the all-dreaded thunder-
stone;

Gui. Fear not slander, censure rash;

Arv. Thou hast finish'd joy and moan:

Both. All lovers young, all lovers must Consign to thee, and come to dust.

Gui. No exorciser harm thee!

Arv. Nor no witchcraft charm thee!

Gui. Ghost unaid forbear thee!

Arv. Nothing ill come near thee!

Both. Quiet consumption have; 280
And renowned be thy grave!

Re-enter BELARIUS with the body of CLOTEN.

Gui. We have done our obsequies. Come, lay him down.

Bel. Here 's a few flowers, but 'bout midnight, more;

The herbs that have on them cold dew o' the night

Are strewings fitt'st for graves. Upon their faces.

You were as flowers, now wither'd; even so These herblets shall, which we upon you strew.

Come on, away; apart upon our knees.

The ground that gave them first has them again;

Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain. 290

Exeunt BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Imo. Awaking. Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven; which is the way?

I thank you. By yond bush? Pray, how far thither?

'Ods pittikins! can it be six mile yet?

I have gone all night. Faith, I'll lie down and sleep.

But, soft! no bedfellow! O gods and goddesses! Seeing the body of CLOTEN.

These flowers are like the pleasures of the world;

This bloody man, the care on 't. I hope I dream;

For so I thought I was a cave-keeper, And cook to honest creatures; but 't is not so. 299

'T was but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing, Which the brain makes of fumes. Our very eyes

Are sometimes like our judgments, blind. Good faith,

I tremble still with fear; but if there be Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity

As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it! The dream 's here still; even when I wake,

it is Without me, as within me; not imagin'd, felt.

A headless man! The garments of Posthumus!

I know the shape of 's leg, this is his hand, His foot Mercurial, his Martial thigh, 310

The brawns of Hercules; but his Jovial face—

Murder in heaven? How! 'T is gone. Pisanio,

All curses madd'd Hecuba gave the Greeks, And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou, Conspir'd with that irregular devil, Cloten, Hast here cut off my lord. To write and read

Be henceforth treacherous! Damn'd Pisanio Hath with his forged letters, damn'd Pisanio,

From this most bravest vessel of the world Struck the main-top! O Posthumus! alas!

Where is thy head? where 's that? Ay me! where 's that? 321

Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart, And left this head on. How should this be?

Pisanio?

'T is he and Cloten; malice and lucre in them

Have laid this woe here. O! 't is pregnant, pregnant.

The drug he gave me, which he said was precious

And cordial to me, have I not found it Murderous to the senses? That confirms it home; This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's; O! 329

Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood, That we the horrid may seem to those

Which chance to find us. O! my lord, my lord. Falls on the body.

Enter LUCIUS, a Captain and other Officers and Soothsayer.

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia,

After your will, have cross'd the sea, attending

You here at Milford-Haven with your ships: They are in readiness.

Luc. But what from Rome?

Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners

And gentlemen of Italy, most willing spirits, That promise noble service; and they come Under the conduct of bold Iachimo, 340 Sienna's brother.

Luc. When expect you them?

Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind.

Luc. This forwardness Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers

Be muster'd; bid the captains look to 't. Now, sir,

What have you dream'd of late of this war's purpose?

Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision,

I fast and pray'd for their intelligence, thus:

I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd From the spongy south to this part of the west, There vanish'd in the sunbeams; which portends 350

Unless my sins abuse my divination, Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so, And never false. Soft, ho! what trunk is

here

Without his top? The ruin speaks that sometime

It was a worthy building. How! a page! Or dead or sleeping on him? But dead

rather;

For nature doth abhor to make his bed With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.

Let 's see the boy's face. Cap. He 's alive, my lord.

Luc. He 'll then instruct us of this body.
Young one, 360
Inform us of thy fortunes, for it seems
They crave to be demanded. Who is this Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was he

That, otherwise than noble nature did, Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest
In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it?

What art thou?
Imo. I am nothing; or if not,
Nothing to be were better. This was my
master,

A very valiant Briton and a good, 369
That here by mountaineers lies slain. Alas!
There is no more such masters; I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. 'Lack, good youth!
Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining
than Thy master in bleeding. Say his name good friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ. Aside. If I do lie and do
No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope
They 'll pardon it. Say you, sir?

Luc. Thy name?
Imo. Fidele, sir.
Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same; 380

Thy name well fits thy faith, thy faith thy name.

Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say Thou shalt be so well master'd, but be sure

No less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner Than thine own worth prefer thee. Go with me.

Imo. I 'll follow, sir. But first, an 't please
the gods,
I 'll hide my master from the flies, as deep

As these poor pickaxes can dig; and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I ha' strew'd his grave, 390

And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I 'll weep and sigh;
And leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth,
And rather father thee than master thee.
My friends,
The boy hath taught us manly duties; let us
Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partisans
A grave; come, arm him. Boy, he is pre-ferr'd 400

By thee to us, and he shall be interr'd
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine
eyes:

Some falls are means the happier to arise.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in CYMBELINE'S
Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, Lords, PISANIO, and Attendants.

Cym. Again; and bring me word how
't is with her. Exit an Attendant.
A fever with the absence of her son,
A madness, of which her life 's in danger.
Heavens!

How deeply you at once do touch me. Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone; my
queen

Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful wars point at me; her son
gone,

So needful for this present: it strikes me
past

The hope of comfort. But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure and Dost seem so ignorant, we 'll enforce it from
thee 11

By a sharp torture.
Pis. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly set it at your will; but, for my mistress,

I nothing know where she remains, why
gone,

Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your highness,

Hold me your loyal servant.
First Lord. Good my liege,

The day that she was missing he was here;
I dare be bound he 's true and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally. For Cloten,

There wants no diligence in seeking him, 20
And will no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time is troublesome.
To PISANIO. We 'll slip you for a season;
but our jealousy

Does yet depend.
First Lord. So please your majesty,

The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast, with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent.

Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and
queen!

I am amaz'd with matter.
First Lord. Good my liege,

Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of; come more, for more you 're ready. 30

The want is but to put those powers in motion

That long to move.
Cym. I thank you. Let's withdraw,
And meet the time as it seeks us. We fear
not

What can from Italy annoy us, but We grieve at chances here. Away!

Exit all but PISANIO.

Pis. I heard no letter from my master
since

I wrote him Imogen was slain; 't is strange;
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise

To yield me often tidings; neither know I

What is betid to Cloten; but remain 40 Perplex'd in all: the heavens still must work.
 Wherein I am false I am honest; not true
 to be true.
 These present wars shall find I love my country,
 Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall in
 them.
 All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd;
 Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd. Exit.

SCENE IV.—Wales. Before the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life,
 to lock it

From action and adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope Have we in hiding us? This way, the Romans

Must or for Britons slay us, or receive us
 For barbarous and unnatural revolts
 During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,
 We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.

To the king's party there's no going; new-
 ness

Of Cloten's death, we being not known, not muster'd 10

Among the bands, may drive us to a render Where we have liv'd, and so extort from 's
 that

Which we have done, whose answer would be death

Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt
 In such a time nothing becoming you,
 Nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely That when they hear the Roman horses
 neigh,

Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their
 eyes

And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,
 That they will waste their time upon our note, 20

To know from whence we are.

Bel. O! I am known
 Of many in the army; many years,
 Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him

From my remembrance. And, besides, the
 king

Hath not deserv'd my service nor your loves,
 Who find in my exile the want of breeding.
 The certainty of this hard life; aye hopeless
 To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd,
 But to be still hot summer's tanlings and
 The shrinking slaves of winter. 30

Gui. Than be so
 Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army:
 I and my brother are not known; yourself

So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
 Cannot be question'd.

Arv. By this sun that shines,
 I'll thither: what thing is it that I never Did see man die! scarce ever look'd on
 blood

But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison!

Never bestrid a horse, save one that had
 A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel
 Nor iron on his heel! I am asham'd 40
 To look upon the holy sun, to have
 The benefit of his bless'd beams, remaining
 So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens! I'll go.
 If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
 I'll take the better care; but if you will not,
 The hazard therefore due fall on me by
 The hands of Romans.

Arv. So say I. Amen.

Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you set

So slight a valuation, should reserve
 My crack'd one to more care. Have with you boys! 50

If in your country wars you chance to die,
 That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie:
 Lead, lead. Aside. The time seems long;
 their blood thinks scorn,

Till it fly out and show them princes born.
Exeunt.

ACT V

SCENE I.—Britain. The Roman Camp.

Enter POSTHUMUS, with a bloody handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee,
 for I wish'd

Thou should'st be colour'd thus. You married ones,

If each of you should take this course, how many

Must murder wives much better than themselves

For wringing but a little! O Pisanio!

Every good servant does not all commands;
 No bond but to do just ones. Gods! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults,
 I never

Had liv'd to put on this; so had you say'd
 The noble Imogen to repent, and struck 10
 Me, wretch more worth your vengeance.

But, alack!

You snatch some hence for little faults;
 that's love,

To have them fall no more; you some permit

To second ills with ills, each elder worse,
 And make them dread it, to the doers thrift.
 But Imogen is your own; do your best wills,
 And make me bless'd to obey. I am brought hither

Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom; 't is enough
 That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress.

Peace! 20

I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good
 heavens,

Hear patiently my purpose: I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant; so I'll fight Against the part I come with, so I'll die For thee, O Imogen! even for whom my
life

Is every breath a death; and thus, unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men
know

More valour in me than my habits show. 30
Gods! put the strength o' the Leonati in me.
To shame the guise o' the world, I will begin
The fashion, less without and more within.
Exit.

SCENE II.—Field of Battle between the British and Roman Camps.

*Enter, at one side, LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and the Roman Army; at the other side, the British Army; LEONATUS POSTHUMUS
following, like a poor soldier. They march over and go out. Alarums. Then enter again, in skirmish, IACHIMO, and POS-THUMUS; he vanquisheth and disarmeth
IACHIMO, and then leaves him.*

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom
Takes off my manhood: I have belied a
lady,

The princess of this country, and the air on 't
Revengefully enfeebles me; or could this carl,
A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me
In my profession? Knighthoods and honours, borne

As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is that we scarce are men and you are gods.
Exit.

The battle continues; the Britons fly; CYM-BELINE is taken; then enter, to his rescue, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVI-RAGUS.

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground. 11
The lane is guarded; nothing routs us but
The villany of our fears.

Gui., Arv. Stand, stand, and fight!
Re-enter POSTHUMUS, and seconds the Britons; they rescue CYMBELINE, and exeunt. Then re-enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and IMOGEN.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself;
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's
such

As war were hoodwink'd,
Iach. 'T is their fresh supplies.
Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely; or betimes

Let's re-inforce, or fly. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter POSTHUMUS and a British Lord.

Lord. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?

Post. I did;
Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.
Lord. I did.
Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was
lost,
But that the heavens fought. The king himself

Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying Through a strait lane; the enemy full-hearted,
Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having
work

More plentiful than tools to do 't, struck
down
Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling 10

Merely through fear; that the strait pass was damm'd
With dead men hurt behind, and cowards
living

To die with lengthen'd shame.
Lord. Where was this lane?

Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,
An honest one, I warrant; who deserv'd
So long a breeding as his white beard came to,

In doing this for's country; athwart the lane,

He, with two striplings, lads more like to run
The country base than to commit such slaughter; 20

With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame, Made good the passage; cried to those that
fled,

'Our Britain's harts die flying, not our men;
To darkness fleet souls that fly backwards.
Stand!

Or we are Romans and will give you that Like beasts which you shun beastly, and may save,

But to look back in frown: stand, stand!
These three,

Three thousand confident, in act as many,
For three performers are the file when all 30
The rest do nothing, with this word 'Stand,
stand!'

Accommodated by the place, more charming With their own nobleness, which could have turn'd

A distaff to a lance, gilded pale looks, Part shame, part spirit renew'd; that some,
turn'd coward

But by example, O! a sin in war,
Damn'd in the first beginners; 'gan to look
The way that they did, and to grin like lions
Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began
A stop i' the chaser, a retire, anon 40
A rout, confusion thick; forthwith they fly Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles;
slaves,

The strides they victors made. And now
our cowards,

Like fragments in hard voyages, became
The life o' the need; having found the backdoor open

Of the unguarded hearts, heavens! how they wound;
Some slain before; some dying; some their friends O'erborne i' the former wave; ten, chas'd<sup>48</sup>
by one,
Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty;

Those that would die or ere resist are grown
The mortal bugs o' the field.

Lord. This was strange chance:
A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys!
Post. Nay, do not wonder at it; you are made

Rather to wonder at the things you hear
Than to work any. Will you rime upon 't,
And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:
'Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,
Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane.'

Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.

Post. 'Lack! to what end?
Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend;<sup>60</sup>

For if he 'll do as he is made to do,
I know he 'll quickly fly my friendship too.
You have put me into rime.

Lord. Farewell; you're angry. Exit.
Post. Still going? This is a lord! O noble misery!

To be i' the field, and ask 'what news?' of me!
To-day how many would have given their honours

To have sav'd their carcasses! took heel to do 't,

And yet died too! I, in mine own woe charm'd,

Could not find death where I did hear him groan,

Nor feel him where he struck: being an ugly monster,<sup>70</sup>

'T is strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,

Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we

That draw his knives i' the war. Well, I will find him;

For being now a favourer to the Briton,
No more a Briton, I have resum'd again

The part I came in; fight I will no more,
But yield me to the veriest hind that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer be

Britons must take. For me, my ransom's death;<sup>80</sup>

On either side I come to spend my breath,
Which neither here I'll keep nor bear again,

But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two British Captains and Soldiers.

First Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd!
Lucius is taken.

'T is thought the old man and his sons were angels.

Second Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,

That gave the affront with them.

First Cap.

So 't is reported;
But none of 'em can be found. Stand!
who's there?

Post. A Roman,

Who had not now been drooping here if seconds<sup>90</sup>

Had answer'd him.

Second Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!
A leg of Rome shall not return to tell

What crows have peck'd them here. He brags his service

As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

Enter CYMBELINE, attended; BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, and Roman Captives. The Captains present POSTHUMUS to CYMBELINE, who delivers him over to a Gaoler; then exeunt omnes.

SCENE IV.—A British Prison.

Enter POSTHUMUS and two Gaolers.

First Gaol. You shall not now be stol'n,
you have locks upon you;

So graze as you find pasture.

Second Gaol. Ay, or a stomach.
Exeunt Gaolers.

Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art a way,

I think, to liberty. Yet am I better Than one that's sick o' the gout, since he had rather

Groan so in perpetuity than be cur'd
By the sure physician, death, who is the key

To unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd

More than my shanks and wrists: you good gods, give me

The penitent instrument to pick that bolt; 10
Then, free for ever! Is 't enough I am sorry?

So children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?

I cannot do it better than in gyves,
Desir'd more than constrain'd; to satisfy,

If of my freedom 't is the main part, take
No stricter render of me than my all.

I know you are more clement than vile men,
Who of their broken debtors take a third,

A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again 20
On their abatement: that 's not my desire;

For Imogen's dear life take mine; and though

'T is not so dear, yet 't is a life; you coin'd it:

'Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp;

Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake:

You rather mine, being yours; and so, great powers,

If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!

I'll speak to thee in silence. Sleeps.

Solemn music. Enter, as in an apparition, SICILIUS LEONATUS, father to POSTHUMUS, an old man, attired like a warrior; leading in his hand an ancient matron, his wife, and mother to POSTHUMUS, with music before them. Then, after other music, follow the two young LEONATI, brothers to POSTHUMUS, with wounds as they died in the wars. They circle POSTHUMUS round as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master,
show
Thy spite on mortal flies:
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.
Hath my poor boy done aught but
well,
Whose face I never saw?
I died whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending nature's law:
Whose father then, as men report
Thou orphans' father art, 40 Thou should'st have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.

Mother. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my throes;
That from me was Posthumus ript,
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity!

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserv'd the praise o' the
world, 50
As great Sicilius' heir.

First Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel,
Or fruitful object be
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity?

Mother. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,
To be exil'd, and thrown
From Leonati seat, and cast 60
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the geck and scorn
O' the other's villany?

Second Bro. For this from stiller seats we came,
Our parents and us twain, 70
That striking in our country's cause
Fell bravely and were slain;
Our fealty and Tenantius' right
With honour to maintain.

First Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath
To Cymbeline perform'd:
Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd
The graces for his merits due,
Being all to dolours turn'd? 80

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out;
No longer exercise
Upon a valiant race thy harsh
And potent injuries.

Mother. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion;
'help!
Or we poor ghosts will cry
To the shining synod of the rest
Against thy deity. 90

Both Bro. Help, Jupiter! or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

JUPITER descends in thunder and lightning, sitting upon an eagle: he throws a thunderbolt; the Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region
low,
Offend our hearing; hush! How dare
you ghosts

Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt, you know,
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts?
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence; and rest Upon your never-withering banks of flowers:

Be not with mortal accidents oppress; 99
No care of yours it is; you know 't is ours.
Whom best I love I cross; to make my gift,
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content:

Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift:
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.

Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in Our temple was he married. Rise, and fade!

He shall be lord of Lady Imogen,
And happier much by his affliction made.
This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine;
And so, away: no further with your din 111
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline.

Ascends.
Sici. He came in thunder, his celestial
breath

Was sulphurous to smell; the holy eagle
Stoop'd, as to foot us; his ascension is More sweet than our bless'd fields; his royal bird

Prunes the immortal wing and cloyes his beak,

As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jupiter!
Sici. The marble pavement closes; he is enter'd 120

His radiant roof. Away! and, to be blest,
Let us with care perform his great behest.
The Ghosts vanish.

Post. Awaking. Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire, and begot
A father to me; and thou hast created
A mother and two brothers. But, O scorn!

Gone! they went hence so soon as they were born:

And so I am awake. Poor wretches that depend

On greatness' favour dream as I have done; Wake, and find nothing. But, alas! I swerve:

Many dream not to find, neither deserve, 130
And yet are steep'd in favours; so am I.
That have this golden chance and know not why.

What fairies haunt this ground? A book? O rare one!

Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment Nobler than that it covers: let thy effects So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers, As good as promise. 137

Whenas a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revivè, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty. 145

'T is still a dream, or else such stuff as madmen

Tongue and brain not; either both or nothing;

Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such As sense cannot untie. Be what it is, The action of my life is like it, which 150
I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Gaolers.

First Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for death?

Post. Over-roasted rather; ready long ago.

First Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir: if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot. 158

First Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir; but the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern-bills, which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth. You come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink, sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much; purse and brain both empty; the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness: of this contradiction you shall now be quit. O! the charity of a penny cord; it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true debtor and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge. Your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters; so the acquaintance follows. 174

Post. I am merrier to die than thou art to live.

First Gaol. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the toothache; but a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his officer; for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes, indeed do I, fellow. 183

First Gaol. Your death has eyes in 's head, then; I have not seen him so pictured: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or take upon yourself that which I am sure you do not know, or jump the after inquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell one. 191

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going but such as wink and will not use them.

First Gaol. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness! I am sure hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king. 200

Post. Thou bring'st good news; I am called to be made free.

First Gaol. I'll be hanged then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler; no bolts for the dead.

Exeunt all but the First Gaoler.

First Gaol. Unless a man would marry a gallows and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman; and there be some of them too that die against their wills; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good; O! there were desolation of gaolers and gallowes. I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in 't. Exit.

SCENE V.—CYMBELINE'S Tent.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart That the poor soldier that so richly fought, Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast

Stepp'd before targes of proof, cannot be found:

He shall be happy that can find him, if Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw Such noble fury in so poor a thing; Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought

But beggary and poor looks.

Cym.

No tidings of him?

Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living, 11

But no trace of him.

Cym.

To my grief, I am The heir of his reward; To BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS, which I will add

To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain,
 By whom, I grant, she lives. 'Tis now the time
 To ask of whence you are: report it.
Bel. Sir,
 In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen:
 Further to boast were neither true nor modest,
 Unless I add, we are honest.
Cym. Bow your knees.
 Arise, my knights o' the battle; I create you
 Companions to our person, and will fit you
 With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS and Ladies.

There's business in these faces. Why so sadly
 Greet you our victory? you look like Romans,
 And not o' the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king!
 To sour your happiness, I must report
 The queen is dead.

Cym. Who worse than a physician
 Would this report become? But I consider,
 By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet
 death
 Will seize the doctor too. How ended she?
Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her
 life;

Which, being cruel to the world, concluded
 Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd
 I will report, so please you: these her
 women

Can trip me if I err; who with wet cheeks
 Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Prithee, say,
Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you, only

Affected greatness got by you, not you; Married your royalty, was wife to your
 place;

Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this;
 And, but she spoke it dying, I would not. 41
 Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love

With such integrity, she did confess
 Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life,
 But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend!
 Who is 't can read a woman? Is there more?

Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess she had

For you a mortal mineral; which, being took, 50

Should by the minute feed on life, and ling-ring

By inches waste you; in which time she purpos'd,

By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'ercome you with her show; and in time,
 When she had fitted you with her craft, to
 work

Her son into the adoption of the crown;
 But failing of her end by his strange absence,

Grew shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite
 Of heaven and men, her purposes; repent'd 59
 The evils she hatch'd were not effected: so Despairing died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women?
Lady. We did, so please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes
 Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;
 Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my
 heart,

That thought her like her seeming; it had been vicious

To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter!
 That it was folly in me, thou may'st say,
 And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend
 all!

*Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded;
 POSTHUMUS behind, and IMOGEN.*

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute;
 that

The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss 70

Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made suit

That their good souls may be appeas'd with slaughter

Of you their captives, which ourself have granted:

So, think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war:
 the day

Was yours by accident; had it gone with us,
 We should not, when the blood was cool,
 have threaten'd

Our prisoners with the sword. But since the gods

Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
 May be call'd ransom, let it come; suf-ficeth 80

A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer;
 Augustus lives to think on 't; and so much
 For my peculiar care. This one thing only

I will entreat; my boy, a Briton born,
 Let him be ransom'd; never master had

A page so kind, so duteous, diligent,
 So tender over his occasions, true,

So feart, so nurse-like. Let his virtue join With my request, which I'll make bold your highness 89

Cannot deny; he hath done no Briton harm, Though he have serv'd a Roman. Save him, sir,

And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him;
 His favour is familiar to me. Boy,

Thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
 And art mine own. I know not why nor wherefore,

To say 'live, boy': ne'er thank thy master;
 live:

And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
 Fitting my bounty and thy state, I'll give it;

Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner, 99
 The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness.

Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad,

And yet I know thou wilt.

Imo. No, no; alack! There's other work in hand. I see a thing Bitter to me as death; your life, good master, Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me, He leaves me, scorns me; briefly die their joys

That place them on the truth of girls and boys.

Why stands he so perplex'd?

Cym. What would'st thou boy? I love thee more and more; think more and more

What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on? speak;

Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?

Imo. He is a Roman; no more kin to me Than I to your highness; who, being born your vassal,

Am something nearer.

Cym. Wherefore eyst him so?

Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please

To give me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart, And lend my best attention. What's thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cym. Thou'rt my good youth, my page; I'll be thy master: walk with me; speak freely.

CYMBELINE and IMOGEN converse apart.
Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death?

Arv. One sand another Not more resembles; that sweet rosy lad, 121 Who died, and was Fidele. What think you?

Gui. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not; forbear;

Creatures may be alike; were't he, I am sure

He would have spoke to us.

Gui. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent; let's see further.

Pis. Aside. It is my mistress! Since she is living, let the time run on

To good or bad.

CYMBELINE and IMOGEN come forward.

Cym. Come, stand thou by our side; Make thy demand aloud. To IACHIMO.

Sir, step you forth; 130

Give answer to this boy, and do it freely, Or, by our greatness and the grace of it,

Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood. On, speak to him.

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman may render

Of whom he had this ring.

Post. Aside. What's that to him?

Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say

How came it yours?

Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken that

Which, to be spoke, would torture thee.

Cym. How! me?

Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that 141

Which torments me to conceal. By villany I got this ring; 't was Leonatus' jewel,

Whom thou didst banish, and, which more may grieve thee,

As it doth me, a nobler sir ne'er liv'd 'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more, my lord?

Cym. All that belongs to this.

Iach. That paragon, thy daughter, For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits

Quail to remember,—Give me leave; I faint.

Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength; 150

I had rather thou should'st live while nature will,

Than die ere I hear more. Strive, man, and speak.

Iach. Upon a time, unhappy was the clock That struck the hour! it was in Rome;

accurs'd

The mansion where! 't was at a feast; O! would

Our viands had been poison'd, or at least Those which I heav'd to head; the good

Posthumus,

What should I say? he was too good to be

Where ill men were; and was the best of all

Amongst the rar'st of good ones; sitting sadly, 160

Hearing us praise our loves of Italy

For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast

Of him that best could speak; for feature laming

The shrine of Venus, of straight-pight Minerva,

Postures beyond brief nature; for condition,

A shop of all the qualities that man

Loves woman for; besides that hook of wiving,

Fairness which strikes the eye,—

Cym. I stand on fire.

Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall, Unless thou would'st grieve quickly. This

Posthumus, 170

Most like a noble lord in love, and one That had a royal lover, took his hint;

And, not dispraising whom we prais'd, therein

He was as calm as virtue, he began

His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being made,

And then a mind put in 't, either our brags Were crack'd of kitchen-trulls, or his description

Prov'd us unspeaking sots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.

Iach. Your daughter's chastity, there it begins.
 He spake of her as Dian had hot dreams, 180
 And she alone were cold; whereat I, wretch,
 Made scruple of his praise, and wager'd
 with him
 Pieces of gold 'gainst this, which then he wore
 Upon his honour'd finger, to attain
 In suit the place of 's bed, and win this ring
 By hers and mine adultery. He, true knight,
 No lesser of her honour confident
 Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
 And would so, had it been a carbuncle
 Of Phœbus' wheel; and might so safely, had it 190
 Been all the worth of 's car. Away to Britain
 Post I in this design. Well may you, sir,
 Remember me at court, where I was taught
 Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
 'Twixt amorous and villanous. Being thus quench'd
 Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
 'Gan in your duller Britain operate
 Most vilely; for my vantage, excellent;
 And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,
 That I returned with simular proof, enough
 To make the noble Leonatus mad, 201
 By wounding his belief in her renown
 With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
 Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet;
 O cunning! how I got it; nay, some marks
 Of secret on her person, that he could not
 But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,
 I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon,
 Methinks I see him now,—
Post. Coming forward. Ay, so thou dost, Italian fiend! Ay me! most credulous fool,
 Egregious murderer, thief, any thing 211
 That 's due to all the villains past, in being,
 To come. O! give me cord, or knife, or poison,
 Some upmost justicer. Thou, king, send out
 For torturers ingenious; it is I
 That all the abhorred things o' the earth amend
 By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
 That kill'd thy daughter; villain-like, I lie;
 That caus'd a lesser villain than myself,
 A sacrilegious thief, to do 't; the temple 220
 Of virtue was she; yea, and she herself.
 Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me,
 set
 The dogs o' the street to bay me; every villain
 Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus; and Be villain less than 't was! O Imogen!
 My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen,
 Imogen, Imogen!
Imo. Peace, my lord! hear, hear!
Post. Shall 's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,
 There lie thy part. Striking her: she falls.
Pis. O gentlemen! help!
 Mine and your mistress! O! my Lord Post-
 humus! 230
 You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now. Help,
 help!
 Mine honour'd lady!

Cym. Does the world go round?
Post. How comes these staggers on me?
Pis. Wake, my mistress!
Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me
 To death with mortal joy.
Pis. How fares my mistress?
Imo. O! get thee from my sight;
 Thou gav'st me poison: dangerous fellow,
 hence!
 Breathe not where princes are.
Cym. The tune of Imogen!
Pis. Lady, 239
 The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
 That box I gave you was not thought by me
 A precious thing: I had it from the queen.
Cym. New matter still?
Imo. It poison'd me.
Cor. O gods!
 I left out one thing which the queen con-
 fess'd,
 Which must approve thee honest: 'If Pisanio
 Have,' said she, 'given his mistress that confection
 Which I gave him for a cordial, she is serv'd
 As I would serve a rat.'
Cym. What 's this, Cornelius?
Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importun'd
 me
 To temper poisons for her, still pretending
 The satisfaction of her knowledge only 251
 In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs,
 Of no esteem; I, dreading that her purpose
 Was of more danger, did compound for her
 A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease
 The present power of life, but in short time
 All offices of nature should again Do their due functions. Have you ta'en of
 it?
Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.
Bel. My boys,
 There was our error.
Gui. This is, sure, Fidele.
Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you? 261
 Think that you are upon a rock; and now
 Throw me again. Embracing him.
Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul,
 Till the tree die!
Cym. How now, my flesh, my child!
 What! make'st thou me a dullard in this act?
 Wilt thou not speak to me?
Imo. Kneeling. Your blessing, sir.
Bel. To GUIDERIUS and ARVIRAGUS.
 Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;
 You had a motive for 't.
Cym. My tears that fall
 Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,
 Thy mother 's dead.
Imo. I am sorry for 't, my lord.
Cym. O! she was naught; and long of her it was 271
 That we meet here so strangely; but her
 son
 Is gone, we know not how nor where.

Pis. My lord,
Now fear is from me, I'll speak troth. Lord
Cloten,
Upon my lady's missing, came to me
With his sword drawn, foam'd at the mouth, and swore
If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death. By accident,
I had a feigned letter of my master's
Then in my pocket, which directed him 280
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
Which he enforc'd from me, away he posts
With unchaste purpose and with oath to violate
My lady's honour; what became of him
I further know not.
Gui. Let me end the story:
I slew him there.
Cym. Marry, the gods forfend!
I would not thy good deeds should from my
lips
Pluck a hard sentence: prithee, valiant youth,
Deny't again.
Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it.
Cym. He was a prince. 291
Gui. A most incivil one. The wrongs he did me
Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke me
With language that would make me spurn
the sea,
If it could so roar to me. I cut off 's head;
And am right glad he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.
Cym. I am sorry for thee:
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our law. Thou'rt dead.
Imo. That headless man
I thought had been my lord.
Cym. Bind the offender.
And take him from our presence.
Bel. Stay, sir king.
This man is better than the man he slew, 302
As well descended as thyself; and hath
More of thee merited than a band of Clotens Had ever scar for. To the Guard. Let his arms alone;
They were not born for bondage.
Cym. Why, old soldier,
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid
for,
By tasting of our wrath? How of descent
As good as we?
Arv. In that he spake too far.
Cym. And thou shalt die for 't.
Bel. We will die all three:
But I will prove that two on 's are as good 311
As I have given out him. My sons, I must
For mine own part unfold a dangerous
speech,
Though, haply, well for you.
Arv. Your danger's ours.
Gui. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it then. By leave; Thou hadst, great king, a subject who was call'd
Belarius.
Cym. What of him? he is A banish'd traitor.
Bel. He it is that hath Assum'd this age: indeed, a banish'd man;
I know not how a traitor.
Cym. Take him hence:
The whole world shall not save him.
Bel. Not too hot:
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be confiscate all so soon 323
As I have receiv'd it.
Cym. Nursing of my sons!
Bel. I am too blunt and saucy; here's my knee:
Ere I arise I will prefer my sons;
Then spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
These two young gentlemen, that call me
father
And think they are my sons are none of
mine;
They are the issue of your loins, my liege, 330
And blood of your begetting.
Cym. How! my issue!
Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan,
Am that Belarius whom you sometime ban-ish'd:
Your pleasure was my offence, my punishment
Itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes,
For such and so they are, these twenty
years
Have I train'd up; those arts they have as I Could put into them; my breeding was, sir, as
Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euri-phile, 340
Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children
Upon my banishment: I moved her to 't,
Having receiv'd the punishment before,
For that which I did then; beaten for loyalty
Excited me to treason. Their dear loss,
The more of you't was felt the more it shap'd Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir,
Here are your sons again; and I must lose
Two of the sweet'st companions in the world.
The benediction of these covering heavens 350
Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy
To inlay heaven with stars.
Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st.
The service that you three have done is
more Unlike than this thou tell'st. I lost my children:
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.
Bel. Be pleas'd awhile.
This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,

Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius;

This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus, Your younger princely son; he, sir, was lapp'd 360

In a most curious mantle, wrought by the
hand

Of his queen mother, which for more probation

I can with ease produce.

Cym. Guiderius had Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star;
It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he,
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp.
It was wise nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.

Cym. O! what, am I
A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er
mother

Rejoic'd deliverance more. Bless'd pray you be, 370

That, after this strange starting from your orbs,

You may reign in them now. O Imogen!
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo. No, my lord;
I have got two worlds by 't. O my gentle
brothers!

Have we thus met? O! never say hereafter

But I am truest speaker: you call'd me
brother,

When I was but your sister; I you brothers,
When ye were so indeed.

Cym. Did you e'er meet?
Arv. Ay, my good lord.

Gui. And at first meeting lov'd;
Continued so, until we thought he died. 380

Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd.
Cym. O rare instinct!

When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgement

Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in. Where?

how liv'd you?
And when came you to serve our Roman captive?

How parted with your brothers? how first met them?

Why fled you from the court, and whither?
These,

And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded,

And all the other by-dependencies, 390

From chance to chance, but nor the time nor place

Will serve our long inter'gatories. See,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen,

And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye

On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting

Each object with a joy; the counterchange
Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,

And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.
To BELARIUS. Thou art my brother; so we'll hold thee ever.

Imo. You are my father too; and did relieve me, 400

To see this gracious season.

Cym. All o'erjoy'd,
Save these in bonds; let them be joyful too.
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. My good master,
I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!
Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly
fought,

He would have well becom'd this place and grac'd

The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeching; 't was a fitment for 409

The purpose I then follow'd. That I was he, Speak, Iachimo; I had you down and might Have made you finish.

Iach. Kneeling. I am down again;
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,

As then your force did. Take that life,
beseech you,

Which I so often owe, but your ring first,
And here the bracelet of the truest princess
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me:
The power that I have on you is to spare you;
The malice towards you to forgive you.

Live, 419

And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd.
We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law:

Pardon's the word to all.

Arv. You help us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy'd are we that you are.

Post. Your servant, princess. Good my lord of Rome,

Call forth your soothsayer. As I slept, me-
thought

Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back'd,
Appear'd to me, with other spritely shows
Of mine own kindred: when I wak'd, I found This label on my bosom; whose contain-
ing 430

Is so from sense in hardness that I can Make no collection of it; let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarmonus!

Sooth. Here, my good lord.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.

Sooth. Whenas a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty. 442

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much.

To CYMBELINE. The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,

Which we call mollis aer; and mollis aer
 We term it mulier: which mulier, I divine,
 Is this most constant wife; who, even now,
 Answering the letter of the oracle, 450
 Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about

With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.
Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline, Personates thee, and thy lopp'd branches
 point

Thy two sons forth; who, by Belarius
 stolen,

For many years thought dead, are now
 reviv'd,

To the majestic cedar join'd, whose issue
 Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well;
 My peace we will begin. And, Caius
 Lucius,

Although the victor, we submit to Cæsar, 460
 And to the Roman empire; promising

To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
 We were dissuaded by our wicked queen;
 Whom heavens, in justice, both on her and hers,

Have laid most heavy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do
 tune

The harmony of this peace. The vision Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke

Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant is full accomplish'd; for the Roman eagle, 470

From south to west on wing soaring aloft, Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the
 sun

So vanish'd: which foreshow'd our princely
 eagle,

The imperial Cæsar, should again unite
 His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
 Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods;
 And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils

From our bless'd altars. Publish we this peace

To all our subjects. Set we forward: let
 A Roman and a British ensign wave 480 Friendly together; so through Lud's town
 march:

And in the temple of great Jupiter
 Our peace we'll ratify: seal it with feasts.
 Set on there. Never was a war did
 cease;

Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace. Exeunt.

PERICLES

TO the general reader Pericles will doubtless prove a dull and uninteresting play. It makes no pretense at dramatic unity, but rather sets forth a series of adventures derived from an old tale and spun together by explanatory speeches uttered in the archaic language of the presenter, Gower. The first two Acts are particularly slow and monotonous, with only an occasional felicity of phrasing. It is not until we reach the storm scene at the beginning of Act III that we become conscious of the touch of a master hand. From this point on, with the exception of the Gower speeches and the brothel scenes, the play is confidently ascribed to Shakespeare.

To account for the remaining portions of the play several theories have been advanced: first, that Shakespeare "touched up" the work of a fellow-dramatist; secondly, that the last three Acts represent an original sketch of Shakespeare's which was for some reason turned over to another writer who expanded it into its present form for stage presentation; and third, that the play as it stands is a late revision by Shakespeare of one of his earliest outputs.

The principal difficulty in establishing any one of these theories is found in the fact that our present text represents an emendation of the original pirated quarto, published in 1609. This original text was printed from some unauthorized source, probably from shorthand notes taken down in the theatre. There is abundant evidence that the play was extremely popular on the stage until long after Shakespeare's death. Its history must have been thoroughly known to Heminge and Condell, the editors of the First Folio of 1623. It seems, therefore, unaccountable that they should have excluded it from the first collected edition of Shakespeare's works had they believed him to have any considerable part in its writing. It was not, however, until the Third Folio of 1664 that Pericles was admitted, along with several other plays now known to be spurious, to the collected works of Shakespeare.

In the light of these facts the reader has every right to be skeptical of the judgment of the critics except in those particulars in which they all concur; and they are practically unanimous in ascribing the last three Acts, with the exceptions noted above, to Shakespeare. In this opinion the reader will the more readily concur, because he can scarcely fail to observe in incidents, characters, and even in phrasing, anticipations of the late Romances of The Winter's Tale, Cymbeline, and The Tempest. The storm at the beginning of Act III is, for instance, clearly an anticipation of the storm with which The Tempest opens. We have here "the seaman's whistle" for "the master's whistle"; "But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not" for "Blow till thou burst thy wind, if room enough." Marina, in whom our interest centers during these last three Acts, suggests in the very derivation of her name—"for she was born at sea"—Perdita, of The Winter's Tale, so named "for the babe is counted lost forever" and Miranda, of The Tempest, "Admired Miranda, Indeed the top of admiration." The restoration of Pericles to his wife, Thaisa, long supposed dead, is clearly an anticipation of the restoration of Leontes to Hermione in The Winter's Tale; while the character of Cerimon, who "held it ever,

Virtue and cunning were endowments greater Than nobleness and riches;"

and who

"can speak of the disturbances

That nature works, and of her cures;"

suggests that of Prospero, with his "so potent art."

Instances might be multiplied to show that in these three Acts of Pericles we glimpse materials and themes upon which Shakespeare was already pondering and which later he developed in those great Romances with which he completed his life's work. This fact alone is enough to afford the careful reader a strong incentive to familiarize himself with this play and to convince him of the genuineness of the last three Acts.

Indeed, in spite of the weight of opinion against it, I do not hesitate to record my own belief that the brothel scenes themselves belong to Shakespeare. They appear to me essential to a complete portrayal of the strength and purity of Marina's character. Among these awful surroundings Marina exemplifies the truth, so eloquently voiced by Milton in his Comus:

"Virtue could see to do what virtue would
By her own radiant light, though sun and moon
Were in the flat sea sunk."

Strike out these brothel scenes and that "radiant light" of Marina's virtue is lost. The objection that Shakespeare would not have married Marina to Lysimachus in light of the circumstances of their first meeting is pure sentimentalism. It overlooks the fact that we are dealing here with romance and not with realism. As well argue that Shakespeare would never have married Desdemona to Othello. Besides, Lysimachus testifies not only to the power of Marina to transform vice into virtue, but also to the purity of his own motives when he says:

"Had I brought hither a corrupted mind
Thy speech had alter'd it."

For romance, that is enough to clear Lysimachus. Not to accept that testimony is to throw over the whole story on the ground of improbability. Shakespeare is not squeamish in dealing with moral depravity when he has a purpose to serve, and the purpose here is obviously to show virtue radiating from a thoroughly human character under conditions which, to those whose faith in human nature is not so sublime as Shakespeare's, would seem overwhelming. To deprive him, then, of these brothel scenes is, in my judgment, to deprive him of responsibility for the highest moral significance of the play.

For although this play is a story of adventure, yet it is in reality something more than that. It is a story of the adventures of an exemplary prince, whose virtues, as revealed to us in his successive experiences, triumph ultimately of their own right over even death itself. Marina is no accident; she is her father's child. Her "radiant virtue" is the supreme outcome of the play. It is the restorative force bred of her father's life. When Marina is summoned into her father's presence he has lain for three months speechless and those about him regard all attempts at restoration "effectless." No one can fail to recognize in this scene an echo of that marvellous scene between Cordelia and Lear. This had to be of necessity less affecting, because Marina, unlike Cordelia, knows not to whom she speaks. Pericles hears her voice and stirs. "What countrywoman?" he asks; "Here of these shores?" Marina replies,

"No, nor of any shores;
Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear."

Flesh of his flesh, though not knowing it; "mortally brought forth," yet immortal; a reality on earth, though of no shores,

"Falseness cannot come from thee; for thou look'st
Modest as Justice, and thou seem'st a palace
For the crown'd Truth to dwell in."

It needs not Pericles to tell us this; Pericles, whose "inflamed desire" grew cold before incestuous beauty; who brought life to the perishing of Tarsus; whose "inward man" so outshone his "outward habit" that unknown he won the hand of the daughter of a king. We know that he will not for Tarsus, "there to strike the inhospitable Cleon." It yet remains for him to bid Thaisa "come, be buried A second time within these arms" and to hear her welcome as "Blest, and mine own," Marina,

"Thou that beget'st him that did thee beget."

ACT I

Enter GOWER.

Before the Palace of Antioch.

To sing a song that old was sung,
 From ashes ancient Gower is come,
 Assuming man's infirmities,
 To glad your ear, and please your eyes.
 It hath been sung at festivals,
 On ember-eves and holy-ales;
 And lords and ladies in their lives
 Have read it for restoratives:
 The purchase is to make men glorious;
 Et bonum quo antiquius, eo melius.
 If you, born in these latter times,
 When wit's more ripe accept my rimes,
 And that to hear an old man sing
 May to your wishes pleasure bring,
 I life would wish, and that I might Waste it for you like taper-light.
 This Antioch, then, Antiochus the Great
 Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat,
 The fairest in all Syria,
 I tell you what mine authors say:
 This king unto him took a fere,
 Who died and left a female heir,
 So buxom, blithe, and full of face
 As heaven had lent her all his grace;
 With whom the father liking took,
 And her to incest did provoke.
 Bad child, worse father! to entice his own
 To evil should be done by none.
 But custom what they did begin
 Was with long use account no sin.
 The beauty of this sinful dame
 Made many princes thither frame,
 To seek her as a bedfellow,
 In marriage-pleasures playfellow:
 Which to prevent he made a law,

To keep her still, and men in awe,
 That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
 His riddle told not, lost his life:
 So for her many a wight did die.
 As yon grim looks do testify. 40
 What now ensues, to the judgment of your
 eye
 I give, my cause who best can justify. Exit.

SCENE I.—Antioch. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTIOCHUS, PERICLES, and Attendants.

Ant. Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd
 The danger of the task you undertake.
 Per. I have, Antiochus, and, with a soul
 Embolden'd with the glory of her praise,
 Think death no hazard in this enterprise.
 Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,
 For the embracements even of Jove himself;
 At whose conception, till Lucina reign'd,
 Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
 The senate-house of planets all did sit, 10
 To knit in her their best perfections.

Music. Enter the Daughter of ANTIOCHUS.

Per. See, where she comes apparell'd like the spring,
 Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the kin
 Of every virtue gives renown to men!
 Her face the book of praises, where is read Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence
 Sorrow were ever raz'd, and testy wrath
 Could never be her mild companion.

You gods, that made me man, and sway in love,
That have inflam'd desire in my breast 20
To taste the fruit of yon celestial tree
Or die in the adventure, be my helps,
As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless happiness!

Ant. Prince Pericles,—

Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.

Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,

With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd;

For death-like dragons here affright thee hard:

Her face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view 30

Her countless glory, which desert must gain;

And which, without desert, because thine eye

Presumes to reach, all thy whole heap must die.

Yon sometime famous princes, like thyself,
Drawn by report, adventurous by desire,

Tell thee with speechless tongues and semblance pale,

That without covering, save yon field of stars,

They here stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars;

And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist
For going on death's net, whom none resist.

Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath taught 41

My frail mortality to know itself,
And by those fearful objects to prepare

This body, like to them, to what I must;
For death remember'd should be like a mirror.

Who tells us life's but breath, to trust it, error.

I'll make my will then; and as sick men do,
Who know the world, see heaven, but feeling woe,

Gripe not at earthly joys as erst they did:
So I bequeath a happy peace to you 50

And all good men, as every prince should do;

My riches to the earth from whence they came,

To the Daughter of ANTIOCHUS. But my unspotted fire of love to you.

Thus ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow.

Ant. Scorning advice, read the conclusion then;

Which read and not expounded, 't is decreed.

As these before thee thou thyself shalt bleed.

Daugh. Of all say'd yet, may'st thou prove prosperous!

Of all say'd yet, I wish thee happiness. 60

Per. Like a bold champion, I assume the lists,

Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness and courage.

*I am no viper, yet I feed
On mother's flesh which did me breed;
I sought a husband, in which labour
I found that kindness in a father,
He's father, son, and husband mild,
I mother, wife, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two, 70
As you will live, resolve it you.*

Sharp physic is the last: but, O you powers!
That give heaven countless eyes to view

men's acts,
Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,

If this be true, which makes me pale to read it?

Fair glass of light, I lov'd you, and could still,

Were not this glorious casket stor'd with ill:
But I must tell you, now my thoughts revolt;

For he's no man on whom perfections wait
That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate. 80

You are a fair viol, and your sense the strings,

Who, finger'd to make man his lawful music,

Would draw heaven down and all the gods to hearken;

But being play'd upon before your time,
Hell only danceth at so harsh a chime.

Good sooth, I care not for you.
Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy

life,
For that 's an article within our law,

As dangerous as the rest. Your time 's expir'd:

Either expound now or receive your sentence. 90

Per. Great king,
Few love to hear the sins they love to act;

'T would braid yourself too near for me to tell it.

Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
He 's more secure to keep it shut than shown;

For vice repeated is like the wandering wind,

Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,

The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear

To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts 100

Copp'd hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is throng'd

By man's oppression; and the poor worm doth die for 't.

Kings are earth's gods; in vice their law 's their will;

And if Jove stray, who dares say Jove doth ill?

It is enough you know; and it is fit,
What being more known grows worse, to smother it.

All love the womb that their first being bred,
Then give my tongue like leave to love my head.

Ant. Aside. Heaven! that I had thy head;
he has found the meaning;

But I will gloze with him. Young Prince of Tyre,
 Though by the tenour of our strict edict,
 Your exposition misinterpreting,
 We might proceed to cancel of your days;
 Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree
 As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise:
 Forty days longer we do respire you;
 If by which time our secret be undone,
 This mercy shows we 'll joy in such a son:
 And until then your entertain shall be
 As doth befit our honour and your worth. 120

Exeunt all but PERICLES.

Per. How courtesy would seem to cover sin,

When what is done is like an hypocrite,
 The which is good in nothing but in sight!
 If it be true that I interpret false,
 Then were it certain you were not so bad
 As with foul incest to abuse your soul;
 Where now you 're both a father and a son,
 By your untimely clasplings with your child,
 Which pleasure fits a husband, not a father;
 And she an eater of her mother's flesh, 130
 By the defiling of her parent's bed;
 And both like serpents are, who though they feed

On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.
 Antioch, farewell! for wisdom sees, those men

Blush not in actions blacker than the night,
 Will shun no course to keep them from the light.

One sin, I know, another doth provoke;
 Murder 's as near to lust as flame to smoke.
 Poison and treason are the hands of sin.
 Ay, and the targets, to put off the shame: 140
 Then, lest my life be cropp'd to keep you clear,

By flight I 'll shun the danger which I fear.

Exit.

Re-enter ANTIOCHUS.

Ant. He hath found the meaning, for which we mean

To have his head.

He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy,

Nor tell the world Antiochus doth sin

In such a loathed manner;

And therefore instantly this prince must die,

For by his fall my honour must keep high.
 Who attends us there?

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. Doth your highness call?

Ant. Thaliard, 151
 You are of our chamber, and our mind partakes

Her private actions to your secrecy;

And for your faithfulness we will advance you.

Thaliard, behold, here 's poison, and here 's gold;

We hate the Prince of Tyre, and thou must kill him:

It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
 Because we bid it. Say, is it done?

Thal. My lord 't is done.

Ant. Enough. 160

Enter a Messenger.

Let your breath cool yourself, telling your haste.

Mess. My lord, Prince Pericles is fled.

Exit.

Ant. As thou

Wilt live, fly after; and like an arrow shot
 From a well-experienc'd archer hits the mark

His eye doth level at, so thou ne'er return
 Unless thou say 'Prince Pericles is dead.'

Thal. My lord,

If I can get him within my pistol's length,
 I'll make him sure enough: so, farewell to your highness.

Ant. Thaliard, adieu! Exit THALIARD.

Till Pericles be dead, 170

My heart can lend no succor to my head.
Exit.

SCENE II.—Tyre. A Room in the Palace

Enter PERICLES.

Per. To those without. Let none disturb us.

Why should this change of thoughts,
 The sad companion, dull-eyed melancholy,
 Be my so us'd a guest, as not an hour
 In the day's glorious walk or peaceful night,
 The tomb where grief should sleep, can breed me quiet?

Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes shun them,

And danger, which I fear'd, is at Antioch.
 Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here;

Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
 Nor yet the other's distance comfort me. 10
 Then it is thus; the passions of the mind,
 That have their first conception by mis-dread,

Have after-nourishment and life by care;
 And what was first but fear what might be done,

Grows elder now and cares it be not done.
 And so with me: the great Antiochus,

'Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
 Since he 's so great can make his will his act,

Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence;

Nor boots it me to say I honour him, 20
 If he suspect I may dishonour him;

And what may make him blush in being known,

He'll stop the course by which it might be known.

With hostile forces he 'll o'erspread the land,

And with the ostent of war will look so huge,
 Amazement shall drive courage from the state,

Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resist,
 And subjects punish'd that ne'er thought offence;

Which care of them, not pity of myself,
 Who am no more but as the tops of trees, 30

Which fence the roots they grow by and defend them,

Makes both my body pine and soul to languish,
And punish that before that he would punish.

Enter HELICANUS and other Lords.

First Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast!

Second Lord. And keep your mind, till you return to us,

Peaceful and comfortable!

Hel. Peace, peace! and give experience tongue.

They do abuse the king that flatter him;
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin;
The thing the which is flatter'd, but a spark,

To which that blast gives heat and stronger glowing;

Whereas reproof, obedient and in order,
Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err;

When Signior Sooth here does proclaim a peace,

He flatters you, makes war upon your life.
Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please;

I cannot be much lower than my knees.

Per. All leave us else; but let your cares o'erlook

What shipping and what lading's in our haven,

And then return to us.

Exeunt Lords.
Helicanus, thou

Hast moved us; what seest thou in our looks?

Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.

Per. If there be such a dart in princes' frowns,

How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?

Hel. How dare the plants look up to heaven, from whence

They have their nourishment?

Per. Thou know'st I have power

To take thy life from thee.

Hel. Kneeling. I have ground the axe myself;

Do you but strike the blow.

Per. Rise, prithee, rise;

Sit down; thou art no flatterer:

I thank thee for it; and heaven forbid
That kings should let their ears hear their faults hid!

Fit counsellor and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom mak'st a prince thy servant,

What would'st thou have me do?

Hel. To bear with patience
Such griefs as you yourself do lay upon yourself.

Per. Thou speak'st like a physician,

Helicanus,

That minister'st a potion unto me
That thou would'st tremble to receive

thyself.

Attend me then: I went to Antioch,

Where as thou would'st, against the face of death

I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate,
Are arms to princes and bring joys to subjects.

Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder;

The rest, hark in thine ear, as black as incest;

Which by my knowledge found, the sinful father

Seem'd not to strike, but smooth; but thou know'st this,

'T is time to fear when tyrants seem to kiss.
Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled,

Under the covering of a careful night,
Who seem'd my good protector; and, being

here,
Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.

I knew him tyrannous; and tyrants' fears Decrease not, but grow faster than the

years.
And should he doubt it, as no doubt he doth,

That I should open to the listening air

How many worthy princes' bloods were shed,

To keep his bed of blackness unlaid ope,
To lop that doubt he'll fill this land with

arms,

And make pretence of wrong that I have done him;

When all, for mine, if I may call offence, Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence:

Which love to all, of which thyself art one,

Who now reproveth me for it,—

Hel. Alas! sir,
Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood

from my cheeks,
Musings into my mind, with thousand doubts

How I might stop this tempest ere it came;

And finding little comfort to relieve them,
I thought it princely charity to grieve them.

Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak,

Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear,
And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant,

Who either by public war or private treason
Will take away your life.

Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while,
Till that his rage and anger be forgot,

Or till the Destinies do cut his thread of life.
Your rule direct to any; if to me,

Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be.

Per. I do not doubt thy faith;
But should he wrong my liberties in my absence?

Hel. We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth,

From whence we had our being and our

birth.
Per. Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tarsus

Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee,

And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.
The care I had and have of subjects' good

On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.
 I 'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath;
 Who shuns not to break one will sure crack both.
 But in our orbs we 'll live so round and safe,
 That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince,
 Thou show'dst a subject's shine, I a true prince. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. An Antechamber in the Palace.

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. So this is Tyre, and this the court. Here must I kill King Pericles; and if I do it not, I am sure to be hanged at home: 't is dangerous. Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that, being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets: now do I see he had some reason for 't; for if a king bid a man be a villain, he 's bound by the indenture of his oath to be one. Hush! here come the lords of Tyre. 10

Enter HELICANUS, ESCANES, and other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre, Further to question me of your king's departure: His seal'd commission, left in trust with me, Doth speak sufficiently he 's gone to travel.
Thal. Aside. How! the king gone!
Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied, Why, as it were unlicens'd of your loves, He would depart, I 'll give some light unto you.

Being at Antioch—

Thal. Aside. What from Antioch?
Hel. Royal Antiochus, on what cause I know not, 20 Took some displeasure at him, at least he judg'd so; And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd, To show his sorrow he 'd correct himself; So puts himself unto the shipman's toil, With whom each minute threatens life or death.

Thal. Aside. Well, I perceive I shall not be hang'd now, although I would;
 But since he 's gone, the king it sure must please,
 He 'scap'd the land, to perish at the sea. I 'll present myself. Peace to the lords of Tyre! 30

Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.

Thal. From him I come With message unto princely Pericles; But since my landing I have understood Your lord has betook himself to unknown travels,

My message must return from whence it came.

Hel. We have no reason to desire it, Commended to our master, not to us: Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire, 39 As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Tarsus. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter CLEON, DIONYZA, and Attendants.

Cle. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here, And by relating tales of others' griefs, See if 't will teach us to forget our own?

Dio. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it;
 For who digs hills because they do aspire Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.

O my distressed lord! even such our griefs are;
 Here they 're but felt, and seen with mischiefs eyes.
 But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher rise.

Cle. O Dionyza, 10 Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,

Or can conceal his hunger till he famish? Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep Our woes into the air; our eyes do weep Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them louder;

That if heaven slumber while their creatures want, They may awake their helps to comfort them.

I 'll then discourse our woes, felt several years, And wanting breath to speak help me with tears.

Dio. I 'll do my best, sir. 20

Cle. This Tarsus, o'er which I have the government,

A city on whom plenty held full hand, For riches strew'd herself even in the streets;

Whose towers bore heads so high they kiss'd the clouds, And strangers ne'er beheld but wonder'd at;

Whose men and dames so jettied and adorn'd,

Like one another's glass to trim them by: Their tables were stor'd full to glad the sight,

And not so much to feed on as delight; All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great, 30

The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dio. O! 't is too true.

Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this our change,

These mouths, whom but of late, earth, sea, and air,

Were all too little to content and please, Although they gave their creatures in abundance,

As houses are defil'd for want of use,
They are now starv'd for want of exercise;
Those palates who, not yet two summers younger,

Must have inventions to delight the taste, 40
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it:
Those mothers who, to nouse up their
babes,

Thought nought too curious, are ready now
To eat those little darlings whom they lov'd.
So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and
wife

Draw lots who first shall die to lengthen life.
Here stands a lord, and there a lady
weeping;

Here many sink, yet those which see them fall

Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true? 50

Dio. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness it.

Cle. O! let those cities that of plenty's cup

And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears:
The misery of Tarsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where's the lord governor?

Cle. Here.

Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st
in haste,

For comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have descried, upon our neighbouring shore, 60

A portly sail of ships make hitherward.

Cle. I thought as much.

One sorrow never comes but brings an heir
That may succeed as his inheritor;

And so in ours. Some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery,

Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their
power,

To beat us down, the which are down already;

And make a conquest of unhappy me,
Whereas no glory's got to overcome. 70

Lord. That's the least fear; for, by the semblance

Of their white flags display'd, they bring us
peace.

And come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cle. Thou speak'st like him's untutor'd to repeat:

Who makes the fairest show means most deceit.

But bring they what they will and what they
can,

What need we fear?

The ground's the lowest and we are half way
there.

Go tell their general we attend him here,
To know for what he comes, and whence he comes, 80

And what he craves.

Lord. I go, my lord.

Exit.

Cle. Welcome is peace if he on peace consist;

If wars we are unable to resist.

Enter PERICLES, with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you
are,

Let not our ships and number of our men
Be like a beacon fir'd to amaze your eyes.
We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets:

Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears, 90
But to relieve them of their heavy load;

And these our ships, you happily may think
Are like the Trojan horse was stuff'd within

With bloody veins, expecting overthrow,
Are stor'd with corn to make your needy bread,

And give them life whom hunger starv'd half dead.

All. The gods of Greece protect you!
And we'll pray for you.

Per. Arise, I pray you, rise:
We do not look for reverence, but for love,

And harbourage for ourself, our ships, and
men. 100

Cle. The which when any shall not gratify,

Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,

The curse to heaven and men succeed their evils!

Till when, the which I hope shall ne'er be
seen,

Your grace is welcome to our town and us.

Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast
here awhile,

Until our stars that frown lend us a smile.
Exeunt.

ACT II

Enter GOWER.

Here have you seen a mighty king

His child, I wis, to incest bring;

A better prince and benign lord,

That will prove awful both in deed and word.

Be quiet then as men should be,

Till he hath pass'd necessity.

I'll show you those in troubles reign,

Losing a mite, a mountain gain.

The good in conversation,

To whom I give my benison, 10

Is still at Tarsus, where each man

Thinks all is writ he spoken can;

And, to remember what he does,

Build his statue to make him glorious:

But tidings to the contrary

Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?

Dumb-show.

Enter at one door PERICLES, talking with

CLEON; all the Train with them. Enter at another door a Gentleman, with a letter to PERICLES; PERICLES shows the letter to CLEON; then gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exeunt PERI-

CLES, CLEON, etc., severally.

Good Helican, that stay'd at home,

Not to eat honey like a drone

From others' labours; for though he strive

To killen bad, keep good alive; 20

And to fulfil his prince's desire,

*Sends word of all that haps in Tyre:
How Thaliard came full bent with sin
And had intent to murder him;
And that in Tarsus was not best
Longer for him to make his rest.
He, doing so, put forth to seas,
Where when men been, there's seldom ease;
For now the wind begins to blow;
Thunder above and deeps below 30
Make such unquiet, that the ship
Should house him safe is wreck'd and split;
And he, good prince, having all lost,
By waves from coast to coast is tost.
All perishen of man, of belf,
Ne aught escapen, but himself;
Till fortune, tir'd with doing bad,
Threw him ashore, to give him glad:
And here he comes. What shall be next,
Pardon old Gower, this longs the text.*

Exit.

SCENE I.—Pentapolis. An open Place by the Sea-side.

Enter PERICLES, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven!
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly man
Is but a substance that must yield to you;
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you.
Alas! the sea hath cast me on the rocks,
Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me breath
Nothing to think on but ensuing death:
Let it suffice the greatness of your powers
To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
And having thrown him from your watery grave, 10
Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

First Fish. What, ho, Pilch!

Second Fish. Ha! come and bring away the nets.

First Fish. What, Patch-breech, I say!

Third Fish. What say you master?

First Fish. Look how thou stirrest now! come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wanion.

Third Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us even now. 20

First Fish. Alas! poor souls; it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

Third Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much when I saw the porpus how he bounced and tumbled? they say they're half fish, half flesh; a plague on them! they ne'er come but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea. 30

First Fish. Why, as men do a-land; the great ones eat up the little ones. I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale; a' plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful. Such whales have

I heard on o' the land, who never leave gaping till they've swallowed the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and all.

Per. Aside. A pretty moral. 39

Third Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry.

Second Fish. Why, man?

Third Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too; and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up again. But if the good King Simonides were of my mind,—

Per. Aside. Simonides!

Third Fish. We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey. 51

Per. Aside. How from the finny subject of the sea

These fishers tell the infirmities of men; And from their watery empire recollect All that may men approve or men detect! Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

Second Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that? If it be a day fits you, search out of the calendar, and nobody look after it.

Per. Y' may see the sea hath cast me upon your coast. 60

Second Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea, to cast thee in our way!

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind,

In that vast tennis-court, have made the ball

For them to play upon, entreats you pity him;

He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

First Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? here's them in our country of Greece gets more with begging than we can do with working.

Second Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes then? 70

Per. I never practised it.

Second Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve, sure; for here's nothing to be got now-a-days unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been I have forgot to know,

But what I am want teaches me to think on; A man throng'd up with cold; my veins are chill,

And have no more of life than may suffice, To give my tongue that heat to ask your help;

Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead, For that I am a man, pray see me buried. 81

First Fish. Die, quoth-a? Now gods forbid! I have a gown here; come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and moreo'er puddings and flap-jacks; and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

Second Fish. Hark you, my friend; you said you could not beg. 90

Per. I did but crave.

Second Fish. But crave! then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipped then?

Second Fish. O! not all, my friend, not all; for if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

Exeunt Second and Third Fishermen.

Per. Aside. How well this honest mirth becomes their labour! 99

First Fish. Hark you, sir; do you know where ye are?

Per. Not well.

First Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is called Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides.

Per. The good King Simonides, do you call him?

First Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves to be so called for his peaceable reign and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore? 111

First Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey; and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birthday; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world to joust and tourney for her love.

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desires, I could wish to make one there.

First Fish. O, sir! things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for his wife's soul. 121

Re-enter Second and Third Fishermen, drawing up a net.

Second Fish. Help, master, help! here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law; 't will hardly come out. Ha! bots on 't, 't is come at last, and 't is turned to a rusty armour.

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it.

Thanks, Fortune, yet, that after all my crosses

Thou giv'st me somewhat to repair myself; And though it was mine own, part of mine

heritage, 129

Which my dead father did bequeath to me,

With this strict charge, even as he left his life,

'Keep it, my Pericles, it hath been a shield 'Twixt me and death'; and pointed to this brace;

'For that it sav'd me, keep it; in like necessity,

The which the gods protect thee from! 't may defend thee.'

It kept where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it; Till the rough seas, that spare not any man, Took it in rage, though calm'd have given 't again.

I thank thee for 't; my shipwreck now's no ill,

Since I have here my father's gift in 's will.

First Fish. What mean you, sir? 141

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth,

For it was sometime target to a king; I know it by this mark. He lov'd me dearly,

And for his sake I wish the having of it; And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's

court,

Where with it I may appear a gentleman; And if that ever my low fortunes better,

I'll pay your bounties; till then rest your debtor.

First Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady? 150

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.

First Fish. Why, do 'e take it; and the gods give thee good on 't.

Second Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend; 't was we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters; there are certain condolences, certain vails. I hope, sir, if you thrive, you 'll remember from whence you had it.

Per. Believe 't, I will. 159

By your furtherance I am cloth'd in steel; And spite of all the rapture of the sea,

This jewel holds his gilding on my arm: Unto thy value will I mount myself

Upon a courser, whose delightful steps Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread.

Only, my friends, I yet am unprovided Of a pair of bases.

Second Fish. We'll sure provide; thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair and I'll bring thee to the court myself. 170

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will!

This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A public Way or Platform leading to the Lists. A Pavilion near it, for the reception of the KING, PRINCESS, Ladies, Lords, etc.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

First Lord. They are, my liege; And stay your coming to present themselves.

Sim. Return them, we are ready; and our daughter,

In honour of whose birth these triumphs are, Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature

gat

For men to see, and seeing wonder at. Exit a Lord.

Thai. It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express

My commendations great, whose merit's less.

Sim. 'T is fit it should be so; for princes are 10

A model, which heaven makes like to itself:
As jewels lose their glory if neglected,
So princes their renowns if not respected.
'T is now your honour, daughter, to explain
The labour of each knight in his device.
Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour,
I'll perform.

Enter a Knight; he passes over the stage, and his Squire presents his shield to the PRINCESS.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?

Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father;

And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Ethiop reaching at the sun; 20
The word, Lux tua vita mihi.

Sim. He loves you well that holds his life of you.

The Second Knight passes over.

Who is the second that presents himself?

Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father;

And the device he bears upon his shield
Is an arm'd knight that's conquer'd by a lady;

The motto thus, in Spanish, Piu por dulzura que por fuerza.

The Third Knight passes over.

Sim. And what's the third?

Thai. The third of Antioch;

And his device, a wreath of chivalry;
The word, Me pompae provexit apex. 30

The Fourth Knight passes over.

Sim. What is the fourth?

Thai. A burning torch that's turned upside down;

The word, Quod me alit me extinguit.

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,

Which can as well inflame as it can kill.

The Fifth Knight passes over.

Thai. The fifth, a hand environed with clouds,

Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried;

The motto thus, Sic spectanda fides.

The Sixth Knight, PERICLES, passes over.

Sim. And what's

The sixth and last, the which the knight himself 40

With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd?

Thai. He seems to be a stranger; but his present is

A wither'd branch, that's only green at top;
The motto, In hac spe vivo.

Sim. A pretty moral;

From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

First Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show

Can any way speak in his just commend;
For by his rusty outside he appears 50

To have practis'd more the whipstock than the lance.

Second Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes

To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.

Third Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust

Until this day, to scour it in the dust.

Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan

The outward habit by the inward man.

But stay, the knights are coming; we'll withdraw

Into the gallery.

Exeunt.

Great shouts, and all cry, 'The mean knight!'

SCENE III.—The Same. A Hall of State. A Banquet prepared.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Ladies, Lords, Knights from tilting, and Attendants.

Sim. Knights.

To say you're welcome were superfluous.
To place upon the volume of your deeds,
As in a title-page, your worth in arms,
Were more than you expect, or more than's fit,

Since every worth in show commends itself.
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:
You are princes and my guests.

Thai. But you, my knight and guest;

To whom this wreath of victory I give, 10
And crown you king of this day's happiness.

Per. 'T is more by fortune, lady, than by merit.

Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is yours;

And here, I hope, is none that envies it.
In framing an artist art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed;

And you're her labour'd scholar. Come, queen of the feast,

For, daughter, so you are, here take your place;

Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simonides. 20

Sim. Your presence glads our days; honour we love,

For who hates honour hates the gods above.

Marshal. Sir, yonder is your place.

Per. Some other is more fit.

First Knight. Contend not, sir; for we are gentlemen

That neither in our hearts nor outward eyes
Envy the great nor do the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous knights.

Sim. Sit, sir; sit.

Per. By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts,

These cates resist me, she but thought upon.

Thai. By Juno, that is queen of marriage,
All viands that I eat do seem unsavoury, 31

Wishing him my meat. Sure, he's a gallant gentleman.

Sim. He's but a country gentleman;

Has done no more than other knights have done.

Has broken a staff or so; so let it pass.

Thai. To me he seems like diamond to glass.

Per. Yon king's to me like to my father's picture,

Which tells me in that glory once he was;
Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,
And he the sun for them to reverence. 40
None that beheld him, but like lesser lights
Did veil their crowns to his supremacy;
Where now his son's like a glow-worm in the night.

The which hath fire in darkness, none in light:

Whereby I see that Time's the king of men;
He's both their parent, and he is their grave,

And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

Sim. What, are you merry, knights?
First Knight. Who can be other in this royal presence?

Sim. Here, with a cup that's stor'd unto the brim. 50

As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips,
We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your grace.

Sim. Yet pause awhile;
Yon knight doth sit too melancholy,
As if the entertainment in our court
Had not a show might countervail his worth.
Note it not you, Thaisa?

Thai. What is it
To me, my father?

Sim. O! attend, my daughter:
Princes in this should live like gods above,
Who freely give to every one that comes
To honour them; 61
And princes not doing so are like to gnats,
Which make a sound, but kill'd are wonder'd at.

Therefore to make his entrance more sweet,
Here say we drink this standing-bowl of wine to him.

Thai. Alas! my father, it befits not me
Unto a stranger knight to be so bold;
He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since men take women's gifts for impudence.

Sim. How? 70
Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.

Thai. Aside. Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.

Sim. And furthermore tell him, we desire to know of him,

Of whence he is, his name, and parentage.
Thai. The king my father, sir, has drunk to you.

Per. I thank him.

Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.

Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.

Thai. And further he desires to know of you,

Of whence you are, your name and parent-

Per. A gentleman of Tyre; my name, Pericles;

My education been in arts and arms;
Who, looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough seas reft of ships and men,
And after shipwreck driven upon this shore.

Thai. He thanks your grace; names himself Pericles.

A gentleman of Tyre,
Who only by misfortune of the seas
Bereft of ships and men, cast on this shore.

Sim. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune. 90

And will awake him from his melancholy.
Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time which looks for other revels.

Even in your armours, as you are address'd,
Will very well become a soldier's dance.
I will not have excuse, with saying this Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads,
Since they love men in arms as well as beds.

The Knights dance.
So this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd.

Come, sir; 100

Here is a lady that wants breathing too:
And I have heard, you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip,
And that their measures are as excellent.

Per. In those that practise them they are, my lord.

Sim. O! that's as much as you would be denied

Of your fair courtesy.

The Knights and Ladies dance.
Unclass, unclass;

Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done well,

To PERICLES. But you the best. Pages and lights, to conduct

These knights unto their several lodgings!
Yours, sir, 110

We have given order to be next our own.
Per. I am at your grace's pleasure.

Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
And that's the mark I know you level at;
Therefore each one betake him to his rest;
To-morrow all for speeding do their best.

Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Tyre. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter HELICANUS and ESCANES.

Hel. No, Escanes, know this of me,
Antiochus from incest liv'd not free;
For which, the most high gods not minding longer

To withhold the vengeance that they had in store,

Due to this heinous capital offence,
Even in the height and pride of all his glory,

When he was seated in a chariot
Of an inestimable value, and his daughter

with him,
A fire from heaven came and shrivell'd up

Their bodies, even to loathing; for they so stunk,

That all those eyes ador'd them ere their fall

Scorn now their hand should give them burial.

Esca. 'T was very strange.

Hel. And yet but just; for though This king were great, his greatness was no guard

To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.

Esca. 'T is very true.

Enter two or three Lords.

First Lord. See, not a man in private conference

Or council has respect with him but he.

Second Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof.

Third Lord. And curs'd be he that will not second it. <sup>20</sup>

First Lord. Follow me then. Lord Helicane, a word.

Hel. With me? and welcome. Happy day, my lords.

First Lord. Know that our griefs are risen to the top,

And now at length they overflow their banks. Hel. Your griefs! for what? wrong not the prince you love.

First Lord. Wrong not yourself then, noble Helicane;

But if the prince do live, let us salute him. Or know what ground's made happy by his breath.

If in the world he live, we'll seek him out; If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there;

And be resolv'd he lives to govern us. <sup>31</sup> Or dead, gives cause to mourn his funeral.

And leaves us to our free election.

Second Lord. Whose death's indeed the strongest in our censure;

And knowing this kingdom is without a head,

Like goodly buildings left without a roof Soon fall to ruin, your noble self,

That best know how to rule and how to reign.

We thus submit unto, our sovereign. All. Live, noble Helicane! <sup>40</sup>

Hel. For honour's cause forbear your sufferages:

If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear. Take I your wish, I leap into the seas,

Where's hourly trouble for a minute's ease.

A twelvemonth longer, let me entreat you To forbear the absence of your king;

If in which time expir'd he not return, I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.

But if I cannot win you to this love, Go search like nobles, like noble subjects, <sup>50</sup>

And in your search spend your adventurous worth;

Whom if you find, and win unto return, You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.

First Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield;

And since Lord Helicane enjoineth us, We with our travels will endeavour it.

Hel. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands:

When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Pentapolis. A Room in the Palace.

Enter SIMONIDES, reading a letter; the Knights meet him.

First Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.

Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let you know,

That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake

A married life.

Her reason to herself is only known, Which yet from her by no means can I get.

Second Knight. May we not get access to her, my lord?

Sim. Faith, by no means; she hath so strictly tied

Her to her chamber that 't is impossible. One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery; <sup>10</sup> This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd, And on her virgin honour will not break it.

Third Knight. Loath to bid farewell, we take our leaves. Exeunt Knights.

Sim. So, They are well dispatch'd; now to my daughter's letter.

She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger knight,

Or never more to view nor day nor light. 'T is well, mistress; your choice agrees with mine; I like that well: nay, how absolute she's in 't, Not minding whether I dislike or no! <sup>20</sup> Well, I do commend her choice, And will no longer have it be delay'd.

Soft! here comes: I must dissemble it.

Enter PERICLES.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides! Sim. To you as much, sir! I am behold-

ing to you

For your sweet music this last night: I do Protest my ears were never better fed

With such delightful pleasing harmony. Per. It is your grace's pleasure to commend, Not my desert.

Sim. Sir, you are music's master. Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good lord. <sup>31</sup> Sim. Let me ask you one thing.

What do you think of my daughter, sir? Per. A most virtuous princess.

Sim. And she is fair too, is she not? Per. As a fair day in summer; wondrous fair. Sim. My daughter, sir, thinks very well of you;

Ay, so well, sir, that you must be her master, And she will be your scholar: therefore look to it. Per. I am unworthy for her schoolmaster.

Sim. She thinks not so; peruse this writing else. 41

Per. Aside. What 's here?

A letter that she loves the knight of Tyre!
'T is the king's subtilty to have my life.
O! seek not to entrap me, gracious lord,
A stranger and distressed gentleman,
That never aim'd so high to love your daughter,

But bent all offices to honour her.

Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou art

A villain.

Per. By the gods, I have not: 50
Never did thought of mine levy offence;
Nor never did my actions yet commence
A deed might gain her love or your displeasure.

Sim. Traitor, thou liest.

Per. Traitor!

Sim. Ay, traitor.

Per. Even in his throat, unless it be the king,

That calls me traitor, I return the lie.

Sim. Aside. Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.

Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,

That never relish'd of a base descent. 60
I came unto your court for honour's cause,
And not to be a rebel to her state;

And he that otherwise accounts of me,
This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy.

Sim. No?

Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter THAISA.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,
Resolve your angry father, if my tongue
Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you? 70

Thai. Why, sir, say if you had,
Who takes offence at that would make me glad?

Sim. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?

Aside. I am glad on 't with all my heart.
I'll tame you; I'll bring you in subjection.
Will you, not having my consent,
Bestow your love and your affections
Upon a stranger? Aside. who, for aught I know,

May be, nor can I think the contrary,
As great in blood as I myself. 80

Therefore hear you, mistress; either frame
Your will to mine; and you, sir, hear you,
Either be rul'd by me, or I will make you—
Man and wife.

Nay, come, your hands and lips must seal it too;

And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy;

And for a further grief,—God give you joy!
What! are you both pleas'd?

Thai. Yes, if you love me, sir.

Per. Even as my life, or blood that fosters it.

Sim. What! are you both agreed? 90

Thai., Per. Yes, if it please your majesty.

Sim. It pleaseth me so well, that I will see you wed;

Then with what haste you can get you to bed.

Exeunt.

ACT III

Enter GOWER.

*Now sleep unslak'd hath the rout;
No din but snores the house about,
Made louder by the o'er-fed breast
Of this most pompous marriage-feast.
The cat, with eyne of burning coal,
Now couches fore the mouse's hole;
And crickets sing at the oven's mouth,
E'er the blither for their drouth.
Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,
Where by the loss of maidenhead,
A babe is moulded. Be attent,
And time that is so briefly spent
With your fine fancies quaintly eche;
What 's dumb in show I'll plain with speech.*

Dumb-show.

Enter PERICLES and SIMONIDES at one door, with Attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives PERICLES a letter; PERICLES shows it to SIMONIDES; the Lords kneel to PERICLES. Then enter THAISA with child, and Lychorida: SIMONIDES shows his daughter the letter; she rejoices: she and PERICLES take leave of her father, and all depart.

*By many a dorn and painful perch
Of Pericles the careful search
By the four opposing coigns,
Which the world together joins,
Is made with all due diligence,
That horse and sail and high expense, 20
Can stand the quest. At last from Tyre,
Fame answering the most strange inquire,
To the court of King Simonides
Are letters brought, the tenour these:
Antiochus and his daughter dead;
The men of Tyrus on the head
Of Helicanus would set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none:
The mutiny he there hastes t' oppress; 30
Says to 'em, if King Pericles
Come not home in twice six moons,
He, obedient to their dooms,
Will take the crown. The sum of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Yraish'd the regions round,
And every one with claps can sound,
'Our heir-apparent is a king!
Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing?'
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre:
His queen, with child, makes her desire, 40
Which who shall cross? along to go;
Omit we all their dole and woe:
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Their vessel shakes
On Neptune's billow; half the flood Hath their keel cut: but fortune's mood
Varies again; the grisled north*

*Disgorges such a tempest forth,
That, as a duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship drives.* 60
*The lady shrieks, and well-a-neighbor
Does fall in travail with her fear;
And what ensues in this fell storm
Shall for itself itself perform.
I will relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey,
Which might not what by me is told.
In your imagination hold
This stage the ship, upon whose deck
The sea-tost Pericles appears to speak.*
Exit.

SCENE I.

Enter PERICLES, on shipboard.

Per. Thou god of this great vast, rebuke
these surges,
Which wash both heaven and hell; and thou, that hast
Upon the winds command, bind them in brass,
Having call'd them from the deep. O!
still
Thy deafening, dreadful thunders; gently quench
Thy nimble, sulphurous flashes. O! how,
Lychorida,
How does my queen? Thou stormest venomously;
Wilt thou spit all thyself? The seaman's whistle
Is as a whisper in the ears of death,
Unheard. Lychorida! Lucina, O! 10
Divinest patroness, and midwife gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy deity Aboard our dancing boat; make swift the pangs
Of my queen's travails.

Enter LYCHORIDA, with an Infant.

Now, Lychorida!

Lyc. Here is a thing too young for such a
place,
Who, if it had conceit, would die, as I Am like to do. Take in your arms this piece
Of your dead queen.

Per. How, how, Lychorida!

Lyc. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.
Here's all that is left living of your queen, 20
A little daughter: for the sake of it,
Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. O you gods!

Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away? We here below

Recall not what we give, and therein may Use honour with you.

Lyc. Patience, good sir,
Even for this charge.

Per. Now, mild may be thy life!
For a more blust'rous birth had never babe:
Quiet and gentle thy conditions! for Thou art the rudest welcome to this world That e'er was prince's child. Happy what follows! 31

Thou hast as chiding a nativity
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make,
To herald thee from the womb; even at the first
Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit.
With all thou canst find here. Now the good gods
Throw their best eyes upon 't!

Enter two Sailors.

First Sail. What courage, sir? God save
you!

Per. Courage enough. I do not fear the
flaw;

It hath done to me the worst. Yet for the
love 40

Of this poor infant, this fresh-new seafarer,

I would it would be quiet.

First Sail. Slack the bolins there! Thou wilt not, wilt thou? Blow, and split thyself.

Second Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not.

First Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard: the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition. 50

First Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still observed, and we are strong in custom. Therefore briefly yield her, for she must overboard straight.

Per. As you think meet. Most wretched
queen!

Lyc. Here she lies, sir.

Per. A terrible childbed hast thou had,
my dear;

No light, no fire: the unfriendly elements
Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time

To give thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight 60

Must cast thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the ooze;

Where, for a monument upon thy bones,
And aye-remaining lamps, the belching

whale
And humming water must o'erwhelm thy
corpse,

Lying with simple shells. O Lychorida!

Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper,
My casket and my jewels; and bid Nicander

Bring me the satin coffer: lay the babe
Upon the pillow. Hie thee, whiles I say 65

A priestly farewell to her: suddenly, woman.
Exit LYCHORIDA.

Second Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulked and bitumed ready.

Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast is this?

Second Sail. We are near Tarsus.

Per. Thither, gentle mariner, Alter thy course from Tyre. When canst thou reach it?

Second Sail. By break of day, if the wind
cease.

Per. O! make for Tarsus.

There will I visit Cleon, for the babe
Cannot hold out to Tyrus; there I'll leave it

At careful nursing. Go thy ways, good mariner;
I'll bring the body presently. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Ephesus. A Room in CERIMON'S House.

Enter CERIMON, with a Servant, and some Persons who have been shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter PHILEMON.

Phil. Doth my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men;

'T has been a turbulent and stormy night.

Serv. I have been in many; but such a night as this

Till now I ne'er endur'd.

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return;

There's nothing can be minister'd to nature That can recover him. To PHILEMON.

Give this to the 'pothecary And tell me how it works.

Exeunt all but CERIMON.

Enter two Gentlemen.

First Gent. Good morrow. 10

Second Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen,

Why do you stir so early?

First Gent. Sir, Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea, Shook as the earth did quake; The very principals did seem to rend, And all to topple. Pure surprise and fear Made me to quit the house.

Second Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so early;

'T is not our husbandry.

Cer. O! you say well.

First Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having 21 Rich tire about you, should at these early hours

Shake off the golden slumber of repose.

'T is most strange Nature should be so conversant with pain, Being thereto not compell'd.

Cer. I held it ever, Virtue and cunning were endowments greater

Than nobleness and riches; careless heirs May the two latter darken and expend,

But immortality attends the former, 30 Making a man a god. 'T is known I ever

Have studied physic, through which secret art,

By turning o'er authorities, I have, Together with my practice, made familiar

To me and to my aid the blest infusions That dwell in vegetives, in metals, stones;

And I can speak of the disturbances That nature works, and of her cures; which doth give me

A more content in course of true delight Than to be thirsty after tottering honour, 40

Or tie my treasure up in silken bags, To please the fool and death.

Second Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus pour'd forth

Your charity, and hundreds call themselves Your creatures, who by you have been restor'd:

And not your knowledge, your personal pain, but even

Your purse, still open, hath built Lord Cerimon

Such strong renown as time shall ne'er decay.

Enter two or three Servants with a chest.

First Serv. So; lift there.

Cer. What is that?

Serv. Sir, even now Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest: 50 'T is of some wreck.

Cer. Set it down; let's look upon 't.

Second Gent. 'T is like a coffin, sir.

Cer. Whate'er it be, 'T is wondrous heavy. Wrench it open

straight;

If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold,

'T is a good constraint of fortune it belches upon us.

Second Gent. 'T is so, my lord.

Cer. How close 't is caulk'd and bitum'd! Did the sea cast it up?

First Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, sir,

As toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Come, wrench it open. Soft! it smells most sweetly in my sense. 60

Second Gent. A delicate odour.

Cer. As ever hit my nostril. So, up with it.

O you most potent gods! what's here? a corse!

First Gent. Most strange!

Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; balm'd and entreasur'd

With full bags of spices! A passport too! Apollo, perfect me i' the characters!

Here I give to understand,

If e'er this coffin drive a-land,

I, King Pericles, have lost 70

This queen, worth all our mundane cost.

Who finds her, give her burying;

She was the daughter of a king:

Beside this treasure for a fee,

The gods requite his charity!

If thou liv'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart That even cracks for woe! This chanc'd to-night.

Second Gent. Most likely, sir.

Cer. Nay, certainly to-night; For look how fresh she looks. They were too rough

That threw her in the sea. Make fire within; 80

Fetch hither all my boxes in my closet.

Exit a Servant. Death may usurp on nature many hours,

And yet the fire of life kindle again
The o'erpress'd spirits. I heard
Of an Egyptian that had nine hours lien
dead,

Who was by good appliance recovered.
Re-enter Servant, with boxes, napkins, and fire.

Well said, well said; the fire and cloths.
The rough and woeful music that we have,
Cause it to sound, beseech you.
The viol once more; how thou stirr'st, thou
block!

The music there! I pray you, give her air.
Gentlemen,

This queen will live; nature awakes, a warmth
Breathes out of her; she hath not been entranc'd

Above five hours. See! how she 'gins to blow

Into life's flower again.

First Gent. The heavens,
Through you, increase our wonder and set
up

Your fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive! behold,
Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels
Which Pericles hath lost, 100
Begin to part their fringes of bright gold;
The diamonds of a most praised water
Do appear, to make the world twice rich.
Live,

And make us weep to hear your fate, fair
creature,

Rare as you seem to be!

Thai. O dear Diana!
Where am I? Where's my lord? What world is this?

Second Gent. Is not this strange?

First Gent. Most rare.

Cer. Hush, gentle neighbours!
Lend me your hands; to the next chamber bear her.

Get linen; now this matter must be look'd
to,

For her relapse is mortal. Come, come; 110
And Æsculapius guide us!

Exeunt, carrying THAISA away.

SCENE III.—Tarsus. A Room in CLEON'S House.

Enter PERICLES, CLEON, DIONYZA, LYCHORIDA, with MARINA in her arms.

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs
be gone;

My twelve months are expir'd, and Tyrus
stands

In a litigious peace. You and your lady Take from my heart all thankfulness; the gods

Make up the rest upon you!

Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt you mortally,

Yet glance full wanderingly on us.

Dion. O your sweet queen!
That the strict fates had pleas'd you had brought her hither,

To have bless'd mine eyes with her!

Per. We cannot but obey
The powers above us. Could I rage and roar 10

As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end
Must be as 't is. My gentle babe Marina,
whom,

For she was born at sea, I have nam'd so,
here

I charge your charity withal, and leave her
The infant of your care, beseeching you

To give her princely training, that she may be

Manner'd as she is born.

Cle. Fear not, my lord, but think Your grace that fed my country with your corn,

For which the people's prayers still fall upon
you,

Must in your child be thought on. If neglection 20

Should therein make me vile, the common
body,

By you reliev'd, would force me to my duty;
But if to that my nature need a spur,

The gods revenge it upon me and mine,
To the end of generation!

Per. I believe you;
Your honour and your goodness teach me
to 't,

Without your vows. Till she be married,
madam,

By bright Diana, whom we honour, all
Unscissar'd shall this hair of mine remain,

Though I show ill in 't. So I take my leave. 30

Good madam, make me blessed in your care

In bringing up my child.

Dion. I have one myself,
Who shall not be more dear to my respect
Than yours, my lord.

Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers.
Cle. We'll bring your grace e'en to the edge o' the shore;

Then give you up to the mask'd Neptune and
The gentlest winds of heaven.

Per. I will embrace
Your offer. Come, dear'st madam. O! no
tears,

Lychorida, no tears:
Look to your little mistress, on whose
grace 40

You may depend hereafter. Come, my lord. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Ephesus. A Room in CERIMON'S House.

Enter CERIMON and THAISA.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels,

Lay with you in your coffer; which are now
At your command. Know you the character? 50

Thai. It is my lord's.
That I was shipp'd at sea, I well remember, Even on my eaning time; but whether
there 60

Deliver'd, by the holy gods,

I cannot rightly say. But since King
Pericles,

My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see again,
A vestal livery will I take me to, 10
And never more have joy.

Cer. Madam, if this you purpose as ye
speak,

Diana's temple is not distant far,
Where you may abide till your date expire.
Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine
Shall there attend you.

Thai. My recompense is thanks, that's all;
Yet my good will is great, though the gift small. Exeunt.

ACT IV

Enter GOWER.

Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre,
Welcom'd and settled to his own desire.
His woeful queen we leave at Ephesus,
Unto Diana there a votaress.

Now to Marina bend your mind,
Whom our fast-growing scene must find
At Tarsus, and by Cleon train'd
In music, letters; who hath gain'd
Of education all the grace,
Which makes her both the heart and place 11
Of general wonder. But, alack!

That monster envy, oft the wrack
Of earned praise, Marina's life
Seeks to take off by treason's knife.

And in this kind hath our Cleon
One daughter, and a wench full grown,
Even ripe for marriage-rite; this maid
Hight Philoten, and it is said 20

For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be;

Be 't when she weav'd the sleided silk
With fingers long, small, white as milk;

Or when she would with sharp needle wound
The cambric, which she made more sound
By hurting it; or when to the lute
She sung, and made the night-bird mute,

That still records with moan; or when
She would with rich and constant pen
Vail to her mistress Dian; still
This Philoten contends in skill 30

With absolute Marina; so
With the dove of Paphos might the crow Vie feathers white. Marina gets
All praises, which are paid as debts,

And not as given. This so darks
In Philoten all graceful marks,
That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,
A present murderer does prepare

For good Marina, that her daughter
Might stand peerless by this slaughter. 40

The sooner her vile thoughts to stead,
Lychorida, our nurse, is dead;
And cursed Dionyza hath
The pregnant instrument of wrath

Prest for this blow. The unborn event
I do commend to your content:
Only I carry winged time
Post on the lame feet of my time;

Which never could I so convey,
Unless your thoughts went on my way. 50

Dionyza doth appear,
With Leonine, a murderer.

Exit.

I can go home alone.

78

SCENE I.—Tarsus. An open Place near the Sea-shore.

Enter DIONYZA and LEONINE.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do 't:

'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known.
Thou canst not do a thing i' the world so soon,

To yield thee so much profit. Let not
conscience,

Which is but cold, inflaming love i' thy
bosom,

Inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
A soldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I'll do 't; but yet she is a goodly creature. 9

Dion. The fitter, then, the gods should have her. Here

She comes weeping for her only mistress'
death.

Thou art resolv'd?

Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter MARINA, with a basket of flowers.

Mar. No, I will rob Tellus of her weed,
To strew thy green with flowers; the yellows, blues,

The purple violets, and marigolds,
Shall as a carpet hang upon thy grave,

While summer-days do last. Ay me! poor
maid,

Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
This world to me is like a lasting storm, 20
Whirling me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina! why do you keep alone?

How chance my daughter is not with you?
Do not

Consume your blood with sorrowing; you have

A nurse of me. Lord! how your favour's chang'd

With this unprofitable woe. Come,
Give me your flowers, ere the sea mar it.

Walk with Leonine; the air is quick there,
And it pierces and sharpens the stomach.

Come,

Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No, I pray you; I'll not bereave you of your servant. 31

Dion. Come, come;
I love the king your father, and yourself,

With more than foreign heart. We every day

Expect him here; when he shall come and find

Our paragon to all reports thus blasted,
He will repent the breadth of his great
voyage;

Blame both my lord and me, that we have ta'en

No care to your best courses. Go, I pray
you;

Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve 40
That excellent complexion, which did steal
The eyes of young and old. Care not for
me;

I can go home alone.

Exit.

1217

Mar. Well, I will go;
But yet I have no desire to it.
Dion. Come, come, I know 't is good for you.

Walk half an hour, Leonine, at the least.
Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.
Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while.

Pray you, walk softly, do not heat your blood: 49

What! I must have care of you.

Mar. My thanks, sweet madam.
Exit DIONYZA.

Is the wind westerly that blows?

Leon. South-west.
Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.

Leon. Was 't so?
Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear,

But cried 'Good seamen!' to the sailors,
galling

His kindly hands with haling of the ropes;
And, clasping to the mast, endur'd a sea
That almost burst the deck.

Leon. When was this?

Mar. When I was born:
Never was waves nor wind more violent; 60
And from the ladder-tackle washes off
A canvas-climber. 'Ha!' says one, 'wilt
out?'

And with a dropping industry they skip From stem to stern; the boatswain whistles, and
The master calls, and trebles their confusion.

Leon. Come; say your prayers.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer,

I grant it. Pray; but be not tedious,
For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn 70

To do my work with haste.

Mar. Why will you kill me?

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd?

Now, as I can remember, by my troth,
I never did her hurt in all my life.
I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn
To any living creature; believe me, la,
I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly;
I trod upon a worm against my will,
But I wept for it. How have I offended, 80 Wherein my death might yield her any profit,

Or my life imply her any danger?

Leon. My commission

Is not to reason of the deed, but do 't.

Mar. You will not do 't for all the world,
I hope.

You are well favour'd, and your looks fore-
show

You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately,
When you caught hurt in parting two that
fought;

Good sooth, it show'd well in you; do so
now; 89

Your lady seeks my life; come you between,
And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn,
And will dispatch. Seizes her.

Enter Pirates.

First Pir. Hold, villain!

LEONINE runs away.

Second Pir. A prize! a prize!

Third Pir. Half-part, mates, half-part.
Come, let's have her aboard suddenly.

Exeunt Pirates with MARINA.

Re-enter LEONINE.

Leon. These roguing thieves serve the great pirate Valdes;

And they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go;
There's no hope she'll return. I'll swear
she's dead,

And thrown into the sea. But I'll see further; 100

Perhaps they will but please themselves
upon her,

Not carry her aboard. If she remain, Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain. Exit.

SCENE II.—Mitylene. A Room in a Brothel.

Enter Pandar, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pand. Boul't!

Boul't. Sir?

Pand. Search the market narrowly, Mity-lene is full of gallants; we lost too much money this morn'g by being too wenchless.

Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten. 9

Pand. Therefore let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Bawd. Thou sayest true; 't is not the bringing up of poor bastards, as I think I have brought up some eleven—

Boul't. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?

Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden. 21

Pand. Thou sayest true; they're too unwholesome, o' conscience. The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.

Boul't. Ay, she quickly pooped him; she made him roast-meat for worms. But I'll go search the market. Exit.

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why to give over, I pray you? Is it a shame to get when we are old? 32

Pand. O! our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the commodity wages not with the danger; therefore, if in our youths
we could pick up some pretty estate, 't

were not amiss to keep our door hatched. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over.

Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we! ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no calling. But here comes Boul.

Re-enter BOULT, with the Pirates and MARINA.

Boul. Come your ways. My masters, you say she's a virgin?

First Pir. O! sir; we doubt it not.

Boul. Master, I have gone through for this piece, you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boul, has she any qualities? 50

Boul. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes; there's no further necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bawd. What's her price, Boul?

Boul. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters, you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in; instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment. Exeunt Pandar and Pirates. 60

Bawd. Boul, take you the marks of her, the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity, and cry 'He that will give most shall have her first.' Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you. 66

Boul. Performance shall follow. Exit.

Mar. Alack! that Leonine was so slack, so slow.

He should have struck, not spoke; or that these pirates,

Not enough barbarous, had not o'erboard thrown me 70

For to seek my mother!

Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not.

Bawd. You are lit into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault,

To 'scape his hands where I was like to die. 80

Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes, indeed shall you and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well; you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman? 89

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Bawd. Marry, whip thee, gosling; I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you're a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me!

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up. Boul's returned.

Re-enter BOULT.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market? 99

Boul. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Bawd. And I prithee tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boul. Faith, they listened to me as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description. 109

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boul. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers i' the hams?

Bawd. Who? Monsieur Veroles?

Boul. Ay; he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow. 118

Bawd. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither; here he does but repair it. I know he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boul. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign. 124

Bawd. To MARINA. Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me; you must seem to do that fearfully which you commit willingly; despise profit where you have most gain. To weep that you live as ye do makes pity in your lovers; seldom but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit. 182

Mar. I understand you not.

Boul. O! take her home, mistress, take her home; these blushes of hers must be quenched with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou sayest true, i' faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame which is her way to go with warrant.

Boul. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,— 141

Bawd. Thou mayest cut a morsel off the spit.

Boul. I may so?

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boul. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet. 147

Bawd. Boul, spend thou that in the town; report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boult. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not awake the beds of eels as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly-inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bawd. Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. 160
Diana, aid my purpose!

Bawd. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us? Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Tarsus. A Room in CLEON'S House.

Enter CLEON and DIONYZA.

Dion. Why are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionyza! such a piece of slaughter
The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon.

Dion. I think
You'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all this spacious world,

I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady!
Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess

To equal any single crown o' the earth
I' the justice of compare. O villain Leonine!
Whom thou hast poison'd too;
If thou hadst drunk to him 't had been a kindness

Becoming well thy fact; what canst thou say

When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Nurses are not the fates,

To foster it, nor ever to preserve.
She died at night; I'll say so. Who can cross it?

Unless you play the pious innocent,
And for an honest attribute cry out
'She died by foul play.'

Cle. O! go to. Well, well,
Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods

Do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those that think
The petty wrens of Tarsus will fly hence,
And open this to Pericles. I do shame
To think of what a noble strain you are,
And of how coward a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added,
Though not his prime consent, he did not flow

From honourable sources.

Dion. Be it so, then;
Yet none does know but you how she came dead,

Nor none can know, Leonine being gone.

She did distain my child, and stood between

Her and her fortunes; none would look on her,

But cast their gazes on Marina's face,
Whilst ours was blurred at and held a malkin

Not worth the time of day. It pierc'd me thorough;

And though you call my course unnatural,
You not your child well loving, yet I find
It greets me as an enterprise of kindness
Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cle. Heavens forgive it!
Dion. And as for Pericles,

What should he say? We wept after her hearse,

And yet we mourn; her monument
Is almost finish'd and her epitaphs
In glittering golden characters express
A general praise to her, and care in us
At whose expense 't is done.

Cle. Thou art like the harpy,
Which, to betray, dost, with thine angel's face,

Seize with thine eagle's talons.

Dion. You are like one that superstitiously

Doth swear to the gods that winter kills the flies;

But yet I know you'll do as I advise. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Before the Monument of MARINA at Tarsus.

Enter GOWER.

Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;

Sail seas in cockles, have an wish but for 't;
Making, to take your imagination,

From bourn to bourn, region to region.
By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime

To use one language in each several clime
Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech you

To learn of me, who stand i' the gaps to teach you,

The stages of our story. Pericles
Is now again thwarting the wayward seas,

Attended on by many a lord and knight,
To see his daughter, all his life's delight.

Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late
Advanc'd in time to great and high estate,

Is left to govern. Bear you it in mind,
Old Helicanus goes along behind.

Well-sailing ships and bounteous winds have brought

This king to Tarsus, think his pilot thought,
So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow on,

To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone.

Like motes and shadows see them move awhile;

Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

Dumb-show.

Enter PERICLES, with his Train, at one door; CLEON and DIONYZA at the other. CLEON shows PERICLES the tomb of MARINA; whereat PERICLES makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs. Then exeunt CLEON and DIONYZA.

See how belief may suffer by foul show! This borrow'd passion stands for true old woe;

And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd, With sighs shot through, and biggest tears o'ershower'd, Leaves Tarsus and again embarks. He swears

Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs; He puts on sackcloth and to sea. He bears A tempest, which his mortal vessel tears, 30 And yet he rides it out. Now please you wit The epitaph is for Marina writ By wicked Dionyza.

Reads the inscription on MARINA'S monument.

THE FAIREST, SWEET'ST, AND BEST, LIES HERE, WHO WITHER'D IN HER SPRING OF YEAR:
SHE WAS OF TYRUS THE KING'S DAUGHTER,

ON WHOM FOUL DEATH HATH MADE THIS SLAUGHTER.

MARINA WAS SHE CALL'D; AND AT HER BIRTH,

THETIS, BEING PROUD, SWALLOW'D SOME PART O' THE EARTH:

THEREFORE THE EARTH, FEARING TO BE O'ERFLOW'D, 40

HATH THETIS' BIRTH-CHILD ON THE HEAVENS BESTOW'D:

WHEREFORE SHE DOES, AND SWEARS SHE 'LL NEVER STINT,

MAKE RAGING BATTERY UPON SHORES OF FLINT.

No visor does become black villany So well as soft and tender flattery.

Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead, And bear his courses to be ordered

By Lady Fortune; while our scene must play

His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day In her unholy service. Patience then, 50

And think you now are all in Mitylene. Exit.

SCENE V.—Mitylene. A Street before the Brothel.

Enter, from the brothel, two Gentlemen.

First Gent. Did you ever hear the like?

Second Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.

First Gent. But to have divinity preached there! did you ever dream of such a thing?

Second Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses. Shall 's go hear the vestals sing?

First Gent. I'll do any thing now that is virtuous; but I am out of the road of rutting for ever.

Exeunt. 10

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Room in the Brothel.

Enter Pandar, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her she had ne'er come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie upon her! she is able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation; we must either get her ravished, or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a puritan of the devil if he should cheapen a kiss of her. 10

Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfurnish us of all our cavaliers, and make our swearers priests.

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me!

Bawd. Faith, there's no way to be rid on 't but by the way to the pox. Here comes the Lord Lysimachus, disguised.

Boult. We should have both lord and lown if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers. 21

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now! How a dozen of virginities?

Bawd. Now, the gods to bless your honour!

Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good health.

Lys. You may so; 't is the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now! wholesome iniquity, have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mitylene. 31

Lys. If she'd do the deed of darkness, thou would'st say.

Bawd. Your honour knows what 't is to say well enough.

Lys. Well; call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed if she had but—

Lys. What, prithee? 40

Boult. O! sir, I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste. Exit BOULT.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk; never plucked yet, I can assure you.

Re-enter BOULT with MARINA.

Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you; leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave; a word, and I'll have done presently. 51

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Bawd. To MARINA. First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man.

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that I know not. 61

Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Ha' you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together.

Lys. Go thy ways. 71

Exeunt Bawd, Pandar, and BOULT.
Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. Why, I cannot name 't but I shall offend.

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession?

Mar. E'er since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to 't so young? Were you a gamester at five or at seven? 81

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into 't? I hear say you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal? 81

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seed and roots of shame and iniquity. O! you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place; come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now;

If put upon you, make the judgment good That thought you worthy of it. 101

Lys. How's this? how's this? Some more; be sage.

Mar. For me,

That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune

Hath plac'd me in this sty, where, since I came,

Diseases have been sold dearer than physic, O! that the gods

Would set me free from this unhallow'd place,

Though they did change me to the meanest bird

That flies i' the purer air.

Lys.

I did not think

Thou could'st have spoke so well; ne'er dream'd thou could'st. 110

Had I brought hither a corrupted mind, Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for thee;

Persever in that clear way thou goest, And the gods strengthen thee!

Mar.

The gods preserve you!

Lys. For me, be you thoughten

That I came with no ill intent, for to me The very doors and windows savour vilely. Farewell. Thou art a piece of virtue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been noble. Hold, here's more gold for thee. 120

A curse upon him, die he like a thief, That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost

Hear from me, it shall be for thy good.

Re-enter BOULT.

Boult. I beseech your honour, one piece for me.

Lys. Avail! thou damned door-keeper. Your house,

But for this virgin that doth prop it, would Sink and overwhelm you. Away! Exit.

Boult. How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways. 134

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your ways. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away. Come your ways, I say.

Re-enter Bawd.

Bawd. How now! what's the matter? 140

Boult. Worse and worse, mistress; she has here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. O! abominable.

Boult. She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods.

Bawd. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Boult. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers too. 149

Bawd. Boult, take her away; use her at thy pleasure; crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

Boult. An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods!

Bawd. She conjures; away with her! Would she had never come within my doors! Marry, hang you! She's born to undo us. Will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry, come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays! Exit. 160

Boult. Come, mistress; come your ways with me.

Mar. Whither wilt thou have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear.

Mar. Prithce, tell me one thing first.
Boult. Come now, your one thing.
Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boult. Why, I could wish him to be my master, or rather, my mistress. 170

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art,

Since they do better thee in their command.
 Thou hold'st a place, for which the pained'st fiend

Of hell would not in reputation change;
 Thou art the damned door-keeper to every Coystril that comes inquiring for his Tib;
 To the choleric fisting of every rogue
 Thy ear is liable; thy food is such 178

As hath been belch'd on by infected lungs.
Boult. What would you have me do? go to the wars, would you? where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

Mar. Do any thing but this thou doest.
 Empty
 Old receptacles, or common sewers, of filth;
 Serve by indenture to the common hangman:
 Any of these ways are yet better than this;
 For what thou professest, a baboon, could he speak,

Would own a name too dear. O! that the gods 190

Would safely deliver me from this place.
 Here, here 's gold for thee.

If that thy master would gain by me,
 Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance,

With other virtues, which I'll keep from boast;

And I will undertake all these to teach.
 I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again, 200

And prostitute me to the basest groom
 That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee; if I can place thee, I will.

Mar. But amongst honest women.

Boult. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there 's no going but by their consent; therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come; I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways. Exeunt. 212

ACT V

Enter GOWER.

Marina thus the brothel scapes and chances Into an honest house, our story says.

*She sings like one immortal, and she dances
 As goddess-like to her admired lays;*

Deep clerks she dumbs; and with her neeld composes

Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry,

*That even her art sisters the natural roses;
 Her inkle, silk, twin with the rubied
 cherry;*

*That pupils lacks she none of noble race,
 Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain 10*

*She gives the cursed bawd. Here we her
 place,*

*And to her father turn our thoughts again,
 Where we left him, on the sea. We there him lost*

Whence, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd

Here where his daughter dwells: and on this coast

Suppose him now at anchor. The city striv'd

God Neptune's annual feast to keep; from whence

*Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies,
 His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense;*

And to him in his barge with fervour hies. 20

*In your supposing once more put your sight
 Of heavy Pericles; think this his bark*

*Where, what is done, in action, more, if
 might,*

Shall be discover'd; please you, sit and hark. Exit.

SCENE I.—On board PERICLES' ship, off Mitylene. A Pavilion on deck, with a curtain before it; PERICLES within it, reclined on a couch. A barge lying beside the Tyrian vessel.

Enter two sailors one belonging to the Tyrian vessel, the other to the barge; to them HELICANUS.

Tyr. Sail. To the Sailor of Mitylene.

Where is Lord Helicanus? he can resolve you.

O! here he is.

*Sir, there 's a barge put off from Mitylene
 And in it is Lysimachus, the governor, Who craves to come aboard. What is your
 will?*

Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.

Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter two or three Gentlemen.

First Gent. Doth your lordship call?

Hel. Gentlemen, there 's some of worth would come aboard;

I pray ye, greet them fairly. 10

Gentlemen and Sailors descend, and go on board the barge.

Enter, from thence, LYSIMACHUS and Lords; the Tyrian Gentleman and the two sailors.

Tyr. Sail. Sir,

*This is the man that can, in aught you would,
 Resolve you.*

Lys. Hail, reverend sir! the gods preserve you!

Hel. And you sir, to outlive the age I am,
And die as I would do.

Lys. You wish me well.
Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs,

Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,
I made to it to know of whence you are.

Hel. First, what is your place? 20

Lys. I am the governor of this place you lie before.

Hel. Sir,
Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king;
A man who for this three months hath not spoken

To any one, nor taken sustenance
But to prorogue his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his distemperature?

Hel. 'T would be too tedious to repeat;
But the main grief springs from the loss
Of a beloved daughter and a wife. 30

Lys. May we not see him?

Hel. You may;
But bootless is your sight: he will not speak
To any.

Lys. Yet let me obtain my wish.

Hel. Behold him. PERICLES discovered.
This was a goodly person,
Till the disaster that, one mortal night,
Drove him to this.

Lys. Sir king, all hail! the gods preserve
you!

Hail, royal sir! 40
Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to
you.

First Lord. Sir,
We have a maid in Mitylene, I durst wager.
Would win some words of him.

Lys. 'T is well bethought.
She questionless with her sweet harmony

And other choice attractions, would allure,
And make a battery through his deafen'd
ports

Which now are midway stopp'd:
She is all happy as the fair'st of all,
And with her fellow maids is now upon 50
The leafy shelter that abuts against
The island's side.

Whispers a Lord, who goes off in the barge of LYSIMACHUS.

Hel. Sure, all effectless; yet nothing
we'll omit
That bears recovery's name. But, since your kindness

We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech
you

That for our gold we may provision have,
Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the staleness.

Lys. O! sir, a courtesy Which if we should deny, the most just
gods

For every graff would send a caterpillar, 60
And so afflict our province. Yet once more Let me entreat to know at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it to you;
But see, I am prevented.

Re-enter, from the barge, Lord, with MARINA and a young Lady.

Lys. O! here is
The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one!
Is 't not a goodly presence?

Hel. She's a gallant lady.

Lys. She's such a one, that, were I well
assur'd

She came of gentle kind and noble stock,
I'd wish no better choice, and think me
rarely wed. 69

Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient:
If that thy prosperous and artificial feat
Can draw him to answer thee in aught,
Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use

My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided

That none but I and my companion maid
Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her;
And the gods make her prosperous! 80

MARINA sings.

Mark'd he your music?

Mar. No, nor look'd on us.

Lys. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear.

Per. Hum! ha!

Mar. I am a maid,

My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,
But have been gaz'd on like a comet; she
speaks,

My lord, that, may be, hath endur'd a
grief

Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd.

Though wayward fortune did malign my
state, 90

My derivation was from ancestors
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings;
But time hath rooted out my parentage,
And to the world and awkward casualties
Bound me in servitude. Aside. I will de-
sist;

But there is something glows upon my
cheek,

And whispers in mine ear 'Go not till he
speak.'

Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—

To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say
you?

Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage, 100

You would not do me violence.

Per. I do think so. Pray you, turn your eyes upon me.

You are like something that—What country-woman?

Here of these shores?

Mar. No, nor of any shores;
Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping.

My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one

My daughter might have been: my queen's square brows;

Her stature to an inch; as wand-like straight;

As silver-voic'd; her eyes as jewel-like, And cas'd as richly; in pace another Juno; Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry,

The more she gives them speech. Where do you live?

Mar. Where I am but a stranger; from the deck

You may discern the place.

Per. Where were you bred? And how achiev'd you these endowments which

You make more rich to owe?

Mar. If I should tell my history, it would seem Like lies, disdain'd in the reporting.

Per. Prithce, speak; Falseness cannot come from thee, for thou look'st

Modest as justice, and thou seem'st a palace For the crown'd truth to dwell in. I'll believe thee,

And make my senses credit thy relation To points that seem impossible; for thou look'st

Like one I lov'd indeed. What were thy friends?

Didst thou not say when I did push thee back,

Which was when I perceiv'd thee, that thou cam'st

From good descending?

Mar. So indeed I did.

Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou said'st

Thou hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury,

And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine,

If both were open'd.

Mar. Some such thing I said, and said no more but what my thoughts

Did warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy story; If thine consider'd prove the thousandth part

Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I Have suffer'd like a girl; yet thou dost look

Like Patience gazing on kings' graves, and smiling

Extremity out of act. What were thy friends?

How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin?

Recount, I do beseech thee. Come, sit by me.

Mar. My name is Marina.

Per. O! I am mock'd, And thou by some incensed god sent hither To make the world to laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good sir, Or here I'll cease.

Per. Nay, I'll be patient. Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me, To call thyself Marina.

Mar. The name

Was given me by one that had some power; My father, and a king.

Per. How! a king's daughter? And call'd Marina?

Mar. You said you would believe me; But, not to be a troubler of your peace, I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and blood? Have you a working pulse? and are no fairy?

Motion! Well; speak on. Where were you born?

And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar. Call'd Marina For I was born at sea.

Per. At sea! what mother? Mar. My mother was the daughter of a king;

Who died the minute I was born,

As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft Deliver'd weeping.

Per. O! stop there a little. Aside. This is the rarest dream that e'er dull sleep Did mock sad fools withal; this cannot be. My daughter's buried. Well; where were you bred?

I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story,

And never interrupt you.

Mar. You scorn to believe me; 't were best I did give o'er.

Per. I will believe you by the syllable Of what you shall deliver. Yet, give me leave:

How came you in these parts? where were you bred?

Mar. The king my father did in Tarsus leave me,

Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife, Did seek to murder me; and having woo'd

A villain to attempt it, who having drawn to do 't,

A crew of pirates came and rescu'd me; Brought me to Mitylene. But, good sir, Whither will you have me? Why do you weep? It may be

You think me an impostor; no, good faith, I am the daughter to King Pericles,

If good King Pericles be.

Per. Ho, Helicanus!

Hel. Calls my lord?

Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,

Most wise in general; tell me, if thou canst, What this maid is, or what is like to be,

That thus hath made me weep?

Hel. I know not; but Here is the regent, sir, of Mitylene,

Speaks nobly of her.

Lys. She never would tell Her parentage; being demanded that,

She would sit still and weep.

Per. O Helicanus! strike me, honour'd sir; Give me a gash, put me to present pain, Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me O'erbear the shores of my mortality,

And drown me with their sweetness. O!
 come hither,
 Thou that begett'st him that did thee beget;
 Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tarsus,
 And found at sea again. O Helicanus!
 Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud
 As thunder threatens us; this is Marina.
 What was thy mother's name? tell me but
 that,
 For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
 Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, sir, I pray,
 What is your title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre: but tell me
 now
 My drown'd queen's name, as in the rest
 you said

Thou hast been god-like perfect;
 Thou 'rt heir of kingdoms, and another life
 To Pericles thy father.

Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter than

To say my mother's name was Thaisa?
 Thaisa was my mother, who did end
 The minute I began.

Per. Now, blessing on thee! rise; thou art my child.

Give me fresh garments! Mine own,
 Helicanus;

She is not dead at Tarsus, as she should have been,

By savage Cleon; she shall tell thee all;
 When thou shalt kneel, and justify in knowledge

She is thy very princess. Who is this? <sup>220</sup>

Hel. Sir, 't is the governor of Mitylene,
 Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
 Did come to see you.

Per. I embrace you.

Give me my robes; I am wild in my beholding.

O heavens! bless my girl. But hark!
 what music?

Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him

O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt,

How sure you are my daughter. But what music?

Hel. My lord, I hear none.

Per. None! <sup>230</sup>

The music of the spheres! List, my Marina.

Lys. It is not good to cross him; give him way.

Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?

Lys. My lord, I hear. Music.

Per. Most heavenly music:
 It nips me unto list'ning, and thick slum-
 ber

Hangs upon mine eyes; let me rest.

Lys. A pillow for his head. Sleeps.

So, leave him all. Well, my companion
 friends,

If this but answer to my just belief,

I'll well remember you. <sup>240</sup>

Exeunt all but PERICLES.

DIANA appears to PERICLES as in a vision.

Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus; hie thee thither,

And do upon mine altar sacrifice.

There, when my maiden priests are met
 together,

Before the people all,

Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy
 wife;

To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's,
 call

And give them repetition to the life.

Perform my bidding, or thou liv'st in
 woe;

Do it, and happy; by my silver bow! <sup>249</sup>
 Awake, and tell thy dream! Disappears.

Per. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine,
 I will obey thee! Helicanus!

Re-enter LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, and MARINA.

Hel. Sir?

Per. My purpose was for Tarsus, there to strike

The inhospitable Cleon; but I am
 For other service first: toward Ephesus

Turn our blown sails; eftsoons I'll tell thee
 why.

Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore,
 And give you gold for such provision

As our intents will need?

Lys. Sir, <sup>260</sup>
 With all my heart; and when you come ashore,

I have another suit.

Per. You shall prevail,
 Were it to woo my daughter; for it seems
 You have been noble towards her.

Lys. Sir, lend your arm.

Per. Come, my Marina. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before the Temple of DIANA at Ephesus.

Enter GOWER.

*Now our sands are almost run;
 More a little, and then dumb.*

*This, my last boon, give me,
 For such kindness must relieve me,*

*That you aptly will suppose
 What pageantry, what feats, what shows,*

*What minstrelsy, and pretty din,
 The regent made in Mitylene*

*To greet the king. So he thriv'd,
 That he is promis'd to be wiv'd* <sup>10</sup>

*To fair Marina; but in no wise
 Till he had done his sacrifice,*

*As Dian bade: whereto being bound,
 The interim, pray you, all confound.*

*In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd,
 And wishes fall out as they're will'd.*

*At Ephesus, the temple see,
 Our king and all his company.*

*That he can hither come so soon,
 Is by your fancy's thankful doom.* <sup>20</sup>

Exit.

SCENE III.—The Temple of DIANA at Ephesus; THAISA standing near the altar, as high priestess; a number of Virgins on each side; CERIMON and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending.

Enter PERICLES, with his Train; LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, MARINA, and a Lady.

Per. Hail, Dian! to perform thy just command,

I here confess myself the King of Tyre;
Who, frighted from my country, did wed
At Pentapolis the fair Thaisa.

At sea in childbed died she, but brought
forth
A maid-child call'd Marina; who, O goddess!

Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tarsus
Was nurs'd with Cleon, whom at fourteen years

He sought to murder; but her better stars Brought her to Mitylene, 'gainst whose shore

Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard us,

Where, by her own most clear remembrance,
she

Made known herself my daughter.

Thai. Voice and favour!
You are, you are—O royal Pericles! Faints.

Per. What means the nun? she dies;
help, gentlemen!

Cer. Noble sir,
If you have told Diana's altar true,
This is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no:
I threw her overboard with these very arms.

Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you.

Per. 'T is most certain.
Cer. Look to the lady. O! she 's but o'erjoy'd.

Early in blust'ring morn this lady was Thrown on this shore. I op'd the coffin, Found there rich jewels; recover'd her,
and plac'd her
Here in Diana's temple.

Per. May we see them?
Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house,

Whither I invite you. Look! Thaisa is Recovered.

Thai. O! let me look.
If he be none of mine, my sanctity

Will to my sense bend no licentious ear, 30
But curb it, spite of seeing. O! my lord,

Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak, Like him you are. Did you not name a tempest,

A birth, and death?

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa!

Thai. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead
And drown'd.

Per. Immortal Dian!

Thai. Now I know you better.
When we with tears parted Pentapolis,

The king my father gave you such a ring.
Shows a ring.

Per. This, this: no more, you gods!
your present kindness

Makes my past miseries sports: you shall do well,

That on the touching of her lips I may Melt and no more be seen. O! come, be buried

A second time within these arms.

Mar. My heart
Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom.

Kneels to THAISA.
Per. Look! who kneels here. Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa;

Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina
For she was yielded there.

Thai. Bless'd, and mine own!

Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen!

Thai. I know you not.

Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre, 50

I left behind an ancient substitute;

Can you remember what I call'd the man?

I have nam'd him oft.

Thai. 'T was Helicanus then.

Per. Still confirmation.

Embrace him, dear Thaisa; this is he.

Now do I long to hear how you were found,

How possibly preserv'd, and who to thank,

Besides the gods, for this great miracle.

Thai. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man, Through whom the gods have shown their power; that can 50

From first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend sir,
The gods can have no mortal officer

More like a god than you. Will you deliver
How this dead queen re-lives?

Cer. I will, my lord:
Beseech you, first go with me to my house,

Where shall be shown you all was found with her;

How she came placed here in the temple;

No needful thing omitted.

Per. Pure Dian! bless thee for thy vision;
I

Will offer night-oblations to thee. Thaisa, 70
This prince, the fair-betrothed of your

daughter,

Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now
This ornament

Makes me look dismal will I clip to form;
And what this fourteen years no razor

touch'd,

To grace thy marriage-day I'll beautify.

Thai. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, sir,

My father's dead.

Per. Heavens make a star of him! Yet
there, my queen,

We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves
Will in that kingdom spend our following

days; 81

Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.

Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay

To hear the rest untold. Sir, lead 's the way. Exeunt.

Enter GOWER.

In Antiochus and his daughter you have heard

Of monstrous lust the due and just reward:

*In Pericles, his queen and daughter, seen, Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen,
 Virtue preserv'd from fell destruction's blast,
 Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last.*

*In Helicanus may you well descry
 A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty.
 In reverend Cerimon there well appears
 The worth that learned charity ave wears.*

*For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame
 Had spread their cursed deed, and honour'd
 name*

*Of Pericles, to rage the city turn,
 That him and his they in his palace burn:
 The gods for murder seemed so content
 To punish them; although not done, but meant.*

*So on your patience evermore attending,
 New joy wait on you! Here our play has ending.*

Exit.

POETRY

POEMS AND SONNETS

VENUS AND ADONIS. The publication of Venus and Adonis in 1593 established Shakespeare's literary reputation. The closing of the theatres in 1592 on account of the plague threw Shakespeare temporarily out of employment, a liability which he at once proceeded to transform into an asset. Merely as a writer of plays he had no hope of securing recognition from men of letters; as poet and author the way to lasting fame lay open before him. In dedicating this poem to the young Earl of Southampton, Shakespeare referred to it as the "first heir of my invention," implying clearly his recognition of the literary judgment of the time which took no account of writings intended for the stage. In conformity with that judgment he utterly abandons in Venus and Adonis the method of the dramatist and confines himself strictly to accepted poetic conventions. Neither in the nature of the theme, the form of verse, nor method of treatment is there anything distinctively Shakespearean. It is chiefly in the minuteness and accuracy of his observation and the felicity of his phrasing that we recognize Shakespeare in Venus and Adonis.

Shakespeare doubtless chose the amorous theme with certain knowledge that it would prove pleasing to Southampton. He seems, however, conscious throughout of the danger involved in treating such a subject and studiously avoids identifying himself with the characters as he so well knew how to do. As a result, the poem, in spite of its voluptuousness and the ornateness of its style, is devoid of any real passion. Quite apart from this fact it would be difficult to maintain a serious charge against it on moral grounds when we consider the insubstantiality of the goddess whose weight the "forceless flowers like sturdy trees support," who can "Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen," and whom "Two strengthless doves . . . draw through the sky." And it would be likewise difficult to find a truer distinction between Love and Lust than that made by the beautiful Adonis, whose body in death "melted like a vapour" and from whose blood sprung the anemone.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE. The success that attended the publication of Venus and Adonis made it necessary for Shakespeare to fulfill his promise to the Earl of Southampton to "take advantage of all idle hours, till I have honoured you with some graver labour," and accordingly in the following year, 1594, he published Lucrece. It seems likely that he already had the poem under way or clearly in mind when he used the expression "graver labour" and that the theme of chastity was chosen as in direct contrast with that of the former poem rather than because of some objections that were raised against its licentiousness. He slightly changed the verse form by adding an extra line to the six-line stanza of the earlier poem and adopting the rime royal. The method of treatment, however, remains the same for Lucrece as for Venus and Adonis. The poet's aloofness from his subject, his insistence upon exhausting every detail, his studied digressions, are all at variance with his method in the drama, where words are subordinate to action and where masses of material are discarded in the process of selection. It is almost as if he were fearful of revealing in the poem some evidence of his craft as a playwright. I cannot believe that he found pleasure in those long dissertations of Lucrece on Night and Time and Opportunity or in her feignedly passionate assault on "senseless Sinon." There is no reason why he might not have continued this sort of work indefinitely had he chosen to do so; but there is every evidence that he longed for the re-opening of the theatres and the freedom and inspiration of losing himself in his characters and winning the plaudits not only of the aristocracy and the learned, but also of the common people.

The Passionate Pilgrim is a group of miscellaneous poems from various authors published piratically in 1599. It contains two of the Sonnets, 138 and 144, and two sonnets from Love's Labour's Lost. The remaining poems in the collection are not by Shakespeare.

THE SONNETS. The first mention of Shakespeare's Sonnets occurs in Meres' "Palladis Tamia" in 1598, where they are referred to as his "sugred sonnets among his private friends." Since the sonnet vogue was at its height during the period of Shakespeare's enforced idleness because of the closing of the theatres (1592-93) and had practically passed before 1598, it is altogether likely that the Sonnets had been circulating in manuscript form for three or four years prior to their mention by Meres.

The fact that Shakespeare predicts in the Sonnets immortality for his verse may or may not signify that he intended at some time to publish them. It is certain, however, that they were never published with his consent. Their first appearance in print was in the form of a pirated quarto in 1609 put out by an obscure publisher, Thomas Thorpe, who had in some unknown way got possession of a manuscript copy and who dedicated them over his own initials "To the onlie begetter of these insuing sonnets, Mr. W. H." The natural inference is, of course, that Thorpe meant to imply that "Mr. W. H." was the inspirer of the sonnets, the young man to whom the larger number were addressed. Who "Mr. W. H." was, however, has never been and probably never will be determined. It seems quite possible that Thorpe himself did not know, but merely used the initials along with the dedication itself to give the appearance of authenticity to the publication. It is indeed fortunate that he signed his own initials and not Shakespeare's to the dedication, else we should have another insoluble Shakespeare problem on our hands.

The Sonnets as published are 154 in number, the first 126 constituting a cycle and the remaining 28 a miscellaneous group appended to the cycle and somewhat remotely connected with it in theme. The sonnets of the cycle are addressed for the most part to a young man; those of the appendix, to a Dark Lady. It is, of course, impossible to say whether the order of the sonnets as we have them accords with Shakespeare's own arrangement or not. Endless ingenuity has been expended in dividing the cycle into groups of sonnet sequences with a view to giving to the entire cycle the unity of a connected narrative. The general reader will have little patience with such attempts. Such sequences as he is unable to observe for himself he will hardly accept when pointed out by others, especially when no two of the others wholly agree. He will observe readily enough, for instance, a sequence in the first fourteen sonnets, but whether that sequence continues through sonnet 19, or whether sonnets 15-19 constitute a separate group is by no means certain, nor is it of particular importance. The Sonnets are of value to the reader not because of any light they may throw on Shakespeare's private life, but because many of them are extremely beautiful and so universal in their appeal that every reader may find in them much to appropriate to his own use.

I cannot for a moment believe that in the Sonnets Shakespeare wears his heart upon his sleeve. Even granting that there may be some basis of fact underlying them, the impossibility of determining between what is fact and what is purely conventional renders all conclusions drawn from them about Shakespeare the man not only worthless but also presumptuous. The fact that Shakespeare, immediately upon the re-opening of the theatres, returned to the stage, that some dozen or more plays from his hand are assigned to the years between 1592 and 1598, that in addition he was constantly learning new parts and winning distinction as an actor, does not indicate that he felt very deeply the disgrace of his profession, or that he was love-sick during that period over some youth to the point of being unable to sleep o' nights. A further evidence that these poems are not autobiographical is found in the fact that in 1596 he lost his only boy, Hamnet, a child of eleven years. He addressed no sonnet to his memory.

VENUS AND ADONIS

TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLY,
EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON
OF TICHFIELD.

RIGHT HONOURABLE,

I know not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your lordship, nor how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden: only, if your honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours, till I have honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heir of my invention prove deformed, I shall be sorry it had so noble a godfather, and never after ear so barren a land, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honourable survey, and your honour to your heart's content; which I wish may always answer your own wish and the world's hopeful expectation.

Your honour's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

'Vilia miretur vulgus; mihi flavus Apollo Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua.'

EVEN as the sun with purple-colour'd face
Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping
morn,
Rose-cheek'd Adonis hied him to the chase;
Hunting he lov'd, but love he laugh'd to
scorn;

Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto
him,

And like a bold-fac'd suitor 'gins to woo
him.

'Thrice-fairer than myself,' thus she began,
'The field's chief flower, sweet above compare,

Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses
are;

Nature that made thee, with herself at strife,

Saith that the world hath ending with thy
life.

'Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed,
And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow;
If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy meed
A thousand honey secrets shalt thou know:

Here come and sit, where never serpent
hisses;

And being set, I 'll smother thee with kisses:

'And yet not cloy thy lips with loath'd
satiety,

But rather famish them amid their plenty, 20
Making them red and pale with fresh variety;

Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty:
A summer's day will seem an hour but
short,

Being wasted in such time-beguiling
sport.'

With this she seizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of pith and livelihood,
And trembling in her passion, calls it balm,
Earth's sovereign salve to do a goddess
good:

Being so enrag'd, desire doth lend her force

Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

Over one arm the lusty courser's rein, 31
Under her other was the tender boy,
Who blush'd and pouted in a dull disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to toy;
She red and hot as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire.

The studded bridle on a ragged bough
Nimble she fastens; O! how quick is love:
The steed is stalled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove: 40

Backward she push'd him, as she would be thrust,

And govern'd him in strength, though not in lust.

So soon was she along, as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips:
Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth he frown.

And 'gins to chide, but soon she stops his
lips;
And kissing speaks, with lustful language
broken,
'If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open.'

He burns with bashful shame; she with her tears
Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheeks;
Then with her windy sighs and golden hairs
To fan and blow them dry again she seeks:
He saith she is immodest, blames her
miss;
What follows more she murders with a kiss.

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,
Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh and
bone,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste,
Till either gorge be stuff'd or prey be gone;
Even so she kiss'd his brow, his cheek,
his chin,
And where she ends she doth anew begin.

Forc'd to content, but never to obey,
Panting he lies, and breatheth in her face;
She feedeth on the steam as on a prey,
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace;
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of
flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling
showers.

Look! how a bird lies tangled in a net,
So fasten'd in her arms Adonis lies;
Pure shame and aw'd resistance made him
fret,
Which bred more beauty in his angry eyes:
Rain added to a river that is rank
Perforce will force it overflow the bank.

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale;
Still is he sullen, still he lours and frets,
'Twixt crimson shame and anger ashy-pale;
Being red, she loves him best; and being
white,
Her best is better'd with a more delight.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but
love;
And by her fair immortal hand she swears,
From his soft bosom never to remove,
Till he take truce with her contending tears,
Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks all wet;
And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt.

Upon this promise did he raise his chin,
Like a dive-dapper peering through a wave,
Who, being look'd on, ducks as quickly in;
So offers he to give what she did crave;
But when her lips were ready for his pay,
He winks, and turns his lips another
way.

Never did passenger in summer's heat
More thirst for drink than she for this good turn.
Her help she sees, but help she cannot get;
She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn:
'O! pity,' gan she cry, 'flint-hearted boy:
'Tis but a kiss I beg; why art thou coy?

'I have been woo'd, as I entreat thee now,
Even by the stern and direful god of war,
Whose sinewy neck in battle ne'er did bow,
Who conquers where he comes in every jar;
Yet hath he been my captive and my
slave,
And begg'd for that which thou unask'd shalt have.

'Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
His batter'd shield, his uncontrolled crest,
And for my sake hath learn'd to sport and dance,
To toy, to wanton, dally, smile and jest;
Scorning his churlish drum and ensign
red,
Making my arms his field, his tent my bed.

'Thus he that overrul'd I oversway'd,
Leading him prisoner in a red-rose chain: 110
Strong-temper'd steel his stronger strength
obey'd,
Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.
O! be not proud, nor brag not of thy
might,
For mastering her that foil'd the god of
fight.

'Touch but my lips with those fair lips of
thine,
Though mine be not so fair, yet are they
red,
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine.
What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy
head:
Look in mine eyeballs, there thy beauty
lies;
Then why not lips on lips, since eyes in
eyes? 120

'Art thou asham'd to kiss? then wink again,
And I will wink; so shall the day seem
night;
Love keeps his revels where there are but twain;
Be bold to play, our sport is not in sight:
These blue-vein'd violets whereon we lean Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

'The tender spring upon thy tempting lip Shows thee unripe, yet may'st thou well be tasted.
Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted:
Fair flowers that are not gather'd in their prime Rot and consume themselves in little
time.

VENUS AND ADONIS

'Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkled-old, Ill-nurtur'd, crooked, churlish, harsh in
voice,
O'erworn, despised, rheumatic, and cold,
Thick-sighted, barren, lean, and lacking juice,
Then might'st thou pause, for then I were not for thee;
But having no defects, why dost abhor
me?

'Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;
Mine eyes are grey and bright, and quick in turning;
My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow;
My flesh is soft and plump, my marrow burning;
My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.

'Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or like a fairy trip upon the green,
Or like a nymph, with long dishevell'd hair,
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing
seen:
Love is a spirit all compact of fire,
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.

'Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie;
These forceless flowers like sturdy trees
support me;
Two strengthless doves will draw me
through the sky,
From morn till night, even where I list to sport me:
Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be That thou should'st think it heavy unto
thee?

'Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?
Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?
Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected, Steal thine own freedom, and complain on theft.
Narcissus so himself himself forsook,
And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

'Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use,
Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to
bear;
Things growing to themselves are growth's
abuse:
Seeds spring from seeds, and beauty
breedeth beauty;
Thou wast begot; to get it is thy duty.

'Upon the earth's increase why should'st thou feed,
Unless the earth with thy increase be fed?
By law of nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live when thou thyself art
dead;
And so in spite of death thou dost survive,
In that thy likeness still is left alive.'

By this the love-sick queen began to sweat,
For where they lay the shadow had forsook
them,
And Titan, tired in the mid-day heat,
With burning eye did hotly overlook them;
Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him and by Venus' side.

And now Adonis, with a lazy spright,
And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye,
His louring brows o'erwhelming his fair
sight,
Like misty vapours when they blot the sky, Souring his cheeks, cries 'Fie! no more of
love:
The sun doth burn my face; I must remove.'

'Ay me!' quoth Venus, 'young, and so un-
kind?
What bare excuses mak'st thou to be gone;
I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind
Shall cool the heat of this descending
sun:
I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs;
If they burn too, I'll quench them with my tears.'

'The sun that shines from heaven shines but
warm,
And, lo! I lie between that sun and thee:
The heat I have from thence doth little harm,
Thine eye darts forth the fire that burneth
me;
And were I not immortal, life were done
Between this heavenly and earthly sun.

'Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as steel?
Nay, more than flint, for stone at rain re-lenteth.
Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel
What 'tis to love? how want of love tor-menteth?
O! had thy mother borne so hard a mind,
She had not brought forth thee, but died unkind.

'What am I, that thou should'st contemn me
this?
Or what great danger dwells upon my suit?
What were thy lips the worse for one poor
kiss?
Speak, fair; but speak fair words, or else be mute:
Give me one kiss, I'll give it thee again,
And one for interest, if thou wilt have
twain.

'Fie! lifeless picture, cold and senseless
stone,
Well-painted idol, image dull and dead,
Statue contenting but the eye alone,
Thing like a man, but of no woman bred:
Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion,
For men will kiss even by their own direction.'

This said, impatience chokes her pleading
tongue,
And swelling passion doth provoke a pause;
Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her
wrong;
Being judge in love, she cannot right her
cause:
And now she weeps, and now she fain
would speak,
And now her sobs do her intendments break.

Sometimes she shakes her head, and then his hand;
Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground;
Sometimes her arms infold him like a band:
She would, he will not in her arms be
bound;
And when from thence he struggles to be
gone,
She locks her lily fingers one in one.

'Fondling,' she saith, 'since I have hermm'd thee here
Within the circuit of this ivory pale, 230
I'll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer;
Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale:
Graze on my lips, and if those hills be dry,
Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

'Within this limit is relief enough,
Sweet bottom-grass and high delightful
plain,
Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and
rough,
To shelter thee from tempest and from rain:
Then be my deer, since I am such a park;
No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark.' 240

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain,
That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple:
Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,
He might be buried in a tomb so simple;
Foreknowing well, if there he came to lie,
Why, there Love liv'd and there he could not die.

These lovely caves, these round enchanting pits,
Open'd their mouths to swallow Venus'
liking.
Being mad before, how doth she now for wits?
Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking? 250
Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
To love a cheek that smiles at thee in
scorn!

Now which way shall she turn? what shall she say?
Her words are done, her woes the more increasing;
The time is spent, her object will away,

And from her twining arms doth urge releasing.
'Pity!' she cries, 'some favour, some remorse!
Away he springs, and hasteth to his horse.

But, lo! from forth a copse that neighbours
by,
A breeding jennet, lusty, young, and proud,
Adonis' trampling courser doth espy, 261
And forth she rushes, snorts and neighs
aloud:
The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto
a tree,
Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes
he.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds,
And now his woven girths he breaks asun-
der;
The bearing earth with his hard hoof he
wounds,
Whose hollow womb resounds like heaven's thunder;
The iron bit he crusheth 'tween his teeth,
Controlling what he was controlled with.

His ears up-prick'd; his braided hanging mane 271
Upon his compass'd crest now stand on
end;
His nostrils drink the air, and forth again,
As from a furnace, vapours doth he send:
His eye, which scornfully glisters like fire,
Shows his hot courage and his high desire.

Sometime he trots, as if he told the steps,
With gentle majesty and modest pride;
Anon he rears upright, curvets and leaps,
As who should say 'Lo! thus my strength is tried; 280
And this I do to captivate the eye
Of the fair breeder that is standing by.'

What reckoneth he his rider's angry stir,
His flattering holla, or his 'Stand, I say?'
What cares he now for curb or pricking
spur,
For rich caparisons or trapping gay?
He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
For nothing else with his proud sight agrees.

Look, when a painter would surpass the life,
In limning out a well-proportion'd steed, 290
His art with nature's workmanship at strife,
As if the dead the living should exceed;
So did this horse excel a common one,
In shape, in courage, colour, pace and
bone.

Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long,
Broad breast, full eye, small head, and nostril wide,
High crest, short ears, straight legs and passing strong,

Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender
hide:

Look, what a horse should have he did not lack,

Save a proud rider on so proud a back. 300

Sometimes he scuds far off, and there he stares;

Anon he starts at stirring of a feather;
To bid the wind a base he now prepares,
And wh'er he run or fly they know not whether:

For through his mane and tail the high wind sings,

Fanning the hairs, who wave like feather'd
wings.

He looks upon his love, and neighs unto her;
She answers him as if she knew his mind;
Being proud, as females are, to see him woo
her.

She puts on outward strangeness, seems un-
kind, 310

Spurns at his love and scorns the heat he feels,

Beating his kind embracements with her heels.

Then, like a melancholy malcontent,
He vails his tail that, like a falling plume,
Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent;
He stamps, and bites the poor flies in his fume.

His love, perceiving how he is enrag'd,
Grew kinder, and his fury was assuag'd.

His testy master goeth about to take him;
When, lo! the unback'd breeder, full of
fear, 320

Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake
him,

With her the horse, and left Adonis there.
As they were mad, unto the wood they
hie them,

Out-stripping crows that strive to over-fly
them.

All swoln with chaffing, down Adonis sits,
Banning his boisterous and unruly beast:
And now the happy season once more fits,
That love-sick Love by pleading may be blest:

For lovers say, the heart hath treble
wrong

When it is barr'd the aidance of the
tongue. 330

An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more
rage:

So of concealed sorrow may be said;
Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage;

But when the heart's attorney once is
mute,

The client breaks, as desperate in his suit.

He sees her coming, and begins to glow,
Even as a dying coal revives with wind,
And with his bonnet hides his angry brow;

Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind,
Taking no notice that she is so nigh, 341
For all askance he holds her in his eye.

O! what a sight it was, wistly to view
How she came stealing to the wayward boy;
To note the fighting conflict of her hue,
How white and red each other did destroy:
But now her cheek was pale, and by and
by
It flash'd forth fire, as lightning from the sky.

Now was she just before him as he sat, 349
And like a lowly lover down she kneels;
With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat,
Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels:

His tender cheek receives her soft hand's
print,

As apt as new-fall'n snow takes any dint.

O! what a war of looks was then between
them;

Her eyes petitioners to his eyes suing;
His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen
them;

Her eyes woo'd still, his eyes disdain'd the wooing:

And all this dumb play had his acts made
plain

With tears, which, chorus-like, her eyes did rain. 360

Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
A lily prison'd in a gaol of snow,
Or ivory in an alabaster band;
So white a friend engirts so white a foe:

This beauteous combat, wilful and unwilling,

Show'd like two silver doves that sit a-billing.

Once more the engine of her thoughts began:

'O fairest mover on this mortal round,
Would thou wert as I am, and I a man,
My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my
wound; 370

For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee,

Though nothing but my body's bane would cure thee.'

'Give me my hand,' saith he, 'why dost thou feel it?'

'Give me my heart,' saith she, 'and thou shalt have it;

O! give it me, lest thy hard heart do steel it,
And being steel'd, soft sighs can never grave it:

Then love's deep groans I never shall regard,

Because Adonis' heart hath made mine
hard.'

'For shame!' he cries, 'let go, and let me
go;

My day's delight is past, my horse is gone,
And 't is your fault I am bereft him so: 381

I pray you hence, and leave me here alone:
For all my mind, my thought, my busy
care,
Is how to get my palfrey from the mare.'

Thus she replies: 'Thy palfrey, as he should,
Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire:
Affection is a coal that must be cool'd;
Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire.
The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath none;
Therefore no marvel though thy horse be
gone. 390

'How like a jade he stood, tied to the tree,
Servilely master'd with a leathern rein!
But when he saw his love, his youth's fair
fee,
He held such petty bondage in disdain:
Throwing the base thong from his bending crest,
Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his
breast.

'Who sees his true-love in her naked bed, Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than
white,
But, when his glutton eye so full hath fed,
His other agents aim at like delight? 400
Who is so faint, that dare not be so bold
To touch the fire, the weather being cold!

'Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boy,
And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee,
To take advantage on presented joy:
Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach thee.
O! learn to love; the lesson is but plain,
And once made perfect, never lost again.'

'I know not love,' quoth he, 'nor will not know it,
Unless it be a boar, and then I chase it; 410
'T is much to borrow, and I will not owe it;
My love to love is love but to disgrace it;
For I have heard it is a life in death,
That laughs, and weeps, and all but with a breath.

'Who wears a garment shapeless and un-finish'd?
Who plucks the bud before one leaf put
forth?
If springing things be any jot diminish'd,
They wither in their prime, prove nothing
worth:
The colt that's back'd and burden'd being young Loseth his pride and never waxeth strong.

'You hurt my hand with wringing; let us
part. 421
And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat:
Remove your siege from my unyielding
heart;

To love's alarms it will not ope the gate:
Dismiss your vows, your feigned tears,
your flattery;
For where a heart is hard, they make no
battery.'

'What! canst thou talk?' quoth she, 'hast thou a tongue?
O! would thou hadst not, or I had no hear-
ing;
Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double
wrong;
I had my load before, now press'd with bearing; 430
Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh-sounding,
Ear's deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore wounding.

'Had I no eyes but ears, my ears would love
That inward beauty and invisible;
Or were I deaf, thy outward parts would move
Each part in me that were but sensible:
Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor
see,
Yet should I be in love by touching thee.

'Say, that the sense of feeling were bereft
me,
And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch, 440
And nothing but the very smell were left me,
Yet would my love to thee be still as much;
For from the still'tory of thy face excelling Comes breath perfum'd that breedeth love by smelling.

'But O! what banquet wert thou to the
taste,
Being nurse and feeder of the other four;
Would they not wish the feast might ever
last,
And bid Suspicion double-lock the door,
Lest Jealousy, that sour unwelcome guest,
Should, by his stealing in, disturb the
feast?' 450

Once more the ruby-colour'd portal open'd,
Which to his speech did honey passage yield;
Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd
Wreck to the seaman, tempest to the field,
Sorrow to shepherds, woe unto the birds, Gusts and foul flaws to herdmen and to herds.

This ill presage advisedly she marketh;
Even as the wind is hush'd before it raineth,
Or as the wolf doth grin before he barketh,
Or as the berry breaks before it staineth, 460
Or like the deadly bullet of a gun,
His meaning struck her ere his words began.

And at his look she flatly falleth down,
For looks kill love and love by looks reviveth;
A smile recures the wounding of a frown;

But blessed bankrupt, that by love so thriveth!
The silly boy, believing she is dead,
Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it red;

And all amaz'd brake off his late intent,
For sharply he did think to reprehend her, 470
Which cunning love did wittily prevent:
Fair fall the wit that can so well defend her!
For on the grass she lies as she were slain,
Till his breath breatheth life in her again.

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the
cheeks,
He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard,
He chafes her lips; a thousand ways he seeks
To mend the hurt that his unkindness
marr'd:
He kisses her; and she, by her good will,
Will never rise, so he will kiss her still. 480

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day:
Her two blue windows faintly she upheaveth,
Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
He cheers the morn and all the earth
relieveth:
And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumin'd with her eye;

Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd,
As if from thence they borrow'd all their shine.
Were never four such lamps together mix'd,
Had not his clouded with his brow's repine;
But hers, which through the crystal tears gave light, 491
Shone like the moon in water seen by
night.

'O! where am I?' quoth she, in earth or
heaven,
Or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire?
What hour is this? or morn or weary even?
Do I delight to die, or life desire?
But now I liv'd, and life was death's annoy;
But now I died, and death was lively joy.

'O! thou didst kill me; kill me once again:
Thy eyes' shrewd tutor, that hard heart of
thine, 500
Hath taught them scornful tricks and such d disdain
That they have murder'd this poor heart of
mine;
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their
queen,
But for thy piteous lips no more had seen.

'Long may they kiss each other for this cure!
O! never let their crimson liveries wear;
And as they last, their verdure still endure,
To drive infection from the dangerous year:
That the star-gazers, having writ on death,
May say, the plague is banish'd by thy
breath. 510

'Pure lips, sweet seals in my soft lips
imprinted,
What bargains may I make, still to be sealing?
To sell myself I can be well contented,
So thou wilt buy and pay and use good dealing;
Which purchase if thou make, for fear of slips
Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips.

'A thousand kisses buys my heart from me;
And pay them at thy leisure, one by one.
What is ten hundred touches unto thee?
Are they not quickly told and quickly gone?
Say, for non-payment that the debt should double,
Is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble?'

'Fair queen,' quoth he, 'if any love you owe
me,
Measure my strangeness with my unripe
years:
Before I know myself, seek not to know me;
No fisher but the ungrown fry forbears:
The mellow plum doth fall, the green sticks fast,
Or being early pluck'd is sour to taste.

'Look! the world's comforter, with weary gait,
His day's hot task hath ended in the west;
The owl, night's herald, shrieks, 't is very
late; 531
The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest,
And coal-black clouds that shadow heaven's light
Do summon us to part and bid good night.

'Now let me say good night, and so say you;
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss.'
'Good night,' quoth she; and ere he says
adien,
The honey fee of parting tender'd is:
Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace;
Incorporate then they seem, face grows to face. 540

Till, breathless, he disjoin'd, and backward drew
The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral
mouth,
Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well
knew,
Whereon they surfeit, yet complain on drouth:
He with her plenty press'd, she faint with dearth,
Their lips together glued, fall to the earth.

Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey,
And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filleth,
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey,
Paying what ransom the insulter willet; 550 Whose vulture thought doth pitch the price so high,
That she will draw his lips' rich treasure
dry.

And having felt the sweetness of the spoil,
With blindfold fury she begins to forage;
Her face doth reek and smoke, her blood
doth boil,
And careless lust stirs up a desperate
courage;
Planting oblivion, beating reason back,
Forgetting shame's pure blush and hon-our's wrack.

Hot, faint, and weary, with her hard embracing,
Like a wild bird being tam'd with too much handling, 560
Or as the fleet-foot roe that's tir'd with chasing,
Or like the froward infant still'd with dandling,
He now obeys, and now no more resisteth, While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.

What wax so frozen but dissolves with tempering,
And yields at last to every light impression?
Things out of hope are compass'd oft with venturing,
Chiefly in love, whose leave exceeds commission:
Affection faints not like a pale-fac'd coward,
But then woos best when most his choice is froward. 570

When he did frown, O! had she then gave over,
Such nectar from his lips she had not suck'd.
Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover;
What though the rose have prickles, yet 't is pluck'd:
Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through and picks them all at last.

For pity now she can no more detain him;
The poor fool prays her that he may depart:
She is resolv'd no longer to restrain him,
Bids him farewell, and look well to her
heart, 580
The which, by Cupid's bow she doth protest,
He carries thence incaged in his breast.

'Sweet boy,' she says, 'this night I'll waste in sorrow,
For my sick heart commands mine eyes to watch.
Tell me, Love's master, shall we meet tomorrow?
Say, shall we? shall we? wilt thou make the match?
He tells her, no; to-morrow he intends To hunt the boar with certain of his friends.

'The boar!' quoth she; whereat a sudden pale,
Like lawn being spread upon the blushing
rose, 580

Usurps her cheek, she trembles at his tale,
And on his neck her yoking arms she throws:
She sinketh down, still hanging by his
neck,
He on her belly falls, she on her back.

Now is she in the very lists of love,
Her champion mounted for the hot encounter:
All is imaginary she doth prove,
He will not manage her, although he mount
her;
That worse than Tantalus' is her annoy,
To clip Elysium and to lack her joy. 600

Even as poor birds, deceiv'd with painted grapes,
Do surfeit by the eye and pine the maw,
Even so she languisheth in her mishaps,
As those poor birds that helpless berries saw.
The warm effects which she in him finds missing,
She seeks to kindle with continual kissing.

But all in vain; good queen, it will not be:
She hath assay'd as much as may be prov'd;
Her pleading hath deserv'd a greater fee;
She's Love, she loves, and yet she is not
lov'd. 610
'Fie, fie!' he says, 'you crush me; let me
go;
You have no reason to withhold me so.'

'Thou hadst been gone,' quoth she, 'sweet boy, ere this,
But that thou told'st me thou would'st hunt
the boar.
O! be advis'd; thou know'st not what it is
With javelin's point a churlish swine to gore,
Whose tushes never sheath'd he whetteth
still,
Like to a mortal butcher, bent to kill.

'On his bow-back he hath a battle set
Of bristly pikes, that ever threat his foes; 620
His eyes like glow-worms shine when he doth fret;
His snout digs sepulchres where'er he goes;
Being mov'd, he strikes what'er is in his
way,
And whom he strikes his cruel tushes slay.

'His brawny sides, with hairy bristles arm'd,
Are better proof than thy spear's point can enter;
His short thick neck cannot be easily
harm'd;
Being ireful, on the lion he will venture:
The thorny brambles and embracing bushes,
As fearful of him, part, through whom he rushes. 630

'Alas! he nought esteems that face of thine,
To which Love's eyes pay tributary gazes;
Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips, and crystal
eyne,

Whose full perfection all the world amazes;
But having thee at vantage, wondrous dread!
Would root these beauties as he roots the mead.

'O! let him keep his loathsome cabin still;
Beauty hath nought to do with such foul fiends:
Come not within his danger by thy will;
They that thrive well take counsel of their
friends. 640
When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble,
I fear'd thy fortune, and my joints did tremble.

'Didst thou not mark my face? was it not
white?
Saw'st thou not signs of fear lurk in mine
eye?
Grew I not faint? and fell I not downright?
Within my bosom, whereon thou dost lie,
My boding heart pants, beats, and takes no rest,
But, like an earthquake, shakes thee on my breast.

'For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy
Doth call himself Affection's sentinel; 650
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny,
And in a peaceful hour doth cry "Kill, kill!"
Distempering gentle Love in his desire,
As air and water do abate the fire.

'This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy,
This canker that eats up Love's tender spring,
This carry-tale, dissentious Jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false
doth bring,
Knocks at my heart, and whispers in mine
ear
That if I love thee, I thy death should
fear: 660

'And more than so, presenteth to mine eye
The picture of an angry-chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
An image like thyself, all stain'd with gore;
Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed
Doth make them droop with grief and hang the head.

'What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That trembles at the imagination?
The thought of it doth make my faint heart
bleed,
And fear doth teach it divination: 670
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow.

'But if thou needs wilt hunt, be rul'd by me;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox which lives by subtlety,
Or at the roe which no encounter dare:
Pursue these fearful creatures o'er the downs,
And on thy well-breath'd horse keep with thy hounds.

'And when thou hast on foot the purblind
hare,
Mark the poor wretch, to overshoot his troubles 680
How he outruns the wind, and with what
care
He cranks and crosses with a thousand doubles:
The many musets through the which he
goes
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.

'Sometime he runs among a flock of sheep
To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell,
And sometime where earth-delving conies
keep,
To stop the loud pursuers in their yell,
And sometime sorteth with a herd of deer;
Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on
fear: 690

'For there his smell with others being mingled,
The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to
doubt,
Ceasing their clamorous cry till they have singled
With much ado the cold fault cleanly out;
Then do they spend their mouths: Echo replies
As if another chase were in the skies.

'By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill, Stands on his hinder legs with listening
ear,
To hearken if his foes pursue him still:
Anon their loud alarms he doth hear; 700
And now his grief may be compared well
To one sore sick that hears the passing-bell.

'Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled
wretch
Turn, and return, indenting with the way;
Each envious briar his weary legs doth scratch,
Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur
stay:
For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low never reliev'd by any.

'Lie quietly, and hear a little more;
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise: 710
To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Unlike myself thou hear'st me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so;
For love can comment upon every woe.

'Where did I leave?' 'No matter where,'
quoth he;
'Leave me, and then the story aptly ends:
The night is spent.' 'Why, what of that?'
quoth she.
'I am,' quoth he, 'expected of my friends;
And now 't is dark, and going I shall fall.'
'In night,' quoth she, 'desire sees best of
all. 720

'But if thou fall, O! then imagine this,
The earth, in love with thee, thy footing trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Rich preys make true men thieves; so do thy lips
Make modest Dian cloudy and forlorn, Lest she should steal a kiss and die for-sworn.

'Now of this dark night I perceive the
reason:
Cynthia for shame obscures her silver shine,
Till forging Nature be condemn'd of treason.
For stealing moulds from heaven that were
divine;
Wherein she fram'd thee in high heaven's
despite,
To shame the sun by day and her by night.

'And therefore hath she brib'd the Destinies
To cross the curious workmanship of nature,
To mingle beauties with infirmities,
And pure perfection with impure defeature;
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mischances and much misery;

'As burning fevers, agues pale and faint, Life-poisoning pestilence and frenzies
wood,
The marrow-eating sickness, whose attain't
Disorder breeds by heating of the blood;
Surfeits, imposthumes, grief, and damn'd despair,
Swear Nature's death for framing thee so
fair.

'And not the least of all these maladies
But in one minute's fight brings beauty under:
Both favour, savour, hue, and qualities,
Whereat the impartial gazer late did wonder,
Are on the sudden wasted, thaw'd and
done,
As mountain-snow melts with the midday sun.

'Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals and self-loving nuns,
That on the earth would breed a scarcity,
And barren dearth of daughters and of sons,
Be prodigal: the lamp that burns by night
Dries up his oil to lend the world his light.

'What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity
Which by the rights of time thou needs must have,
If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity?
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain,
Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is slain.

'So in thyself thyself art made away;
A mischief worse than civil home-bred
strife,
Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves
do slay,
Or butcher-sire that reaves his son of life.

Foul-cankering rust the hidden treasure
frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets.'

'Nay then,' quoth Adon, 'you will fall again
Into your idle over-handled theme: 770
The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream;
For by this black-fac'd night, desire's foul nurse,
Your treatise makes me like you worse and worse.

'If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues,
And every tongue more moving than your
own,
Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,
Yet from mine ear the tempting tune is blown;
For know, my heart stands armed in mine
ear,
And will not let a false sound enter
there; 780

'Lest the deceiving harmony should run
Into the quiet closure of my breast;
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bedchamber to be barr'd of rest.
No, lady, no; my heart longs not to groan,
But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone.

'What have you urg'd that I cannot reprove?
The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger;
I hate not love, but your device in love,
That lends embracements unto every stranger. 790
You do it for increase: O strange excuse!
When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse.

'Call it not love, for Love to heaven is fled, Since sweating Lust on earth usurp'd his
name;
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame;
Which the hot tyrant stains and soon
bereaves,
As caterpillars do the tender leaves.

'Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But Lust's effect is tempest after sun; 800
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh
remain,
Lust's winter comes ere summer half be
done.
Love surfeits not, Lust like a glutton dies:
Love is all truth, Lust full of forged lies.

'More I could tell, but more I dare not say;
The text is old, the orator too green.
Therefore, in sadness, now I will away;
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen:
Mine ears, that to your wanton talk attended,
Do burn themselves for having so offended.' 810

With this he breaketh from the sweet embrace
Of those fair arms which bound him to her breast,
And homeward through the dark laund runs apace;
Leaves Love upon her back deeply distress'd.
Look, how a bright star shooteth from the sky,
So glides he in the night from Venus' eye;

Which after him she darts, as one on shore
Gazing upon a late-embarked friend,
Till the wild waves will have him seen no more,
Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend: 820

So did the merciless and pitchy night
Fold in the object that did feed her sight.

Whereat amaz'd, as one that unaware Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood,
Or 'stonish'd as night-wanderers often are,
Their light blown out in some mistrustful wood;

Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
Having lost the fair discovery of her way.

And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans,
That all the neighbour caves, as seeming troubled, 830
Make verbal repetition of her moans;
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled:
'Ay me!' she cries, and twenty times
'Woe, woe.'

And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.

She marking them begins a wailing note,
And sings extemporally a woeful ditty;
How love makes young men thrall and old men dote;
How love is wise in folly, foolish-witty:
Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
And still the choir of echoes answer so. 840

Her song was tedious, and outwore the night,
For lovers' hours are long, though seeming short:
If pleas'd themselves, others, they think, delight
In such-like circumstance, with such-like sport:
Their copious stories, oftentimes begun,
End without audience, and are never done.

For who hath she to spend the night withal,
But idle sounds resembling parasites,
Like shrill-tongu'd tapsters answering every call,
Soothing the humour of fantastic wits? 850
She says 'T is so:' they answer all 'T is so,'
And would say after her, if she said 'No.'

Lo! here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast

The sun ariseth in his majesty;
Who doth the world so gloriously behold,
That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd gold.

Venus salutes him with this fair good-morrow:
'O thou clear god, and patron of all light, 860
From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow
The beauteous influence that makes him bright,
There lives a son that suck'd an earthly mother,
May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other.'

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
Musing the morning is so much o'erworn,
And yet she hears no tidings of her love;
She hearkens for his hounds and for his horn:
Anon she hears them chant it lustily,
And all in haste she coasteth to the cry. 870

And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,
Some twine about her thigh to make her stay:
She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace,
Like a milch doe, whose swelling dugs do ache,
Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake.

By this she hears the hounds are at a bay;
Whereat she starts, like one that spies anadder
Wreath'd up in fatal folds just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder; 880
Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds
Appals her senses, and her spirit confounds.

For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt boar, rough bear, or lion proud,
Because the cry remaineth in one place,
Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud:
Finding their enemy to be so curst,
They all strain courtesy who shall cope him first.

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her heart; 890
Who, overcome by doubts and bloodless fear,
With cold-pale weakness numbs each feeling part;
Like soldiers, when their captain once doth yield,
They basely fly and dare not stay the field.

Thus stands she in a trembling ecstasy,
 Till, cheering up her senses all dismay'd,
 She tells them 't is a causeless fantasy,
 And childish error, that they are afraid;
 Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear
 no more:
 And with that word she spied the hunted
 boar, 900

Whose frothy mouth bepainted all with red,
 Like milk and blood being mingled both
 together,
 A second fear through all her sinews spread,
 Which madly hurries her she knows not whither:

This way she runs, and now she will no
 further,
 But back retires to rate the boar for murder.

A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways,

She treads the path that she untreads again;
 Her more than haste is mated with delays,
 Like the proceedings of a drunken brain, 910
 Full of respects, yet nought at all respect-
 ing,

In hand with all things, nought at all effecting.

Here kennell'd in a brake she finds a hound,
 And asks the weary caitiff for his master,
 And there another licking of his wound,
 'Gainst venom'd sores the only sovereign plaster;

And here she meets another sadly scowl-
 ing,

To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.

When he hath ceas'd his ill-resounding noise,

Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black and grim, 920

Against the welkin volleys out his voice;
 Another and another answer him,

Clapping their proud tails to the ground
 below,

Shaking their scratch'd ears, bleeding
 as they go.

Look, how the world's poor people are amaz'd

At apparitions, signs, and prodigies, Whereon with fearful eyes they long have
 gaz'd,

Infusing them with dreadful prophecies;
 So she at these sad signs draws up her
 breath, 929

And sighing it again, exclaims on Death.

'Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean,
 Hateful divorce of love,' thus chides she
 Death,

'Grim-grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean

To stifle beauty and to steal his breath,
 Who when he liv'd, his breath and beauty
 set

Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?

'If he be dead, O no! it cannot be,
 Seeing his beauty, thou should'st strike at
 it;

O yes! it may; thou hast no eyes to see,
 But hatefully at random dost thou hit. 940
 Thy mark is feeble age, but thy false dart Mistakes that aim and cleaves an infant's heart.

'Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spoke,

And hearing him thy power had lost his
 power.

The Destinies will curse thee for this stroke;
 They bid thee crop a weed, thou pluck'st a flower.

Love's golden arrow at him should have
 fled,

And not Death's ebon dart, to strike him
 dead.

'Dost thou drink tears, that thou provok'st such weeping?

What may a heavy groan advantage thee? 950
 Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping
 Those eyes that taught all other eyes to
 see?

Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,

Since her best work is ruin'd with thy rigour.'

Here overcome, as one full of despair,
 She vail'd her eyelids, who, like sluices,
 stopp'd

The crystal tide that from her two cheeks
 fair

In the sweet channel of her bosom dropp'd;
 But through the flood-gates breaks the silver rain,

And with his strong course opens them
 again. 960

O! how her eyes and tears did lend and
 borrow;

Her eyes seen in the tears, tears in her eye;
 Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow,

Sorrow that friendly sighs sought still to
 dry;

But like a stormy day, now wind, now
 rain,

Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them
 wet again.

Variable passions throng her constant woe,
 As striving who should best become her
 grief;

All entertain'd, each passion labours so,
 That every present sorrow seemeth chief,

But none is best; then join they all together, 971

Like many clouds consulting for foul weather.

By this, far off she hears some huntsman
 holla;

A nurse's song ne'er pleas'd her babe so
 well:

VENUS AND ADONIS

The dire imagination she did follow
This sound of hope doth labour to expel;
For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
And flatters her it is Adonij's voice.

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide,
Being prison'd in her eye, like pearls in glass; 980

Yet sometimes takes an orient drop beside,
Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass,
To wash the foul face of the sluttish
ground,
Who is but drunken when she seemeth
drown'd.

O hard-believing love! how strange it seems

Not to believe, and yet too credulous;
Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes;

Despair and hope make thee ridiculous:
The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely,

In unlikely thoughts the other kills thee
quickly. 990

Now she unweaves the web that she hath
wrought,

Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame;
It was not she that call'd him all to naught,
Now she adds honours to his hateful name;
She clepes him king of graves, and grave
for kings,

Imperious supreme of all mortal things.

'No, no,' quoth she, 'sweet Death, I did but jest;

Yet pardon me I felt a kind of fear
Whenas I met the boar, that bloody beast,
Which knows no pity, but is still severe; 1000

Then, gentle shadow, truth I must confess,

I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's de-
cease.

'Tis not my fault: the boar provok'd my
tongue;

Be wreak'd on him, invisible commander;
'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee
wrong;

I did but act, he's author of thy slander.

Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet

Could rule them both without ten women's wit.'

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,
Her rash suspect she doth extenuate; 1010

And that his beauty may the better thrive,
With Death she humbly doth insinuate;

Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs,
and stories

His victories, his triumphs, and his glories.

'O Jove!' quoth she, 'how much a fool was I

To be of such a weak and silly mind

To wail his death who lives and must not die

Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind;
For he being dead, with him is beauty
slain,

And, beauty dead, black chaos comes
again. 1020

'Fie, fie, fond love! thou art so full of fear
As one with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves;

Trifles, unvisited with eye or ear,
Thy coward heart with false bethinking grieves.'

Even at this word she hears a merry horn, Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

As falcon to the lure, away she flies;
The grass stoops not, she treads on it so
light;

And in her haste unfortunately spies
The foul boar's conquest on her fair de-
light; 1030

Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd with the view,

Like stars asham'd of day, themselves withdrew:

Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,

Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with
pain,

And there, all smother'd up, in shade doth sit,

Long after fearing to creep forth again;

So, at his bloody view, her eyes are fled
Into the deep dark cabins of her head:

Where they resign their office and their
light

To the disposing of her troubled brain; 1040

Who bids them still consort with ugly
night,

And never wound the heart with looks
again;

Who, like a king perplexed in his throne,
By their suggestion gives a deadly groan,

Whereat each tributary subject quakes;
As when the wind, imprison'd in the ground,

Struggling for passage, earth's foundation
shakes,

Which with cold terror doth men's minds confound.

This mutiny each part doth so surprise
That from their dark beds once more leap her eyes; 1050

And, being open'd, threw unwilling light Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd

In his soft flank; whose wonted lily white
With purple tears, that his wound wept,
was drench'd:

No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf,
or weed,

But stole his blood and seem'd with him to bleed.

This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth,
 Over one shoulder doth she hang her
 head,
 Dumbly she passions, frantically she doteth;
 She thinks he could not die, he is not
 dead: 1060
 Her voice is stopp'd, her joints forget to bow,
 Her eyes are mad that they have wept till
 now.

Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly,
 That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three;
 And then she reprehends her mangling
 eye,
 That makes more gashes where no breach
 should be:
 His face seems twain, each several limb
 is doubled;
 For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

'My tongue cannot express my grief for
 one,
 And yet,' quoth she, 'behold two Adons
 dead! 1070
 My sighs are blown away, my salt tears
 gone,
 Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead:
 Heavy heart's lead, melt at mine eyes'
 red fire!
 So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

'Alas! poor world, what treasure hast thou
 lost?
 What face remains alive that's worth the viewing?
 Whose tongue is music now? what canst
 thou boast
 Of things long since, or any thing ensuing?
 The flowers are sweet, their colours
 fresh and trim;
 But true-sweet beauty liv'd and died
 with him. 1080

'Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature
 wear!
 Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss
 you:
 Having no fair to lose, you need not fear;
 The sun doth scorn you, and the wind doth hiss you:
 But when Adonis liv'd, sun and sharp air Lurk'd like two thieves, to rob him of his fair:

'And therefore would he put his bonnet on,
 Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep;
 The wind would blow it off, and, being
 gone,
 Play with his locks: then would Adonis
 weep; 1090
 And straight, in pity of his tender
 years,
 They both would strive who first should dry his tears.

'To see his face the lion walk'd along Behind some hedge, because he would not fear him;
 To recreate himself when he hath sung,
 The tiger would be tame and gently hear
 him;
 If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey
 And never fright the silly lamb that day.

'When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
 The fishes spread on it their golden gills; 1100
 When he was by, the birds such pleasure
 took,
 That some would sing, some other in their bills
 Would bring him mulberries and ripe-red cherries;
 He fed them with his sight, they him with berries.

'But this foul, grim, and urchin-snouted
 boar,
 Whose downward eye still looketh for a
 grave,
 Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he
 wore;
 Witness the entertainment that he gave:
 If he did see his face, why then I know
 He thought to kiss him, and hath kill'd him so. 1110

'Tis true, 'tis true; thus was Adonis
 slain:
 He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,
 Who did not whet his teeth at him again,
 But by a kiss thought to persuade him there;
 And muzzling in his flank, the loving swine
 Sheath'd unaware the tusk in his soft groin.

'Had I been tooth'd like him, I must confess,
 With kissing him I should have kill'd him
 first;
 But he is dead, and never did he bless
 My youth with his; the more am I accurst.' 1120
 With this she falleth in the place she stood,
 And stains her face with his congealed
 blood.

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
 She takes him by the hand, and that is cold;
 She whispers in his ears a heavy tale,
 As if they heard the woeful words she told;
 She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes,
 Where, lo! two lamps, burnt out, in darkness lies;

Two glasses, where herself herself beheld
 A thousand times, and now no more reflect; 1130
 Their virtue lost, wherein they late excell'd,
 And every beauty robb'd of his effect:
 'Wonder of time,' quoth she, 'this is my spite,
 That, though being dead, the day should yet be light.

VENUS AND ADONIS

'Since thou art dead, lo! here I prophesy,
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend:
It shall be waited on with jealousy,
Find sweet beginning, but unsavoury
end;
Ne'er settled equally, but high or low;
That all love's pleasure shall not match
his woe. 1140

'It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud,
Bud and be blasted in a breathing-while;
The bottom poison, and the top o'erstraw'd
With sweets that shall the truest sight
beguile:
The strongest body shall it make most weak,
Strike the wise dumb and teach the fool
to speak.

'It shall be sparing and too full of riot,
Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures;
The staring ruffian shall it keep in quiet,
Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures; 1150
It shall be raging mad, and silly mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child.

'It shall suspect where is no cause of
fear;
It shall not fear where it should most mis-
trust;
It shall be merciful, and too severe,
And most deceiving when it seems most just;
Perverse it shall be, where it shows most toward,
Put fear to valour, courage to the coward.

'It shall be cause of war and dire events,
And set dissension 'twixt the son and
sire; 1160
Subject and servile to all discontents,
As dry combustious matter is to fire:
Sith in his prime Death doth my love destroy,
They that love best their loves shall not enjoy.'

By this, the boy that by her side lay kill'd
Was melted like a vapour from her sight,
And in his blood that on the ground lay spill'd,
A purple flower sprung up, chequer'd with
white;
Resembling well his pale cheeks, and the
blood
Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood. 1170

She bows her head, the new-sprung flower
to smell,
Comparing it to her Adonis' breath,
And says within her bosom it shall dwell,
Since he himself is reft from her by death:
She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears
Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

'Poor flower,' quoth she, 'this was thy father's guise,
Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire,
For every little grief to wet his eyes:
To grow unto himself was his desire, 1180
And so 't is thine; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast as in his blood.

'Here was thy father's bed, here in my
breast;
Thou art the next of blood, and 't is thy
right:
Lo! in this hollow cradle take thy rest,
My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and
night:
There shall not be one minute in an hour
Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's
flower.'

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
And yokes her silver doves; by whose swift aid 1190
Their mistress mounted through the empty
skies
In her light chariot quickly is convey'd; Holding their course to Paphos, where their queen
Means to immure herself and not be seen.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLY,

EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON
OF TICHFIELD.

The love I dedicate to your lordship is without end; whereof this pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous moiety. The warrant I have of your honourable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours; what I have to do is yours; being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater, my duty would show greater; meantime, as it is, it is bound to your lordship, to whom I wish long life, still lengthened with all happiness.

Your lordship's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

THE ARGUMENT

LUCIUS TARQUINIUS, for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus, after he had caused his own father-in-law Servius Tullius to be cruelly murdered, and, contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea. During which siege the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the king's son, in their discourses after supper every one commended the virtues of his own wife: among whom Collatinus extolled the incomparable chastity of his wife Lucretia. In that pleasant humour they all posted to Rome; and intending, by their secret and sudden arrival, to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife, though it were late in the night, spinning amongst her maids: the other ladies were all found dancing and revelling, or in several disports. Whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius being inflamed with Lucrece' beauty, yet smothering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp; from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself, and was, according to his estate, royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stealeth into her chamber, violently ravished her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily dispatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius; and finding Lucrece attired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor, and whole manner of his dealing, and withal suddenly stabbed herself. Which done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins; and bearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the people with the doer and manner of the vile deed, with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the king: wherewith the people were so moved, that with one consent and a general acclamation the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

FROM the besieged Ardea all in post,
Borne by the trustless wings of false desire,
Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman
host,
And to Collatium bears the lightless fire
Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire,
And girdle with embracing flames the waist
Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

Haply that name of chaste unhappily set
This bateless edge on his keen appetite;

When Collatine unwisely did not let 10
To praise the clear unmatched red and
white
Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight,
Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties,
With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.
For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent,
Unlock'd the treasure of his happy state;
What priceless wealth the heavens had him
lent
In the possession of his beauteous mate;

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Reckoning his fortune at such high-proud rate,
That kings might be espoused to more fame, 20
But king nor peer to such a peerless dame.

O happiness enjoy'd but of a few!
And, if possess'd, as soon decay'd and done
As is the morning's silver-melting dew
Against the golden splendour of the sun;
An expir'd date, cancell'd ere well begun:
Honor and beauty, in the owner's arms,
Are weakly fortress'd from a world of harms.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an orator; 30
What needeth then apologies be made
To set forth that which is so singular?
Or why is Collatine the publisher
Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown
From thievish ears, because it is his own?

Perchance his boast of Lucrece' sovereignty
Suggested this proud issue of a king;
For by our ears our hearts oft tainted be:
Perchance that envy of so rich a thing,
Braving compare, disdainfully did sting 40
His high-pitch'd thoughts, that meaner men should vaunt
That golden hap which their superiors
want.

But some untimely thought did instigate
His all-too-timeless speed, if none of those:
His honour, his affairs, his friends, his state,
Neglected all, with swift intent he goes
To quench the coal which in his liver glows.
O! rash false heat, wrapp'd in repentant
cold,
Thy hasty spring still blasts, and ne'er grows old.

When at Collatium this false lord arriv'd, 50
Well was he welcom'd by the Roman dame,
Within whose face beauty and virtue striv'd
Which of them both should underprop her
fame:

When virtue bragg'd, beauty would blush
for shame;
When beauty boasted blushes, in despite Virtue would stain that o'er with silver
white.

But beauty, in that white intitled,
From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field;

Then virtue claims from beauty beauty's red,
Which virtue gave the golden age to gild 60
Their silver cheeks, and call'd it then their shield;

Teaching them thus to use it in the fight,
When shame assail'd, the red should fence the white.

This heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen,
Argu'd by beauty's red and virtue's white
Of either's colour was the other queen,
Proving from world's minority their right:

Yet their ambition makes them still to fight;
The sovereignty of either being so great,
That oft they interchange each other's seat. 70

This silent war of lilies and of roses,
Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field,
In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses;
Where, lest between them both it should be
kill'd,

The coward captive vanquished doth yield
To those two armies that would let him go.
Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Now thinks he that her husband's shallow
tongue,

The niggard prodigal that prais'd her so,
In that high task hath done her beauty
wrong, 80

Which far exceeds his barren skill to show:
Therefore that praise which Collatine doth owe

Enchanted Tarquin answers with surmise,
In silent wonder of still-gazing eyes.

This earthly saint, adored by this devil,
Little suspecteth the false worshipper;
For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream on evil,

Birds never lim'd no secret bushes fear:
So guiltless she securely gives good cheer
And reverent welcome to her princely guest, 90

Whose inward ill no outward harm ex-
press'd:

For that he colour'd with his high estate,
Hiding base sin in plaits of majesty;
That nothing in him seem'd inordinate,
Save sometime too much wonder of his eye,
Which, having all, all could not satisfy;
But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store,
That, cloy'd with much, he pineth still for
more.

But she, that never cop'd with stranger eyes,
Could pick no meaning from their parling
looks, 100

Nor read the subtle-shining secrecies
Writ in the glassy margents of such books.
She touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd no
hooks;

Nor could she moralize his wanton sight,
More than his eyes were open'd to the light.

He stories to her ears her husband's fame,
Won in the fields of fruitful Italy;

And decks with praises Collatine's high
name,

Made glorious by his manly chivalry
With bruised arms and wreaths of victory: 110

Her joy with heav'd-up hand she doth express,

And, wordless, so greets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming thither,
He makes excuses for his being there:
No cloudy show of stormy blustering weather

Doth yet in his fair welkin once appear;
Till sable Night, mother of Dread and Fear,
Upon the world dim darkness doth display,

And in her vaulty prison stows the Day.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed, 120
Intending weariness with heavy spright;
For after supper long he questioned With modest Lucrece, and wore out the
night:

Now leaden slumber with life's strength
doth fight,

And every one to rest themselves betake,
Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds, that wake.

As one of which doth Tarquin lie revolving
The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining;
Yet ever to obtain his will resolving,
Though weak-built hopes persuade him to abstaining:

Despair to gain doth traffic oft for gaining;
And when great treasure is the meed
propos'd,

Though death be adjunct, there's no
death suppos'd.

Those that much covet are with gain so fond,

For what they have not, that which they possess

They scatter and unloose it from their bond,
And so, by hoping more, they have but less;
Or, gaining more, the profit of excess

Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain,
That they prove bankrupt in this poor-rich gain. 140

The aim of all is but to nurse the life
With honor, wealth, and ease, in waning
age;

And in this aim there is such thwarting
strife,

That one for all, or all for one, we gage;
As life for honour in fell battle's rage;

Honour for wealth; and oft that wealth
doth cost

The death of all, and all together lost.

So that in venturing ill we leave to be
The things we are for that which we expect;
And this ambitious foul infirmity, 150

In having much, torments us with defect
Of that we have: so then we do neglect

The thing we have; and, all for want of
wit,

Make something nothing by augmenting
it.

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make,
Pawning his honour to obtain his lust,

And for himself he must forsake:
Then where is truth, if there be no self-
trust?

When shall he think to find a stranger just,
When he himself himself confounds,

betrays 160

To slanderous tongues and wretched hateful days?

Now stole upon the time the dead of night,
When heavy sleep had clos'd up mortal
eyes;

No comfortable star did lend his light,
No noise but owls' and wolves' death-bod-
ing cries;

Now serves the season that they may surprise

The silly lambs; pure thoughts are dead and still,

While lust and murder wake to stain and kill.

And now this lustful lord leap'd from his
bed,

Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm; 170
Is madly toss'd between desire and dread;
Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other feareth
harm;

But honest fear, bewitch'd with lust's foul
charm,

Doth too too oft betake him to retire,
Beaten away by brain-sick rude desire.

His falchion on a flint he softly smiteth,
That from the cold stone sparks of fire do
fly;

Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth,
Which must be lode-star to his lustful eye;

And to the flame thus speaks advisedly: 180
'As from this cold flint I enforc'd this fire,

So Lucrece must I force to my desire.'

Here pale with fear he doth premeditate
The dangers of his loathsome enterprise,
And in his inward mind he doth debate

What following sorrow may on this arise:
Then looking scornfully, he doth despise

His naked armour of still-slaughter'd lust,
And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust: 189

'Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not
To darken her whose light excellet thine;

And die, unhallow'd thoughts, before you blot

With your uncleanness that which is divine;
Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine:

Let fair humanity abhor the deed
That spots and stains love's modest snow-white weed.

'O shame to knighthood and to shining
arms!

O foul dishonour to my household's grave!
O impious act, including all foul harms!

A martial man to be soft fancy's slave! 200
True valour still a true respect should have;

Then my digression is so vile, so base,
That it will live engraven in my face.

'Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive,
And be an eye-sore in my golden coat;

Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive,

To cipher me how fondly I did dote;
That my posterity, sham'd with the note,

Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no sin 209

To wish that I their father had not been.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

'What win I if I gain the thing I seek?
A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting joy.
Who buys a minute's mirth to wail a week?
Or sells eternity to get a toy?
For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy?

Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown,
Would with the sceptre straight be struck-en down?

'If Collatinus dream of my intent,
Will he not wake, and in a desperate rage
Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent? 220
This siege that hath engirt his marriage,
This blur to youth, this sorrow to the sage,
This dying virtue, this surviving shame, Whose crime will bear an ever-during
blame?

'O! what excuse can my invention make,
When thou shalt charge me with so black a
deed?
Will not my tongue be mute, my frail joints
shake,
Mine eyes forgo their light, my false heart
bleed?
The guilt being great, the fear doth still exceed;
And extreme fear can neither fight nor
fly, 230
But coward-like with trembling terror die.

'Had Collatinus kill'd my son or sire,
Or lain in ambush to betray my life,
Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
Might have excuse to work upon his wife,
As in revenge or quittal of such strife:
But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend,
The shame and fault finds no excuse nor
end.

'Shameful it is; ay, if the fact be known:
Hateful it is; there is no hate in loving: 240
I'll beg her love; but she is not her own:
The worst is but denial and reproving:
My will is strong, past reason's weak removing.

Who fears a sentence, or an old man's
saw,
Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe.'

Thus, graceless, holds he disputation
'Tween frozen conscience and hot-burning
will,
And with good thoughts makes dispensation,
Urging the worse sense for vantage still;
Which in a moment doth confound and
kill 250
All pure effects, and doth so far proceed,
That what is vile shows like a virtuous
deed.

Quoth he, 'She took me kindly by the hand,
And gaz'd for tidings in my eager eyes,
Fearing some hard news from the war-like band,
Where her beloved Collatinus lies.

O! how her fear did make her colour
rise:

First red as roses that on lawn we lay,
Then white as lawn, the roses took away.

'And how her hand, in my hand being lock'd,
Forc'd it to tremble with her loyal fear! 260
Which struck her sad, and then it faster
rock'd,

Until her husband's welfare she did hear;
Whereat she smiled with so sweet a
cheer,

That had Narcissus seen her as she stood, Self-love had never drown'd him in the flood.

'Why hunt I then for colour or excuses?
All orators are dumb when beauty pleadeth;
Poor wretches have remorse in poor abuses;
Love thrives not in the heart that shadows
dreadeth: 270

Affection is my captain, and he leadeth;
And when his gaudy banner is display'd,
The coward fights and will not be dis-may'd.

'Then, childish fear, avaunt! debating, die!
Respect and reason, wait on wrinkled age!
My heart shall never countermand mine
eye:

Sad pause and deep regard beseem the sage;
My part is youth, and beats these from the stage.

Desire my pilot is, beauty my prize;
Then who fears sinking where such treasure lies?' 280

As corn o'ergrown by weeds, so heedful
fear

Is almost chok'd by unresisted lust.
Away he steals with open listening ear,
Full of foul hope and full of fond mistrust;
Both which, as servitors to the unjust,
So cross him with their opposite persua-
sion,

That now he vows a league, and now invasion.

Within his thought her heavenly image sits,

And in the self-same seat sits Collatine:
That eye which looks on her confounds his wits; 290

That eye which him beholds, as more
divine,

Unto a view so false will not incline;
But with a pure appeal seeks to the heart,
Which once corrupted takes the worse
part;

And therein heartens up his servile powers,
Who, flatter'd by their leader's jocund show,
Stuff up his lust, as minutes fill up hours;
And as their captain, so their pride doth
grow,

Paying more slavish tribute than they owe.
By reprobate desire thus madly led, 300
The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece'
bed.

The locks between her chamber and his will,
 Each one by him enforc'd, retires his ward;
 But as they open they all rate his ill,
 Which drives the creeping thief to some regard:
 The threshold grates the door to have him heard;
 Night-wandering weasels shriek to see him there;
 They fright him, yet he still pursues his fear.

As each unwilling portal yields him way,
 Through little vents and crannies of the place
 The wind wars with his torch to make him stay,
 And blows the smoke of it into his face,
 Extinguishing his conduct in this case;
 But his hot heart, which fond desire doth scorch,
 Puffs forth another wind that fires the torch:

And being lighted, by the light he spies
 Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks:
 He takes it from the rushes where it lies,
 And gripping it, the needl his finger pricks;
 As who should say, 'This glove to wanton tricks
 Is not inur'd; return again in haste;
 Thou see'st our mistress' ornaments are chaste.'

But all these poor forbiddings could not stay him;
 He in the worst sense construes their denial:
 The doors, the wind, the glove, that did delay him,
 He takes for accidental things of trial;
 Or as those bars which stop the hourly dial,
 Who with a ling'ring stay his course doth let,
 Till every minute pays the hour his debt.

'So, so,' quoth he, 'these lets attend the time,
 Like little frosts that sometime threat the spring,
 To add a more rejoicing to the prime,
 And give the sneaped birds more cause to sing.
 Pain pays the income of each precious thing;
 Huge rocks, high winds, strong pirates, shelves and sands,
 The merchant fears, ere rich at home he lands.'

Now is he come unto the chamber door,
 That shuts him from the heaven of his thought,
 Which with a yielding latch, and with no more,
 Hath barr'd him from the blessed thing he sought.
 So from himself impiety hath wrought,
 That for his prey to pray he doth begin,
 As if the heavens should countenance his sin.

But in the midst of his unfruitful prayer,
 Having solicited the eternal power
 That his foul thoughts might compass his fair fair,
 And they would stand auspicious to the hour,
 Even there he starts: quoth he, 'I must de-flower:
 The powers to whom I pray abhor this fact,
 How can they then assist me in the act? 350

'Then Love and Fortune be my gods, my guide!
 My will is back'd with resolution:
 Thoughts are but dreams till their effects be tried;
 The blackest sin is clear'd with absolution;
 Against love's fire fear's frost hath dissolution.
 The eye of heaven is out, and misty night
 Covers the shame that follows sweet delight.'

This said, his guilty hand pluck'd up the latch,
 And with his knee the door he opens wide.
 The dove sleeps fast that this night-owl will catch:
 Thus treason works ere traitors be espied.
 Who sees the lurking serpent steps aside;
 But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such thing,
 Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting.

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks,
 And gazeth on her yet unstained bed.
 The curtains being close, about he walks,
 Rolling his greedy eyeballs in his head;
 By their high treason is his heart misled;
 Which gives the watch-word to his hand
 full soon,
 To draw the cloud that hides the silver moon.

Look, as the fair and fiery-pointed sun,
 Rushing from forth a cloud, bereaves our sight;
 Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes begun
 To wink, being blinded with a greater light;
 Whether it is that she reflects so bright,
 That dazzleth them, or else some shame supposed,
 But blind they are, and keep themselves enclosed.

O! had they in that darksome prison died,
 Then had they seen the period of their ill; 360
 Then Collatine again, by Lucrece' side,
 In his clear bed might have reposed still:
 But they must ope, this blessed league to kill,
 And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight
 Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Her lily hand her rosy cheek lies under,
Cozening the pillow of a lawful kiss;
Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,

Swelling on either side to want his bliss;
Between whose hills her head entombed
is: 390

Where, like a virtuous monument, she lies,
To be admir'd of lewd unhallow'd eyes.

Without the bed her other fair hand was,
On the green coverlet; whose perfect white
Show'd like an April daisy on the grass,
With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night.
Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheath'd their
light,

And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her breath; 400

O modest wantons! wanton modesty!
Showing life's triumph in the map of death,
And death's dim look in life's mortality:
Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,

As if between them twain there were no
strife,

But that life liv'd in death, and death in
life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with
blue,

A pair of maiden worlds unconquered, Save of their lord no bearing yoke they knew,

And him by oath they truly honoured. 410
These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred;

Who, like a foul usurper, went about
From this fair throne to heave the owner
out.

What could he see but mightily he noted?

What did he note but strongly he desir'd?

What he beheld, on that he firmly doted,

And in his will his wilful eye he tir'd.

With more than admiration he admir'd

Her azure veins, her alabaster skin

Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled
chin. 420

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey,
Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay,
His rage of lust by gazing qualified;
Slack'd, not suppress'd; for standing by her
side,

His eye, which late this mutiny restrains,
Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins:

And they, like straggling slaves for pillage
fighting,

Obdurate vassals fell exploits effecting,
In bloody death and ravishment delight-
ing, 430

Nor children's tears nor mother's groans respecting,

Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting;
Anon his beating heart, alarm striking,
Gives the hot charge and bids them do their liking.

His drumming heart cheers up his burning
eye,

His eye commends the leading to his hand;
His hand, as proud of such a dignity,

Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his
stand

On her bare breast, the heart of all her land;
Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale, 440

Left their round turrets destitute and pale.

They, mustering to the quiet cabinet
Where their dear governess and lady lies,

Do tell her she is dreadfully beset,
And fright her with confusion of their cries;

She, much amaz'd, breaks ope her lock'd-up
eyes,

Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold,
Are by his flaming torch dimm'd and controll'd.

Imagine her as one in dead of night
From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking, 450

That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly
sprite,

Whose grim aspect sets every joint a-shaking;

What terror 't is! but she, in worse taking,
From sleep disturbed, heedfully doth view

The sight which makes supposed terror
true.

Wrapp'd and confounded in a thousand
fears,

Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies;
She dares not look; yet, winking, there appears

Quick-shifting anticks, ugly in her eyes:
Such shadows are the weak brain's forgeries; 460

Who angry that the eyes fly from their lights,

In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights.

His hand, that yet remains upon her breast,
Rude ram to batter such an ivory wall!

May feel her heart, poor citizen, distress'd,
Wounding itself to death, rise up and fall,

Beating her bulk, that his hand shakes
withal.

This moves in him more rage and lesser
pity,

To make the breach and enter this sweet city.

First, like a trumpet, doth his tongue
begin 470

To sound a parley to his heartless foe;
Who o'er the white sheet peers her whiter
chin,

The reason of this rash alarm to know,

Which he by dumb demeanour seeks to show;
But she with vehement prayers urgeth still,
Under what colour he commits this ill.

Thus he replies: 'The colour in thy face,
That even for anger makes the lily pale,
And the red rose blush at her own disgrace,
Shall plead for me and tell my loving tale;
Under that colour am I come to scale
Thy never-conquer'd fort; the fault is thine,
For those thine eyes betray thee unto mine.

'Thus I forestall thee, if thou mean to chide;
Thy beauty hath ensnar'd thee to this night,
Where thou with patience must my will abide,
My will that marks thee for my earth's delight,
Which I to conquer sought with all my might;
But as reproof and reason beat it dead,
By thy bright beauty was it newly bred.

'I see what crosses my attempt will bring;
I know what thorns the growing rose defends;
I think the honey guarded with a sting;
All this, beforehand, counsel comprehends;
But will is deaf and hears no heedful friends;
Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty,
And dotes on what he looks, 'gainst law or duty.

'I have debated, even in my soul,
What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed;
But nothing can affection's course control,
Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.
I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
Reproach, disdain and deadly enmity;
Yet strive I to embrace mine infamy.'

This said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade,
Which like a falcon towering in the skies,
Coucheth the fowl below with his wings' shade,
Whose crooked beak threatens if he mount he dies;
So under his insulting falchion lies Harmless Lucretia, marking what he tells
With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcons' bells.

'Lucrece,' quoth he, 'this night I must enjoy thee;
If thou deny, then force must work my way,
For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee;
That done, some worthless slave of thine I'll slay,

To kill thine honour with thy life's decay;
And in thy dead arms do I mean to place him,
Swearing I slew him, seeing thee embrace him.

'So thy surviving husband shall remain
The scornful mark of every open eye;
Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain,
Thy issue blurr'd with nameless bastardy;
And thou, the author of their obloquy,
Shalt have thy trespass cited up in rimes,
And sung by children in succeeding times.

'But if thou yield, I rest thy secret friend;
The fault unknown is as a thought unacted;
A little harm done to a great good end
For lawful policy remains unacted.
The poisonous simple sometimes is compacted
In a pure compound; being so applied,
His venom in effect is purified.

'Then for thy husband and thy children's sake,
Tender my suit: bequeath not to their lot
The shame that from them no device can take,
The blemish that will never be forgot;
Worse than a slavish wipe or birth-hour's blot:
For marks descried in men's nativity
Are nature's faults, not their own infamy.'

Here with a cockatrice' dead-killing eye
He rouseth up himself and makes a pause;
While she, the picture of pure piety,
Like a white hind under the gripe's sharp claws,
Pleads in a wilderness where are no laws,
To the rough beast that knows no gentle right,
Nor aught obeys but his foul appetite.

But when a black-fac'd cloud the world doth threat
In his dim mist the aspiring mountains hiding,
From earth's dark womb some gentle gust doth get,
Which blows these pitchy vapours from their biding,
Hindering their present fall by this dividing;
So his unhallow'd haste her words delays,
And moody Pluto winks while Orpheus plays.

Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but dally,
While in his hold-fast foot the weak mouse panteth;
Her sad behaviour feeds his vulture folly,
A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth;
His ear her prayers admits, but his heart granteth
No penetrable entrance to her plaining:
Tears harden lust though marble wear with raining.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fix'd
In the remorseless wrinkles of his face;
Her modest eloquence with sighs is mix'd,
Which to her oratory adds more grace.
She puts the period often from his place;
And midst the sentence so her accent
breaks,
That twice she doth begin ere once she speaks.

She conjures him by high almighty Jove,
By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friend-
ship's oath,
By her untimely tears, her husband's
love, 570
By holy human law, and common troth,
By heaven and earth, and all the power of
both,
That to his borrow'd bed he make retire,
And stoop to honour, not to foul desire.

Quoth she, 'Reward not hospitality
With such black payment as thou hast pretended;
Mud not the fountain that gave drink to
thee;
Mar not the thing that cannot be amended;
End thy ill aim before thy shoot be ended;
He is no woodman that doth bend his
bow 580
To strike a poor unseasonable doe.

'My husband is thy friend, for his sake spare me;
Thyself art mighty, for thine own sake leave
me;
Myself a weakling, do not then ensnare
me;
Thou look'st not like deceit, do not deceive
me:
My sighs, like whirlwinds, labour hence to heave thee.
If ever man were mov'd with woman's moans,
Be moved with my tears, my sighs, my groans:

'All which together, like a troubled ocean,
Beat at thy rocky and wreck-threatening
heart, 590
To soften it with their continual motion;
For stones dissolv'd to water do convert.
O! if no harder than a stone thou art,
Melt at my tears and be compassionate;
Soft pity enters at an iron gate.

'In Tarquin's likeness I did entertain thee;
Hast thou put on his shape to do him shame?
To all the host of heaven I complain me, Thou wrong'st his honour, wound'st his princely name:
Thou art not what thou seem'st; and if the
same, 600
Thou seem'st not what thou art, a god, a
king;
For kings like gods should govern every thing.

'How will thy shame be seeded in thine
age,
When thus thy vices bud before thy spring!
If in thy hope thou dar'st do such outrage,
What dar'st thou not when once thou art a
king?
O! be remember'd; no outrageous thing
From vassal actors can be wip'd away;
Then kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay.

'This deed will make thee only lov'd for
fear;
But happy monarchs still are fear'd for
love: 610
With foul offenders thou perforce must
bear,
When they in thee the like offences prove:
If but for fear of this, they will remove;
For princes are the glass, the school, the
book,
Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read,
do look.

'And wilt thou be the school where lust shall learn?
Must he in thee read lectures of such shame?
Wilt thou be glass wherein it shall discern Authority for sin, warrant for blame, 620
To privilege dishonour in thy name?
Thou back'st reproach against long-living laud,
And mak'st fair reputation but a bawd.

'Hast thou command? by him that gave it
thee,
From a pure heart command thy rebel will:
Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity,
For it was lent thee all that brood to kill.
Thy princely office how canst thou fulfil,
When, pattern'd by thy fault, foul sin may
say,
He learn'd to sin, and thou didst teach the way? 630

'Think but how vile a spectacle it were,
To view thy present trespass in another.
Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear;
Their own transgressions partially they smother:
This guilt would seem death-worthy in thy
brother.
O! how are they wrapp'd in with infamies
That from their own misdeeds askance their eyes.

'To thee, to thee, my heav'd-up hands appeal,
Not to seducing lust, thy rash relier;
I sue for exil'd majesty's repeal; 640
Let him return, and flattering thoughts retire:
His true respect will prison false desire,
And wipe the dim mist from thy doting
eyne,
That thou shalt see thy state and pity
mine.'

'Have done,' quoth he; 'my uncontrolled tide
 Turns not, but swells the higher by this let,
 Small lets are soon blown out, huge fires abide,
 And with the wind in greater fury fret:
 The petty streams that pay a daily debt
 To thy salt sovereign, with their fresh falls' haste 650
 Add to his flow, but alter not his taste.'

'Thou art,' quoth she, 'a sea, a sovereign
 king;
 And, lo! there falls into thy boundless flood Black lust, dishonour, shame, misgovern-
 ing,
 Who seek to taste the ocean of thy blood.
 If all these petty ills shall change thy good,
 Thy sea within a puddle's womb is hears'd,
 And not the puddle in thy sea dispers'd.'

'So shall these slaves be king, and thou their slave;
 Thou nobly base, they basely dignified; 660
 Thou their fair life, and they thy fouler
 grave;
 Thou loathed in their shame, they in thy
 pride:
 The lesser thing should not the greater hide;
 The cedar stoops not to the base shrub's foot,
 But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.'

'So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state'—
 'No more,' quoth he; 'by heaven, I will not hear thee;
 Yield to my love; if not, enforced hate,
 Instead of love's coy touch, shall rudely
 tear thee; 669
 That done, despitefully I mean to bear thee
 Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
 To be thy partner in this shameful doom.'

This said, he sets his foot upon the light,
 For light and lust are deady enemies:
 Shame folded up in blind concealing night,
 When most unseen, then most doth tyrannize.
 The wolf hath seiz'd his prey, the poor lamb
 cries:
 Till with her own white fleece her voice
 controll'd
 Entombs her outcry in her lips' sweet fold:

For with the nightly linen that she wears 680
 He pens her piteous clamours in her head,
 Cooling his hot face in the chastest tears
 That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed.
 O! that prone lust should stain so pure a
 bed:
 The spots whereof could weeping purify,
 Her tears should drop on them perpetually.

But she hath lost a dearer thing than life,
 And he hath won what he would lose again;
 This forced league doth force a further strife;
 This momentary joy breeds months of pain;

This hot desire converts to cold disdain: 691
 Pure Chastity is rifled of her store,
 And Lust, the thief, far poorer than before.

Look! as the full-fed hound or gorged hawk,
 Unapt for tender smell or speedy flight,
 Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk
 The prey wherein by nature they delight;
 So surfeit-taking Tarquin fares this night:
 His taste delicious, in digestion souring, Devours his will, that liv'd by foul devour-
 ing. 700

O! deeper sin than bottomless conceit
 Can comprehend in still imagination;
 Drunken Desire must vomit his receipt,
 Ere he can see his own abomination.
 While Lust is in his pride, no exclamation
 Can curb his heat or rein his rash desire,
 Till like a jade Self-will himself doth tire.

And then with lank and lean discolour'd
 cheek,
 With heavy eye, knit brow, and strengthless
 pace, 709
 Feeble Desire, all recreant, poor, and meek,
 Like to a bankrupt beggar wails his case:
 The flesh being proud, Desire doth fight with Grace,
 For there it revels; and when that decays,
 The guilty rebel for remission prays.

So fares it with this faultful lord of Rome,
 Who this accomplishment so hotly chas'd;
 For now against himself he sounds this doom,
 That through the length of times he stands
 disgrac'd;
 Besides, his soul's fair temple is defac'd;
 To whose weak ruins muster troops of cares, 720
 To ask the spotted princess how she fares.

She says, her subjects with foul insurrec-
 tion
 Have batter'd down her consecrated wall,
 And by their mortal fault brought in subjection
 Her immortality, and made her thrall
 To living death and pain perpetual:
 Which in her prescience she controlled
 still,
 But her foresight could not forstall their
 will.

Even in this thought through the dark night
 he stealeth,
 A captive victor that hath lost in gain; 730
 Bearing away the wound that nothing
 healeth,
 The scar that will despite of cure remain;
 Leaving his spoil perplex'd in greater pain.
 She bears the load of lust he left behind,
 And he the burden of a guilty mind.

He like a thievish dog creeps sadly thence,
 She like a wearied lamb lies panting there;
 He scowls and hates himself for his offence,
 She desperate with her nails her flesh doth tear;

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

He faintly flies, sweating with guilty fear, 740
She stays, exclaiming on the direful night;
He runs, and chides his vanish'd, loath'd
delight.

He thence departs a heavy convertite,
She there remains a hopeless castaway;
He in his speed looks for the morning light,
She prays she never may behold the day;
'For day,' quoth she, 'night's scapes doth open lay,

And my true eyes have never practis'd
how

To cloak offences with a cunning brow.

'They think not but that every eye can see
The same disgrace which they themselves
behold; 751

And therefore would they still in darkness
be,

To have their unseen sin remain untold;
For they their guilt with weeping will unfold,

And grave, like water that doth eat in
steel,

Upon my cheeks what helpless shame I
feel.'

Here she exclaims against repose and rest,
And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind.
She wakes her heart by beating on her
breast,

And bids it leap from thence where it may find 760

Some purer chest to close so pure a mind.
Frantic with grief thus breathes she forth her spite

Against the unseen secrecy of night:

'O comfort-killing Night, image of hell!
Dim register and notary of shame!
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell!
Vast sin-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!
Blind muffled bawd! dark harbour for de-
fame!

Grim cave of death! whispering conspirator
With close-tongu'd treason and the ravisher! 770

'O hateful, vaporous, and foggy Night!
Since thou art guilty of my cureless crime,
Muster thy mists to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportion'd course of
time;

Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb
His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed,
Knit poisonous clouds about his golden
head.

'With rotten damps ravish the morning air;
Let their exhal'd unwholesome breaths
make sick

The life of purity, the supreme fair, 780
Ere he arrive his weary noontide prick;
And let thy misty vapours march so thick,

That in their smoky ranks his smother'd
light

May set at noon and make perpetual
night.

'Were Tarquin Night, as he is but Night's
child,

The silver-shining queen he would distain;
Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defil'd,

Through Night's black bosom should not peep again:

So should I have co-partners in my pain;
And fellowship in woe doth woe assuage, 790

As palmers' chat makes short their pilgrimage.

'Where now I have no one to blush with me,
To cross their arms and hang their heads
with mine,

To mask their brows and hide their infamy;
But I alone alone must sit and pine,

Seasoning the earth with showers of silver brine,

Mingling my talk with tears, my grief
with groans,

Poor wasting monuments of lasting
moans.

'O Night! thou furnace of foul-reeking
smoke,

Let not the jealous Day behold that face 800
Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak

Immodestly lies martyr'd with disgrace:
Keep still possession of thy gloomy place,

That all the faults which in thy reign are
made

May likewise be sepulchred in thy shade.

'Make me not object to the tell-tale Day!
The light will show, character'd in my brow,

The story of sweet chastity's decay,
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow:

Yea, the illiterate, that know not how 810
To cipher what is writ in learned books,

Will quote my loathsome trespass in my looks.

'The nurse, to still her child, will tell my story,

And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's
name;

The orator, to deck his oratory,
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's shame;

Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defame,
Will tie the hearers to attend each line,

How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

'Let my good name, that senseless reputation, 820

For Collatine's dear love be kept unspotted:
If that be made a theme for disputation,

The branches of another root are rotted,
And undeserv'd reproach to him allotted

That is as clear from this attain of mine,
As I ere this was pure to Collatine.

'O unseen shame! invisible disgrace!
O unfelt sore! crest-wounded, private scar!

Reproach is stamp'd in Collatinus' face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mot afar, 830

How he in peace is wounded, not in war.

Alas! how many bear such shameful blows,
Which not themselves, but he that gives them knows.

'If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft.
My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee,
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But robb'd and ransack'd by injurious theft:
In thy weak hive a wandering wasp hath crept,
And suck'd the honey which thy chaste bee kept. 840

'Yet am I guilty of thy honour's wrack;
Yet for thy honour did I entertain him;
Coming from thee, I could not put him back,
For it had been dishonour to disdain him:
Besides, of weariness he did complain him,
And talk'd of virtue: O! unlook'd-for evil,
When virtue is profan'd in such a devil.

'Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud?
Or hateful cuckoos hatch in sparrows' nests?
Or toads infect fair founts with venom mud?
Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts? 851
Or kings be breakers of their own behests?
But no perfection is so absolute,
That some impurity doth not pollute.

'The aged man that coffers-up his gold
Is plagu'd with cramps and gout and painful fits;
And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
But like still-pining Tantalus he sits,
And useless barns the harvest of his wits;
Having no other pleasure of his gain 860
But torment that it cannot cure his pain.

'So then he hath it when he cannot use it,
And leaves it to be master'd by his young;
Who in their pride do presently abuse it:
Their father was too weak, and they too strong,
To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long.
The sweets we wish for turn to loathed sours
Even in the moment that we call them ours.

'Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring;
Unwholesome weeds take root with precious flowers; 870
The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing;
What virtue breeds iniquity devours:
We have no good that we can say is ours,
But ill-annexed Opportunity
Or kills his life, or else his quality.

'O Opportunity! thy guilt is great,
'T is thou that execut'st the traitor's treason;
Thou sett'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;
Whoever plots the sin, thou point'st the season;

'T is thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason;
And in thy shady cell, where none may spy him, 880
Sits Sin to seize the souls that wander by him.

'Thou mak'st the vestal violate her oath;
Thou blow'st the fire when temperance is thaw'd;
Thou smother'st honesty, thou murder'st troth;
Thou foul abettor! thou notorious bawd!
Thou plantest scandal and displacest laud:
Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,
Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief!

'Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame, 890
Thy private feasting to a public fast,
Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name,
Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste:
Thy violent vanities can never last.
How comes it then, vile Opportunity,
Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee?

'When wilt thou be the humble suppliant's friend,
And bring him where his suit may be obtain'd?
When wilt thou sort an hour great strifes to end?
Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chain'd? 900
Give physic to the sick, ease to the pain'd?
The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out for thee;
But they ne'er meet with Opportunity.

'The patient dies while the physician sleeps;
The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds;
Justice is feasting while the widow weeps;
Advice is sporting while infection breeds:
Thou grant'st no time for charitable deeds:
Wrath, envy, treason, rape, and murder's rages,
Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages. 910

'When Truth and Virtue have to do with thee,
A thousand crosses keep them from thy aid:
They buy thy help; but Sin ne'er gives a fee, 870
He gratis comes; and thou art well appaid
As well to hear as grant what he hath said.
My Collatine would else have come to me
When Tarquin did, but he was stay'd by thee.

'Guilty thou art of murder and of theft,
Guilty of perjury and subornation,
Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift, 820
Guilty of incest, that abomination;
An accessory by thine inclination
To all sins past, and all that are to come,
From the creation to the general doom.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

'Misshapen Time, copesmate of ugly Night,
Swift subtle post, carrier of grisly care,
Eater of youth, false slave to false delight,
Base watch of woes, sin's pack-horse, vir-
tue's snare;

Thou nursest all, and murder'st all that are;
O! hear me then, injurious, shifting Time,
Be guilty of my death, since of my crime.

'Why hath thy servant, Opportunity, 932
Betray'd the hours thou gav'st me to repose?
Cancell'd my fortunes, and enchained me
To endless date of never-ending woes?
Time's office is to fine the hate of foes;
To eat up errors by opinion bred,
Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed.

'Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood and bring truth to 840
light,
To stamp the seal of time in aged things,
To wake the morn and sentinel the night,
To wrong the wronger till he render right,
To ruinat proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers;

'To fill with worm-holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things,
To blot old books and alter their contents,
To pluck the quills from ancient ravens' 951
wings,
To dry the old oak's sap and cherish springs,
To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel,
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's
wheel;

'To show the beldam daughters of her
daughter,
To make the child a man, the man a child,
To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
To tame the unicorn and lion wild, 960
To mock the subtle in themselves beguil'd,
To cheer the ploughman with increaseful crops,
And waste huge stones with little water-
drops.

'Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage, 980
Unless thou could'st return to make amends?
One poor retiring minute in an age
Would purchase thee a thousand thousand
friends,
Lending him wit, that to bad debtors lends:
O! this dread night, would'st thou one hour come back,
I could prevent this storm and shun thy
wrack.

'Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight:
Devise extremes beyond extremity,
To make him curse this cursed crimeful
night: 970
Let glistly shadows his lewd eyes affright,

And the dire thought of his committed
evil
Shape every bush a hideous shapeless
devil.

'Disturb his hours of rest with restless
trances,
Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans;
Let there bechance him pitiful mischances
To make him moan, but pity not his moans;
Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than stones;
And let mild women to him lose their mildness, 979
Wildier to him than tigers in their wildness.

'Let him have time to tear his curled hair,
Let him have time against himself to rave,
Let him have time of Time's help to despair,
Let him have time to live a loathed slave,
Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave,
And time to see one that by alms doth live
Disdain to him disdained scraps to give.

'Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
And merry fools to mock at him resort;
Let him have time to mark how slow time
goes 990
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
His time of folly and his time of sport;
And ever let his unrecalling crime
Have time to wail the abusing of his time.

'O Time! thou tutor both to good and bad, Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st
this ill;
At his own shadow let the thief run mad,
Himself himself seek every hour to kill:
Such wretched hands such wretched blood should spill; 999
For who so base would such an office have
As slanderous deathsman to so base a slave?

'The baser is he, coming from a king,
To shame his hope with deeds degenerate:
The mightier man, the mightier is the thing
That makes him honour'd, or begets him
hate;
For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.
The moon being clouded presently is
miss'd,
But little stars may hide them when they list.

'The crow may bathe his coal-black wings in mire,
And unperceiv'd fly with the filth away; 1010
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay.
Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious day.
Gnats are unnoted wheresoe'er they fly,
But eagles gaz'd upon with every eye.

'Out, idle words! servants to shallow fools,
Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!
Busy yourselves in skill-contending schools;

Debate where leisure serves with dull debaters;

To trembling clients be you mediators: 1000
For me, I force not argument a straw,
Since that my case is past the help of law.

'In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful Night;
In vain I cavil with mine infamy,
In vain I spurn at my confirm'd despise;
This helpless smoke of words doth me no right.

The remedy indeed to do me good
Is to let forth my foul-defiled blood.

'Poor hand, why quiverest thou at this decreel 1030

Honour thyself to rid me of this shame;
For if I die, my honour lives in thee,
But if I live, thou liv'st in my defame;
Since thou could'st not defend thy loyal dame,

And wast afraid to scratch her wicked foe,
Kill both thyself and her for yielding so.'

This said, from her be-tumbled couch she starteth,

To find some desperate instrument of death;
But this no slaughterhouse, no tool imparteth
To make more vent for passage of her breath; 1040

Which, thronging through her lips, so vanisheth

As smoke from Ætna, that in air consumes,

Or that which from discharged cannon fumes.

'In vain,' quoth she, 'I live, and seek in vain
Some happy mean to end a hapless life:
I fear'd by Tarquin's falchion to be slain,
Yet for the self-same purpose seek a knife:
But when I fear'd I was a loyal wife:

So am I now: O no! that cannot be; 1049
Of that true type hath Tarquin rifled me.

'O! that is gone for which I sought to live,
And therefore now I need not fear to die.
To clear this spot by death, at least I give
A badge of fame to slander's livery;
A dying life to living infamy.

Poor helpless help, the treasure stol'n away,

To burn the guiltless casket where it lay!

'Well, well, dear Collatine, thou shalt not know

The stained taste of violated troth;
I will not wrong thy true affection so. 1050
To flatter thee with an infringed oath;
This bastard graff shall never come to growth:

He shall not boast who did thy stock pollute

That thou art doting father of his fruit.

'Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought,
Nor laugh with his companions at thy state;
But thou shalt know thy interest was not bought

Basely with gold, but stol'n from forth thy gate.

For me, I am the mistress of my fate, 1069
And with my trespass never will dispense,
Till life to death acquit my forc'd offence.

'I will not poison thee with my attain't,
Nor fold my fault in cleanly-coin'd excuses;
My sable ground of sin I will not paint,
To hide the truth of this false night's abuses:
My tongue shall utter all; mine eyes, like sluices,

As from a mountain-spring that feeds a dale,

Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure tale.'

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended 1079
The well-tun'd warble of her nightly sorrow,
And solemn night with slow sad gait descended

To ugly hell; when, lo! the blushing morrow

Lends light to all fair eyes that light will borrow:

But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see,
And therefore still in night would cloister'd be.

Revealing day through every cranny spies,
And seems to point her out where she sits weeping;

To whom she sobbing speaks: 'O eye of eyes!

Why pry'st thou through my window? leave thy peeping;

Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping; 1090

Brand not my forehead with thy piercing light,

For day hath nought to do what's done by night.'

Thus cavils she with every thing she sees:
True grief is fond and testy as a child,
Who wayward once, his mood with nought agrees:

Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them mild;

Continuance tames the one; the other wild,
Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging still,

With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep-drenched in a sea of care, 1100
Holds disputation with each thing she views,
And to herself all sorrow doth compare;
No object but her passion's strength renews,

And as one shifts, another straight ensues:
Sometime her grief is dumb and hath no words;

Sometime 't is mad and too much talk affords.

The little birds that tune their morning's joy
Make her moans mad with their sweet melody:

For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy;

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Sad souls are slain in merry company; 1110
Grief best is pleas'd with grief's society:
True sorrow then is feelingly suffic'd
When with like semblance it is sympathy'd.

'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore;
He ten times pines that pines beholding food;
To see the salve doth make the wound ache more;
Great grief grieves most at that would do it good;
Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood,
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks o'erflows;
Grief dallied with nor law nor limit knows.

'You mocking birds,' quoth she, 'your tunes entomb 1121
Within your hollow-swelling feather'd breasts,
And in my hearing be you mute and dumb;
My restless discord loves no stops nor rests;
A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests:
Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears;
Distress likes dumps when time is kept with tears.

'Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment,
Make thy sad grove in my dishevell'd hair:
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment, 1030
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear,
And with deep groans the diapason bear;
For burden-wise I'll hum on Tarquin still,
While thou on Tereus descant'st better skill.

'And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy part
To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart
Will fix a sharp knife to affright mine eye,
Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument, 1140
Shall tune our heart-strings to true languishment.

'And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day,
As shaming any eye should thee behold,
Some dark deep desert, seated from the way,
That knows not parching heat nor freezing cold,
Will we find out; and there we will unfold
To creatures stern sad tunes, to change their kinds:
Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle minds.'

As the poor frightened deer, that stands at gaze,
Wildly determining which way to fly, 1150
Or one encompass'd with a winding maze,
That cannot tread the way out readily;

So with herself is she in mutiny,
To live or die which of the twain were better,
When life is sham'd, and death reproach's debtor.

'To kill myself,' quoth she, 'alack! what were it,
But with my body my poor soul's pollution?
They that lose half with greater patience bear it
Than they whose whole is swallow'd in confusion.
That mother tries a merciless conclusion, 1160
Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one
Will slay the other and be nurse to none.

'My body or my soul, which was the dearer,
When the one pure, the other made divine?
Whose love of either to myself was nearer,
When both were kept for heaven and Collatine?
Ay me! the bark peel'd from the lofty pine,
His leaves will wither and his sap decay;
So must my soul, her bark being peel'd away.

'Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted,
Her mansion batter'd by the enemy; 1171
Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,
Grossly engirt with daring infamy:
Then let it not be call'd impiety,
If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

'Yet die I will not, till my Collatine
Have heard the cause of my untimely death;
That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
Revenge on him that made me stop my breath. 1180
My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath,
Which by him tainted shall for him be spent,
And as his due writ in my testament.

'My honour I'll bequeath unto the knife
That wounds my body so dishonoured.
'Tis honour to deprive dishonour'd life;
The one will live, the other being dead:
So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred;
For in my death I murder shameful scorn:
My shame so dead, mine honour is new-born. 1190

'Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee?
My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
By whose example thou reveng'd may'st be.
How Tarquin must be us'd, read it in me:
Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe,
And for my sake serve thou false Tarquin so.

'This brief abridgement of my will I make:
My soul and body to the skies and ground;
My resolution, husband, do thou take; 1200
Mine honour be the knife's that makes my
wound;
My shame be his that did my fame con-
found;
And all my fame that lives disbursed be
To those that live, and think no shame of
me.

'Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will;
How was I overseen that thou shalt see it!
My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill;
My life's foul deed, my life's fair end shall free it.
Faint not, faint heart, but stoutly say "So be
it:"
Yield to my hand; my hand shall conquer
thee: 1210
Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors be.'

This plot of death when sadly she had laid,
And wip'd the brinish pearl from her bright
eyes,
With untun'd tongue she hoarsely calls her
maid,
Whose swift obedience to her mistress hies;
For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers
flies.
Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid seem
so
As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure good-
morrow, 1219
With soft slow tongue, true mark of modesty,
And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow,
For why her face wore sorrow's livery;
But durst not ask of her audaciously
Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so,
Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd
with woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,
Each flower moisten'd like a melting eye;
Even so the maid with swelling drops 'gan
wet
Her circled eyne, enforc'd by sympathy
Of those fair suns set in her mistress'
sky, 1230
Who in a salt-wav'd ocean quench their
light,
Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand,
Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filling;
One justly weeps, the other takes in hand
No cause but company of her drops spilling;
Their gentle sex to weep are often willing,
Grieving themselves to guess at others'
smarts,
And then they drown their eyes or break
their hearts: 1239

For men have marble, women waxen minds,
And therefore are they form'd as marble
will;
The weak oppress'd, the impression of strange kinds
Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill:
Then call them not the authors of their ill,
No more than wax shall be accounted evil
Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a
devil.

Their smoothness, like a goodly champaign
plain,
Lays open all the little worms that creep;
In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sleep: 1250 Through crystal walls each little mote will
peep:
Though men can cover crimes with bold
stern looks, 1255
Poor women's faces are their own faults'
books.

No man inveigh against the wither'd
flower,
But chide rough winter that the flower hath
kill'd:
Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,
Is worthy blame. O! let it not be hild
Poor women's faults, that they are so fulfill'd With men's abuses: those proud lords, to blame,
Make weak-made women tenants to their shame. 1260

The precedent whereof in Lucrece view,
Assail'd by night with circumstances strong
Of present death, and shame that might ensue
By that her death, to do her husband wrong:
Such danger to resistance did belong,
That dying fear through all her body spread;
And who cannot abuse a body dead?

By this, mild patience bid fair Lucrece speak
To the poor counterfeit of her complaining:
'My girl,' quoth she, 'on what occasion
break 1270
Those tears from thee, that down thy cheeks are raining?
If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining, Know, gentle wench, it small avails my
mood:
If tears could help, mine own would do me
good.

'But tell me, girl, when went,' and there she stay'd
Till after a deep groan, 'Tarquin from
hence?'
'Madam, ere I was up,' replied the maid,
'The more to blame my sluggard negligence;
Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense; Myself was stirring ere the break of
day, 1280
And, ere I rose, was Tarquin gone away.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

'But, lady, if your maid may be so bold,
She would request to know your heaviness.'
'O! peace,' quoth Lucrece: 'if it should be told,

The repetition cannot make it less;
For more it is than I can well express:
And that deep torture may be call'd a hell,
When more is felt than one hath power to tell.

'Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen—
Yet save that labour, for I have them here.
What should I say? One of my husband's
men

Bid thou be ready by and by, to bear
A letter to my lord, my love, my dear:
Bid him with speed prepare to carry it;
The cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ.'

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write,
First hovering o'er the paper with her quill:
Conceit and grief an eager combat fight;
What wit sets down is blotted straight with
will;

This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill:
Much like a press of people at a door
Throng her inventions, which shall go before.

At last she thus begins: 'Thou worthy lord
Of that unworthy wife that greeteth thee,
Health to thy person! next vouchsafe t' afford.

If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see,
Some present speed to come and visit me.
So I commend me from our house in grief:
My woes are tedious, though my words are brief.'

Here folds she up the tenour of her woe, 1310
Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly.
By this short schedule Collatine may
know

Her grief, but not her grief's true quality:
She dares not thereof make discovery,
Lest he should hold it her own gross
abuse,
Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd
excuse.

Besides, the life and feeling of her passion
She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear
her;

When sighs and groans and tears may grace
the fashion

Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her From that suspicion which the world might bear her.

To shun this blot, she would not blot the
letter

With words, till action might become them better.

To see sad sights moves more than hear them told;

For then the eye interprets to the ear
The heavy motion that it doth behold,
When every part a part of woe doth bear:

'T is but a part of sorrow that we hear;
Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords,
And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind
of words.

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ
'At Ardea to my lord, with more than haste.'
The post attends, and she delivers it,
Charging the sour-fac'd groom to hie as fast
As lagging fowls before the northern blast:
Speed more than speed but dull and slow
she deems:
Extremity still urgeth such extremes.

The homely villain court'sies to her low;
And, blushing on her, with a steadfast eye
Receives the scroll without or yea or no, 1340
And forth with bashful innocence doth hie:
But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie
Imagine every eye beholds their blame;
For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her
shame:

When, silly groom! God wot, it was defect
Of spirit, life, and bold audacity.
Such harmless creatures have a true respect
To talk in deeds, while others saucily
Promise more speed, but do it leisurely:
Even so this pattern of the worn-out age Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no words to gag.

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust,
That two red fires in both their faces blaz'd;
She thought he blush'd, as knowing Tarquin's lust,

And, blushing with him, wistly on him
gaz'd;

Her earnest eye did make him more amaz'd:
The more she saw the blood his cheeks
replenish,
The more she thought he spied in her some blemish.

But long she thinks till he return again,
And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone. 1360
The weary time she cannot entertain,
For now 't is stale to sigh, to weep, and
groan:

So woe hath wearied woe, moan tired moan,
That she her plaints a little while doth
stay,
Pausing for means to mourn some newer
way.

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece

Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy;
Before the which is drawn the power of Greece,

For Helen's rape the city to destroy, 1369
Threat'ning cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy;
Which the conceited painter drew so
proud,
As heaven, it seem'd, to kiss the turrets
bow'd.

A thousand lamentable objects there,
In a scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life;
Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear,
Shed for the slaughter'd husband by the wife:

The red blood reek'd, to show the painter's strife;

And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights,

Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the labouring plover
Begrim'd with sweat, and smeared all with dust;

And from the towers of Troy there would appear

The very eyes of men through loop-holes thrust,

Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust:
Such sweet observance in this work was had,

That one might see those far-off eyes look sad.

In great commanders grace and majesty
You might behold, triumphing in their faces;
In youth quick bearing and dexterity; 1389
And here and there the painter interlaces
Pale cowards, marching on with trembling paces;

Which heartless peasants did so well resemble,

That one would swear he saw them quake and tremble.

In Ajax and Ulysses, O! what art
Of physiognomy might one behold;
The face of either cipher'd either's heart;
Their face their manners most expressly told:

In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd;
But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent
Show'd deep regard and smiling government. 1400

There pleading might you see brave Nestor stand,

As 't were encouraging the Greeks to fight;
Making such sober action with his hand,
That it begu'd attention, charm'd the sight.

In speech, it seem'd, his beard, all silver white,

Wagg'd up and down, and from his lips did fly

Thin winding breath, which purl'd up to the sky.

About him were a press of gaping faces,
Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice;

All jointly listening, but with several graces,
As if some mermaid did their ears entice, 1411
Some high, some low, the painter was so nice;

The scalps of many, almost hid behind,
To jump up higher seem'd, to mock the mind.

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head,

His nose being shadow'd by his neighbour's ear;

Here one being throng'd bears back, all boll'n and red;

Another smother'd seems to pelt and swear;
And in their rage such signs of rage they bear,

As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words,
It seem'd they would debate with angry swords. 1421

For much imaginary work was there;
Conceit deceitful, so compact, so kind,
That for Achilles' image stood his spear,
Grip'd in an armed hand; himself behind
Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind:
A hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a head,
Stood for the whole to be imagined.

And from the walls of strong-besieged Troy
When their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field, 1430

Stood many Trojan mothers, sharing joy
To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield;

And to their hope they such odd action yield,

That through their light joy seemed to appear

Like bright things stain'd, a kind of heavy fear.

And from the strand of Dardan, where they fought,

To Simois' reedy banks the red blood ran,
Whose waves to imitate the battle sought
With swelling ridges; and their ranks began 1439

To break upon the galled shore, and than Retire again, till meeting greater ranks
They join and shoot their foam at Simois' banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come,

To find a face where all distress is stell'd.
Many she sees where cares have carved some,

But none where all distress and dolour dwell'd,

Till she despairing Hecuba beheld,
Staring on Priam's wounds with her old eyes,

Which bleeding under Pyrrhus' proud foot lies.

In her the painter had anatomiz'd 1450
Time's ruin, beauty's wreck, and grim care's reign:

Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were disguis'd;

Of what she was no semblance did remain;
Her blue blood chang'd to black in every vein,

Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed,

Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes,
And shapes her sorrow to the beldam's
woes,
Who nothing wants to answer her but cries,
And bitter words to ban her cruel foes: 1480
The painter was no god to lend her those;
And therefore Lucrece swears he did her
wrong.
To give her so much grief and not a
tongue.

'Poor instrument,' quoth she, 'without a sound,
I'll tune thy woes with my lamenting
tongue,
And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted
wound,
And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him
wrong,
And with my tears quench Troy that burns
so long,
And with my knife scratch out the angry
eyes 1469
Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.

'Show me the strumpet that began this stir,
That with my nails her beauty I may tear.
Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur
This load of wrath that burning Troy doth
bear:
Thy eye kindled the fire that burneth here;
And here in Troy, for trespass of thine eye,
The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter
die.

'Why should the private pleasure of some one
Become the public plague of many moe?
Let sin, alone committed, light alone 1480
Upon his head that hath transgressed so;
Let guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe:
For one's offence why should so many fall,
To plague a private sin in general?

'Lo! here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies, Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus
swoonds,
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
And friend to friend gives unadvised
wounds,
And one man's lust these many lives con-
founds:
Had doting Priam check'd his son's
desire, 1490
Troy had been bright with fame and not with fire.'

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted
woes;
For sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell,
Once set on ringing, with his own weight
goes;
Then little strength rings out the doleful
knell:
So Lucrece, set a-work, sad tales doth tell
To pencill'd pensiveness and colour'd
sorrow;
She lends them words, and she their looks doth borrow.

She throws her eyes about the painting
round,
And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament: 1500
At last she sees a wretched image bound,
That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds
lent;
His face, though full of cares, yet show'd
content;
Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he
goes,
So mild, that Patience seem'd to scorn his woes.

In him the painter labour'd with his skill
To hide deceit, and give the harmless show
An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing
still,
A brow unbent that seem'd to welcome woe;
Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled
so 1510
That blushing red no guilty instance gave,
Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts
have.

But, like a constant and confirmed devil,
He entertain'd a show so seeming-just,
And therein so ensconced his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust False-keeping craft and perjury should thrust
Into so bright a day such black-fac'd storms,
Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

The well-skill'd workman this mild image
drew 1520
For perjurd Sinon, whose enchanting story
The credulous old Priam after slew;
Whose words like wildfire burnt the shining glory
Of rich-built Ilion, that the skies were sorry,
And little stars shot from their fixed places,
When their glass fell wherein they view'd their faces.

This picture she advisedly perus'd,
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill,
Saying, some shape in Sinon's was abus'd;
So fair a form lodg'd not a mind so ill: 1530
And still on him she gaz'd, and gazing still,
Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied,
That she concludes the picture was belied.

'It cannot be,' quoth she, 'that so much guile'—
She would have said 'can lurk in such a look';
But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while,
And from her tongue 'can lurk' from 'cannot' took:
'It cannot be,' she in that sense forsook,
And turn'd it thus, 'It cannot be, I find,
But such a face should bear a wicked
mind: 1540

'For even as subtle Sinon here is painted,
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
As if with grief or travail he had fainted,
To me came Tarquin armed; so beguil'd
With outward honesty, but yet defil'd
With inward vice: as Priam him did cherish,
So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did perish.

'Look, look, how listening Priam wets his
eyes,
To see those borrow'd tears that Sinon sheds!
Priam, why art thou old and yet not wise?
For every tear he falls a Trojan bleeds: 1551
His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds;
Those round clear pearls of his, that move
thy pity,
Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy
city.

'Such devils steal effects from lightless
hell;
For Sinon in his fire doth quake with cold,
And in that cold hot-burning fire doth dwell;
These contraries such unity do hold,
Only to flatter fools and make them bold:
So Priam's trust false Sinon's tears doth flatter, 1560
That he finds means to burn his Troy with water.'

Here, all enrag'd, such passion her assails,
That patience is quite beaten from her
breast.
She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails,
Comparing him to that unhappy guest Whose deed hath made herself herself detest:
At last she smilingly with this gives o'er:
'Fool! fool!' quoth she, 'his wounds will not be sore.'

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her
sorrow,
And time doth weary time with her complaining. 1570
She looks for night, and then she longs for
morrow,
And both she thinks too long with her remaining:
Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp
sustaining;
Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom sleeps;
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps.

Which all this time hath overslipp'd her
thought,
That she with painted images hath spent;
Being from the feeling of her own grief
brought
By deep surmise of others' detriment;
Losing her woes in shows of discontent. 1580
It easeth some, though none it ever
cur'd,
To think their dolour others have endur'd.

But now the mindful messenger, come
back,
Brings home his lord and other company;
Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning
black;
And round about her tear-distained eye
Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the sky:
These water-galls in her dim element Foretell new storms to those already spent.

Which when her sad-beholding husband
saw, 1590
Amazedly in her sad face he stares:
Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw,
Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares.
He hath no power to ask her how she fares:
Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance,
Met far from home, wondering each other's chance.

At last he takes her by the bloodless
hand,
And thus begins: 'What uncouth ill event
Hath thee befall'n, that thou dost trembling
stand?
Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour
spent? 1600
Why art thou thus attir'd in discontent?
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness,
And tell thy grief, that we may give redress.'

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow
fire,
Ere once she can discharge one word of
woe;
At length address'd to answer his desire,
She modestly prepares to let them know
Her honour is ta'en prisoner by the foe;
While Collatine and his consorted lords
With sad attention long to hear her words.

And now this pale swan in her watery
nest 1611
Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending.
'Few words,' quoth she, 'shall fit the trespass best,
Where no excuse can give the fault amend-
ing:
In me moe woes than words are now
depending;
And my laments would be drawn out too
long,
To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

'Then be this all the task it hath to say:
Dear husband, in the interest of thy bed
A stranger came, and on that pillow
lay 1620
Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary
head;
And what wrong else may be imagined
By foul enforcement might be done to me,
From that, alas! thy Lucrece is not free.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

'For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight,
With shining falchion in my chamber came
A creeping creature, with a flaming light,
And softly cried "Awake, thou Roman dame
And entertain my love; else lasting shame
On thee and thine this night I will inflict.
If thou my love's desire do contradict. 1631

' "For some hard-favour'd groom of thine," quoth he,
"Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
I'll murder straight, and then I'll slaughter
thee,
And swear I found you where you did fulfil
The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill
The lechers in their deed: this act will be My fame, and thy perpetual infamy."

'With this I did begin to start and cry,
And then against my heart he set his sword,
Swearing, unless I took all patiently, 1641
I should not live to speak another word;
So should my shame still rest upon record,
And never be forgot in mighty Rome
The adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.

'Mine enemy was strong, my poor self
weak,
And far the weaker with so strong a fear:
My bloody judge forbade my tongue to
speak;
No rightful plea might plead for justice
there:
His scarlet lust came evidence to swear 1650
That my poor beauty had purloin'd his
eyes;
And when the judge is robb'd the prisoner
dies.

'O! teach me how to make mine own
excuse,
Or at the least this refuge let me find;
Though my gross blood be stain'd with this
abuse,
Immaculate and spotless is my mind;
That was not forc'd; that never was inclin'd
To accessory yieldings, but still pure
Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.'

Lo! here the hopeless merchant of this loss,
With head declin'd, and voice damm'd up
with woe, 1661
With sad set eyes, and wretched arms across,
From lips new-waxen pale begins to blow
The grief away that stops his answer so:
But, wretched as he is, he strives in vain;
What he breathes out his breath drinks up again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide
Oustruns the eye that doth behold his haste,
Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride 1669
Back to the strait that forc'd him on so fast;
In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past:
Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a
saw,
To push grief on, and back the same grief
draw,

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth,
And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh:
'Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth
Another power; no flood by raining slaketh.
My woe too sensible thy passion maketh
More feeling-painful: let it then suffice
To drown one woe, one pair of weeping
eyes. 1680

'And for my sake, when I might charm thee
so,
For she that was thy Lucrece, now attend
me:
Be suddenly revenged on my foe,
Thine, mine, his own: suppose thou dost defend me
From what is past: the help that thou shalt lend me
Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die:
For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

'But ere I name him, you, fair lords,' quothe
she,
Speaking to those that came with Collatine,
'Shall plight your honourable faiths to
me, 1690
With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of
mine;
For 't is a meritorious fair design
To chase injustice with revengeful arms:
Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies' harms.'

At this request, with noble disposition
Each present lord began to promise aid,
As bound in knighthood to her imposition,
Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd:
But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
The protestation stops. 'O! speak,' quothe she, 1700
'How may this forced stain be wip'd from
me?

'What is the quality of mine offence,
Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance?
May my pure mind with the foul act dispense,
My low-declin'd honour to advance?
May any terms acquit me from this chance?
The poison'd fountain clears itself again;
And why not I from this compelled stain?'

With this, they all at once began to say, 1709
Her body's stain her mind untainted clears;
While with a joyless smile she turns away
The face, that map which deep impression
bears
Of hard misfortune, carv'd in it with tears.
'No, no,' quothe she, 'no dame, hereafter
living,
By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving.'

Here with a sigh, as if her heart would
break,
She throws forth Tarquin's name: 'He, he,'
she says,

But more than 'he' her poor tongue could not speak;

Till after many accents and delays, 1719
Untimely breathings, sick and short assays,
She utters this, 'He, he, fair lords, 't is he,
That guides this hand to give this wound
to me.'

Even here she sheathed in her harmless
breast

A harmful knife, that thence her soul unsheathed:

That blow did bail it from the deep unrest
Of that polluted prison where it breathed;
Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeathed
Her winged sprite, and through her wounds doth fly

Life's lasting date from cancell'd destiny.

Stone-still, astonish'd with this deadly deed,
Stood Collatine and all his lordly crew; 1731
Till Lucrece' father, that beholds her bleed,
Himself on her self-slaughter'd body threw;
And from the purple fountain Brutus drew
The murderous knife, and, as it left the
place,

Her blood, in poor revenge, held it in chase;

And bubbling from her breast, it doth divide

In two slow rivers, that the crimson blood
Circles her body in on every side, 1739
Who like a late-sack'd island, vastly stood,
Bare and unpeopled in this fearful flood.

Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,

And some look'd black, and that false
Tarquin stain'd.

About the mourning and congealed face
Of that black blood a watery rigol goes,
Which seems to weep upon the tainted
place:

And ever since, as pitying Lucrece' woes,
Corrupted blood some watery token shows;
And blood untainted still doth red abide,
Blushing at that which is so putrified. 1750

'Daughter, dear daughter!' old Lucretius
cries,

'That life was mine which thou hast here
depriv'd.

If in the child the father's image lies,
Where shall I live now Lucrece is unliv'd?
Thou wast not to this end from me deriv'd.

If children pre-decease progenitors,
We are their offspring, and they none of ours.

'Poor broken glass, I often did behold
In thy sweet semblance my old age new born; 1759

But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old,
Shows me a bare-bon'd death by time outworn.

O! from thy cheeks my image thou hast torn,
And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass,
That I no more can see what once I was.

'O Time! cease thou thy course, and last
no longer,

If they surcease to be that should survive.
Shall rotten death make conquest of the stronger,

And leave the faltering feeble souls alive?
The old bees die, the young possess their hive:

Then live, sweet Lucrece, live again and
see 1771

Thy father die, and not thy father
thee.'

By this starts Collatine as from a dream,
And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place;
And then in key-cold Lucrece' bleeding
stream

He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face,
And counterfeits to die with her a space;

Till manly shame bids him possess his
breath

And live to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul 1779
Hath serv'd a dumb arrest upon his tongue;
Who, mad that sorrow should his use
control,

Or keep him from heart-easing words so
long,

Begins to talk; but through his lips do throng

Weak words so thick, come in his poor heart's aid,

That no man could distinguish what he said.

Yet sometime 'Tarquin' was pronounced
plain,

But through his teeth, as if the name he tore.
This windy tempest, till it blow up rain,
Held back his sorrow's tide to make it more;
At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er: 1790

Then son and father weep with equal
strife

Who should weep most, for daughter or for wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his,
Yet neither may possess the claim they lay.
The father says 'She 's mine.' 'O! mine
she is,'

Replies her husband; 'do not take away
My sorrow's interest; let no mourner say
He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
And only must be wail'd by Collatine.'

'O!' quoth Lucretius, 'I did give that life 1800
Which she too early and too late hath spill'd.'

'Woe, woe!' quoth Collatine, 'she was my
wife,

I ow'd her, and 't is mine that she hath
kill'd.'

'My daughter' and 'my wife' with clamours
fill'd

The dispers'd air, who, holding Lucrece'
life,

Answer'd their cries, 'my daughter' and
'my wife.'

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece'
side,
Seeing such emulation in their woe,
Began to clothe his wit in state and pride,
Burying in Lucrece' wound his folly's show.
He with the Romans was esteemed so 1811
As silly-jeering idiots are with kings,
For sportive words and uttering foolish
things:

But now he throws that shallow habit by,
Wherein deep policy did him disguise;
And arm'd his long-hid wits advisedly,
To check the tears in Collatinus' eyes.
'Thou wronged Lord of Rome,' quoth he,
'arise:
Let my unsounded self, suppos'd a fool,
Now set thy long-experienc'd wit to school.

'Why, Collatine, is woe the cure for woe? 1182
Do wounds help wounds, or grief help grievous deeds?
Is it revenge to give thyself a blow
For his foul act by whom thy fair wife bleeds?
Such childish humour from weak minds proceeds:
Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so,
To slay herself, that should have slain her
foe.

'Courageous Roman, do not steep thy heart
In such relenting dew of lamentations;
But kneel with me and help to bear thy
part,
To rouse our Roman gods with invoca-
tions, 1831

That they will suffer these abominations, Since Rome herself in them doth stand
disgrac'd,
By our strong arms from forth her fair streets chas'd.

'Now, by the Capitol that we adore,
And by this chaste blood so unjustly stain'd,
By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat
earth's store,
By all our country rights in Rome maintain'd,
And by chaste Lucrece' soul, that late com-plain'd
Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knife, 1840
We will revenge the death of this true
wife.

This said, he struck his hand upon his breast.
And kiss'd the fatal knife to end his vow;
And to his protestation urg'd the rest,
Who, wondering at him, did his words allow:
Then jointly to the ground their knees they
bow;
And that deep vow which Brutus made
before,
He doth again repeat, and that they swore.

When they had sworn to this advised doom.
They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece
thence; 1805
To show her bleeding body thorough Rome.
And so to publish Tarquin's foul offence:
Which being done with speedy diligence,
The Romans plausibly did give consent
To Tarquin's everlasting banishment.

FROM fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the ripper should by time decease,
His tender heir might bear his memory:
But thou, contracted to thine own bright
eyes,

Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,

Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament

And only herald to the gaudy spring, 10
Within thine own buduriest thy content
And, tender churl, mak'st waste in niggard-
ing.

Pity the world, or else this glutton be,
To eat the world's due, by the grave and
thee.

II

When forty winters shall besiege thy brow
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gaz'd on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth held:
Then being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days,
To say, within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame and thriftless
praise.

How much more praise deserv'd thy beauty's use,

If thou could'st answer 'This fair child of
mine

Shall sum my count and make my old excuse,
Proving his beauty by succession thine!

This were to be new made when thou art
old,

And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st
it cold.

III

Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest

Now is the time that face should form another;

Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest,
Thou dost beguile the world, unless some mother.

For where is she so fair whose unear'd womb
Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry?

Or who is he so fond will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity?

Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime; 10
So thou through windows of thine age shalt
see,

Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time.

But if thou live, rememb'red not to be,
Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

IV

Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend
Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?

Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend,

And being frank, she lends to those are free:
Then, beauteous niggard, why dost thou

abuse

The bounteous largess given thee to give?
 Profitless usurer, why dost thou use
 So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live?
 For having traffic with thyself alone,<sup>9</sup>
 Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive:
 Then how, when Nature calls thee to be
 gone,
 What unacceptable audit canst thou leave?
 Thy unus'd beauty must be tomb'd with
 thee,
 Which, used, lives the executor to be.

V

Those hours, that with gentle work did frame
 The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
 Will play the tyrants to the very same
 And that unfair which fairly doth excel;
 For never-resting time leads summer on
 To hideous winter, and confounds him there;
 Sap check'd with frost, and lusty leaves
 quite gone,
 Beauty o'ersnow'd and bareness everywhere:
 Then, were not summer's distillation left,
 A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,<sup>10</sup>
 Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
 Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was;
 But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet,
 Leese but their show; their substance still lives sweet.

VI

Then let not winter's ragged hand deface
 In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd:
 Make sweet some vial; treasure thou some
 place
 With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-kill'd.
 That use is not forbidden usury,
 Which happies those that pay the willing loan;
 That's for thyself to breed another thee,
 Or ten times happier, be it ten for one;
 Ten times thyself were happier than thou
 art,
 If ten of thine ten times refigur'd thee;<sup>10</sup>
 Then what could death do, if thou should'st depart,
 Leaving thee living in posterity?
 Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too
 fair
 To be death's conquest and make worms thine heir.

VII

Lo! in the orient when the gracious light
 Lifts up his burning head, each under eye
 Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
 Serving with looks his sacred majesty;
 And having climb'd the steep-up heavenly
 hill,
 Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
 Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still,
 Attending on his golden pilgrimage;
 But when from highest pitch, with weary car

Like feeble age, he reeleth from the day,<sup>10</sup>
 The eyes, 'fore duteous, now converted are
 From his low tract, and look another way:
 So thou, thyself outgoing in thy noon,
 Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

VIII

Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly?
 Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in
 joy:
 Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not gladly,
 Or else receiv'st with pleasure thine annoy?
 If the true concord of well-tuned sounds,
 By unions married, do offend thine ear,
 They do but sweetly chide thee, who con-
 founds
 In singleness the parts that thou should'st
 bear.
 Mark how one string, sweet husband to
 another,
 Strikes each in each by mutual ordering;<sup>10</sup>
 Resembling sire and child and happy mother,
 Who, all in one, one pleasing note do sing:
 Whose speechless song, being many,
 seeming one,
 Sings this to thee: 'Thou single wilt prove none.'

IX

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye
 That thou consum'st thyself in single life?
 Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
 The world will wail thee, like a makeless
 wife;
 The world will be thy widow, and still weep
 That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
 When every private widow well may keep By children's eyes her husband's shape in mind.
 Look! what an unthrif in the world doth spend Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it;<sup>10</sup>
 But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
 And, kept unus'd, the user so destroys it.
 No love toward others in that bosom sits
 That on himself such murderous shame commits.

For shame! deny that thou bear'st love to any,
 Who for thyself art so unprovident.
 Grant, if thou wilt, thou art belov'd of many,
 But that thou none lov'st is most evident;
 For thou art so possess'd with murderous
 hate
 That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire,
 Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate
 Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
 O! change thy thought, that I may change
 my mind:
 Shall hate be fairer lodg'd than gentle love?
 Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind,<sup>11</sup>
 Or to thyself at least kind-hearted prove:
 Make thee another self, for love of me,
 That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

II

As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou
grow'st
In one of thine, from that which thou de-partest;
And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestow'st
Thou may'st call thine when thou from youth convertest.
Herein lives wisdom, beauty and increase;
Without this, folly, age and cold decay:
If all were minded so, the times should cease
And threescore year would make the world
away.

Let those whom Nature hath not made for store,
Harsh, featureless and rude, barrenly perish:
Look, whom she best endow'd she gave the
more;
Which bounteous gift thou should'st in bounty cherish:
She carv'd thee for her seal, and meant thereby Thou should'st print more, nor let that copy die.

XII

When I do count the clock that tells the
time,
And see the brave day sunk in hideous
night;
When I behold the violet past prime,
And sable curls all silver'd o'er with white;
When lofty trees I see barren of leaves,
Which erst from heat did canopy the herd,
And summer's green all girded up in sheaves,
Borne on the bier with white and bristly
beard,
Then of thy beauty do I question make,
That thou among the wastes of time must
go,
Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake
And die as fast as they see others grow;
And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defence
Save breed, to brave him when he takes thee hence.

XIII

O! that you were yourself; but, love, you
are
No longer yours than you yourself here live:
Against this coming end you should prepare,
And your sweet semblance to some other give:
So should that beauty which you hold in lease
Find no determination; then you were Yourself again, after yourself's decease,
When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.
Who lets so fair a house fall to decay,
Which husbandry in honour might uphold
Against the stormy gusts of winter's day
And barren rage of death's eternal cold?
O! none but unthrifths. Dear my love, you
know
You had a father: let your son say so.

XIV

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck;
And yet methinks I have astronomy,
But not to tell of good or evil luck,
Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality;
Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell,
Pointing to each his thunder, rain and wind,
Or say with princes if it shall go well,
By oft predict that I in heaven find:
But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
And, constant stars, in them I read such art
As 'Truth and beauty shall together thrive,
If from thyself to store thou would'st convert;
Or else of thee this I prognosticate:
'Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.'

XV

When I consider every thing that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment,
That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows
Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;
When I perceive that men as plants increase,
Cheered and check'd even by the self-same
sky,
Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
And wear their brave state out of memory;
Then the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
Where wasteful Time debateth with Decay,
To change your day of youth to sullied night;
And all in war with Time for love of you,
As he takes from you, I engraft you new.

XVI

But wherefore do not you a mightier way
Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time?
And fortify yourself in your decay
With means more blessed than my barren
time?
Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
And many maiden gardens, yet unset,
With virtuous wish would bear your living
flowers
Much liker than your painted counterfeit:
So should the lines of life that life repair,
Which this, Time's pencil, or my pupil pen,
Neither in inward worth nor outward fair,
Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.
To give away yourself keeps yourself still;
And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

XVII

Who will believe my verse in time to come,
If it were fill'd with your most high deserts?
Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb
Which hides your life and shows not half your parts.
If I could write the beauty of your eyes
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,

SONNETS

The age to come would say, 'This poet lies;
Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces.'

So should my papers, yellow'd with their
age,

Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth than
tongue,

And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage
And stretched metre of an antique song:

But were some child of yours alive that
time,

You should live twice, in it and in my
rime.

XVIII

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate;
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of
May,

And summer's lease hath all too short a
date:

Sometimes too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd;
And every fair from fair sometime declines,
By chance of nature's changing course untrimm'd;

But thy eternal summer shall not fade,
Nor lose possession of that fair thou ow'st, 10
Nor shall death brag thou wander'st in his shade,

When in eternal lines to time thou grow'st;
So long as men can breathe, or eyes can
see,

So long lives this, and this gives life to
thee.

XIX

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;

Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's
jaws,

And burn the long-liv'd phoenix in her blood;
Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleets,
And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed
Time,

To the wide world and all her fading sweets;
But I forbid thee one most heinous crime:
O! carve not with thy hours my love's fair
brow,

Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen; 10

Him in thy course untainted do allow
For beauty's pattern to succeeding men.

Yet do thy worst, old Time: despite thy
wrong,

My love shall in my verse ever live young.

XX

A woman's face with Nature's own hand painted

Hast thou, the master-mistress of my passion;

A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted With shifting change, as is false women's fashion;

An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,

Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth;

A man in hue all hues in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes and women's souls amazeth.

And for a woman wert thou first created;
Till Nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-dotting, 10

And by addition me of thee defeated,
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.

But since she prick'd thee out for women's
pleasure,

Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their treasure.

XXI

So is it not with me as with that Muse
Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse,
Who heaven itself for ornament doth use
And every fair with his fair doth rehearse,

Making a couplement of proud compare,
With sun and moon, with earth and sea's
rich gems,

With April's first-born flowers, and all things rare

That heaven's air in this huge rondure hems.
O! let me, true in love, but truly write,

And then believe me, my love is as fair 10
As any mother's child, though not so bright
As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air:

Let them say more that like of hear-say
well;

I will not praise that purpose not to sell.

XXII

My glass shall not persuade me I am old,
So long as youth and thou are of one date;
But when in three time's furrows I behold,
Then look I death my days should expiate.

For all that beauty that doth cover thee
Is but the seemly raiment of my heart,

Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me:
How can I then be elder than thou art?

O! therefore, love, be of thyself so wary
As I, not for myself, but for thee will; 10

Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary
As tender nurse her babe from faring ill.

Presume not on thy heart when mine is
slain;

Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

XXIII

As an unperfect actor on the stage,
Who with his fear is put besides his part,

Or some fierce thing replete with too much
rage,

Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart;

So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
The perfect ceremony of love's rite,

And in mine own love's strength seem to decay.

O'ercharg'd with burden of mine own love's
might.

O! let my books be then the eloquence 9
And dumb presagers of my speaking breast,
Who plead for love, and look for recom-
pense,

More than that tongue that more hath more express'd.

O! learn to read what silent love hath writ:
To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

XXIV

Mine eye hath play'd the painter and hath stell'd

Thy beauty's form in table of my heart;
My body is the frame wherein 't is held,
And perspective it is best painter's art.
For through the painter must you see his skill,

To find where your true image pictur'd lies,
Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes.

Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have done;

Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for me

Are windows to my breast, where-through the sun

Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee;
Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their art.

They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

XXV

Let those who are in favour with their stars
Of public honour and proud titles boast,
Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars,

Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most.
Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread

But as the marigold at the sun's eye,
And in themselves their pride lies buried,
For at a frown they in their glory die.

The painful warrior famoused for fight,
After a thousand victories once foil'd, 10
Is from the book of honour razed quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd:

Then happy I, that love and am belov'd
Where I may not remove nor be remov'd.

XXVI

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
To thee I send this written ambassage,
To witness duty, not to show my wit:
Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine
May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it,

But that I hope some good conceit of thine
In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it;

Till whatsoever star that guides my moving
Points on me graciously with fair aspect, 10
And puts apparel on my tatter'd loving,
To show me worthy of thy sweet respect:

Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee;

Till then not show my head where thou may'st prove me.

XXVII

Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed,
The dear repose for limbs with travel tir'd;

But then begins a journey in my head
To work my mind, when body's work's expir'd;

For then my thoughts, from far where I abide,

Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
Looking on darkness which the blind do see:
Save that my soul's imaginary sight 9
Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
Makes black night beauteous and her old face new.

Lo! thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind,

For thee, and for myself no quiet find.

XXVIII

How can I then return in happy plight,
That am debarr'd the benefit of rest?
When day's oppression is not eas'd by night,
But day by night, and night by day, oppress'd;

And each, though enemies to either's reign,
Do in consent shake hands to torture me,
The one by toil, the other to complain
How far I toil, still farther off from thee?
I tell the day, to please him, thou art bright
And dost him grace when clouds do blot the heaven: 10

So flatter I the swart-complexion'd night;
When sparkling stars twire not thou gild'st the even.

But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer,

And night doth nightly make grief's length seem stronger.

XXIX

When, in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes,

I all alone beweep my outcast state,
And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless cries,

And look upon myself, and curse my fate,
Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
Featur'd like him, like him with friends possess'd,

Desiring this man's art, and that man's scope,

With what I most enjoy contented least;
Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,

Haply I think on thee, and then my state,
Like to the lark at break of day arising 11
From sullen earth, sings hymns at heaven's gate:

For thy sweet love remember'd such wealth brings

That then I scorn to change my state with kings.

XXX

When in the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new wail my dear time's waste:

Then can I drown an eye, unus'd to flow,

SONNETS

For precious friends hid in death's dateless
 night,
 And weep afresh love's long since cancell'd
 woe,
 And moan the expense of many a vanish'd
 sight:
 Then can I grieve at grievances foregone,
 And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er <sup>10</sup>
 The sad account of fore-bemoaned moan,
 Which I new pay as if not paid before.
 But if the while I think on thee, dear
 friend,
 All losses are restor'd and sorrows end.

XXXI

Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts,
 Which I by lacking have supposed dead;
 And there reigns Love, and all Love's loving parts,
 And all those friends which I thought buried.
 How many a holy and obsequious tear
 Hath dear religious love stol'n from mine
 eye,
 As interest of the dead, which now appear
 But things remov'd that hidden in thee lie!
 Thou art the grave where buried love doth live, <sup>9</sup>
 Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone,
 Who all their parts of me to thee did give;
 That due of many now is thine alone:
 Their images I lov'd I view in thee,
 And thou, all they, hast all the all of me.

XXXII

If thou survive my well-contented day,
 When that churl Death my bones with dust shall cover,
 And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
 These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover, Compare them with the bettering of the
 time,
 And though they be outstripp'd by every
 pen,
 Reserve them for my love, not for their
 rime,
 Exceeded by the height of happier men.
 O! then vouchsafe me but this loving
 thought:
 'Had my friend's Muse grown with this growing age, <sup>10</sup>
 A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
 To march in ranks of better equipage:
 But since he died, and poets better prove,
 Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his
 love.'

XXXIII

Full many a glorious morning have I seen Flatter the mountain tops with sovereign
 eye,
 Kissing with golden face the meadows
 green,
 Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy;
 Anon permit the basest clouds to ride
 With ugly rack on his celestial face,
 And from the forlorn world his visage hide,
 Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace:

Even so my sun one early morn did shine <sup>9</sup>
 With all-triumphant splendour on my brow;
 But, out, alack! he was but one hour mine,
 The region cloud hath mask'd him from me
 now.
 Yet him for this my love no whit dis-
 daineth;
 Suns of the world may stain when heaven's sun staineth.

XXXIV

Why did'st thou promise such a beauteous
 day,
 And make me travel forth without my cloak,
 To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way,
 Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke?
 'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou
 break,
 To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face,
 For no man well of such a salve can speak
 That heals the wound and cures not the disgrace:
 Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief; <sup>9</sup>
 Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss:
 The offender's sorrow lends but weak relief
 To him that bears the strong offence's cross.
 Ah! but those tears are pearl which thy love sheds,
 And they are rich and ransom all ill deeds.

XXXV

No more be griev'd at that which thou hast
 done:
 Roses have thorns, and silver fountains
 mud;
 Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and
 sun,
 And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.
 All men make faults, and even I in this,
 Authorizing thy trespass with compare,
 Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss,
 Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are;
 For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense,
 Thy adverse party is thy advocate, <sup>10</sup>
 And 'gainst myself a lawful plea commence:
 Such civil war is in my love and hate,
 That I an accessary needs must be
 To that sweet thief which sourly robs
 from me.

XXXVI

Let me confess that we two must be twain,
 Although our undivided loves are one:
 So shall those blots that do with me remain,
 Without thy help, by me be borne alone.
 In our two loves there is but one respect,
 Though in our lives a separable spite,
 Which, though it alter not love's sole effect,
 Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's de-
 light.
 I may not evermore acknowledge thee, <sup>9</sup>
 Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee shame,
 Nor thou with public kindness honour me,
 Unless thou take that honour from thy
 name:
 But do not so; I love thee in such sort
 As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XXXVII

As a decrepit father takes delight
To see his active child do deeds of youth,
So I, made lame by fortune's dearest spite,
Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth;
For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit,
Or any of these all, or all, or more,
Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit,
I make my love engrafted to this store:
So then I am not lame, poor, nor despis'd,
Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give 10
That I in thy abundance am suffic'd
And by a part of all thy glory live.
Look, what is best, that best I wish in thee:

This wish I have; then ten times happy
me!

XXXVIII

How can my Muse want subject to invent, While thou dost breathe, that pour'st into my verse
Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
For every vulgar paper to rehearse?
O! give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
Worthy perusal stand against thy sight;
For who's so dumb that cannot write to
thee,
When thou thyself dost give invention light?
Be thou the tenth Muse, ten times more in
worth 9
Than those old nine which rimers invoke;
And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth
Eternal numbers to outlive long date.

If my slight Muse do please these curious
days,
The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

XXXIX

O! how thy worth with manners may I sing,
When thou art all the better part of me?
What can mine own praise to mine own self bring?
And what is 't but mine own when I praise
thee?
Even for this let us divided live,
And our dear love lose name of single one,
That by this separation I may give
That due to thee which thou deserv'st alone.
O absence! what a torment would'st thou prove,
Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet
leave 10
To entertain the time with thoughts of love,
Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth deceive,
And that thou teachest how to make one
twain,
By praising him here who doth hence remain.

XL

Take all my loves, my love, yea, take them
all;
What hast thou then more than thou hadst
before?
No love, my love, that thou may'st true love
call;

All mine was thine before thou hadst this
more.

Then if for my love thou my love receivest,
I cannot blame thee for my love thou usest;
But yet be blained, if thou thyself deceivest
By willful taste of what thyself refuseth.
I do forgive thy robbery, gentle thief,
Although thou steal thee all my poverty; 10
And yet love knows it is a greater grief
To bear love's wrong than hate's known injury.

Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well
shows,

Kill me with spites; yet we must not be foes.

XLI

Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits,
When I am sometime absent from thy heart,
Thy beauty and thy years full well befits,
For still temptation follows where thou art.
Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won,
Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assail'd;
And when a woman woos, what woman's
son

Will sourly leave her till she have prevail'd?
Ay me! but yet thou might'st my seat for-
bear,

And chide thy beauty and thy straying
youth, 10

Who lead thee in their riot even there
Where thou art forc'd to break a twofold
truth;

Hers, by thy beauty tempting her to thee,
Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

XLII

That thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
And yet it may be said I lov'd her dearly;
That she hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
A loss in love that touches me more nearly.
Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye:
Thou dost love her, because thou know'st I love her;

And for my sake even so doth she abuse me,
Suffering my friend for my sake to approve
her.

If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain,
And losing her, my friend hath found that
loss; 10

Both find each other, and I lose both twain,
And both for my sake lay on me this cross:

But here's the joy; my friend and I are
one;

Sweet flattery! then she loves but me
alone.

XLIII

When most I wink, then do mine eyes best
see,

For all the day they view things unrespected;
But when I sleep, in dreams they look on
thee,

And, darkly bright, are bright in dark directed.

Then thou, whose shadow shadows doth make bright,

How would thy shadow's form form happy
show

To the clear day with thy much clearer light.

SONNETS

When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so!
How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed
made
By looking on thee in the living day, 10
When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth
stay!

All days are nights to see till I see thee,
And nights bright days when dreams do show thee me.

XLIV

If the dull substance of my flesh were
thought,
Injurious distance should not stop my way;
For then, despite of space, I would be brought,
From limits far remote, where thou dost
stay.
No matter then although my foot did stand
Upon the farthest earth remov'd from thee;
For nimble thought can jump both sea and land,
As soon as think the place where he would
be.
But, ah! thought kills me that I am not thought,
To leap large lengths of miles when thou art gone, 10
But that, so much of earth and water
wrought,
I must attend time's leisure with my moan;
Receiving nought by elements so slow
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

XLV

The other two, slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide;
The first my thought, the other my desire,
These present-absent with swift motion slide.
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone
Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy;
Until life's composition be recur'd
By those swift messengers return'd from
thee, 10
Who even but now come back again, assur'd
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me:
This told, I joy; but then no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

XLVI

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war,
How to divide the conquest of thy sight;
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight
would bar,
My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
My heart doth plead that thou in him dost
lie,
A closet never pierc'd with crystal eyes,
But the defendant doth that plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To 'cide this title is impannelled 9
A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart;

And by their verdict is determined
The clear eye's moiety and the dear heart's
part:
As thus: mine eye's due is thine outward
part,
And my heart's right thine inward love of
heart.

XLVII

Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the
other:
When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sighs himself doth
smother,
With my love's picture then my eye doth
feast,
And to the painted banquet bids my heart;
Another time mine eye is my heart's guest,
And in his thoughts of love doth share a
part:
So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me; 10
For thou not farther than my thoughts canst
move,
And I am still with them and they with thee;
Or, if they sleep, thy picture in my sight
Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

XLVIII

How careful was I, when I took my way,
Each trifle under truest bars to thrust,
That to my use it might unused stay
From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust!
But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are,
Most worthy comfort, now my greatest
grief,
Thou, best of dearest and mine only care,
Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.
Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest,
Save where thou art not, though I feel thou
art, 10
Within the gentle closure of my breast,
From whence at pleasure thou may'st come and part;
And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I
fear,
For truth proves thievish for a prize so
dear.

XLIX

Against that time, if ever that time come,
When I shall see thee frown on my defects,
Whenas thy love hath cast his utmost sum,
Call'd to that audit by advis'd respects;
Against that time when thou shalt strangely pass
And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine
eye,
When love, converted from the thing it was,
Shall reasons find of settled gravity:
Against that time do I ensconce me here 9
Within the knowledge of mine own desert,
And this my hand against myself uprear,
To guard the lawful reasons on thy part:
To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws,
Since why to love I can allege no cause.

L

How heavy do I journey on the way,
When what I seek, my weary travel's end,
Doth teach that ease and that repose to say,
'Thus far the miles are measur'd from thy
friend!'

The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
Plods dully on, to bear that weight in me,
As if by some instinct the wretch did know
His rider loved not speed, being made from
thee:

The bloody spur cannot provoke him on: 9
That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide,
Which heavily he answers with a groan
More sharp to me than spurring to his side;
For that same groan doth put this in my
mind:

My grief lies onward, and my joy behind.

LI

Thus can my love excuse the slow offence
Of my dull bearer when from thee I speed:
From where thou art why should I haste me
thence?

Till I return, of posting is no need.
O! what excuse will my poor beast then
find.

When swift extremity can seem but slow?
Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind,

In winged speed no motion shall I know:
Then can no horse with my desire keep
pace;

Therefore desire, of perfect'st love being
made, 10

Shall neigh—no dull flesh—in his fiery race;
But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade:

'Since from thee going he went wilful-
slow,

Towards thee I 'll run and give him leave to go.'

LII

So am I as the rich, whose blessed key
Can bring him to his sweet up-locked
treasure,

The which he will not every hour survey,
For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure.

Therefore are feasts so solemn and so rare,
Since, seldom coming, in the long year set,
Like stones of worth they thinly placed are,
Or captain jewels in the carcanet.

So is the time that keeps you as my chest, 9
Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth
hide,

To make some special instant special blest,
By new unfolding his imprison'd pride.

Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives
scope,

Being had, to triumph; being lack'd, to hope.

LIII

What is your substance, whereof are you
made,

That millions of strange shadows on you tend?

Since every one hath, every one, one shade,
And you, but one, can every shadow lend.
Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit
Is poorly imitated after you;

On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,
And you in Grecian tires are painted new:
Speak of the spring and foison of the year,
The one doth shadow of your beauty show, 10
The other as your bounty doth appear;
And you in every blessed shape we know.

In all external grace you have some part,
But you like none, none you, for constant
heart.

LIV

O! how much more doth beautyauteous
seem

By that sweet ornament which truth doth
give:

The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
For that sweet odour which doth in it live.
The canker-blooms have full as deep a dye
As the perfumed tincture of the roses,
Hang on such thorns, and plays as wantonly
When summer's breath their masked buds discloses:

But, for their virtue only is their show,
They live unwoo'd and unrespected fade; 10
Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so;
Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours
made:

And so of you, beautyauteous and lovely
youth,

When that shall vade, my verse distills your truth.

LV

Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rime;
But you shall shine more bright in these contents

Than unswept stone, besmear'd with sluttish time.

When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
And broils root out the work of masonry,
Nor Mars his sword nor war's quick fire shall burn

The living record of your memory.
'Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity Shall you pace forth; your praise shall still find room 10

Even in the eyes of all posterity
That wear this world out to the ending doom.

So, till the judgment that yourself arise,
You live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

LVI

Sweet love, renew thy force; be it not said
Thy edge should blunter be than appetite,
Which but to-day by feeding is allay'd,
To-morrow sharpen'd in his former might:
So, love, be thou; although to-day thou fill Thy hungry eyes even till they wink with fulness,

To-morrow see again, and do not kill
The spirit of love with a perpetual dullness.
Let this sad interim like the ocean be Which parts the shore, where two contracted new

Come daily to the banks, that, when they see Return of love, more bless'd may be the view;
 Else call it winter, which, being full of care
 Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more rare.

LVII

Being your slave, what should I do but tend
 Upon the hours and times of your desire?
 I have no precious time at all to spend,
 Nor services to do, till you require.
 Nor dare I chide the world-without-end
 hour
 Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for
 you,
 Nor think the bitterness of absence sour
 When you have bid your servant once adieu;
 Nor dare I question with my jealous thought
 Where you may be, or your affairs suppose,<sup>10</sup>
 But, like a sad slave, stay and think of nought
 Save, where you are how happy you make those.
 So true a fool is love that in your will,
 Though you do any thing, he thinks no ill.

LVIII

That god forbid that made me first your
 slave,
 I should in thought control your times of
 pleasure,
 Or at your hand the account of hours to crave,
 Being your vassal, bound to stay your leisure!
 O! let me suffer, being at your beck,
 The imprison'd absence of your liberty;
 And patience, tame to sufferance, bide each check,
 Without accusing you of injury.
 Be where you list, your charter is so strong That you yourself may privilege your time<sup>15</sup>
 To what you will; to you it doth belong
 Yourself to pardon of self-doing crime.
 I am to wait, though waiting so be hell,
 Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

LIX

If there be nothing new, but that which is Hath been before, how are our brains
 beguil'd,
 Which, labouring for invention, bear amiss
 The second burthen of a former child!
 O! that record could with a backward look,
 Even of five hundred courses of the sun,
 Show me your image in some antique book,
 Since mind at first in character was done:
 That I might see what the old world could
 say
 To this composed wonder of your frame; 10
 Whe'r we are mended, or whe'r better
 they.

Or whether revolution be the same.
 O! sure I am, the wits of former days
 To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

LX

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
 So do our minutes hasten to their end;
 Each changing place with that which goes
 before,
 In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
 Nativity, once in the main of light, Crawls to maturity, wherewith being
 crown'd,
 Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
 And Time that gave doth now his gift con-
 found.
 Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth
 And delves the parallels in beauty's brow,
 Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth, 11
 And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow:
 And yet to times in hope my verse shall
 stand,
 Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

LXI

Is it thy will thy image should keep open
 My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
 Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken,
 While shadows like to thee do mock my
 sight?
 Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
 So far from home into my deeds to pry,
 To find out shames and idle hours in me,
 The scope and tenour of thy jealousy?
 O, no! thy love, thought much, is not so great:
 It is my love that keeps mine eye awake; 10
 Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
 To play the watchman ever for thy sake:
 For thee watch I whil'st thou dost wake elsewhere,
 From me far off, with others all too near.

LXII

Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye
 And all my soul and all my every part;
 And for this sin there is no remedy,
 It is so grounded inward in my heart.
 Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,
 No shape so true, no truth of such account;
 And for myself mine own worth do define,
 As I all other in all worths surmount.
 But when my glass shows me myself indeed,
 Bated and chopp'd with tann'd antiquity,
 Mine own self-love quite contrary I read;
 Self so self-loving were iniquity. 12
 'T is thee, myself, that for myself I
 praise,
 Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

LXIII

Against my love shall be, as I am now,
 With Time's injurious hand crush'd and o'erworn:

When hours have drain'd his blood and fill'd his brow

With lines and wrinkles; when his youthful morn

Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night;
And all those beauties whereof now he's
king

Are vanishing or vanish'd out of sight,
Stealing away the treasure of his spring;
For such a time do I now fortify
Against confounding age's cruel knife, 10
That he shall never cut from memory
My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's
life:

His beauty shall in these black lines be
seen,

And they shall live, and he in them still green.

LXIV

When I have seen by Time's fell hand defac'd

The rich-proud cost of outworn buried age;
When sometime lofty towers I see down-
raz'd,

And brass eternal slave to mortal rage;
When I have seen the hungry ocean gain
Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
And the firm soil win of the watery main,
Increasing store with loss and loss with
store;

When I have seen such interchange of state,
Or state itself confounded to decay; 10
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminare,
That Time will come and take my love
away.

This thought is as a death, which cannot choose

But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

LXV

Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,

But sad mortality o'ersways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
Whose action is no stronger than a flower?
O! how shall summer's honey breath hold
out

Against the wreckful siege of battering days,
When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but Time
decays?

O fearful meditation! where, alack!
Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest lie hid? 10

Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot
back?

Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?
O! none, unless this miracle have might,
That in black ink my love may still shine bright.

LXVI

Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry,—
As, to behold desert a beggar born,
And needy nothing trimm'd in jollity,
And purest faith unhappily forsworn,
And gilded honour shamefully misplac'd,
And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted,
And right perfection wrongfully disgrac'd,

And strength by limping sway disabled,
And art made tongue-tied by authority,
And folly, doctor-like, controlling skill, 10
And simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
And captive good attending captain ill:

Tir'd with all these, from these would I be
gone,

Save that, to die, I leave my love alone.

LXVII

Ah! wherefore with infection should he
live

And with his presence grace impiety,
That sin by him advantage should achieve
And lace itself with his society?

Why should false painting imitate his cheek,
And steal dead seeming of his living hue?

Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow, since his rose is true?

Why should he live, now Nature bankrupt is, Beggard of blood to blush through lively veins?

For she hath no exchequer now, but his, 11
And, proud of many, lives upon his gains.

O! him she stores, to show what wealth
she had

In days long since, before these last so bad.

LXVIII

Thus is his cheek the map of days outworn,
When beauty liv'd and died as flowers do
now,

Before these bastard signs of fair were born,
Or durst inhabit on a living brow;

Before the golden tresses of the dead,
The right of sepulchres, were shorn away,

To live a second life on second head;
Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay:

In him those holy antique hours are seen
Without all ornament, itself and true, 10

Making no summer of another's green,
Robbing no old to dress his beauty new;

And him as for a map doth Nature store,
To show false Art what beauty was of yore.

LXIX

Those parts of thee that the world's eye
doth view

Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend;

All tongues, the voice of souls, give thee
that due,

Uttering bare truth, even so as foes commend,

Thy outward thus with outward praise is
crown'd;

But those same tongues, that give thee so thine own,

In other accents do this praise confound
By seeing farther, than the eye hath shown.

They look into the beauty of thy mind,
And that, in guess, they measure by thy
deeds; 10

Then, churls, their thoughts, although their eyes were kind,

To thy fair flower add the rank smell of
weeds:

But why thy odour matcheth not thy show,
The soil is this, that thou dost common grow.

LXX

That thou art blam'd shall not be thy defect,
For slander's mark was ever yet the fair;
The ornament of beauty is suspect,
A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
So thou be good, slander doth but approve
Thy worth the greater, being woo'd of time;
For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
And thou present'st a pure, unstained prime.
Thou hast pass'd by the ambush of young
days,

Either not assail'd, or victor being charg'd;
Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
To tie up envy evermore enlarg'd:

If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show,
Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts should'st owe.

LXXI

No longer mourn for me when I am dead
Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell
Give warning to the world that I am fled From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell:

Nay, if you read this line, remember not
The hand that writ it; for I love you so,
That I in your sweet thoughts would be
forgot,

If thinking on me then should make you
woe.

O! if, I say, you look upon this verse 9
When I perhaps compounded am with clay,
Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,
But let your love even with my life decay;

Lest the wise world should look into your moan,

And mock you with me after I am gone.

LXXII

O! lest the world should task you to recite
What merit lived in me, that you should love
After my death, dear love, forget me quite,
For you in me can nothing worthy prove;
Unless you would devise some virtuous lie,
To do more for me than mine own desert,
And hang more praise upon deceased I
Than niggard truth would willingly impart:
O! lest your true love may seem false in
this,

That you for love speak well of me untrue,
My name be buried where my body is, 11
And live no more to shame nor me nor you.

For I am sham'd by that which I bring
forth,

And so should you, to love things nothing
worth.

LXXIII

That time of year thou may'st in me behold
When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang

Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,

Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds sang,

In me thou see'st the twilight of such day
As after sunset fadeth in the west;
Which by and by black night doth take
away,

Death's second self, that seals up all in rest.
In me thou see'st the glowing of such fire,
That on the ashes of his youth doth lie, 10
As the death-bed whereon it must expire, Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd
by.

This thou perceiv'st, which makes thy love more strong,

To love that well which thou must leave ere long.

LXXIV

But be contented: when that fell arrest
Without all bail shall carry me away,
My life hath in this line some interest,
Which for memorial still with thee shall
stay.

When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
The very part was consecrate to thee:
The earth can have but earth, which is his due;

My spirit is thine, the better part of me:
So then thou hast but lost the dregs of
life,

The prey of worms, my body being dead; 10
The coward conquest of a wretch's knife,
Too base of thee to be remembered.

The worth of that is that which it contains,
And that is this, and this with thee remains.

LXXV

So are you to my thoughts as food to life,
Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the
ground;

And for the peace of you I hold such strife
As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found;
Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon Doubting the filching age will steal his
treasure;

Now counting best to be with you alone,
Then better'd that the world may see my
pleasure:

Sometime, all full with feasting on your
sight,

And by and by clean starved for a look; 10
Possessing or pursuing no delight,
Saw what is had or must from you be took.

Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day,
Or gluttoning on all, or all away.

LXXVI

Why is my verse so barren of new pride,
So far from variation or quick change?
Why with the time do I not glance aside
To new-found methods and to compounds
strange?

Why write I still all one, ever the same,
And keep invention in a noted weed,
That every word doth almost tell my name,
Showing their birth and where they did proceed?

O! know, sweet love, I always write of you,
And you and love are still my argument; 10
So all my best is dressing old words new,

Spending again what is already spent:
 For as the sun is daily new and old,
 So is my love still telling what is told.

LXXVII

Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties
 wear,
 Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste;
 The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will
 bear,
 And of this book this learning may'st thou
 taste.
 The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show
 Of mouthed graves will give thee memory;
 Thou by thy dial's shady stealth may'st
 know
 Time's thievish progress to eternity.
 Look! what thy memory cannot contain Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find
 Those children nurs'd, deliver'd from thy
 brain,
 To take a new acquaintance of thy mind.
 These offices, so oft as thou wilt look,
 Shall profit thee and much enrich thy book.

LXXVIII

So oft have I invok'd thee for my Muse
 And found such fair assistance in my verse
 As every alien pen hath got my use
 And under thee their poesy disperse.
 Thine eyes, that taught the dumb on high to sing
 And heavy ignorance aloft to fly,
 Have added feathers to the learned's wing
 And given grace a double majesty.
 Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
 Whose influence is thine and born of thee:
 In others' works thou dost but mend the style,
 And arts with thy sweet graces graced be;
 But thou art all my art, and dost advance
 As high as learning my rude ignorance.

LXXIX

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
 My verse alone had all thy gentle grace;
 But now my gracious numbers are decay'd,
 And my sick Muse doth give another place.
 I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
 Deserves the travail of a worthier pen;
 Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent
 He robs thee of, and pays it thee again.
 He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word
 From thy behaviour; beauty doth he give,
 And found it in thy cheek; he can afford
 No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.
 Then thank him not for that which he doth say,
 Since what he owes thee thou thyself
 dost pay.

LXXX

O! how I faint when I of you do write,
 Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
 And in the praise thereof spends all his
 might,

To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame.

But since your worth, wide as the ocean is,
 The humble as the proudest sail doth bear,
 My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
 On your broad main doth wilfully appear.
 Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
 Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth
 ride;
 Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless boat,
 He of tall building and of goodly pride:
 Then if he thrive and I be cast away,
 The worst was this: my love was my decay.

LXXXI

Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
 Or you survive when I in earth am rotten;
 From hence your memory death cannot take,
 Although in me each part will be forgotten.
 Your name from hence immortal life shall have,
 Though I, once gone, to all the world must
 die:
 The earth can yield me but a common grave,
 When you entombed in men's eyes shall lie.
 Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
 Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read;
 And tongues to be your being shall rehearse,
 When all the breathers of this world are
 dead;
 You still shall live, such virtue hath my
 pen,
 Where breath most breathes, even in the mouths of men.

LXXXII

I grant thou wert not married to my Muse,
 And therefore may'st without attain't o'er-
 look
 The dedicated words which writers use
 Of their fair subject, blessing every book.
 Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
 Finding thy worth a limit past my praise;
 And therefore art enforc'd to seek anew
 Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering
 days.
 And do so, love; yet when they have devis'd
 What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
 Thou truly fair wert truly sympathiz'd
 In true plain words by thy true-telling
 friend;
 And their gross painting might be better
 us'd
 Where cheeks need blood; in thee it is abus'd.

LXXXIII

I never saw that you did painting need,
 And therefore to your fair no painting set;
 I found, or thought I found, you did exceed
 The barren tender of a poet's debt:
 And therefore have I slept in your report,
 That you yourself, being extant, well might
 show
 How far a modern quill doth come too short,
 Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth
 grow.

This silence for my sin you did impute, 9
Which shall be most my glory, being dumb;
For I impair not beauty being mute,
When others would give life and bring a tomb.

There lives more life in one of your fair eyes
Than both your poets can in praise devise.

LXXXIV

Who is it that says most? which can say more
Than this rich praise, that you alone are you?

In whose confine immured is the store
Which should example where your equal grew.

Lean penury within that pen doth dwell
That to his subject lends not some small glory;

But he that writes of you, if he can tell
That you are you, so dignifies his story.
Let him but copy what in you is writ,
Not making worse what nature made so clear, 10

And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,
Making his style admired every where.

You to your beauteous blessings add a curse,

Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

LXXXV

My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her still,

While comments of your praise, richly compil'd,

Reserve their character with golden quill,
And precious phrase by all the Muses fil'd.
I think good thoughts, whilst other write good words,

And, like unletter'd clerk, still cry 'Amen'
To every hymn that able spirit affords
In polish'd form of well-refined pen.

Hearing you prais'd, I say 'T is so, 't is true,'

And to the most of praise add something more; 10

But that is in my thought, whose love to you,
Though words come hindmost, holds his rank before.

Then others for the breath of words respect,

Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

LXXXVI

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse,
Bound for the prize of all too precious you,
That did my ripe thoughts in my brain inhearse,

Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?

Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write
Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead?
No, neither he, nor his compeers by night
Giving him aid, my verse astonished.

He, nor that affable familiar ghost

Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
As victors of my silence cannot boast;

I was not sick of any fear from thence:
But when your countenance fill'd up his line,
Then lack'd I matter; that enfeebld mine.

LXXXVII

Farewell! thou art too dear for my possessing,

And like enough thou know'st thy estimate:
The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing;

My bonds in thee are all determinate.

For how do I hold thee but by thy granting?

And for that riches where is my deserving?

The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,

And so my patent back again is swerving.

Thyself thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,

Or me, to whom thou gav'st it, else mistaking; 10

So thy great gift, upon misprision growing,
Comes home again, on better judgment making.

Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter,

In sleep a king, but waking no such matter.

LXXXVIII

When thou shalt be dispos'd to set me light,

And place my merit in the eye of scorn,

Upon thy side against myself I'll fight,

And prove thee virtuous, though thou art forsworn.

With mine own weakness being best acquainted,

Upon thy part I can set down a story

Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted;

That thou in losing me shalt win much glory:

And I by this will be a gainer too; 9

For bending all my loving thoughts on thee,

The injuries that to myself I do,

Doing thee vantage, double-vantage me.

Such is my love, to thee I so belong,

That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

LXXXIX

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault,

And I will comment upon that offence:

Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt,

Against thy reasons making no defence.

Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill,

To set a form upon desired change,

As I'll myself disgrace; knowing thy will,

I will acquaintance strangle and look strange;

Be absent from thy walks; and in my tongue 9

Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell,

Lest I, too much profane, should do it wrong,

And haply of our old acquaintance tell.

For thee, against myself I'll vow debate,

For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate.

XC

Then hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now;
Now, while the world is bent my deeds to cross,

Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,
And do not drop in for an after-loss:

Ah! do not, when my heart hath 'scap'd this
sorrow,

Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe;
Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purpos'd overthrow.

If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,
When other petty griefs have done their
spite,

But in the onset come: so shall I taste
At first the very worst of fortune's might;

And other strains of woe, which now seem
woe,

Compar'd with loss of thee will not seem
so.

XCI

Some glory in their birth, some in their skill,
Some in their wealth, some in their body's
force;

Some in their garments, though new-fangled
ill;

Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horse;

And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherein it finds a joy above the rest:

But these particulars are not my measure;
All these I better in one general best.

Thy love is better than high birth to me,
Richer than wealth, prouder than garments'
cost,

Of more delight than hawks or horses be;
And having thee, of all men's pride I boast:

Wretched in this alone, that thou may'st take

All this away and me most wretched make.

XCII

But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
For term of life thou art assured mine;
And life no longer than thy love will stay,
For it depends upon that love of thine.

Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
When in the least of them my life hath end.
I see a better state to me belongs

Than that which on thy humour doth depend:

Thou canst not vex me with inconstant mind,
Since that my life on thy revolt doth lie.

O! what a happy title do I find,
Happy to have thy love, happy to die:

But what 's so blessed-fair that fears no
blot?

Thou may'st be false, and yet I know it
not.

XCIII

So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
Like a deceived husband; so love's face
May still seem love to me, though alter'd new;

Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place:
For there can live no hatred in thine eye,
Therefore in that I cannot know thy change.

In many's looks the false heart's history
Is writ in moods and frowns and wrinkles
strange.

But heaven in thy creation did decree
That in thy face sweet love should ever
dwell;

Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings be,

Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness tell.

How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty
grow,

If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show!

XCIV

They that have power to hurt and will do
none,

That do not do the thing they most do show,
Who, moving others, are themselves as
stone,

Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow;
They rightly do inherit heaven's graces

And husband nature's riches from expense;
They are the lords and owners of their faces,

Others but stewards of their excellence.
The summer's flower is to the summer
sweet,

Though to itself it only live and die,

But if that flower with base infection meet,
The basest weed outbraves his dignity:

For sweetest things turn sourest by their
deeds;

Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

XCV

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame

Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name!

O! in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose;

That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
Making lascivious comments on thy sport,

Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise;
Naming thy name blesses an ill report.

O! what a mansion have those vices got

Which for their habitation chose out thee,
Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot,

And all things turn to fair that eyes can see.
Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;

The hardest knife ill-us'd doth lose his edge.

XCVI

Some say, thy fault is youth, some wanton-
ness;

Some say, thy grace is youth and gentle
sport;

Both grace and faults are lov'd of more and
less:

Thou mak'st faults graces that to thee resort.

As on the finger of a throned queen
The basest jewel will be well esteem'd,

So are those errors that in thee are seen
To truths translated and for true things
deem'd.

How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
If like a lamb he could his looks translate ! 10
How many gazers might'st thou lead away,
If thou would'st use the strength of all thy
state !
But do not so : I love thee in such sort,
As thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XCVII

How like a winter hath my absence been
From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year !
What freezings have I felt, what dark days
seen !
What old December's bareness every where !
And yet this time remov'd was summer's
time ;
The teeming autumn, big with rich increase,
Bearing the wanton burden of the prime,
Like widow'd wombs after their lord's de-
cease :
Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me
But hope of orphans and unfather'd fruit ; 10
For summer and his pleasures wait on thee,
And, thou away, the very birds are mute :
Or, if they sing, 't is with so dull a cheer
That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.

XCVIII

From you have I been absent in the spring,
When proud-pied April, dress'd in all his
trim,
Hath put a spirit of youth in every thing,
That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leap'd with
him.
Yet nor the lays of birds, nor the sweet smell
Of different flowers in odour and in hue,
Could make me any summer's story tell,
Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew :
Nor did I wonder at the lily's white,
Nor praise the deep vermillion in the rose ; 10
They were but sweet, but figures of delight,
Drawn after you, you pattern of all those.
Yet seem'd it winter still, and, you away,
As with your shadow I with these did play.

XCIX

The forward violet thus did I chide :
Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that smells,
If not from my love's breath ? The purple pride
Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells
In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dy'd.
The lily I condemn'd for thy hand,
And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair ;
The roses fearfully on thorns did stand,
One blushing shame, another white despair ;
A third, nor red nor white, had stol'n of both,
And to his robbery had annex'd thy breath ;
But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth
A vengeful canker eat him up to death.
More flowers I noted, yet I none could
see
But sweet or colour it had stol'n from thee.

C

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so
long
To speak of that which gives thee all thy
might ?
Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless
song,
Dark'ning thy power to lend base subjects
light ?
Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem
In gentle numbers time so idly spent ;
Sing to the ear that doth thy lays esteem
And gives thy pen both skill and argument.
Rise, resty Muse, my love's sweet face survey,
If Time have any wrinkle graven there ; 10
If any, be a satire to decay,
And make Time's spoils despised every where.
Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life ;
So thou prevent'st his scythe and crooked
knife.

CI

O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends
For thy neglect of truth in beauty dy'd ?
Both truth and beauty on my love depends ;
So dost thou too, and therein dignified.
Make answer, Muse : wilt thou not haply
say,
'Truth needs no colour, with his colour fix'd ;
Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay ;
But best is best, if never intermix'd ?'
Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb ?
Excuse not silence so ; for 't lies in thee 10
To make him much outlive a gilded tomb
And to be prais'd of ages yet to be.
Then do thy office, Muse ; I teach thee
how
To make him seem long hence as he shows now.

CII

My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming ;
I love not less, though less the show appear :
That love is merchandis'd whose rich es-teeming
The owner's tongue doth publish every where.
Our love was new, and then but in the spring,
When I was wont to greet it with my lays ;
As Philomel in summer's front doth sing,
And stops her pipe in growth of ripper days :
Not that the summer is less pleasant now Than when her mournful hymns did hush
the night, 10
But that that wild music burthens every bough,
And sweets grown common lose their dear
delight.
Therefore, like her, I sometime hold my
tongue,
Because I would not dull you with my song.

CIII

Alack! what poverty my Muse brings forth,
 That having such a scope to show her pride,
 The argument, all bare, is of more worth
 Than when it hath my added praise beside.
 O! blame me not, if I no more can write;
 Look in your glass, and there appears a face
 That over-goes my blunt invention quite,
 Dulling my lines and doing me disgrace.
 Were it not sinful then striving to mend,
 To mar the subject that before was well? 10
 For to no other pass my verses tend
 Than of your graces and your gifts to tell;
 And more, much more, than in my verse can sit
 Your own glass shows you when you look in it.

CIV

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
 For as you were when first your eye I eyed,
 Such seems your beauty still. Three winters cold
 Have from the forests shook three summers' pride,
 Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn
 turn'd
 In process of the seasons have I seen,
 Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd,
 Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are
 green.
 Ah! yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand, 9
 Steal from his figure, and no pace perceiv'd;
 So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth stand,
 Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceiv'd:
 For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbred:
 Ere you were born was beauty's summer
 dead.

CV

Let not my love be call'd idolatry.
 Nor my beloved as an idol show,
 Since all alike my songs and praises be
 To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
 Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind,
 Still constant in a wondrous excellence;
 Therefore my verse to constancy confin'd,
 One thing expressing, leaves out difference.
 'Fair, kind, and true,' is all my argument,
 'Fair, kind, and true,' varying to other words; 10
 And in this change is my invention spent,
 Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords.
 'Fair, kind, and true,' have often liv'd
 alone.
 Which three till now never kept seat in one.

CVI

When in the chronicle of wasted time
 I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
 And beauty making beautiful old rime
 In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights,
 Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,

Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
 I see their antique pen would have express'd
 Even such a beauty as you master now.
 So all their praises are but prophecies
 Of this our time, all you prefiguring;
 And, for they look'd but with divining eyes,
 They had not skill enough your worth to sing:
 For we, which now behold these present
 days,
 Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

CVII

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul
 Of the wide world dreaming on things to
 come,
 Can yet the lease of my true love control,
 Suppos'd as forfeit to a confin'd doom.
 The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd,
 And the sad augurs mock their own presage;
 Incertainties now crown themselves assur'd,
 And peace proclaims olives of endless age.
 Now with the drops of this most balmy time
 My love looks fresh, and Death to me subscribes, 10
 Since, spite of him, I 'll live in this poor rime,
 While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes:
 And thou in this shalt find thy monument,
 When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent.

CVIII

What's in the brain that ink may character
 Which hath not figur'd to thee my true
 spirit?
 What's new to speak, what new to register,
 That may express my love, or thy dear merit?
 Nothing, sweet boy; but yet, like prayers
 divine,
 I must each day say o'er the very same;
 Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I
 thine,
 Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name.
 So that eternal love in love's fresh case
 Weighs not the dust and injury of age, 10
 Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
 But makes antiquity for aye his page;
 Finding the first conceit of love there bred Where time and outward form would show it dead.

CIX

O! never say that I was false of heart,
 Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify.
 As easy might I from myself depart
 As from my soul, which in thy breast doth
 lie:
 That is my home of love: if I have rang'd,
 Like him that travels, I return again,
 Just to the time, not with the time exchang'd,
 So that myself bring water for my stain.
 Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
 All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood, 10
 That it could so preposterously be stain'd,
 To leave for nothing all thy sum of good;
 For nothing this wide universe I call,
 Save thou, my rose; in it thou art my all.

CX

Alas! 't is true I have gone here and there,
And made myself a motley to the view, Gor'd mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear,

Made old offences of affections new;
Most true it is that I have look'd on truth
Askance and strangely; but, by all above,
These blenches gave my heart another
youth,

And worse essays prov'd thee my best of
love.

Now all is done, have what shall have no
end:

Mine appetite I never more will grind 10
On newer proof, to try an older friend,
A god in love, to whom I am confin'd.

Then give me welcome, next my heaven
the best,

Even to thy pure and most most loving breast.

CXI

O! for my sake do you with Fortune chide,
The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
That did not better for my life provide Than public means which public manners breeds.

Thence comes it that my name receives a brand,

And almost thence my nature is subdued
To what it works in, like the dyer's hand:

Pity me then and wish I were renew'd;
Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink 9

Potions of eisel 'gainst my strong infection;
No bitterness that I will bitter think,

Nor double penance, to correct correction.
Pity me then, dear friend, and I assure ye

Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

CXII

Your love and pity doth the impression fill Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my
brow;

For what care I who calls me well or ill,
So you o'er-green my bad, my good allow?

You are my all the world, and I must strive To know my shames and praises from your
tongue;

None else to me, nor I to none alive,
That my steel'd sense or changes right or wrong.

In so profound abysm I throw all care
Of others' voices, that my adder's sense 10

To critic and to flatterer stopped are.
Mark how with my neglect I do dispense:

You are so strongly in my purpose bred
That all the world besides methinks

are dead.

CXIII

Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind,
And that which governs me to go about

Doth part his function and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out;

For it no form delivers to the heart
Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth latch:

Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch;
For if it see the rud'st or gentlest sight, 9
The most sweet favour or deformed'st creature,

The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature:

Incapable of more, replete with you,
My most true mind thus maketh mine untrue.

CXIV

Or whether doth my mind, being crown'd
with you,

Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery?

Or whether shall I say, mine eye saith true,
And that your love taught it this alchemy,

To make of monsters and things indigest
Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,
Creating every bad a perfect best,

As fast as objects to his beams assemble?
O! 't is the first; 't is flattery in my seeing,

And my great mind most kingly drinks it up:
Mine eye well knows what with his gust is 11

'greeting,
And to his palate doth prepare the cup:

If it be poison'd, 't is the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it and doth first begin.

CXV

Those lines that I before have writ do lie, Even those that said I could not love you
dearer:

Yet then my judgment knew no reason why
My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.

But reckoning Time, whose million'd accidents

Creep in 'twixt vows, and change decrees of
kings,

Tan sacred beauty, blunt the sharp'st intents,
Divert strong minds to the course of altering things;

Alas! why, fearing of Time's tyranny, 9
Might I not then say, 'Now I love you best,'

When I was certain o'er incertainty,
Crowning the present, doubting of the rest?

Love is a babe; then might I not say so,
To give full growth to that which still doth grow?

CXVI

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments. Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,

Or bends with the remover to remove:
O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark,

That looks on tempests and is never shaken;
It is the star to every wandering bark,

Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.

Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and
cheeks 9

Within his bending sickle's compass come;

Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
If this be error and upon me prov'd,
I never writ, nor no man ever lov'd.

CXVII

Accuse me thus: that I have scanted all
Wherein I should your great deserts repay,
Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
Whereto all bonds do tie me day by day;
That I have frequent been with unknown
minds,
And giv'n to time your own dear-purchas'd
right;
That I have hoisted sail to all the winds Which should transport me farthest from your sight.
Book both my wilfulness and errors down,
And on just proof surmise accumulate; 10
Bring me within the level of your frown,
But shoot not at me in your waken'd hate;
Since my appeal says I did strive to prove
The constancy and virtue of your love.

CXVIII

Like as, to make our appetites more
keen,
With eager compounds we our palate urge;
As, to prevent our maladies unseen,
We sicken to shun sickness when we purge;
Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying
sweetness,
To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding;
And sick of welfare found a kind of meet-
ness
To be diseas'd ere that there was true need-
ing.
Thus policy in love, to anticipate 9
The ills that were not, grew to faults assur'd,
And brought to medicine a healthful state,
Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be
cur'd:
But thence I learn, and find the lesson
true,
Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

CXIX

What potions have I drunk of Siren tears,
Distill'd from limbeckes foul as hell within,
Applying fears to hopes and hopes to
fears,
Still losing when I saw myself to win!
What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never!
How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted
In the distraction of this madding fever!
O benefit of ill! now I find true
That better is by evil still made better; 10
And ruin'd love, when it is built anew, Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
So I return rebuked to my content,
And gain by ills thrice more than I have euent.

CXX

That you were once unkind befriends me
now,
And for that sorrow which I then did feel
Needs must I under my transgression bow, Unless my nerves were brass or hammer'd
steel.
For if you were by my unkindness shaken
As I by yours, you've pass'd a hell of time;
And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime.
O! that our night of woe might have remember'd
My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits, 10
And soon to you, as you to me, then tender'd
The humble salve which wounded bosoms
fits:
But that your trespass now becomes a
fee;
Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom me.

CXXI

'Tis better to be vile than vile esteem'd,
When not to be receives reproach of being;
And the just pleasure lost, which is so
deem'd
Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing:
For why should others' false adulterate eyes
Give salutation to my sportive blood?
Or on my frailties why are frailer spies,
Which in their wills count bad what I think
good?
No, I am that I am, and they that level
At my abuses reckon up their own: 10
I may be straight, though they themselves be bevel;
By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown;
Unless this general evil they maintain,
All men are bad and in their badness reign.

CXXII

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain
Full character'd with lasting memory,
Which shall above that idle rank remain,
Beyond all date, even to eternity;
Or, at the least, so long as brain and heart
Have faculty by nature to subsist;
Till each to raz'd oblivion yield his part
Of thee, thy record never can be miss'd.
That poor retention could not so much hold,
Nor need I tallies thy dear love to score; 10
Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
To trust those tables that receive thee more:
To keep an adjunct to remember thee
Were to import forgetfulness in me.

CXXIII

No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do
change:
Thy pyramids built up with newer might
To me are nothing novel, nothing strange;
They are but dressings of a former sight.
Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire

SONNETS

What thou dost foist upon us that is old;
And rather make them born to our desire
Than think that we before have heard them
told.

Thy registers and thee I both defy, 9
Not wondering at the present nor the past,
For thy records and what we see doth lie,
Made more or less by thy continual haste.
This I do vow, and this shall ever be.
I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee.

CXXIV

If my dear love were but the child of state,
It might for Fortune's bastard be unfather'd,
As subject to Time's love or to Time's hate, Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers gather'd.

No, it was builded far from accident;
It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls
Under the blow of thrall'd discontent,
Wnereto the inviting time our fashion calls:
It fears not policy, that heretic, 9
Which works on leases of short number'd
hours,

But all alone stands hugely politic,
That it nor grows with heat nor drowns with showers.

To this I witness call the fools of time,
Which die for goodness, who have liv'd for crime.

CXXV

Were 't aught to me I bore the canopy,
With my extern the outward honouring,
Or laid great bases for eternity,
Which prove more short than waste or ruin-
ing?

Have I not seen dwellers on form and favour Lose all, and more, by paying too much rent,

For compound sweet foregoing simple
savour,

Pitiful thrivers, in their gazing spent?
No, let me be obsequious in thy heart,
And take thou my oblation, poor but free, 10
Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no
art

But mutual render, only me for thee.
Hence, thou suborn'd informer! a true
soul

When most impeach'd stands least in thy control.

CXXVI

O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power
Dost hold Time's fickle glass, his sickle-
hour;

Who hast by waning grown, and therein
show'st

Thy lovers withering as thy sweet self
grow'st;

If Nature, sovereign mistress over wrack,
As thou go'st onwards, still will pluck thee
back,

She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill
May time disgrace and wretched minutes
kill.

Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure!

She may detain, but not still keep, her treasure: 10

Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must
be,

And her quietus is to render thee.

CXXVII

In the old age black was not counted fair,
Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name;
But now is black beauty's successive heir,
And beauty slander'd with a bastard shame:
For since each hand hath put on nature's
power,

Fairing the foul with art's false borrow'd
face,

Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
But is profan'd, if not lives in disgrace.

Therefore my mistress' eyes are raven black,
Her eyes so suited, and they mourners
seem 10

At such who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
Sland'ring creation with a false esteem:

Yet so they mourn, becoming of their
woe,

That every tongue says beauty should look so.

CXXVIII

How oft, when thou, my music, music
play'st

Upon that blessed wood whose motion sounds

With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently
sway'st

The wiry concord that mine ear confounds,
Do I envy those jacks that nimble leap

To kiss the tender inward of thy hand, Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,

At the wood's boldness by thee blushing
stand!

To be so tickled, they would change their
state

And situation with those dancing chips, 10
O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait, Making dead wood more bless'd than living
lips.

Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,
Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

CXXIX

The expense of spirit in a waste of shame
Is lust in action; and till action, lust

Is perjur'd, murderous, bloody, full of
blame,

Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust;
Enjoy'd no sooner but despised straight;

Past reason hunted; and no sooner had,
Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait

On purpose laid to make the taker mad:
Mad in pursuit, and in possession so; 9

Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme;
A bliss in proof, and prov'd, a very woe;

Before, a joy propos'd; behind, a dream.
All this the world well knows; yet none knows well

To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

CXXX

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;
Coral is far more red than her lips' red:
If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun;

If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her
head.

I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,
But no such roses see I in her cheeks;
And in some perfumes is there more delight
Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks.

I love to hear her speak, yet well I know
That music hath a far more pleasing sound:
I grant I never saw a goddess go,
My mistress, when she walks, treads on the
ground:

And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
As any she belied with false compare.

CXXXI

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
As those whose beauties proudly make them
cruel;

For well thou know'st to my dear dotting
heart

Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.

Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold,

Thy face hath not the power to make love
groan:

To say they err I dare not be so bold,
Although I swear it to myself alone.

And to be sure that is not false I swear, 9
A thousand groans, but thinking on thy face,
One on another's neck, do witness bear
Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place.

In nothing art thou black save in thy
deeds,

And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

CXXXII

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me, Knowing thy heart torments me with disdain,

Have put on black and loving mourners be,
Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain.

And truly not the morning sun of heaven
Better becomes the gray cheeks of the east,

Nor that full star that ushers in the even Doth half that glory to the sober west,

As those two mourning eyes become thy
face:

O! let it then as well beseem thy heart 10
To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee
grace,

And suit thy pity like in every part.
Then will I swear beauty herself is black,

And all they foul that thy complexion lack.

CXXXIII

Beshrew that heart that makes my heart to groan

For that deep wound it gives my friend and
me!

Is't not enough to torture me alone,

But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend must
be?

Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
And my next self thou harder hast en-gross'd;

Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsaken;
A torment thrice threefold thus to be cross'd.
Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,
But then my friend's heart let my poor
heart bail;

Whoe'er keeps me, let my heart be his
guard;

Thou canst not then use rigour in my gaol:
And yet thou wilt; for I, being pent in
thee,

Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

CXXXIV

So, now I have confess'd that he is thine,
And I myself am mortgag'd to thy will,

Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine
Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still:

But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free,
For thou art covetous and he is kind;

He learn'd but surety-like to write for me,
Under that bond that him as fast doth bind.

The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take, 9
Thou usurer, that put'st forth all to use,

And sue a friend came debtor for my sake;
So him I lose through my unkind abuse.

Him have I lost; thou hast both him and
me:

He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

CXXXV

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will,
And Will to boot, and Will in overplus;

More than enough am I that vex thee still,
To thy sweet will making addition thus.

Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in thine?

Shall will in others seem right gracious,
And in my will no fair acceptance shine?

The sea, all water, yet receives rain still,
And in abundance addeth to his store;

So thou, being rich in Will, add to thy Will
One will of mine, to make thy large Will
more.

Let no unkind, no fair beseechers kill;
Think all but one, and me in that one Will.

CXXXVI

If thy soul check thee that I come so near,
Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy Will,

And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there;
Thus far for love my love-suit, sweet, fulfil.

Will will fulfil the treasure of thy love,
Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one.

In things of great receipt with ease we prove
Among a number one is reckon'd none:

Then in the number let me pass untold, 9
Though in thy store's account I one must be;

For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
That nothing me, a something sweet to thee:

Make but my name thy love, and love that still,

And then thou lov'st me, for my name is
Will.

CXXXVII

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes,
 That they behold, and see not what they see?
 That know what beauty is, see where it lies,
 Yet what the best is take the worst to be.
 If eyes, corrupt by over-partial looks,
 Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride,
 Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks,
 Whereto the judgment of my heart is tied?
 Why should my heart think that a several plot
 Which my heart knows the wide world's common place?
 Or mine eyes seeing this, say this is not.
 To put fair truth upon so foul a face?
 In things right true my heart and eyes have err'd,
 And to this false plague are they now transferr'd.

CXXXVIII

When my love swears that she is made of truth,
 I do believe her, though I know she lies,
 That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
 Unlearned in the world's false subtleties.
 Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
 Although she knows my days are past the best,
 Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue:
 On both sides thus is simple truth suppress'd.
 But wherefore says she not she is unjust?
 And wherefore say not I that I am old? 10
 O! love's best habit is in seeming trust,
 And age in love loves not to have years told:
 Therefore I lie with her, and she with me,
 And in our faults by lies we flatter'd be.

CXXXIX

O! lack not me to justify the wrong
 That thy unkindness lays upon my heart;
 Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy tongue;
 Use power with power, and slay me not by art.
 Tell me thou lov'st elsewhere; but in my sight,
 Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside;
 What need'st thou wound with cunning, when thy might
 Is more than my o'er-press'd defence can bide?
 Let me excuse thee: ah! my love well knows
 Her pretty looks have been mine enemies; 10
 And therefore from my face she turns my foes,
 That they elsewhere might dart their injuries:
 Yet do not so; but since I am near slain,
 Kill me outright with looks, and rid my pain.

CXL

Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press
 My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain,
 Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express
 The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
 If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
 Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so;
 As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,
 No news but health from their physicians know;
 For, if I should despair, I should grow mad,
 And in my madness might speak ill of thee:
 Now this ill-wresting world is grown so bad,
 Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be.
 That I may not be so, nor thou belied,
 Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide.

CXLI

In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes,
 For they in thee a thousand errors note;
 But 't is my heart that loves what they despise,
 Who in despite of view is pleas'd to dote;
 Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted,
 Nor tender feeling, to base touches prone,
 Nor taste, nor smell, desire to be invited
 To any sensual feast with thee alone:
 But my five wits nor my five senses can Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee,
 Who leaves unsway'd the likeness of a man,
 Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to be:
 Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
 That she that makes me sin awards me pain.

CXLII

Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate,
 Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving:
 O! but with mine compare thou thine own state,
 And thou shalt find it merits not reproving;
 Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine,
 That have profan'd their scarlet ornaments
 And seal'd false bonds of love as oft as mine,
 Robb'd others' beds' revenues of their rents.
 Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov'st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee: 10
 Root pity in thy heart, that, when it grows,
 Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.
 If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,
 By self-example may'st thou be denied!

CXLIII

Lo, as a careful housewife runs to catch
 One of her feather'd creatures broke away,
 Sets down her babe, and makes all swift dispatch
 In pursuit of the thing she would have stay;

Whilst her neglected child holds her in
chase,

Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent
To follow that which flies before her face,
Not prizing her poor infant's discontent:
So runn'st thou after that which flies from
thee,

Whilst I thy babe chase thee afar behind;
But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me,
And play the mother's part, kiss me, be
kind:

So will I pray that thou may'st have thy
Will,

If thou turn back and my loud crying still.

CXLIV

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still:
The better angel is a man, right fair,
The worse spirit a woman, colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her foul pride.
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend
Suspect I may, yet not directly tell;
But being both from me, both to each
friend,

I guess one angel in another's hell:
Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt,

Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

CXLV

Those lips that Love's own hand did make Breath'd forth the sound that said 'I hate,'
To me that languish'd for her sake:
But when she saw my woeful state,
Straight in her heart did mercy come,
Chiding that tongue that ever sweet
Was us'd in giving gentle doom;
And taught it thus anew to greet;
'I hate' she alter'd with an end,
That follow'd it as gentle day
Doth follow night, who, like a fiend,
From heaven to hell is flown away;
'I hate' from hate away she threw,
And sav'd my life, saying 'not you.'

CXLVI

Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth,
Press'd by these rebel powers that thee array,
Why dost thou pine within and suffer
dearth,

Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?
Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end?
Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's
loss,

And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross;
Within be fed, without be rich no more:

So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on
men,

And Death once dead, there 's no more dying then.

CXLVII

My love is as a fever, longing still
For that which longer nurseth the disease;
Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
The uncertain sickly appetite to please.

My reason, the physician to my love,
Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
Hath left me, and I desperate now approve Desire is death, which physic did except.
Past cure I am, now reason is past care,
And frantic-mad with evermore unrest;
My thoughts and my discourse as madmen's
are,

At random from the truth, vainly express'd:
For I have sworn thee fair and thought thee bright,

Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

CXLVIII

O me! what eyes hath Love put in my head,
Which have no correspondence with true
sight;

Or, if they have, where is my judgment
fled,

That censures falsely what they see aright?
If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote,
What means the world to say it is not so?
If it be not, then love doth well denote
Love's eye is not so true as all men's: No, How can it? O! how can Love's eye be
true,

That is so vex'd with watching and with tears?

No marvel then, though I mistake my view;
The sun itself sees not till heaven clears.

O cunning Love! with tears thou keep'st me blind,

Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults
should find.

CXLIX

Canst thou, O cruel! say I love thee not,
When I against myself with thee partake?

Do I not think on thee, when I forget
Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?

Who hateth thee that I do call my friend?
On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon?

Nay, if thou lour'st on me, do I not spend Revenge upon myself with present moan?

What merit do I in myself respect,
That is so proud thy service to despise,

When all my best doth worship thy defect,
Commanded by the motion of thine eyes?

But, love, hate on, for now I know thy
mind;

Those that can see thou lov'st, and I am blind.

CL

O! from what power hast thou this powerful
might

With insufficiency my heart to sway?
To make me give the lie to my true sight,

And swear that brightness doth not grace
the day?

Whence hast thou this becoming of things
ill,

That in the very refuse of thy deeds

SONNETS

There is such strength and warrantise of skill
That, in my mind, thy worst all best exceeds?
Who taught thee how to make me love thee more,
The more I hear and see just cause of hate?
O! though I love what others do abhor,
With others thou should'st not abhor my state:

If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me,
More worthy I to be belov'd of thee.

CLI

Love is too young to know what conscience is;

Yet who knows not conscience is born of love?

Then gentle cheater, urge not my amiss,
Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove:
For, thou betraying me, I do betray
My nobler part to my gross body's treason;
My soul doth tell my body that he may Triumph in love; flesh stays no farther reason,

But, rising at thy name, doth point out thee
As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride,

He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side.

No want of conscience hold it that I call
Her 'love' for whose dear love I rise and fall.

CLII

In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn,
But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swearing;

In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn

In vowing new hate after new love bearing.
But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee,

When I break twenty? I am perjur'd most;
For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee,

And all my honest faith in thee is lost:
For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindness,

Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy;

And, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,

Or made them swear against the thing they see;

For I have sworn thee fair; more perjur'd I,

To swear against the truth so foul a lie!

CLIII

Cupid laid by his brand and fell asleep:
A maid of Dian's this advantage found,
And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep
In a cold valley-fountain of that ground;
Which borrow'd from this holy fire of Love
A dateless lively heat, still to endure,
And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove

Against strange maladies a sovereign cure.
But at my mistress' eye Love's brand new-fir'd,

The boy for trial needs would touch my breast;

I, sick withal, the help of bath desir'd,
And thither hied, a sad distemper'd guest,

But found no cure: the bath for my help lies

Where Cupid got new fire, my mistress' eyes.

CLIV

The little Love-god lying once asleep
Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand,
Whilst many nymphs that vow'd chaste life to keep

Came tripping by; but in her maiden hand
The fairest votary took up that fire

Which many legions of true hearts had warm'd;

And so the general of hot desire
Was sleeping by a virgin hand disarm'd.

This brand she quenched in a cool well by,
Which from Love's fire took heat perpetual,

Growing a bath and healthful remedy
For men diseas'd; but I, my mistress' thrall,

Came there for cure, and this by that I prove,

Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

FROM off a hill whose concave womb re-worded
A painful story from a sisting vane,
My spirits to attend this double voice accorded,
And down I laid to list the sad-tun'd tale;
Ere long espied a fickle maid full pale,
Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain, Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

Upon her head a platted hive of straw,
Which fortified her visage from the sun,
Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw 10
The carcass of a beauty spent and done:
Time had not scythed all that youth begun,
Nor youth all quit; but, spite of heaven's fell rage,
Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd age.

Oft did she heave her napkin to her eyne,
Which on it had conceited characters,
Laundering the silken figures in the brine
That season'd woe had pelleted in tears,
And often reading what contents it bears;
As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe 20
In clamours of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her levell'd eyes their carriage
ride,
As they did battery to the spheres intend;
Sometime, diverted, their poor balls are tied
To the orb'd earth; sometimes they do extend Their view right on; anon their gazes
lend
To every place at once, and nowhere fix'd,
The mind and sight distractedly commix'd.

Her hair, nor loose nor tied in formal plat,
Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride; 30
For some, untuck'd, descended her sheav'd hat,
Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside:
Some in her threaden fillet still did bide,
And true to bondage would not break from thence
Though slackly braided in loose negligence.

A thousand favours from a maund she drew
Of amber, crystal, and of beaded jet,
Which one by one she in a river threw,
Upon whose weeping margent she was set;
Like usury, applying wet to wet, 40
Or monarch's hands that let not bounty fall
Where want cries some, but where excess begs all.

Of folded schedules had she many a one,
Which she perus'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood;
Crack'd many a ring of posied gold and bone,
Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud;
Found yet moe letters sadly penn'd in
blood,
With sleided silk feat and affectedly
Enswath'd, and seal'd to curious secrecy.

These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes,
And often kiss'd, and often 'gan to tear; 51
Cried 'O false blood! thou register of lies,
What unapproved witness dost thou bear;
Ink would have seem'd more black and damned here.'
This said, in top of rage the lines she rents,
Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend man that graz'd his cattle nigh,
Sometime a blusterer, that the ruffle knew
Of court, of city, and had let go by 59
The swiftest hours, observed as they flew,
Towards this afflicted fancy fastly drew;
And, privileged by age, desires to know
In brief the grounds and motives of her woe.

So slides he down upon his grained bat,
And comely-distant sits he by her side;
When he again desires her, being sat,
Her grievance with his hearing to divide:
If that from him there may be aught applied
Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage,
'T is promis'd in the charity of age. 78

'Father,' she says, 'though in me you behold
The injury of many a blasting hour,
Let it not tell your judgment I am old;
Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power:
I might as yet have been a spreading flower,
Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied
Love to myself and to no love beside.

'But woe is me! too early I attended
A youthful suit, it was to gain my grace,
Of one by nature's outwards so commended,
That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face. 81
Love lack'd a dwelling and made him her
place;
And when in his fair parts she did abide,
She was new lodg'd and newly deified.

'His browny locks did hang in crooked curls,
And every light occasion of the wind
Upon his lips their silken parcels huris.
What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find:
Each eye that saw him did enchant the
mind, 90
For on his visage was in little drawn
What largeness thinks in Paradise was sawn.

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

'Small show of man was yet upon his chin;
His phoenix down began but to appear
Like unshorn velvet on that termless skin Whose bare out-bragg'd the web it seem'd to wear;
Yet show'd his visage by that cost more
dear,
And nice affections wavering stood in doubt
If best were as it was, or best without.

'His qualities were beauteous as his form, 99
For maiden-tongu'd he was, and thereof
free;
Yet, if men mov'd him, was he such a storm
As oft 'twixt May and April is to see,
When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they be.
His rudeness so with his authoriz'd youth
Did livery falseness in a pride of truth.

'Well could he ride, and often men would
say
"That horse his mettle from his rider takes:
Proud of subjection, noble by the sway,
What rounds, what bounds, what course,
what stop he makes!"

And controversy hence a question takes, 110
Whether the horse by him became his deed,
Or he his manage by the well-doing steed.

'But quickly on this side the verdict went:
His real habitude gave life and grace
To appertainings and to ornament,
Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case:
All aids, themselves made fairer by their
place,
Came for additions; yet their purpos'd trim Piec'd not his grace, but were all grac'd by
him.

'So on the tip of his subduing tongue 120
All kind of arguments and question deep,
All replication prompt and reason strong,
For his advantage still did wake and sleep:
To make the weeper laugh, the laughter
weep,
He had the dialect and different skill,
Catching all passions in his craft of will:

'That he did in the general bosom reign
Of young, of old; and sexes both enchanted,
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
In personal duty, following where he
haunted: 130
Consents bewitch'd, ere he desire, have
granted;
And dialogu'd for him what he would say,
Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills obey.

'Many there were that did his picture get,
To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind;
Like fools that in the imagination set
The goodly objects which abroad they find
Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought assign'd;
And labouring in moe pleasures to bestow
them
Than the true gouty landlord which doth owe them: 140

'So many have, that never touch'd his hand,
Sweetly suppos'd them mistress of his heart.
My woeful self, that did in freedom stand,
And was my own fee-simple, not in part,
What with his art in youth, and youth in art,
Threw my affections in his charmed power, Reserv'd the stalk and gave him all my flower.

'Yet did I not, as some my equals did,
Demand of him, nor being desired yielded;
Finding myself in honour so forbid, 150
With safest distance I mine honour shielded.
Experience for me many bulwarks builded Of proofs new-bleeding, which remain'd the foil
Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.

'But, ah! who ever shunn'd by precedent
The destin'd ill she must herself assay?
Or forc'd examples, 'gainst her own content,
To put the by-pass'd perils in her way?
Counsel may stop awhile what will not stay;
For when we rage, advice is often seen 160
By blunting us to make our wits more keen.

'Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood,
That we must curb it upon others' proof;
To be forbid the sweets that seem so good,
For fear of harms that preach in our behoof.
O appetite! from judgment stand aloof;
The one a palate hath that needs will taste, Though Reason weep, and cry "It is thy
last."

'For further I could say "This man 's untrue,"
And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling;
Heard where his plants in others' orchards grew, 171
Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling;
Knew vows were ever brokers to defiling;
Thought characters and words merely but
art,
And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

'And long upon these terms I held my city, Till thus he 'gan besiege me: "Gentle
maid,
Have of my suffering youth some feeling
pity,
And be not of my holy vows afraid; 179
That 's to ye sworn to none was ever said;
For feasts of love I have been call'd unto,
Till now did ne'er invite, nor never woo.

' "All my offences that abroad you see
Are errors of the blood, none of the mind;
Love made them not: with acture they may
be,

Where neither party is nor true nor kind:
They sought their shame that so their shame
did find,
And so much less of shame in me remains,
By how much of me their reproach contains.

' "Among the many that mine eyes have
seen, 190
Not one whose flame my heart so much as warm'd,

Or my affection put to the smallest teen,
Or any of my leasures ever charm'd;
Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was
harm'd;
Kept hearts in liveries, but mine own was
free,
And reign'd, commanding in his monarchy.

"Look here, what tributes wounded fancies sent me,
Of paled pearls and rubies red as blood;
Figuring that they their passions likewise
lent me
Of grief and blushes, aptly understood 200
In bloodless white and the encrimson'd
mood;
Effects of terror and dear modesty,
Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

"And, lo! behold these talents of their hair,
With twisted metal amorously impleach'd,
I have receiv'd from many a several fair,
Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd,
With the annexions of fair gems enrich'd,
And deep-brain'd sonnets, that did amplify Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality. 210

"The diamond; why, 't was beautiful and
hard.
Whereto his invis'd properties did tend;
The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh
regard
Weak sights their sickly radiance do amend;
The heaven-hued sapphire and the opal blend
With objects manifold: each several stone,
With wit well blazon'd, smil'd or made some moan.

"Lo! all these trophies of affections hot,
Of pensiv'd and subdued desires the tender,
Nature hath charg'd me that I hoard them
not, 220
But yield them up where I myself must
render,
That is, to you, my origin and end;
For these, of force, must your oblations be,
Since I their altar, you enpatron me.

"O! then, advance of yours that phrase-less hand,
Whose white weighs down the airy scale of
praise;
Take all these similes to your own command,
Hallow'd with sighs that burning lungs did raise;
What me your minister, for you obeys, 229
Works under you; and to your audit comes
Their distract parcels in combined sums.

"Lo! this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified, of holiest note;
Which late her noble suit in court did shun,
Whose rarest havings made the blossoms
dote;

For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove,
To spend her living in eternal love.

"But, O my sweet! what labour is 't to leave
The thing we have not, mastering what not
strives, 240
Paling the place which did no form receive,
Playing patient sports in unconstrained
gyves?
She that her fame so to herself contrives,
The scars of battle 'scapeth by the flight,
And makes her absence valiant, not her
might.

"O! pardon me, in that my boast is true;
The accident which brought me to her eye
Upon the moment did her force subdue,
And now she would the caged cloister fly;
Religious love put out Religion's eye: 250
Not to be tempted, would she be immur'd,
And now, to tempt, all liberty procur'd.

"How mighty then you are, O! hear me
tell:
The broken bosoms that to me belong
Have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among:
I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being
strong,
Must for your victory us all congeat,
As compound love to physic your cold
breast.

"My parts had power to charm a sacred nun, 261
Who, disciplin'd, ay, dieted in grace,
Believ'd her eyes when they to assail begun,
All vows and consecrations giving place.
O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space,
In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine,
For thou art all, and all things else are thine.

"When thou impresses, what are precepts
worth
Of stale example? When thou wilt inflame,
How coldly those impediments stand forth
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame!
Love's arms are proof, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense, 'gainst shame, 271
And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it
bears,
The aloes of all forces, shocks, and fears.

"Now all these hearts that do on mine depend,
Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they pine;
And supplicant their sighs to you extend,
To leave the battery that you made 'gainst
mine,
Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And credent soul to that strong-bonded oath 279
That shall prefer and undertake my troth."

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

'This said, his watery eyes he did dismount,
Whose sights till then were levell'd on my face;
Each cheek a river running from a fount
With brinish current downward flow'd apace.
O! how the channel to the stream gave
grace;
Who glaz'd with crystal gate the glowing roses
That flame through water which their hue encloses.

'O! father! what a hell of witchcraft lies
In the small orb of one particular tear,
But with the inundation of the eyes 290
What rocky heart to water will not wear?
What breast so cold that is not warmed
here?
O cleft effect! cold modesty, hot wrath,
Both fire from hence and chill extincture
hath.

'For, lo! his passion, but an art of craft,
Even there resolv'd my reason into tears;
There my white stole of chastity I daff'd,
Shook off my sober guards and civil fears;
Appear to him, as he to me appears,
All melting; though our drops this difference bore, 300
His poison'd me, and mine did him restore.

'In him a plenitude of subtle matter,
Applied to cautels, all strange forms receives,
Of burning blushes, or of weeping water,

Or swoounding paleness; and he takes and
leaves,
In either's aptness, as it best deceives,
To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes,
Or to turn white and swoon at tragic shows:

'That not a heart which in his level came Could 'scape the hail of his all-hurting aim,
Showing fair nature is both kind and tame;
And, veil'd in them, did win whom he would maim: 312
Against the thing he sought he would exclaim;
When he most burn'd in heart-wish'd
luxury,
He preach'd pure maid and prais'd cold chastity.

'Thus merely with the garment of a Grace
The naked and concealed fiend he cover'd;
That the unexperient gave the tempter
place,
Which like a cherubin above them hover'd.
Who, young and simple, would not be so lover'd? 320
Ay me! I fell; and yet do question make
What I should do again for such a sake.

'O! that infected moisture of his eye,
O! that false fire which in his cheek so glow'd,
O! that forc'd thunder from his heart did
fly,
O! that sad breath his spongy lungs bestow'd,
O! all that borrow'd motion seeming ow'd,
Would yet again betray the fore-betray'd,
And new pervert a reconciled maid.' 329

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM

I

WHEN my love swears that she is made of truth,

I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd youth,

Unskilful in the world's false forgeries.

Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,

Although I know my years be past the best,
I smiling credit her false-speaking tongue,
Outfacing faults in love with love's ill rest.
But wherefore says my love that she is young?

And wherefore say not I that I am old? 10
O! love's best habit is a soothing tongue,
And age, in love, loves not to have years told.

Therefore I'll lie with love, and love with me,

Since that our faults in love thus smother'd be.

II

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still;

The better angel is a man, right fair,
The worser spirit a woman, colour'd ill.

To win me soon to hell, my female evil

Tempteth my better angel from my side, 20

And would corrupt a saint to be a devil,

Wooing his purity with her fair pride:

And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend

Suspect I may, but not directly tell;

For being both to me, both to each friend,

I guess one angel in another's hell.

The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt,

Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

III

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,

'Gainst whom the world could not hold argument, 30

Persuade my heart to this false perjury?

Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.

A woman I forswore; but I will prove, 3

Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee:

My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;

Thy grace being gain'd cures all disgrace in me.

My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is;

Then thou, fair sun, that on this earth dost shine,

Exhale this vapour vow; in thee it is:

If broken, then it is no fault of mine. 40

If by me broke, what fool is not so wise

To break an oath, to win a paradise?

IV

Sweet Cytherea, sitting by a brook
With young Adonis, lovely, fresh, and green,
Did court the lad with many a lovely look,
Such looks as none could look but beauty's queen.

She told him stories to delight his ear;
She show'd him favours to allure his eye;
To win his heart, she touch'd him here and there:

Touches so soft still conquer chastity. 50
But whether unripe years did want conceit,
Or he refus'd to take her figur'd proffer,
The tender nibbler would not touch the bait,
But smile and jest at every gentle offer:

Then fell she on her back, fair queen, and toward:

He rose and ran away; ah! fool too forward.

V

If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?

O! never faith could hold, if not to beauty vow'd:

Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll constant prove;

Those thoughts, to me like oaks, to thee like osiers bow'd. 60

Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thine eyes,

Where all those pleasures live that art can comprehend.

If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice;

Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend;

All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder;

Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire:

Thine eye Jove's lightning seems, thy voice his dreadful thunder.

Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet fire.

Celestial as thou art, O! do not love that wrong,

To sing heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue. 70

VI

Scarce had the sun dried up the dewy morn,
And scarce the herd gone to the hedge for shade,

When Cytherea, all in love forlorn,
A longing trariance for Adonis made

Under an osier growing by a brook,

A brook where Adon us'd to cool his spleen:

Hot was the day; she hotter that did look

For his approach, that often there had been.

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM

Anon he comes, and throws his mantle by,
And stood stark nak'd on the brook's green brim: 80
The sun look'd on the world with glorious
eye,
Yet not so wistly as this queen on him:
He, spying her, bounc'd in, whereas he stood:
'O Jove,' quoth she, 'why was not I a flood!'

VII

Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle;
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty;
Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is,
brittle:
Softer than wax, and yet, as iron, rusty:
A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her,
None fairer, nor none falsier to deface
her. 90

Her lips to mine how often hath she join'd, Between each kiss her oaths of true love swearing!
How many tales to please me hath she coin'd,
Dreading my love, the loss thereof still fearing!
Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings,
Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings.

She burn'd with love, as straw with fire
flameth;
She burn'd out love, as soon as straw out-
burneth;
She fram'd the love, and yet she foil'd the framing;
She bade love last, and yet she fell a-turning.
Was this a lover, or a lecher whether? 101 Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

VIII

If music and sweet poetry agree,
As they must needs, the sister and the
brother,
Then must the love be great 'twixt thee and
me, Because thou lov'st the one, and I the
other.
Dowland to thee is dear, whose heavenly
touch
Upon the lute doth ravish human sense;
Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such
As, passing all conceit, needs no defence. 110
Thou lov'st to hear the sweet melodious
sound
That Phœbus' lute, the queen of music,
makes;
And I in deep delight am chiefly drown'd
Whenas himself to singing he betakes.
One god is god of both, as poets feign;
One knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

IX

Fair was the morn when the fair queen of
love,
* * * * *
Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove,

For Adon's sake, a youngster proud and wild; 120
Her stand she takes upon a steep-up hill:
Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds;
She, silly queen, with more than love's good
will,
Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds:
'Once,' quoth she, 'did I see a fair sweet
youth
Here in these brakes deep-wounded with a
boar,
Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth!
See, in my thigh,' quoth she, 'here was the sore.'
She showed hers; he saw more wounds than one, 129
And blushing fled, and left her all alone.

X

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd,
soon vaded,
Pluck'd in the bud, and vaded in the spring!
Bright orient pearl, alack! too timely shaded;
Fair creature, kill'd too soon by death's sharp sting!
Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree,
And falls, through wind, before the fall
should be.

I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have;
For why, thou left'st me nothing in thy will:
And yet thou left'st me more than I did
crave;
For why, I craved nothing of thee still: 140
O yes, dear friend, I pardon crave of thee,
Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me.

XI

Venus, with young Adonis sitting by her
Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him;
She told the youngling how god Mars did try her,
And as he fell to her, so fell she to him,
'Even thus,' quoth she, 'the war-like god
embrac'd me,'
And then she clipp'd Adonis in her arms;
'Even thus,' quoth she, 'the war-like god
unlac'd me,' 149
As if the boy should use like loving charms.
'Even thus,' quoth she, 'he seized on my lips,'
And with her lips on his did act the seizure;
And as she fetched breath, away he skips,
And would not take her meaning nor her
pleasure.
Ah! that I had my lady at this bay,
To kiss and clip me till I ran away.

XII

Crabbed age and youth cannot live together:
Youth is full of pleasance, age is full of care:
Youth like summer morn, age like winter
weather;
Youth like summer brave, age like winter bare. 160
Youth is full of sport, age's breath is short:
Youth is nimble, age is lame;

Youth is hot and bold, age is weak and cold;
 Youth is wild, and age is tame.
 Age, I do abhor thee; youth, I do adore
 thee;

O! my love, my love is young:
 Age, I do defy thee: O! sweet shepherd,
 hie thee,
 For methinks thou stay'st too long.

XIII

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good;
 A shining gloss that vadeth suddenly: 170
 A flower that dies when first it 'gins to bud;
 A brittle glass that 's broken presently:
 A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower,
 Lost, vaded, broken, dead within an hour.

And as goods lost are sold or never found,
 As vaded gloss no rubbing will refresh,
 As flowers dead lie wither'd on the ground,
 As broken glass no cement can redress,
 So beauty blemish'd once 's for ever lost,
 In spite of physic, painting, pain, and cost.

XIV

Good night, good rest. Ah! neither be my share: 181
 She bade good night that kept my rest away;
 And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care,
 To descant on the doubts of my decay.
 'Farewell,' quoth she, 'and come again tomorrow.'
 Fare well I could not, for I supp'd with
 sorrow.

Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
 In scorn or friendship, nill I construe
 whether:
 'T may be, she joy'd to jest at my exile, 189

'T may be, again to make me wander thither:
 'Wander,' a word for shadows like myself,
 As take the pain, but cannot pluck the pelf.

Lord! how mine eyes throw gazes to the east;
 My heart doth charge the watch; the morning rise
 Doth cite each moving sense from idle rest.
 Not daring trust the office of mine eyes, While Philomela sits and sings, I sit and
 mark,
 And wish her lays were tuned like the lark;

For she doth welcome daylight with her ditty,
 And drives away dark dismal-dreaming
 night: 200
 The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty;
 Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished
 sight;
 Sorrow chang'd to solace, solace mix'd with
 sorrow;
 For why, she sigh'd and bade me come tomorrow.

Were I with her, the night would post too
 soon;
 But now are minutes added to the hours;
 To spite me now, each minute seems a
 moon;
 Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers!
 Pack night, peep day; good day, of night
 now borrow:
 Short, night, to-night, and length thyself to-morrow. 210

SONNETS TO SUNDRY NOTES OF MUSIC

I

It was a lording's daughter, the fairest one of three,
That liked of her master as well as well might be,
Till looking on an Englishman, the fair'st that eye could see,
Her fancy fell a-turning.

Long was the combat doubtful that love with love did fight,
To leave the master loveless, or kill the gallant knight:
To put in practice either, alas! it was a spite
Unto the silly damsel.

But one must be refused; more mickle was the pain
That nothing could be used to turn them
both to gain,
For of the two the trusty knight was wounded
with disdain:
Alas! she could not help it.

Thus art with arms contending was victor of the day,
Which by a gift of learning did bear the maid away;
Then lullaby, the learned man hath got the lady gay;
For now my song is ended.

II

On a day, alack the day!
Love, whose month was ever May,
Spied a blossom passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, 'gan passage find;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath.
'Air,' quoth he, 'thy cheeks may blow;
Air, would I might triumph so!
But, alas! my hand hath sworn Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn:
Vow, alack! for youth unmeet:
Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet.
Thou for whom Jove would swear
Juno but an Ethiop were;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.'

III

My flocks feed not,
My ewes breed not,
My rams speed not,
All is amiss:
Love's denying,

Faith's defying,
Heart's renying,
Causer of this.

All my merry jigs are quite forgot,
All my lady's love is lost, God wot:
Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love,
There a nay is plac'd without remove.
One silly cross
Wrought all my loss;
O! frowning Fortune, cursed, fickle dame;
For now I see
Inconstancy
More in women than in men remain.

In black mourn I,
All fears scorn I,
Love hath forlorn me,
Living in thrall;
Heart is bleeding,
All help needing,
O! cruel speeding,
Fraughted with gall.
My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal,
My wether's bell rings doleful knell;
My curtal dog, that wont to have play'd,
Plays not at all, but seems afraid;
My sighs so deep
Procure to weep.
In howling wise, to see my doleful plight.
How sighs resound
Through heartless ground,
Like a thousand vanquish'd men in bloody
fight!

Clear wells spring not,
Sweet birds sing not,
Green plants bring not Forth their dye;
Herds stand weeping,
Flocks all sleeping,
Nymphs back peeping
Fearfully:
All our pleasure known to us poor swains,
All our merry meetings on the plains,
All our evening sport from us is fled,
All our love is lost, for Love is dead.
Farewell, sweet lass,
Thy like ne'er was
For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan:
Poor Corydon
Must live alone;
Other help for him I see that there is none.

IV

Whenas thine eye hath chose the dame,
And stall'd the deer that thou should'st
strike,

Let reason rule things worthy blame,
As well as fancy, partial wight:
Take counsel of some wiser head,
Neither too young nor yet unwed.

And when thou com'st thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk,
Lest she some subtle practice smell;
A cripple soon can find a halt:
But plainly say thou lov'st her well,
And set thy person forth to sell.

100

What though her frowning brows be bent,
Her cloudy looks will clear ere night;
And then too late she will repent
That thus dissembled her delight;
And twice desire, ere it be day,
That which with scorn she put away.

What though she strive to try her strength,
And ban and brawl, and say thee nay,
Her feeble force will yield at length,
When craft hath taught her thus to say,
'Had women been so strong as men,
In faith, you had not had it then.'

110

And to her will frame all thy ways;
Spare not to spend, and chiefly there
Where thy desert may merit praise,
By ringing in thy lady's ear:
The strongest castle, tower, and town,
The golden bullet beats it down.

Serve always with assured trust,
And in thy suit be humble true;
Unless thy lady prove unjust,
Seek never thou to choose anew.
When time shall serve, be thou not slack
To proffer, though she put thee back.

120

The wiles and guiles that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
The cock that treads them shall not know.
Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman's nay doth stand for nought?

129

Think, women love to match with men
And not to live so like a saint:
Here is no heaven; they holy then Begin when age doth them attain.
Were kisses all the joys in bed,
One woman would another wed.

But, soft! enough! too much, I fear:
For if my mistress hear my song,
She will not stick to ring my ear,
To teach my tongue to be so long:
Yet will she blush, here be it said,
To hear her secrets so bewray'd.

140

V

Live with me, and be my love,
And we will all the pleasures prove
That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
And all the craggy mountains yields.

There will we sit upon the rocks,
And see the shepherds feed their flocks,
By shallow rivers, by whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals.

150

There will I make thee a bed of roses,
With a thousand fragrant posies,
A cap of flowers, and a kirtle
Embroider'd all with leaves of myrtle.

A belt of straw and ivy buds,
With coral clasps and amber studs;
And if these pleasures may thee move,
Then live with me and be my love.

LOVE'S ANSWER

If that the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move
To live with thee and be thy love.

160

VI

As it fell upon a day
In the merry month of May,
Sitting in a pleasant shade
Which a grove of myrtles made,
Beasts did leap, and birds did sing,
Trees did grow, and plants did spring;
Every thing did banish moan,
Save the nightingale alone:
She, poor bird, as all forlorn,
Lean'd her breast up-till a thorn,
And there sung the dolefull'st ditty,
That to hear it was great pity:
'Fie, fie, fie!' now would she cry;
'Tereu, Tereu!' by and by;
That to hear her so complain,
Scarce I could from tears refrain;
For her griefs, so lively shown,
Made me think upon mine own.
Ah! thought I, thou mourn'st in vain,
None takes pity on thy pain:
Senseless trees they cannot hear thee,
Ruthless beasts they will not cheer thee:
King Pandion he is dead,
All thy friends are lapp'd in lead,
All thy fellow birds do sing
Careless of thy sorrowing.
Even so, poor bird, like thee,
None alive will pity me.

170

180

190

Whilst as fickle Fortune smil'd,
Thou and I were both beguil'd.
Every one that flatters thee
Is no friend in misery.
Words are easy, like the wind;
Faithful friends are hard to find:
Every man will be thy friend
Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend;
But if store of crowns be scant,
No man will supply thy want.
If that one be prodigal,
Bountiful they will him call,
And with such-like flattering,
'Pity but he were a king.'
If he be addict to vice,
Quickly him they will entice;

---

If to women he be bent,
They have him at commandement;
But if Fortune once do frown,
Then farewell his great renown;
They that fawn'd on him before
Use his company no more.
He that is thy friend indeed,

210

He will help thee in thy need:
If thou sorrow, he will weep;
If thou wake, he cannot sleep:
Thus of every grief in heart
He with thee does bear a part.
These are certain signs to know
Faithful friend from flattering foe.

THE PHŒNIX AND THE TURTLE

LET the bird of loudest lay
On the sole Arabian tree,
Herald sad and trumpet be,
To whose sound chaste wings obey.

But thou shrieking harbinger,
Foul precurrer of the fiend,
Augur of the fever's end,
To this troop come thou not near.

From this session interdict
Every fowl of tyrant wing,
Save the eagle, feather'd king:
Keep the obsequy so strict.

Let the priest in surplice white
That defunctive music can,
Be the death-divining swan,
Lest the requiem lack his right.

And thou treble-dated crow,
That thy sable gender mak'st
With the breath thou giv'st and tak'st,
'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go.

Here the anthem doth commence:
Love and constancy is dead;
Phoenix and the turtle fled
In a mutual flame from hence.

So they lov'd, as love in twain
Had the essence but in one;
Two distincts, division none;
Number there in love was slain.

Hearts remote, yet not asunder;
Distance, and no space was seen
'Twixt the turtle and his queen:
But in them it were a wonder.

So between them love did shine,
That the turtle saw his right
Flaming in the phoenix' sight;
Either was the other's mine.

Property was thus appall'd,
That the self was not the same;
Single nature's double name
Neither two nor one was call'd.

Reason, in itself confounded,
Saw division grow together;
To themselves yet either neither,
Simple were so well compounded,

That it cried, 'How true a twain
Seemeth this concordant one!
Love hath reason, reason none,
If what parts can so remain.'

Whereupon it made this threne
To the phoenix and the dove,
Co-supremes and stars of love,
As chorus to their tragic scene.

THRENOS

Beauty, truth, and rarity,
Grace in all simplicity,
Here enclos'd in cinders lie.

Death is now the phoenix' nest;
And the turtle's loyal breast
To eternity doth rest,

Leaving no posterity:
'T was not their infirmity,
It was married chastity.

Truth may seem, but cannot be;
Beauty brag, but 't is not she;
Truth and beauty buried be.

To this urn let those repair
That are either true or fair;
For these dead birds sigh a prayer.
